We have kept crowding this matter out for two weeks but believe it will still be of interest to our readers outside of Auburn, who would like to know how the new plan of the commissioners likely to work. We give the bids for the districts:

District 1, Keyser and Butler, Dr. J. P. Strouse of Garrett. His bid was to doctor the poor in that district for one year $145.

District 2, Jackson and Union, was awarded to Drs. W. H. and C. F. Nusbaum, Auburn for $245.

District 3, Concord and Newville, to Drs. Murphy & Bowman at St. Joe, $95.

District 4, Stafford and Wilmington, and District 5, Troy and Franklin were awarded to Dr. J. B. Bennett of Butler, at $167.

District 6, Grant and Smithfield, was awarded to Dr. A. B. Darby at Waterloo price $250.

District 7, Richland and Fairfield, to Dr. Fairfield Snyder of Corunna at $140.

This would make the total expense for medical attendance for the poor, one year, $1042, which is a great saving over the old plan, and is still a liberal arrangement. The poor farm and jail will add a little to this, as they are under charge of the secretary of the board of health.

Homes for Visitors to the World's Fair

Is the title of a neat book containing a list of about 9,000 families who will accommodate visitors to Chicago during the time of the fair. It gives their names and addresses, and number of rooms each will have to spare; also gives a list of the leading hotels and their location; also contains twelve full-gage large scale maps, each numbered, representing a section, of the city; also a double-page key map, divided into sections, each section representing one of the large scale page maps, and being numbered to correspond. With this book, intending visitors can readily decide and select the quarters of the city in which they would like to be located, and then enter into correspondence with one or more families, and thus arrange for satisfactory and comfortable accommodations at reasonable rates.

This book was compiled at great expense by a trustworthy Chicago firm, after a house to house canvass in the most desirable portions of the city. It is reliable, and great care was exercised to select reputable places. By its use people will avoid the expense and trouble incident to securing a place after arrival in the city.

The book can be obtained through the ticket agent of the Lake Shore railroad in this city by calling upon him, 13-16

Dobson—These telegraph companies are rank monopolies. Only the other day a friend of mine paid $40 for ten words.

Swan—That's nothing, it cost me $100 for a single word one day last week.

Dobson—For heaven's sake, man, you don't say so.

Swan—Fact, my wife asked for a sealskin and I said "yes."

Not so Strange.

So many people wonder and ask themselves, why it is that among so many cough syrups, Dr. Marshall's Lung Syrup, is so far superior for coughs. This is not so strange for this medicine was a lifetime study of Dr. Marshall and perfected by him while searching for his own health, the purest drugs are used in its manufacture, hence the results. The only way we can convince you of the true merit, of this medicine is for you, to give it a trial, it is guarranteed to give satisfaction. Price 25, and 50 cts. and $1. Sold by druggists and dealers.

The curfew tolls the knell of parting day,
The lowing herd winds softly o'er the lea,
The fish'man homeward plods his lazy way,
To tell his whopping lies to you and me.

Will You do This?

We ask you to try Dr. Marshall's Lung Syrup is a cough medicine that it has not proved beneficial, return the same to the druggist you bought it of, and he will return the same money paid, you cannot ask for more, this medicine is the best cough syrup in the market and for la grippe or influenza it has no superior. Will you give this cough syrup a trial, you will certainly not regret it. Price 25 and 50 cents and $1. By druggists.

Cured Cholera Morbus.

While Mr. T. J. Bichey, of Altona, Mo., was traveling in Kansas he was taken violently with cholera morbus. He called at a drugstore to get some medicine and the druggist recommended Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhea Remedy so highly he concluded to try it. The result was immediate relief and a few doses cured him completely. It is made for bowel complaint and nothing else. It never fails. For sale by Robbins & McCord.

Little Boy—You come to see sister every Thursday night, don't you?

Young Man—Well-er-yes, about.

"How did you find out about Thursdays?"

"Thursdays?"

"Yes. How did you know?"

"Know what?"

"Why, how did you know Thursday was the only night sister had vacant?"

Pain in the Side and Chest.

The most painful cases of rheumatism may be relieved by a few applications of Chamberlain's Pain Balm; its continued use will cure any case, no matter of how long standing. It is equally beneficial for lame back, pain in the side, pain in the chest, lameness, and in all painful affections requiring an external remedy. A piece of flannel saturated with Pain Balm and bound on over the seat of pain is superior to any plaster. For sale by Robbins & McCord.

Lady of the House—But why don't you get something to do? Surely you are not ill?

Tramp—Not exactly ill, marm, but suffering from overwork. I washed my hands night afore last and the strain on, my system was jest awful.

Four Bottles Cured Him.

There is nothing I have ever used for muscular rheumatism that gives me as much relief as Chamberlain's Pain Balm does. I have been using it for about two years—four bottles in all—as occasion required, and always keep a bottle of it in my home. I believe I know a good thing when I get hold of it, and Pain Balm is the best liniment I have ever met with. W. B. Denny, dairyman, New Lexington, Ohio. 50 cent bottles for sale by Robbins & McCord.

Mother-in-law—All these mother-in-law jokes are outrageous.

Son-in-law (with a sigh)—Yes, that is no subject for jests.

For Cough and Croup.

The promptness and certainty of its cures have made Chamberlain's Cough Remedy famous. It is intended especiall for coughs, colds, croup and whooping coughs, and is the most effectual remedy known for these diseases. Mr. C. B. Main, of Union City, Pa., says: "I have a great sale on Chamberlain's Cough Remedy. I warrant every bottle and have never heard of one failing to give entire satisfaction." 50 cent bottles for sale by Robbins & McCord.

AUBURN AND VICINITY.

Some Reminiscences of its Early Day and Pioneer Citizens.

1870—Continued.

The municipal election in May was a republican victory by a majority ranging from 12 to 21, as campared with a democratic triumph the previous year of 5 to 10.

The Waterloo Press which in the absence of a party organ in Auburn, was to some extent, a substitute gave utterance to satisfaction in the expression: "The democracy have almost always elected their men and had concluded that they held a permanent lease of the town." In view of more recent elections it does look that way in town, township, county and state since in them all democrats fill every office from coroner to state.

The town election controlled appointment of the school board, for which there existed a strong party desire. The trustees elected were Joseph H. Ford, A. L. Hollopeter, Henry E. Altenberg, Joseph Penny and William A. Lowrey. Of these, three have died and the first is the only one resident of town. Albert Robbins was elected Clerk, John L. Davis treasurer, Stephen B. Ward assessor and Joseph Rainier marshal.

This year John W. Shaffer and family settled in Auburn making their home in the building now moved back from the sidewalk and owned by Dr. T. J. Matheny. Mr. Shaffer a quiet, unostentatious man has in all succeeding years proved to be a most valuable citizen of Auburn. Establishing himself in a two story framed building on South Main where he still continues in business, he began the manufacture of wagons which for strength and durability have had no superior in our market. For 22 years during which he has worked at his trade, our town has had no person more industrious, nor more deserving of patronage and public regard.

A son Orrin, for a time assisted his father as painter, was a member of the then Auburn Cornet band and was justly popular. Years ago he went west and is located at Port Townsend, Washington. William, another son, learned the trade of druggist with F. E. Davenport and also emigrated west. Of three daughters, Rose is the wife of deputy sheriff Blum, Carrie, who married L. Cullers is a residents of Chicago, and Bertha is a typo in the COURIER office.

Forming a partnership with John Berg, who conducts the blacksmith department, the firm of Berg & Shaffer constitutes one of Auburn's most reliable manufacturies and is richly entitled to a place in the annals of Auburn in earlier days.

The educational interests of the town passed through an unusual number of hands with questionable benefits; church matters showed some progress, especially as related to the Baptist society and the press fell for below the merits of the patrons.

The career of Charles M. Hertig, as principal of Auburn schools was limited to a brief ten weeks term when an epidemic of measles causing a suspension terminated his connection with them much to their advantage. Miss Mary Young, Miss Hattie Steele and Miss Phœbe A. Babcock closed their schools under the same order that applied to the higher department.

On March 21, 1870, the school board met at the office of Wm, H. Dills and engaged Herman Peter Colgrove as principal and teacher for a three months' term at $60 per month. Misses Young and Babcock were continued in their schools while Miss Steele was hired to teach at Butler. M. F. Long was employed in the grammar room and a small sum was ordered expended in printing and advertising the school in the Auburn Times which proved the principal beneficiary of the appropriation.

The attendance and average in the respective rooms was as follows:

	ENROLLED.	AVE. ATTEND.
High school	32	20
Grammar	47	26
Intermediate	53	44
Primary	74	66

The discipline and progress of the schools were creditable to the teachers, but the time was too short for marked results.

H. P. Colgrove, younger brother of Jas. Colgrove, a former teacher, possessed qualifications natural and acquired that eminently fitted him for the school room had he chosen teaching for a profession. His compensation was less than the board would have paid him, but he stipulated for $60, saying that this sum was all that it was worth and it was well earned. At the Fourth of July exercises he rendered the declaration of Independence faultlessly, entered the lists for county clerk on the republican ticket against Joseph Lanning in the fall campaign and with the rest of those on the ticket met defeat. He took an active and effective part in the conduct of the county, teachers' institute held at Butler in November, taught as principal in the Waterloo schools, and, later was book keeper for M. & A. Hale and clerk for J. Kahn.

Removing to Kansas his versatile promptings led him to try farming in which he failed when he turned attention to preaching his latest and most successful employment.

He married a daughter of J. R. Cosper Esq. and has a large family. Discharged from the service for disability and entitled to a pension, he refused application on the ground that the government owed him nothing and on a meager salary payable largely in farm produce, serves the people of the locality as a Methodist minister.

On the 5th of December, '70, Publius V. Hoffman was engaged to teach for a school term of four months at $2.75 per day. He had three assistants, Mary Eberly, Hattie Carper and Anna Rainier. The term was reasonably successful as the corps of teachers was capable and experienced. The default in attendance is manifest in the wide difference between enrollment and average presence as follows:

	ENROLLED	AVE. ATTEND.
High school	43	24
Grammar	57	39
Intermediate	56	45
Primary	88	54

Consolidated report, enrolled 244, average 161. In the high school room the classes in Wilsons' history and Harkness' Latin numbered but three each.

P. V. Hoffman was a close student, a fine scholar but soon preferred the study of law to teaching and as an attorney attracted attention by his thoroughness in legal research. He prepared a valuable work relative to his profession, was for a time associated with D. D. Moody in the law firm of Moody & Hoffman, married a daughter of Jason Hubbell of Butler and is now a prominent and successful attorney at Ligonier.

Miss Mary Eberly all these succeeding years has been engaged in her chosen profession and is justly regarded through experience, love of the work and qualifications as one of DeKalb county's best and most meritorious instructors.

Hattie Carper, wife of Dr. Andrew Carper had taught her last term. The family are present residents of Elkhart where they are highly esteemed and he enjoys a good practice.

Annie Rainier later married Bradford Harris, deputy clerk for G. H. K. Moss and lives in Chicago.

(To be continued next week.)

Making Imitation Diamonds.

The material in which imitation diamonds are produced is called Strass from the name of its inventor, a German jeweler who flourished at the beginning of the present century, writes Lucy Hamilton Hooper in an article on "French Imitation Jewelry," in the May Ladies' Home Journal. It is a perfectly colorless and transparent glass, or rather crystal, of irreproachable purity, composed of rock-crystal, or of white sand, mixed with oxide of lead, arsenical acid and other ingredients. Its preparation demands infinite care and a multitude of precautions, to avoid the possibility of the slightest flaw or bubble being introduced into the mass, from which are then cut the false gems in the proportions desired. Small or medium-sized diamonds produce a much better effect than do large ones. For the best forms of imitation jewlery they are cut by the same workmen that are employed in execution that function with real stones. Their task is much easier, owing to the comparative softness of Strass, a quality which causes ornaments in imitation diamonds to lose very speedily their brilliancy and their deceptive aspect. To remedy this state of things imitation emeralds, rubies and sapphires are often set with a layer or slice cut from a real precious stone of inferior value, and cemented with transparent and colorless compound on the top of the false gem, so as to cover it completely.

AT HOME AND ABROAD.

DARING ROBBERY IN THE INDIAN TERRITORY.

A Train Held Up and the Passengers Robbed—The Revolutionists Capture a Fort in Cuba—Of Interest to Pensioners—A Sister's Honor—Five Men Drowned

THE CUBAN WAR.

The Revolutionists' Flag Floats Over Gibara.

Key West (Fla.) special: The schooner Lillie has arrived here from Gibara, Cuba, and reports the Cuban flag floating over the fortress. The revolutionists number 100 and are in possession of the city. A schooner arrived here from San Domingo on April 20 with men and ammunition for the revolutionist army. Expeditions are being fitted out in Jamaica and San Domingo for the southern provinces. Spanish papers endeavor to suppress the magnitude of the revolution. One Havana paper admits that 1,500 men are in the revolutionary army in the province of Vulta Abajo, and 2,000 in Santiago. A council of war was called by the Captain General. Manifestos were issued promising a pardon to all who will lay down their arms within ten days. The Spanish troops are moving actively enough to indicate that the Spanish government believes that strong measures will be necessary to suppress the uprising. The troops which left Havanna for Puerto Principe received three months pay in advance. Cubans here believe that every province will join in the revolt in a few weeks. The federal officials here are using every precaution to prevent any expedition leaving here. The cutter McLane is the only government vessel here at present.

Trotting Horse Men.

No less than 305 associations are represented at the biennial congress of the American Trotting association held at the Auditorium, Chicago. The report of the joint committee of American and National trotting associations on the revision of the rules for time performances, adopted by the American Trotting Register association and the reduction of the flag distance from 100 and 150 yards to 75 and 100 yards respectively was adopted unanimously: These officers were elected: W. P. Ijams, Terre Haute, Ind., president; J. B. McFall, Oskaloosa, Iowa, vice-president; C. H. Steiner, Chicago, secretary; Edward Hayes, Chicago, treasurer; C. L. Benjamin, Saginaw, Mich.; J. Colman, St. Louis.; E. C. Lewis, Ottawa, Ill.; George Ely, Ohio and Morris J. Jones, Kenosha, Wis., directors. After transacting other routine business the congress adjourned sine die.

A Sister's Honor.

At Danville, Ky., Barney Higgins, ex-Mayor of Somerset, Ky., was shot and mortally wounded by L. A. Wood of Cleveland, Ohio, brother of Miss F. O. Wood, the lady who was assaulted in the Cincinnati Southern Railroad depot on the night of January 6, 1892. The case against Higgins, who is charged with the assault, was set for trial in the Pulaski County court but continued until the September term. When Wood was informed of this action he became very much excited and left the room. In passing through the lobby of the Court House he saw Higgins talking to some friends. He walked toward them and drawing a revolver opened fire on his sister's betrayer. Five shots took effect and it is hardly possible the victim will survive. Wood was placed under arrest.

Of Interest to Pensioners.

The acting commissioner of pensions has made a number of important changes in the practice of that bureau. Among them is the rescinding of the order of December 22, 1890, which authorized claimants or attorneys to file affidavits wholly in print. Hereafter all of the allegations of a witness as to the issue involved will be required to be in writing. Another change is an order just issued which requires more than the simple statement of the claim, and that is disabilities are not the result of vicious habits. Hitherto this has been deemed sufficient; but under the new order the testimony of two creditable witnesses is required on this point.

Held Up a Train.

A Missouri, Kansas & Texas passenger train was held up at Briar Creek in the Indian Territory by six men armed with Winchesters, supposed to be the notorious Harry Star gang. The plucky express messenger refused to give up the combination; although a revolver was held at his head and a knife at his throat. The passengers, including President Martin of the Kansas, Pittsburgh & Gulf Railway, and a party on a tour of inspection were robbed. The passengers were relieved of everything from pocket-books to pocket-knives. No clue to the robbers yet.

A Big Fire at Louisville.

The electric power house, 521 to 527 Third street, Louisville, Ky., and seven stories high, was burned. The loss will aggregate $150,000 with good insurance. The falling walls were supposed to have crushed a number of persons, but it proved a mistake.

Five Men Drowned.

Allen Brown, Robinson Caruth, Joe Scott, Sandy Cooksey, and Allen Booth were drowned in the Little Red River at Little Rock, by the capsizing of their skiff.

More Russian Arrogance.

According to the New York Evening World the Russian Consul in New York has refused to sign passports issued by the Secretary of State to Hebrews.

Industrial Towns.

Chicago special: Over 3,500 acres of land in the vicinity of Chicago have been purchased or contracted for by the Chicago Dock and Investment Company. This land is in three tracts. The largest, 2,345 acres, is at Maynard Station, Lake County, Ind., on the Monon route; the second tract, 400 acres, is at Mattson in this county, on the Illinois Central and Belt Line roads, and the third, 313½ acres, is at Pleasant Hill, in this county, near the extensive railroad system of the Stickney tract. The gigantic deal, though uniform in its financial backing, involves the establishment of three distinct industrial towns, which are to be developed as rapidly as money and energy can do it. The company is capitalized at $12,000,000 and has issued $6,000,000 of bonds, taken by Chicago and Eastern capitalists.

THE PROPOSITION,

Which the New York Bankers Declined to Accept.

Interest in the financial situation centers in New York. There are various surmises as to what will be the outcome of the attempt of Assistant Treasurer Jordan to bring Secretary Carlisle and the New York bankers to an agreement. At present they seem to be far from a coincidence of views. Secretary Carlisle's position is generally approved by financiers. His proposition to the New York bankers amounts to this: He asked them to loan the Government $50,000,000 in gold for one year from May 1, the loan to be secured by ten years' Government 5 per cent. bonds, to be issued at 117½, which would be equivalent to 3 per cent bonds. The bonds were to be placed in trust with the Secretary or a sub-Treasurer, and on the receipt of gold from banks, certificates were to be issued to them, the Government to retain the right at the end of the year of paying off the loan in gold at 5 per cent. In default of this payment by the Government at the end of the year the banks, according to the provisions, were entitled to surrender their certificates and take the bonds at 117½.

The bankers declined this proposition. They offered gold to the amount of $30,000,000, but they wanted to make the obligation due on the presentation, and tardily agreed to concede thirty days' grace after demand. In default of gold payment by the Government they wanted to include the stipulation in advance that the United States should issue bonds to cover the amount. Secretary Carlisle said this proposition on its face looked like a trap, a devise of the clique, which is trying, as an incident to the gold exportation, to force an issue of bonds.

MYSTERIOUS DEATHS.

An Indianapolis Family Found Dead in the House.

Indianapolis special: At about 8 o'clock the other morning Moses Smith, aged 62, and his son, Oliver, aged 15, living at the corner of Annetta and Wells streets, North Indianapolis, were found dead in bed, while Mrs. Smith was found in an unconscious condition lying upon the floor beside them. The son was cold and stiff in death and had apparently been dead several hours, while the father's body was warm and life could not have been extinct but a very short time when discovered.

Mrs. Smith was soon restored to consciousness, and is now suffering only from a severe bruise upon the head which might have been caused by falling upon the floor.

The affair is shrouded in mystery, and no theory as to its probable cause as yet advanced, seems to satisfy all the conditions and circumstances. The father and son slept in a bed room adjoining the kitchen, and Mrs. Smith slept upon a lounge in the kitchen, which contained a gasoline stove fitted up with natural gas. Some say that the people were asphyxiated, but this seems hardly likely. Mrs. Smith sleeping in the room where the stove was must have been the most seriously affected. Both rooms were shut up tight and gas would have had as little chance of escape from the kitchen as from the bed room. Marion Smith, a son of Moses Smith, and half brother to Oliver Smith, the first person on the scene, says there was no smell of gas when he went in the house.

ROSTED.

Six People Burned to Death in an Iowa Tenement House.

An old brick tenement house at 855 Jefferson Street, Burlington, Iowa, was destroyed by fire and six of the inmates burned to death. The lodging house was conducted by a Mrs. Johnson. She and a young servant girl named Maggie Bailey were the only women in the building. The lodgers were of the poorer class of laborers and mechanics, about twenty of whom occupied the various rooms upstairs. So quickly did the fire spread that the unfortunate victims were caught like rats in a trap. The names of the dead are as follows:

Michael Hines, a transient lodger.

Michael Lee of Chicago, a stove moulder.

John Morgan, a stove moulder, residence unknown.

F. G. Schumann, a carpet weaver.

Joseph Swindler of Bulington, a plasterer.

An unknown boilermaker, supposed to be from Chicago.

All were burned in a shocking and almost unrecognizable manner. Morgan's feet were burned off and Schumann's body almost fell to pieces when removed. The bodies were at once removed to the morgue, where hundreds of curious people viewed the sickening sight. There are several suspicious circumstances connected with the fire, which the Coroner will investigate. The loss to the building and contents was probably $2,000, with small insurance.

PREPARING FOR WAR.

Spanish Officers Expect a Protracted Fight in Cuba.

Madrid special: The directors of the naval arsenals have been ordered to prepare war material for shipment to Cuba, and several regiments are getting ready to embark. Spanish officers with long Cuban experience believe that operations there will be protracted because the rebels have chosen the worst time of the year for their uprising, as the rainy season is about to commence and this will seriously handicap the unacclimated Spanish troops. The insurgents can retire to almost inaccessible retreats and will be aided by a sympathetic population in the prosecution of an interminable guerilla warfare should they be repulsed in a pitched fight. The roads of Santiago are impassable for artillery and baggage, and all supplies must be taken to Santiago by sea.

It is officially announced that three columns of troops are pursuing the Cuban rebels between San Augustine and Las Lunas and that two Spanish gun boats will cruise along the coast.

The Creole socities have visited the Cuban Governor and have assured him of their fidelity.

SHOT DOWN.

White Men Murdered by Indians.

Denver special: The long threatened war of the Navajo Indians against the settlers of the county in the vicinity of their lands has come at last, and with it the death of eight settlers. Such was the startling news received by Adjutant-General Kennedy in a telegram from Lieutenant Plummer, Indian agent of the Navajos, in which he stated that the white men had been murdered by the Indians, who are now at war with the settlers. He declared that the situation is a very critical one, and asked that the troops be called out to prevent further bloodshed. The telegram was addressed to Gov. Waite, but he is out of the city and the matter was referred by Secretary Lorenze to the Adjutant General. Lieut. Plummer stated that the people below Durango are in a wild state of excitement and grave fears are entertained lest the Indians continue their warfare along up the valley. In his message the Lieutenant states that two battles have been fought already. In the first, five men were killed, all settlers, while at another encounter three more whites lost their lives, and further bloodshed is anticipated.

MURDER MYSTERY.

Cleared by the Confession of One of the Five Assassins.

Somerset (Ky.) special: Several weeks ago the body of Gilson New was found in the South Fork of the Cumberland River, twenty-five miles south of this place. While it was evident that the man had been murdered, the mystery surrounding the case could not be cleared. Recently William Neeley was arrested in Wayne County for breaking into Leo Dotson's store. He was taken to Monticello and incarcerated in the county jail at that place. Neeley sent to Sheriff Duncan and made a statement to him that he, Tom Tucker, Sam Young, Mose Morrow, and Jerry Morrow killed New and threw him into the Cumberland. Neeley says that New was killed to keep him from implicating Mason Johnson in the killing of Josiah Keith at Greenwood several months ago, for which John Johnson was sent to the penitentiary from this place for two years, and for which Mason is yet to be tried.

TOWN DESTROYED

By a Cyclone, Twenty Persons Being Killed.

Cisco (Texas) special: A cyclone struck this city the other night and the place was literally wiped out of existence. It came almost without warning and lasted but two minutes, but in that time a number of precious lives, estimated at from fifteen to twenty, had been destroyed, over one hundred persons were badly injured, all but one residence lay in ruins, and but one business block remained intact.

Hardly had the storm passed when flames seized upon the ruins and many of the wounded had narrow escapes from cremation. The volunteer fire department succeeded in gaining control over the flames after an hour's work. The inhabitants are homeless, and the greater part without food. Neighboring towns are sending provisions. The loss to property is over $2,000,000.

FRIGHTFUL EXPLOSION.

Terrible Panic at a Church Fair at Fairview, Pa.

During an entertainment at the Methodist church at Fairview, Pa., a terrible panic was caused by the explosion of a mixture of powder, used to produce colored lights in the tableaux, becoming ignited and exploding. When the explosion occurred the church was packed with people. Men, women, and children made a mad rush for the doors and trampled on one another in their wild rush to escape. No one was killed outright, but some are so seriously injured that their deaths are probable. Mrs. George Edwards was holding a baby in her arms, and the child was torn from her and stepped on and its skull fractured. Many were taken out unconscious.

After the Pensioners.

The acting commissioner of pensions, Mr. D. I. Murphy, has transferred about fifty clerks who have heretofore been employed on what is known as statistical work, but which, so far as he can see, is of no value to the office, to current work, in order to facilitate the bringing up of the business to date. Mr. Murphy is decidedly of the opinion that among the 958,000 pensioners on the rolls of the bureau there are many fraudulent cases, and with a view to purging the lists of such as can be reached, he has issued an order to special examiners in the field directing them to use all dilligence in searching out such cases as require the attention of the bureau.

Gasoline Explosion.

A terrific gasoline explosion occurred at the residence of George Hannum, Columbus, Ohio. Mrs. Hannum was engaged in exterminating insects in the furniture by use of gasoline. She had a gallon bucket half full of gasoline in her hand, when it caught fire from a stove near by. Mrs. Hannum was frightfully burned, but it is believed that she will survive her injuries. Her mother, an aged lady, was blown through a doorway into the backyard, but miraculously escaped serious injury. The house caught fire from the burning gasoline and was considerably damaged.

Hail Stones as Big as an Orange.

Alton (Ill.) special: The country northwest of this city was visited by a severe hail storm. The average size of hail stones was large as an orange, one picked up at Melville measuring 17½ inches in circumference. At the Monticello seminary 300 window lights were knocked out. In many instances roofs were shattered by the falling balls of ice. The Missouri, Kansas and Eastern roads new tracks were washed away, causing a loss of at least $100,000. The Mississippi is now two miles wide here, with the prospects of reaching the disastrous stage of last year.

The Session Ends.

The Young Women's Christian Association has just closed its International Convention at Toledo. The most important thing done by the convention was to take steps to organize the world's association to take in the eastern countries of the old world.

OPENED TO THE WORLD

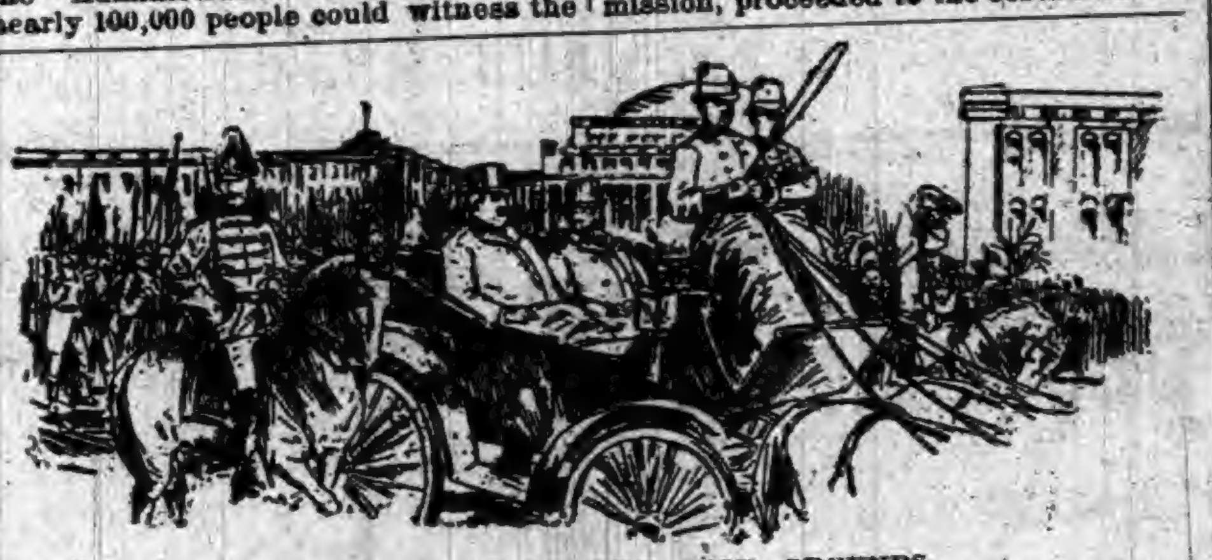
THE COLUMBIAN EXPOSITION IS A REALITY.

President Cleveland Touches the Electric Button that Sets the Monstrous Engines Going—Simple but Impressive Ceremonies at the Formal Opening.

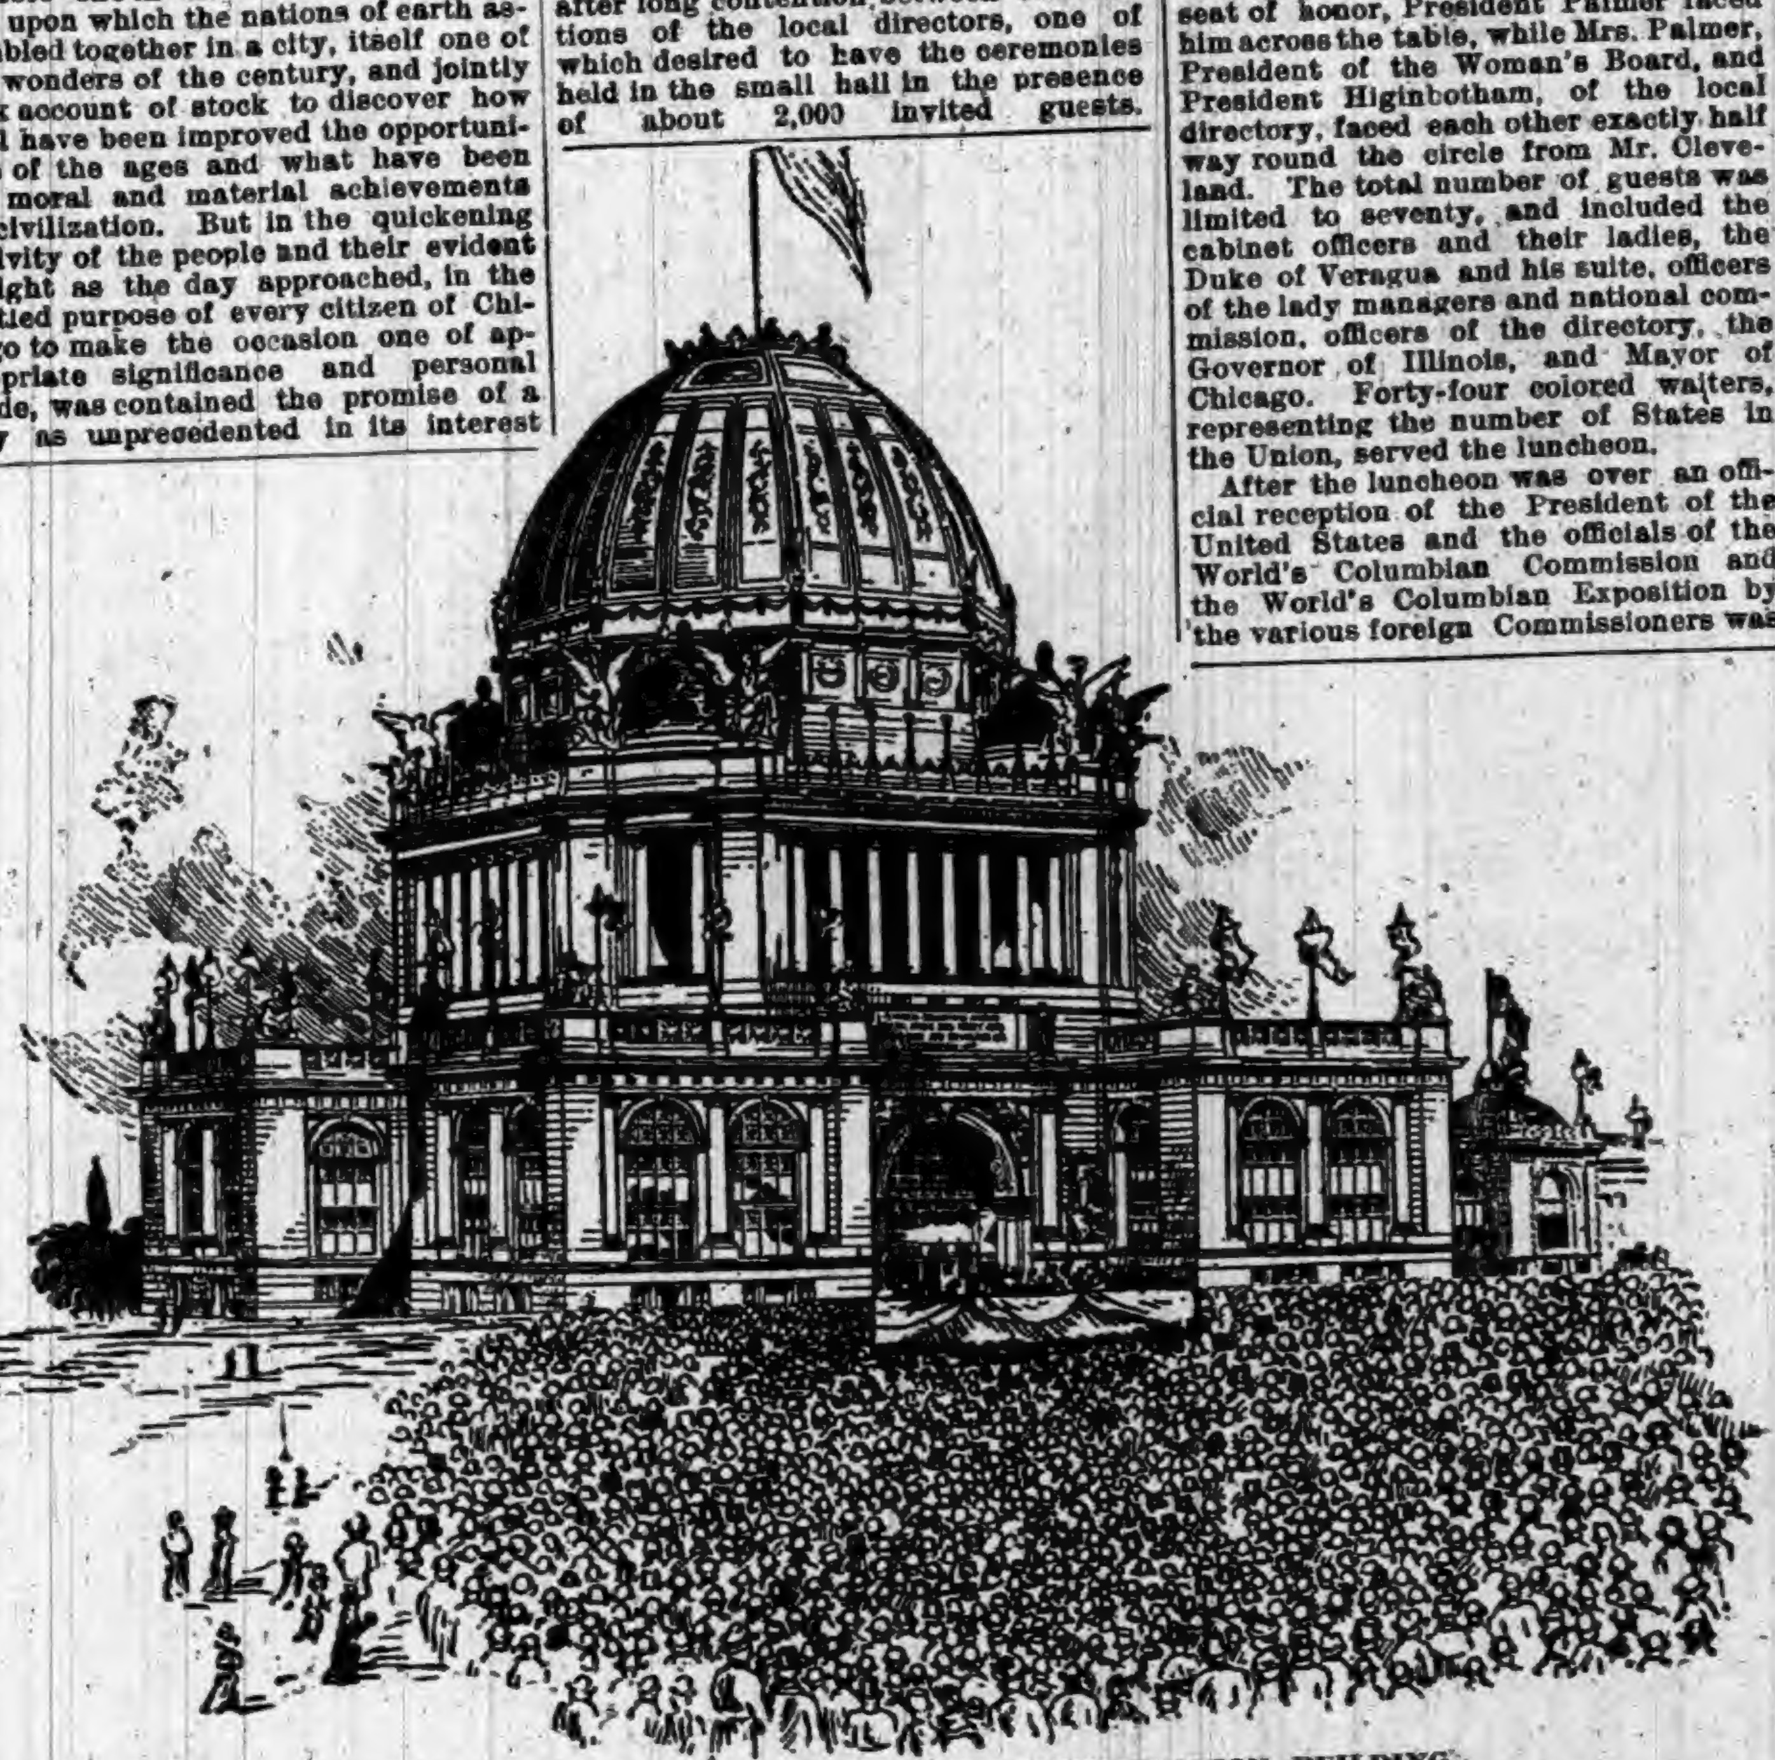
Gates Now Ajar.

The Columbian Exposition is a reality. President Cleveland has touched the button, the world had already done the rest. This greatest of all great fairs is now open to the public in all its splendor and international magnificence.

Gorgeous in her festal decorations, radiant with the life and spirit of her people and the myriad hosts of visitors from many lands, Chicago has gracefully celebrated this crowning event of her marvelous history, and in fitting manner received her distinguished guests who graced that notable occasion. The language of the order of exercises conveys no thought of the picturesque grandeur that made the day a notable one in the world's history—a day upon which the nations of earth assembled together in a city, itself one of the wonders of the century, and jointly took account of stock to discover how well have been improved the opportunities of the ages and what have been the moral and material achievements of civilization. But in the quickening activity of the people and their evident delight as the day approached, in the settled purpose of every citizen of Chicago to make the occasion one of appropriate significance and personal pride, was contained the promise of a day as unprecedented in its interest and pleasure as it will be in its influence upon the future development of the world.



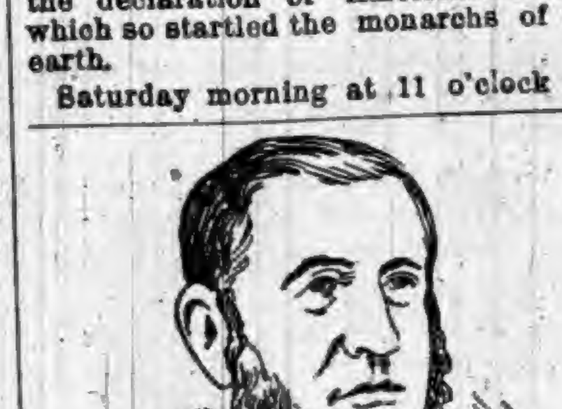
ON THE WAY TO THE FAIR GROUNDS.



THE CEREMONIES IN FRONT OF THE ADMINISTRATION BUILDING.

Beginning with Friday great events followed each other in rapid succession. It was eminently fitting that the arrival of the old liberty bell, that in truth "rang out the old, rang in the new," when the Union was born, should be first to receive the honors of the time. Friday evening arrived the relic of that day when was trumpeted to the world the declaration of American liberty which so startled the monarchs of the earth.

Saturday morning at 11 o'clock the Duke of Veragua, a direct descendant of Christopher Columbus, together with his party, reached the Union depot and were escorted to the Auditorium hotel by a troop of cavalry, a battery of artillery, and a regiment of infantry. The battery of artillery then moved to the lake front and fired a salute in honor of the duke.



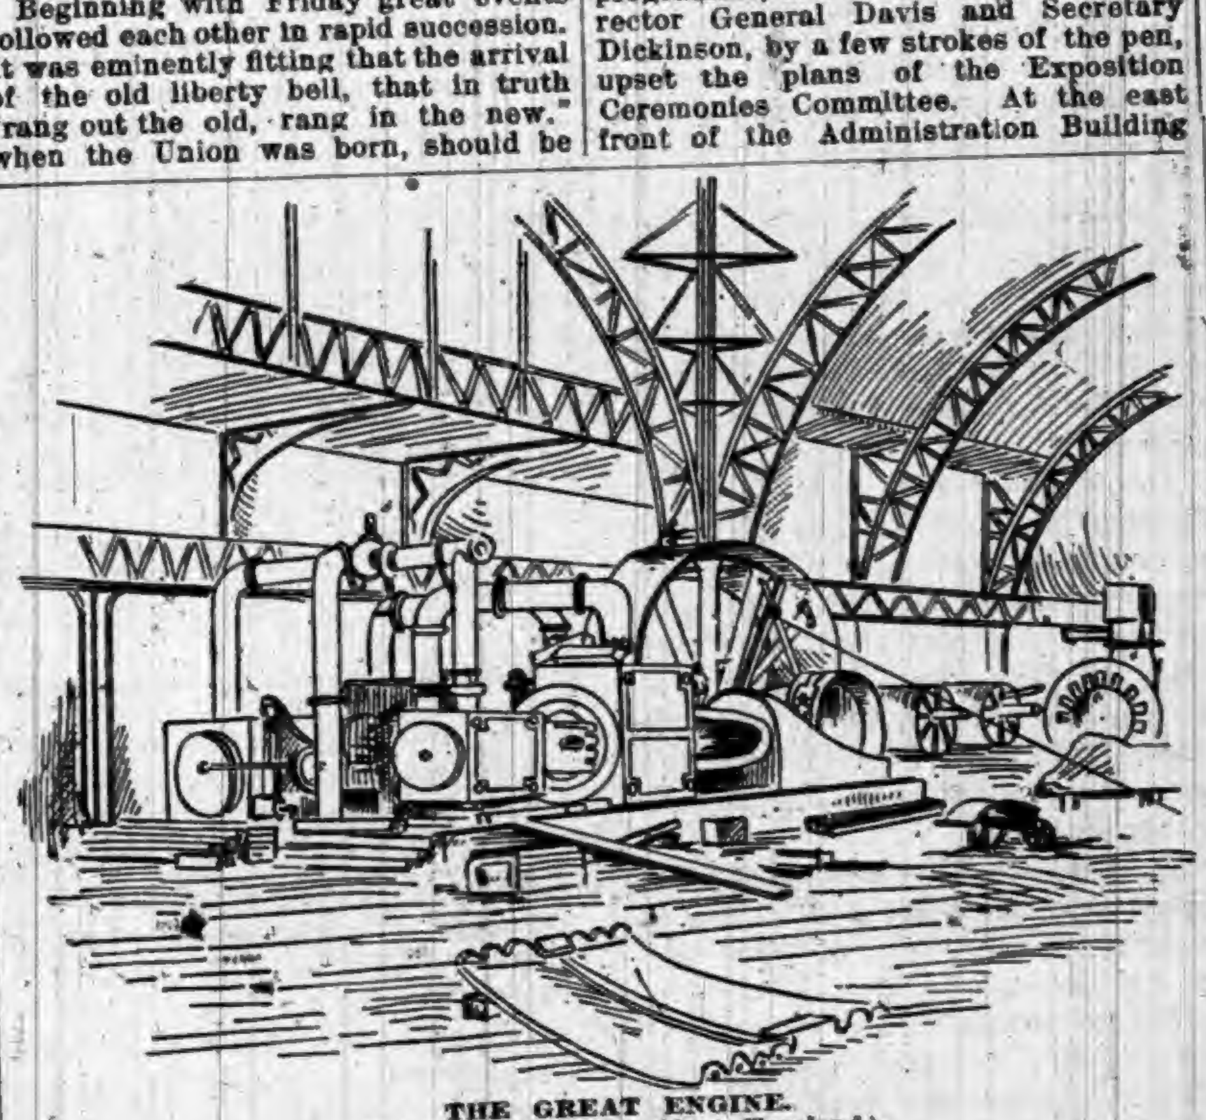
THE DUKE OF VERAGUA.

President Cleveland and members of the Cabinet and their ladies arrived at the same depot an hour later, and the same body of troops that had escorted the duke met and escorted the President's party to the Lexington. Formal reception of President Cleveland to the State, the city, and the World's Fair was extended before the arrival at the depot by Governor Altgeld, Mayor Harrison and Director General Davis, who met the Presidential train at the State line and accompanied them to the city.

To Jackson Park.

Monday morning bright and early the movement toward Jackson Park began. Carriages were ordered for the ducal party at the Auditorium at 8 o'clock. As early as 8:30, accompanied by the citizens' committee representing the State Department and a proper military escort, the ducal party moved south on Michigan boulevard. At the Lexington the ducal party joined the Presidential party, and the procession, composed of regiments of troops, the Chicago Hussars, distinguished guests in carriages, members of the national commission and the local board, and a host of citizens and visitors, moved toward Jackson Park.

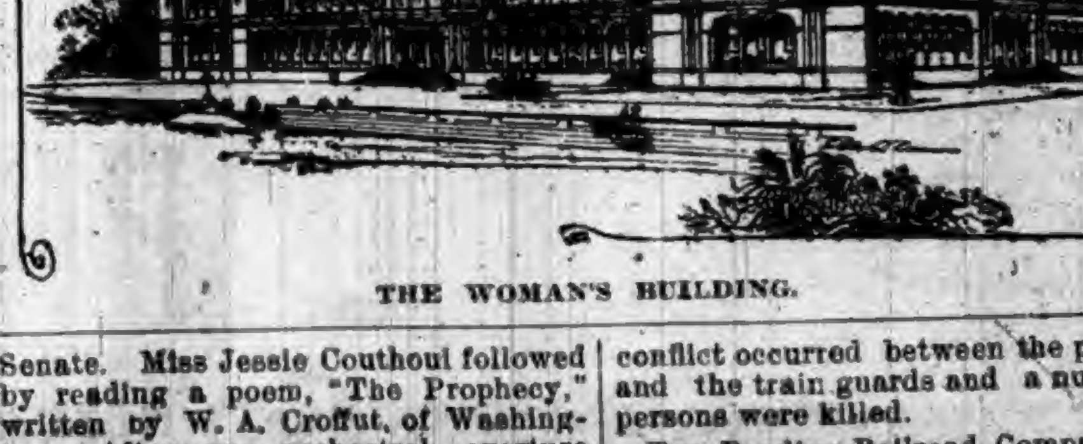
The formal opening exercises took place on a platform erected in front of the Administration Building, where nearly 100,000 people could witness the proceedings, even if they couldn't hear the speeches. The place of holding these exercises was determined upon after long contention between two factions of the local directors, one of which desired to have the ceremonies held in the small hall in the presence of about 2,000 invited guests. The Board of Control suddenly concluded, however, that it had something to say concerning the opening programme, and President Palmer, Director General Davis and Secretary Dickinson, by a few strokes of the pen, upset the plans of the Exposition Ceremonies Committee. At the east front of the Administration Building and in the shadow of its gilded dome, a great platform was accordingly erected. The large or main platform had seating capacity for nearly 2,000 persons. In front of them was a smaller platform for President Cleveland, the Duke of Veragua and suite, the President's Cabinet, foreign commissioners and other guests of honor, numbering about sixty in all. To the right and left of the President's stand were seats for about 250 members of the press, and back of all was the orchestra. Among the distinguished guests were members of the Diplomatic Corps, Judges of the Supreme Court, members of Congress, Governors of States, National Commissioners, World's Fair Directors, members of the Board of Lady Managers, members of the Illinois Legislature, Chicago City Council, members of the Board of Education, Park Commissioners and a select list of dignitaries, social, collegiate and official.



THE GREAT ENGINE.
(Set in motion by President Cleveland.)

The Opening Exercises.

When all had been seated the orchestra opened the exercises by rendering the "Columbian March." Prayer was then offered by the Rev. W. H. Milburn, chaplain of the United States Senate. Miss Jessie Couthoui followed by reading a poem, "The Prophecy," written by W. A. Croffut, of Washington. After an orchestral overture Director General Davis delivered the address. President Cleveland responded, and when he had finished he pressed a small electric button, the monster engines moved, starting the machinery in the great buildings; fountains spouted and sprayed, and the revenue cutters standing out in Lake Michigan fired the national salute of twenty-one guns. The World's Columbian Exposition was a thing of life.



THE WOMAN'S BUILDING.

Following the ceremonies in the administration buildings President Cleveland was given a luncheon.

President Cleveland, escorted by President Palmer, of the National Commission, proceeded to the restaurant on the third floor of the building. Here they found a circular table, forty feet in diameter, awaiting their arrival. President Cleveland occupied the seat of honor, President Palmer faced him across the table, while Mrs. Palmer, President of the Woman's Board, and President Higinbotham, of the local directory, faced each other exactly half way round the circle from Mr. Cleveland. The total number of guests was limited to seventy, and included the cabinet officers and their ladies, the Duke of Veragua and his suite, officers of the lady managers and national commission, officers of the directory, the Governor of Illinois, and Mayor of Chicago. Forty-four colored waiters, representing the number of States in the Union, served the luncheon.

After the luncheon was over an official reception of the President of the United States and the officials of the World's Columbian Commission and the World's Columbian Exposition by the various foreign Commissioners was held in the United States section of the Manufactures Building.

DROVE THE LAST NAIL SATURDAY.

Ceremonies Attendant Upon the Completion of the Woman's Building.

Not the least important feature of the completion of the Woman's Building were the ceremonies Saturday afternoon, at 4 o'clock, attending the presentation of special articles, driving the last nail, and the acceptance of decorated rooms by the President. The order of exercises was the driving of the nail which was placed by Mrs. Palmer in the proscenium arch over the platform in the Assembly Hall; presentation of silk flag by Florida delegate. The rooms were presented in the following order by chosen representatives: Connecticut, Kentucky, California, Cincinnati room (the only city represented in a room), and New York. Immediately after the opening ceremonies Monday, the Woman's Building was dedicated, the programme consisting of an address by Mrs. Potter Palmer, President of the Board of Lady Managers, and music by a chorus of women's voices. The event was one of extreme simplicity and was of interest to visitors of both sexes.

RIVALS.

A Story of the Vengeance of the Sea, Written for This Paper.

BY MAXWELL GRAY.

CHAPTER II.

The storm had passed from her mind like a troubled dream when Rose awoke to see the long-wished-for day smiling golden-blue and cloudless before her. The wind had fallen, and the vexed sea, Robert's first love, was quieting down, though still turbid and dark where the ragged foam crests parted; patches of brown weed and floating wreckage attracted clouds of white-breasted gulls, their plumage steeped in morning sunlight.

Rose looked at her wedding gown and bonnet spread on a chest of drawers and gilded by the slant sunbeams; then she looked out at the sea and remembered the ship on the rocks—it must have gone to pieces. While dressing she heard voices from below, catching a phrase here and there: "Who'll tell her?"—"life buoys"—"surf"—"life corks on the sea"—"righted herself"—but nothing definite, and quickly finishing, and rousing the children who slept with her, she ran down stairs.

The living-room fire had been burning all night; Moses was sitting before it, heavy-eyed and chilly, spreading his hands out for warmth; her father sat by the window looking haggard and stupid with his hands plunged deep in his pockets; neither of them looked up or spoke when she came in. She stood silent for some minutes afraid to speak.

"The vessel?" she faltered at last.

"Gone to pieces," Moses replied, staring into the dull fire; "all hands lost."

"Couldn't get anighst her. Capsized."

"But she righted herself?"

"Ay, she done that twice. The boat's all right."

"Was anyone hurt, Moses?" she asked, a sob breaking her words.

"Two. The sea beat them to pieces."

"What, our men?" she cried her voice rising to a shriek.

Her father rose and stumped heavily out of the room; her brother went on, staring stupidly at the fire. "Our men, sure enough," he replied under his breath at last.

"Who are they? Not Luke Byles, I hope."

"No; not Luke." A long pause, a heavy sigh, and then "The coxen."

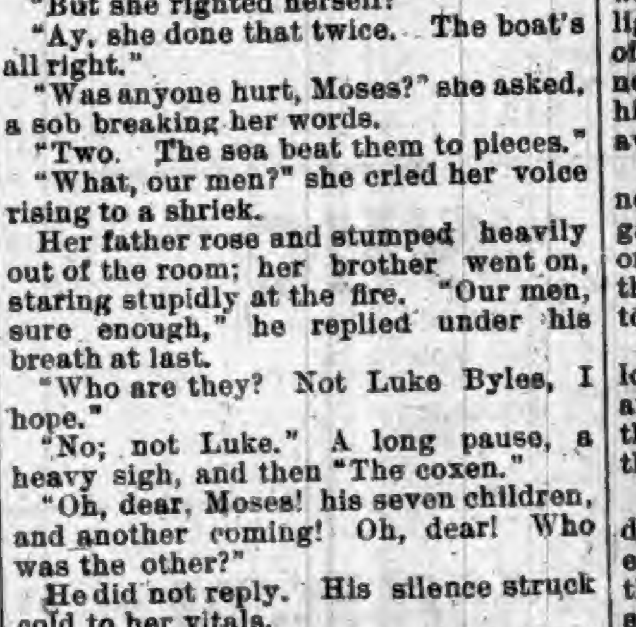
"Oh, dear, Moses! his seven children, and another coming! Oh, dear! Who was the other?"

He did not reply. His silence struck cold to her vitals.

"Not," she added, trembling, "not the—second oar?"

He nodded assent.

Rose turned and took her hat and shawl from a peg. "I am going to his mother," she said, quietly; and before he had time to turn round she was gone.



"NOT THE—SECOND OAR?"

George Attrill lived with his mother over by the bay on the other side of the bold headland split by the chasm. Rose thought she would have time to go there and stay an hour and get back in good time for the wedding, if she made haste.

No wedding bells now, she thought, as she ran, the wind blowing the tears from her face.

People were standing about talking. They looked at her in a strange way as she hurried along—women came out of their doors to gaze after her, some shook their heads, some made audible comments.

"The sea beat all the life out of em," she heard a coast-guardsman say to a villager; "it scooped him clean out of the boat and then beat him to death. Cork-jacket? Bless your eyes! that'd only float the body ashore! Couldn't save em."

She passed the head of the chasm; she saw a blue spiral smoke rising from the hearth that would be hers before noon; the sunshine sparkled on the myrtles, the viscid sea, over which hovered clouds of white gulls, was quieting momently in the blue morning; the groundswell still boomed on, and the harsh screech of the dragging shingle sounded like a threat.

"Better goo on back," said an old man, coming up from the bay; "they've a-vound the body."

"Which," she asked; "Adam Mann's?"

"No; 'tother. You take and goo on home."

Rose pressed on, her lips set with pain, and soon saw half a dozen men in blue jerseys, with bare feet, slowly carrying something on a stretcher.

It never struck her as strange that they were bearing him away from his home down by the bay; she could think of nothing but the pity of knowing that brave and tender heart hushed forever in its heroic flight for men's lives.

It was only when she saw Reefer stalking dejectedly, with drooping tail and hanging head, after the slow procession, that a nameless horror fell upon her and drove the blood to her heart. The dog did not bound forward to meet her with short welcoming barks as usual. The bearers stopped as if by a common impulse, and set down their burden, standing aside at her approach. One arm was hanging helplessly down beneath the covering that shrouded the body. Did she recognize that arm? Had it clasped her to the hushed heroic heart?

Suddenly through the mellow sough of the sea, Robert's first sweetheart, and above the cheerful carol of the robins, pierced a loud, long, shrill cry that sent a shudder through the strong, erect bearers, just as a sudden shriek of rising tempest sends a shiver through a group of tall forest trunks.

Then there was silence, the men standing motionless, Rose kneeling on the ground and raising the cloth from the dead face. There he lay, fresh from the deadly embrace of his jealous first love, the salt sea water trickling from his curly hair and pearling his closed eyelashes, comely in death, with a calm majesty befitting one who had died heroically. All the girlhood died out of Rose's blanching face and blazing, horror-stricken eyes as she looked. The tears of pity had already dried on her fresh cheeks, now stiffening with marble immobility; no others came.

"How was it?" she asked, in a hard, cold voice. "What had he to do with the lifeboat?"

"'Twas like this, replied one of the men, hoarsely and hurriedly; "Deane, he took Attrill's oar."

"Then," added another, "the Rescue 'd a-bin out twice toward the vessel. But nothin' couldn't live in that surf. She'd a-bin capsized. The men was entirely weared out. Then Adam Mann, he was washed overboard. They seen en strike agin a rock——"

The man broke off abruptly.

"Then," said another, "Deane, he ups and says: 'Don't give in lads; let's have another try!' Then comes a heavy sea and tears en clean out of her. That's all."

"Where was Geo. Attrill?" she asked.

"Attrill? He slipped down and hurt hisself getten aboord ov 'er. And Deane, he seen it, and he volunteered in 's place."

"In Attrill's place and without a cork jacket?" said Rose, slowly, standing erect by the still form, now once more shrouded, her voice deepening and her eyes blazing with unnatural fire. As she spoke she looked full in the face of George Attrill, who had just come up from the shore, apparently unhurt.

Then the tumultuous long-gathering passion rushed up out of the depths of her heart and crashed over her, making her shake and shudder beneath it, as the boat had done beneath the sea that swept Robert away.

"You coward!" she cried, pointing to Attrill; "you put him in your place; you wished to be in his. You called me a light wench. You told him I should tire of him same as I done of you, that I never cared for. I shall never tire of him, George Attrill; you have took away my only chance of that."

"Rose, Rose!" said a familiar voice near, as the clergyman, all wet, haggard, and unshorn, after his long night on the shore, came up and motioned to the bearers to go on. "You, who were to have been that brave lad's wife?"

She bowed her head, turned, and followed the solomn procession up the hill and down the chasm. Not thus had she thought to follow her lover to his home that day.

George stood gazing after her with a dumb, helpless look in his large, dark eyes. Then he turned, went down to the bay, and flung himself down in the shadow of some broken rocks.

"God knows," he cried, "I'd have died for him only to save her this!"

Rose's words rang all over the village, and grew as words do with repetition. The men who first heard them began to ask themselves why Robert had no cork-jacket on, as George had; why George so quickly recovered, after giving in at the critical moment; why he had called Rose a "light wench," and other questions. Covert sneers, cold looks and whispers began to go around whenever Attrill appeared. Then he was avoided; finally he was asked to leave the boat.

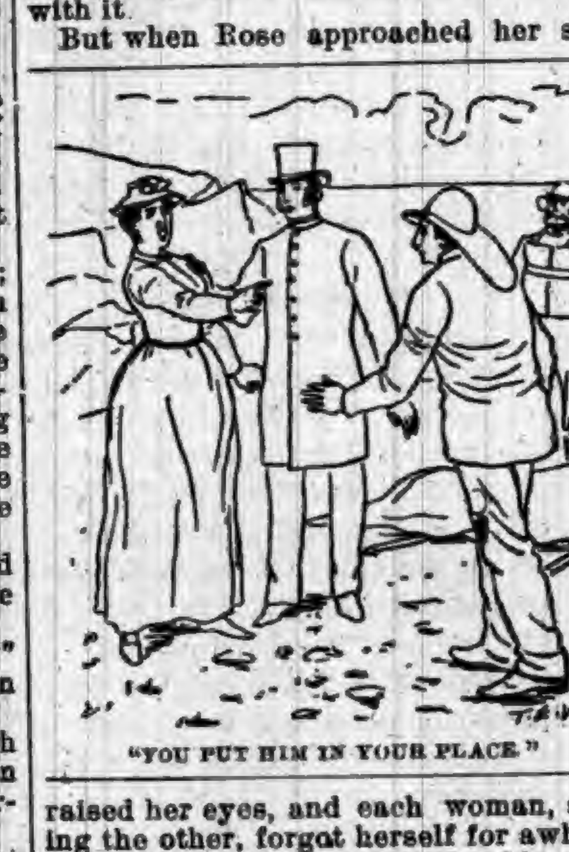
Rose forgot both her wild words and George's existence long before she reached the cottage, no rose-cheeked, red-lipped girl with swift blushes and gentle glances, as she had gone forth; but a white-faced, wild-eyed woman, helpless and tearless.

The clergyman walked by her side, offering no futile consolation, but leading her by the hand like a strayed child; the surf-music boomed gently on; the redbreast's warble floated on the sunny air; the bearers' feet fell with an even, muffled tread; other sound there was none.

So Rose followed her bridegroom to the pretty home he had prepared for her, where Mary Deane sat silent and desolate by the cheerless hearth, where the dog, who had run on, laid his chin on his mistress' knee, moaning humanly, and looking up in her grief-stricken face, with large tears rolling from his great soft eyes, while the kitten sprang at his wagless tail, and gamboled on the floor, over which children of Robert's might never play now.

The mother did not look up when the door was darkened by the sad burden borne by the men, nor did she stir from her stony calm when she heard them struggling up the narrow, steep stairs with it.

But when Rose approached her she raised her eyes, and each woman, seeing the other, forgot herself for awhile. Mary opened her arms dumbly and Rose fell on her knees by her side; both wept bitterly.



"YOU PUT HIM IN YOUR PLACE."

Robert had added some last touches to the pretty room he had prepared with such loving industry for the broken-hearted girl below. A bunch of roses glowed on the dressing table. He had nailed a red border round his favorite text, taken, as Rose had observed to him, from a funeral psalm, "Lord, Thou hast been our dwelling-place." The useless wedding ring lay glittering in a sunbeam on the table, the wedding clothes still lay folded at the foot of the bed, on which Robert lay dead on his marriage morning; while the song of the mighty sea, his first love, surged in hushed triumph round his pillow, an epithalamium, a lullaby and a dirge in one.

CHAPTER III.

A year later George Attrill met Rose Fielding at the landward edge of the chasm, where she was cutting sun-dried bracken.

"Rose," he said, "I've never come anighst you this twelvemonth. I knew you couldn't think of any but him that's gone. But now let by-gones be by-gones! Forgive what I said that night. I was mad, seeing you and him together."

Rose leant her hands on the reaping-hook she carried, and the hook on the hand-cart of bracken before her.

"I never thought no more of it," she said, with odd apathy.

"There's something more," he continued, pressing his dry lips nervously together. "You said what you never meant when you was mad with trouble, when you seen him—as is gone—lying cold on his wedding day. Take back them words, Rose. D'ye mind them?"

"I mind them," she replied; "I meant them. He died in your place, doing of your duty."

"I never so much as knowed Robert was in the boat till I heard he'd gone dead," cried George. "I slipped on the wet rock in storm and dark. I lay pretty nigh a hour for dead, they tells me. The Rescue had been capsized by the time I come to. I'd a-died sooner than let him gone. Rose, you can't think me that bad?" he burst out.

"If I done you wrong," she replied, "I'm sorry."

"They're all agin me," he continued, "they yeard what you said that day. None on 'em 'll go long with me since. But I don't mind so much, so long as you don't—don't think me that bad, Rose."

"I never knew how it was, George," she replied, with more interest. "I only know he done your duty and was lost in your place."

"I never bore malice—no furrer than a angry word—agen Bob Deane. 'Twas no fault o' mine. I bid ashore stunned, and was saved. God knows I'd sooner 've gone down. Take back them hard words, Rose."

"I take them back," shereplied; "God forgive me for wronging you."

Then she went to the little cottage, now her home. Though Rose was but nineteen when Robert died, her youth was over; she could love no other in the place of him so suddenly snatched away, nor could she leave his mother in her desolation. She tried to do all that Robert had done for his mother, and being strong and industrious, made almost as good a living as he had made. She would row the boat, set the lobster-pots, work in the garden, tend the cow and sheep, and take the product to market. She loved all that Robert had loved and liked to tend wherever he had tended; it consoled her that his mother, aged perceptibly by his loss, depended entirely upon her. She watched the cross-barred patch of sunshine and moonshine creep over the boarded floor in early summer mornings and calm midnights alone; through stormy nights she listened to the roar of the surf and crash of the breakers, and felt the strong winds curl round the shuddering cottage, alone. Yet the many-voiced sea-song in all its moods daily became dearer to her; cruel as the waves had been, their fascination was never stronger.

The outdoor life, the salt, wholesome air, and the hard yet varied and pleasant work, braced and strengthened her tall, well-set figure, occupied her thoughts and calmed her grief, till the thought of it became a luxury and finally a necessity, and she lived that dreamy life of communion with the lost, made up of memory and longing, which is so bitterly sweet, and produces such a strange emptiness in the heart, akin to the sense of starvation in the body.

From that day George Attrill visited the cottage at intervals, sometimes bringing samphire from the high cliffs that Rose could not climb, for Robert's autumn customers, sometimes to offer half a day of harder work than she could manage. The second autumn after the accident to the Rescue he asked her to marry him, and she refused. He saw that her loss was still too fresh.

From the first he had been considered a better match than Robert Deane. The house in the bay in which his mother lived and let lodgings was their own; his brothers and sisters were doing well; he had some bathing-machines and pleasure-boats down in the bay. As time went on, and visitors became more numerous, the house grew and the garden with it, the machines and boats multiplied; he added a pony and chaise for hire, then another and another. Once a year he asked Rose to marry him for ten years. Then he gave up.

And then Mary, who had often urged the advantages of the match upon Rose, told her that she had done foolishly.

"I'll never leave you so long as you and me both lives," Rose replied.

They were sitting at work, quite as they were used to be, Rose thinking how tall the first child would have been, and picturing Robert at play with the younger ones.

Reefer, asthmatic and infirm, lay stretched before the warm blaze, his nose on his paws; the once reckless kitten winked beside him, a majestic and meditative cat, reflecting pleasantly on a long and virtuous life spent in rearing innumerable families and killing unnumbered mice. Mary Deane was whiter, thinner, and more bowed; Rose was stronger and handsomer, with deep lights in her eyes and a rich crimson under the brown of her sun and sea burned face.

* * * * * * *

Ten years later the cottage hearth glowed warmly one autumn night, the groundswell boomed in continuous bass; the long, cliff-like ranges of breakers rolled crashing on the shore, the wind roared. The cat and dog were long dead; Mrs. Fielding, old but hale, sat in Mary's chair, a girl of 18 in that of Rose.

"Grandmother," said the latter, who now lived at the cottage, "why did Aunt Rose never marry?"

Then the tale was told in low tones to the music of surf and wind, while Mary Deane lay upstairs dying.

A step sounded overhead; it was Rose going to the lattice and opening it to let in the fuller thunder of the surges, that Mary's soul might pass away. Then she turned to the bed, closed the eyes of Robert's mother, and thanked God.

As soon as Mary Deane was in her grave George came to the cottage and asked Rose to be his wife; she refused for the last time.

That winter a ship went on the rocks in a storm from the northwest, and the crew were fetched off her by a rocket-line. George Attrill went aboard the foundered vessel and slung the numbed and injured men along the line. While doing this a heavy sea swept him overboard and crushed him on a rock, so that he was hardly rescued, a cripple for life.

One evening in the following spring Rose sat at work by her cottage door, thinking of George's sad condition, which had been told her that day. Her niece—the young Rose—was going to be married. The sea was singing its softest song in the hushing evening. She loved it daily more—its anger and sadness, its peace and mirth, its terror and soothing. It was Robert's first love, her only rival. She often saw him, in fancy, coming up the cliff in a strength and youth made immortal by love and death. She looked back on the twenty years of maiden-widowhood; in spite of her sorrow, they had been happy. The music of the grand sea and all its changing splendors had been ever present, and Robert's memory had beautified her labors in sun and breeze. Mary's need of her had been the salt of her life. And now the salt was gone.

It was hard to give up the shadowy figure with the kind brown face and merry blue eyes that had companioned her solitude for twenty years. But she could not help the dead; that memory would never die, it had grown old with her.

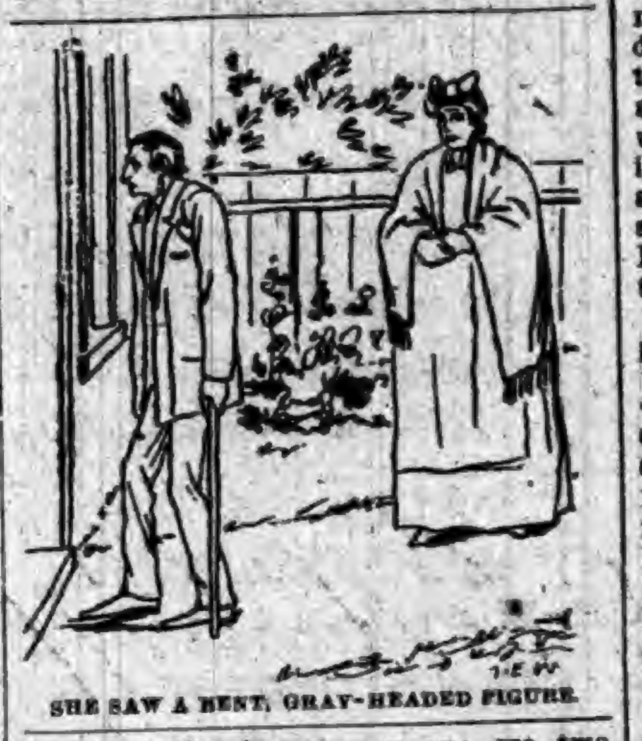
Yet, she was not old—only of a ripe prime; she was a comely woman still, erect and sun-browned, with clear, tranquil eyes and shining brown hair.

Presently she rose, folded her work, shut her door, and went over the cliff down to George Attrill's house in the bay, thinking of him as she last saw him in the autumn—a fine, strong man with fiery black eyes and thick black hair and beard.

When she reached the house she saw a bent, gray-headed figure dragging itself on crutches indoors as the spring evening closed in chill and gray. Could that bowed, broken man be George?

Shocked and shaken with pity she followed him, unseen in the dusk, into his house, where he sat solitary and sad, thinking over his life.

"George," she said, emerging from the heavy shadows and standing before him in the last light, "the time for sweethearting is gone by, and we two lone creatures will soon be getting along in years. Many's the time you've asked me to marry you. Now I'm come to ask you."



SHE SAW A BENT, GRAY-HEADED FIGURE.

So at last George had his heart's desire, and at last Rose's long-deferred wedding bells mingled their melody with the song of the restless surges—an epithalamium, a dirge, and a lullaby in one.

The True Use of Money.

The question of money is the question of the day in the average American home, where there are many and various desires and demands, and those desires which are gratified must be selected from those ungratified. It is impossible to do everything one would like to do; to have everything one would like to have—and so the matter of choice and selection is all-important. There is a great deal in spending money for those things that contribute to the higher progress and economizing on the more material things. The price of a new carpet, for instance, would go far in the season toward seeing the really good plays, hearing some of the finest music, and procuring some of the best reading matter. All these things make for culture. They stimulate the imagination, add to mental resources, and thus make life happier. They give one a reserved fund to draw on in dull days, and redeem time from growing monotonous. Now there is very little pleasure to be gotten out of a carpet or out of superfine upholstery. A simple matting on the floor and some good books about, furnish a room far more attractively than velvet pile and solid mahogany. And when the things that one has and the things one must go without are constantly a matter of choice, the sense of selection must be held amenable to the higher ideals of living.

All possible intellectual and artistic re-enforcements add to the stores on which one draws for personal happiness. And happiness is most important. In one of Prof. Davidson's lectures on Dante he speaks of the poet's recognition of the importance of happiness, and that Dante found there was a place in Hades, indeed, for those who had been unhappy during the life on earth. Their being unhappy was a wrong for which they were punished.

To guard against unhappiness store up mental and spiritual resources. These offer an ever-increasing value, and one that can be transmuted into various forms of activity.

We spend our money, as a rule, for that which we like, and we are like that for which we spend our money. It may go for fripperies and materialities that profit nothing. Or it may be made representative of that which is the true bread of life.—Household Companion.

Wanted to See Chicago.

The Italian Princess Vicovaro, daughter of Lorillard Spencer of New York, not long ago received a letter at her villa near Lucerne, Switzerland, saying that if $3,000 were not deposited in a certain place by a fixed time her villa would be blown up. She handed the letter to the police, who, by pretending to comply with the demand, caught the writer, a young man, who admitted he was driven to the attempt by his intense desire to come to this country and see the fair at Chicago.

These Great Men Died Young.

Alexander the Great, the conqueror of the world, died when he was 32 years old. Maurice of Saxony, the greatest captain and statesman of his time, died at the same age. The Duke of Weimar, one of Adolphus' generals, died at the age of 36; while Gustavus Adolphus died when he was 38. Pascal, the great French writer, and Raphael, the great Italian artist, both died at 37.

Farming Would Hardly Pay.

Several lots in Cornhill, London, in the immediate neighborhood of the Bank of England, were sold several days ago at a price that averaged $250 per foot, or something over $10,000,000 an acre. Several neighboring lots of equal size were offered for sale some weeks ago, and were bought in by the owner at a price considerably higher.

Tuckered Out.

Cavalry soldiers often sleep in the saddle after a fatiguing march, and, although it would seem to be impossible to march on foot and sleep at the same time, there are authentic instances of the performance of such a feat. Artillerymen in battle have been known to sleep from exhaustion under their own guns, which were constantly firing.

THE WAY THINGS RUN

IN THE GREATEST OF GREAT STATES, INDIANA.

Things Which Have Lately Happened Within Its Borders—Some Pleasant and Some Sad Reading.

Lived Nearly 103 Years.

William a Krug, the Crawfordsville centenarian, died the other day. He was nearly 103 years old, and had been a resident of Montgomery County for more than fifty years. Although of such great age, he has, until recently, been a familiar figure on the streets, and delighted in entertaining those who crowded around him with the stories of the early settlements and struggles of the country. He had a wonderful memory, and retained his faculties to the last.

Mr. Krug has voted at twenty-one presidential elections. His first vote was cast in 1812 for DeWitt Clinton. He voted for Rufus King in 1816, John Quincy Adams in 1820, 1824, 1828; Henry Clay in 1832, 1844; W. H. Harrison in 1836, 1840; Zachary Taylor, 1848; Winfield Scott, 1852; J. C. Fremont, 1856; Lincoln, 1860, 1864; Grant, 1868, 1872; Hayes, 1876; Garfield, 1880; Blaine, 1884; B. Harrison, 1888, 1892. Mr. Krug was a free talker, and readily gave accounts of incidents which took place over ninety years ago. He was a friend of Jonathan Jessup and Phineas Davis, Quakers who resided at York, Pa., and who built the first locomotive. Mr. Krug, however, never saw George Washington. Mr. Krug passed many pleasant hours in looking back over his long life. He always prayed to live to be 100 years old, which occasion was a happy event for him. When his mile stones marked a century he had forty grandchildren, thirty-nine great-grandchildren, and three great-great-grandchildren.

Minor State News.

YARDMASTER TIT JULIAN was instantly killed by the cars at Washington.

THE Wabash City Council has voted to appropriate $35,000 for the erection of a new high school building.

ELLIS DEFOREST, an employe of the Marion cycle works, was fatally injured by the bursting of an emery wheel.

S. F. CRAGUN, Lebanon, was allowed the full amount of his claim, $228, for printing the sample ballots at the last election.

C. W. GULICK, general superintendent of construction of the Postal Telegraph Company is at Fort Wayne to secure a right of way for its lines to that city.

EXPERT accountants have been going over the books of the Wabash County Treasurer and claim to have found that the State Treasurer owes the county $4,000.

H. POINDEXTER of Jeffersonville, and other fruit growers state that all the fruit is safe, and that the record of fifty years shows that it has never been injured by frost later that April 23rd.

AUGUST KERWIEN, at Clay City, has a freak in the shape of a seven-legged kitten. The little animal has two bodies, united at the shoulders. There are four legs on one body and three on the other.

CHARLES Smith of Galveston, Cass County, got a judgment for $800 at Peru against the Panhandle Railroad for injuries resulting from being hit by a mail sack thrown from a train by a postal employe.

ANOTHER case of poison from eating canned meats occurred at Madison recently, and resulted in the death of Mrs. Elizabeth Bentz, aged 50. This makes ten cases of canned goods poison in Madison inside of a week.

PERRY GILBERT, who, while drunk, it is alleged, shot and killed Granville Cook at Mitchell, in December, 1888, has been arrested at Ottawa, Ill. In March, 1889, the grand jury found a bill against Gilbert for murder in the first degree.

HAGERSTOWN is determined to have natural gas, if possible. Two wells have been drilled there at an expense of $2,500, and work will soon begin on a third one in an effort to find natural gas. An expert has declared that the gas is there and the citizens are bound to find out.

REPRESENTATIVES of a New York syndicate have contracted with the Shelbyville Electric Street Railway Company to put in a complete line and have the same in operation by August 1. The company reorganized, with Judge Hord President, Ed. Major Secretary, and Scott Ray Treasurer.

A MAN in Lafayette desperately in need of a "jag" cure, suddenly quit drinking of his own volition. Pressed for an explanation he confidentially answered that he had discovered of late that every time he went home at night and looked at the baby he saw twins and he thought it was time to draw the line.

CHARLES HESTON of Liberty Township, Wabash County, the oldest man in the county, died at the residence of his son-in-law, Oliver Tyler at Lafontaine, aged 92. His death was due to old age, his health having been excellent all his life. Mr. Heston came to Wabash County, settling near Lafontaine, in 1844.

THE residence of Jackson Brown, in the eastern part of Bartholomew County, burned, causing a loss of $2,000. Mrs. Brown was at the time in poor health, having been an invalid for some time. It was with great difficulty that her husband rescued her from the burning building. On account of her feeble condition, he was compelled to care for her and secure her shelter in the residence of a neighbor, letting the residence go.

HENRY WILSON and Jesse W. France, two friends, were playfully pointing loaded revolvers at each other at Fort Wayne, and the one in the hands of France was discharged, the bullet entering Wilson's forehead over the eye and lodging in the brain. Death resulted. France says he knew the weapon was loaded, but as he had kid gloves on his hands he did not know he was pressing so hard on the trigger. He is now in jail awaiting action of the grand jury.

THE Tipton City Council has petitioned the County Commissioners to extend the city limits, taking into the city several hundred acres of land which, by the growth of the city, have become very valuable. The land owners are said to be opposing it.

JAMES ST. JOHN, section boss on the Big Four Railroad at Waldron for nearly thirty years, met with a singular accident which may result in his death. He stepped off the tracks to allow a freight train to pass, when a heavy stone, weighing many hundred pounds, fell off a car and struck him, dislocating his arm and crushing his hips.

THE Enterprise Gas Company of Kennard, has struck it rich in their first well, and they are arranging with manufacturing establishments for its consumption. This shows the company has a splendid field, and they will sink other wells soon. Kennard now has three first-class wells.

JAMES OARD, residing south of Muncie, reports that he had an encounter with a monster eagle last week. The bird has been soaring in that vicinity for several days and once chased some school children in a house. Farmers with loaded rifles are laying for the bird. Oard says it is fully seven feet from tip to tip, and he escaped under a hollow log when it was about to drop on him.

OFFICIAL PAPER OF DeKALB COUNTY.

JAMES A. BARNS, Editor.

Registered at the Auburn, Indiana, post-office as second-class matter.

THURSDAY..............MAY 4, 1893.

THE new laws passed by the legislature will be issued about the first of May. It will probably not be a very big book And yet it will be big enough.

TRAMPS at Lagrange got drunk last week and got into a fight, in which one of them was severely stabbed with a pocket knife. The guilty one escaped.

O. M. PACKARD of Plymouth has been appointed national bank examiner for this state. Of course Auburn democrats would have been pleased to see W. H. McIntyre get it.

A LOCOMOTIVE in going over a bridge in Chicago, got off the rails and plunged into the river one day last week. The fireman and engineer jumped off and swam ashore.

PRESIDENT CLEVELAND set in motion the machinery at the world's fair Monday, in the presence of 150,000 people or more. And now the really "greatest show on earth" is running.

REPORTS over the state show democratic success generally, but one must remember that these village elections are not very good indications as to party feeling. They generally turn as ours did on some local matter.

NAVAJOS Indians in Colorado went on the war path last week in the fights that ensued, several were killed on both sides. The immediate cause of the trouble was the Indians stealing a lot of cattle from the settlers. Another Indian war is expected.

TERRIFIC storms reported all over the west and southwest last week. Much damage was done in various parts, especially in the newly built towns of Oklahoma, several of which were nearly demolished and about sixty persons lost their lives.

THE MACKAYE SPECTATORIUM, the wonderful scientific and art creation at at the world's fair grounds Chicago has had the name changed to "Chicago Spectatorium" a designation made almost necessary because of its location. It is said to be a wonder, and a marvelous display or the achievements of science and art.

THE coming G. A. R. encampment at Indianapolis promises to be a grand one. We see by the dailies that five G. A. R. men from each county, or at least five men who will work the matter up, have been appointed. In this county the men chosen for this work are W. J. Frederick of Garrett; G. A. Bishop, Auburn; C. S. Stoy, Butler; Ab. Kelley, Waterloo and W. M. Mercer, Corunna.

THE Anti-Liquor League of this state is pushing its organization steadily forward in every direction. The object is not to start a new political party, or to enter politics directly in any way. But they propose to take in men of all parties, who will pledge themselves to support no one for office, unless he will pledge himself to see that the law already on our statute books, in regard to the liquor traffic, as far as they come up in the work in his office, shall be enforced as contemplated by the laws themselves and those who framed them. They also ask of members of the legislature, to assist in making these laws plainer and better. Information can be had by addressing R. V. Hunter, Terre Haut, Ind.

Call for County Orders.

All county orders to No. 670 Series L dated previous to Feb. 15, 1892 are called. Interest stops on same May 5, 1893.

Election Notes.

It was a surprise to have Frank Dills defeated, for he is a superior man and would have made a model clerk.

The closest race was between Miller and Rakestraw, the latter getting there by one vote. And that one vote was given him by mistake. Mr. York, who thought the lived in the corporation, voted for Rakestraw, but found out after all was over, that his residence is outside the limits Of course, he was innocent of any intentional wrong, but his vote had been counted and the matter all closed up. So Rakestraw was elected.

Ensley ran like a deer, leaving his competitor far behind. He has been a faithful member of the town board.

Mr. Miller would have been a valuable member of the council and we cannot help thinking the people have made a mistake in defeating him. Mr. Rakestraw is no doubt a good man and it is not the style of the COURIER to belittle or abuse its opponents. We leave that very inviting field to the Dispatch. But we reserve the right to say the people made a mistake by not taking Miller He is a financier of ability and would have done good service. But there were three or four things that worked against him. In the first place, he was too frank and open in his canvass as to the school house, and as the democrats were divided on this question, he lost some of their votes. He was quoted as saying he would not build a school house, and many democrats wanted one built, and believing Rakestraw favored it, voted for him. Another thing worked against Miller. We are told that the Garrett Clipper favored him, and as our people, like any other, do not like outside interference, especially from that unpopular source, they voted against Miller in order to rebuke the Clipper. It is too well known to need comment that any man favored by the Clipper is at once doomed to defeat at Auburn, and anyone it is opposed to, is about certain to be elected. Auburn is sick and tired of interference from such a source, and is quick to resent it. As to a new school house, we still have faith in Mr. Miller, that if elected he would have been liberal in the matter, and though he might not have favored an expensive building, he would have seen that proper accommodations were provided So, in the COURIER of April 20, we said something to this effect, and if Miller had been elected, we still insist, as we did then, that he would give our children "suitable school privileges." Had this plain and truthful statement been permitted to stand, Mr. Miller would today be a member of the town council of Auburn. Then there was some talk about changing an electric light and this was used to take votes from him.

If anyone thinks we do not need more school room, let him look at the average of 97 to a room as shown by the table of school population we publish to-day. The COURIER is still for a school house

Charlie Jones will still do the town's cash business at the old stand and as usual do it well. We are glad he got there.

That the stampede of democratic voters that the republicans attempted on account of the certificates being two days late did not succeed, is shown by the big vote, the average this year being 543 as against 499 a year ago, or a gain of 44. So it will be seen no one got scared about that irregularity. Butler did not even hold a caucus till eight days later than the democratic certificates here were filed.

If the foul mouthed Garrett Clipper gang could keep their noses out of Auburn politics it would be a relief to decent people. Let it be known that they favor a man for this or that place in Auburn and at once, Auburn voters go back on him. We have lost several good men that way. As for helping to elect a man, they never did it. They have no business in Auburn politics anyway. Waterloo and Butler papers never interfered with us, and Auburn papers never interfere anywhere outside of Auburn.

The majorities at Waterloo were: Ab. Kelley, dem., 67; S. P. Klotz, rep., 52; for trustees. For treasurer, H. K. Leas, dem., had a majority of 14; for clerk, S. A. Bowman, rep., 8; for marshal, Frank Fisher, rep., 118.

An Electric Railway.

The communication from State Pension Agent Ensley at Indianapolis was received by J. L. Davis on Monday, and explains itself. A map accompanied the article with the line of the proposed railway from Garrett to Auburn Junction, thence to Auburn and Waterloo, as well as an extension to Ashley. It could be carried on, as Mr. Ensley says, to Pleasant Lake and Angola.

The project is not a wild one as some may think, for it is easily accomplished. There are many such lines going into operation in various parts of the country, and we know of few localities where there is a greater need, or where it would pay better than at Auburn and the sister towns it would help to connect. Articles of association have been filed with the secretary of state for such a line from Indianapolis to Martinsville, in Morgan county, a distance of thirty miles. For this line they propose to issue 500 shares of stock of $100 each. Good men are in the company and they will make it go. We publish Mr. Ensley's statement in full, so our people can act intelligently. We believe it can be accomplished and that it would pay good profits. Mr. Davis has taken the map to Garrett, and we suppose will also submit it to the people at Waterloo.

Wild as Usual.

The Clipper with its usual disregard of truth and of the feelings of the readers, last week published a very sensational and utterly false story about the arrest of Brown Matheny, at Oakland, Calif. It gave out the wild story that Brown had killed a man, and would be hanged last Friday. The facts, briefly told, are that at Oakland, a few weeks ago, two policemen found two burglars breaking open a safe in a saloon. They broke in at the door, to catch the burglars, when one of the latter met the officers at the door, shot one, escaped to the street where he was shot and killed by the other policeman. The other burglar was not seen, and escaped by the rear door. The dead burglar was the man who shot the policeman, the latter making this statement before he died, and one chamber of the burglar's revolver was empty. The next day Brown Matheny was arrested on suspicion of being the burglar who escaped at the back door. There is no proof that he is the man, and no one claims he killed the policeman. The only claim they will try to make is that he was along with the burglar who was killed, and was helping to blow open the safe. If convicted of this he might be sent to prison for a year or two.

WHO Cares to pay for name or fame in this the Nineteenth Century? When we buy goods we buy them on their merits

WHEN We are asked as we often are "Why do you sell goods so much lower than other houses?" we usually answer, "We DO because we CAN." One reason

WHAT We say we have — the Goods, the Amount, the Quality and the Price. Another reason is that we know exactly

WHERE Cash can buy them the cheapest, and all we ask is for every sensible person to do likewise and you will surely come to the Boston Clothing Store. A most reasonable reason—

WHY We can leave others behind in the race and sell first class goods for 15 to 25 per cent less than others can, particularly when it comes to advertising certain goods, is because our patrons know that when we advertise goods at a certain price we have just

HOW when and where to buy goods, so that we can undersell all others. Now, if you are wise and desire to save money on a fine class of goods, this is your greatest of opportunities. Please call and examine these goods, remembering that always and in all cases WE DO AS WE ADVERTISE.

Butler is going to have a sanitarium to use up the mineral water of their deep well. They are also going to start a basket factory. As they are losing their railroad employes, they very sensibly turn to factories to keep up the town's prosperity.

Through freights began running over the new Wabash on Monday, May 1. May 15 the through passenger trains will run over the new line. This we suppose will take off the Chicago trains that have been running through Auburn and leave only the local Logansport trains.

Frank Zimmerman went up to Chicago Saturday to buy a lot of new machinery. Part of these he will get at South Bend on his way up. It is for use in the factory, a part of it being for cutting steel sheets the material used in their newly patented steel windmill. They are making this new mill a special feature this year although they also make the wooden ones as before.

Ligonier Banner: Extra gang foreman George Smith, of the Lake Shore, commenced Saturday morning to raise the tracks just west of Kendallville, preparatory to placing the 1,700 foot tank and ere long the fast trains will go flying through that city, taking water as they go. This arrangement, says the Kendallville Sun, will interfere with the accommodations of travel out of that place as the fast trains now stopping for water and allowing passengers to alight or get on board, will be a thing of the past.

A writer in the North American Review states "that we still have on the pension rolls twenty widows and two daughters of the revolution, the last two survivors of the war having died in 1869, aged respectfully 105 and 109. There are 165 survivors and 6,657 widows of the war of 1812, and 13,315 survivors and 7,282 widows of the Mexican war. This leaves 687,862 survivors and 158,893 dependent relatives of the war of the rebellion, with 426,398 claimants for pensions for this and earlier wars on the list for consideration at the date of the last report, October 12, 1892, besides 361,663 claimants for increase of pension."

The Dispatch last week made a very wry face because it was not given all the work to do by the town board. We presume they would have treated him with the politeness they always showed him before, but for the fact that he had continually treated them so shabily. He has criticized and scolded them continually and without stint—and frequently without reason, for years, but they were well bred enough not to show any visible resentment, till continuous abuse had worn out their patience. The Courier has uniformly treated republican officials as if they were respectable citizens and equals. The Dispatch has treated democratic officials as if they were school boys and mentally and morally his inferiors. He has his own churlish conduct to thank for any want of courtesy he may encounter.

The W C. T. U. will meet at the home of Mrs. Rice, Tuesday evening at 7 30 p. m. All ladies interested in this line of work are very cordially invited to attend this meeting and all subsequent parlor meetings.

A number of our literary ladies are in Ft. Wayne, attending the convention of the Indiana Union of Literary Clubs. Among them are, Mrs. Houser, Mrs. Emanuel; Mrs. J. E. Rose, Mrs. Ehrlich, Mrs. Lewis, Mrs. Barns, Mrs. Ralston and perhaps others.

Butler has a debt of $24,309 and don't whine about it. But then, Butler has papers that take an interest in their town. They don't advertise in great headlines that their town is in debt, as if that were the thing they most delighted in having people outside to know.

The literary entertainment given last Wednesday at the church was a splendid success, viewed from any standpoint. The young ladies and little misses never showed off to better advantage or gave their audience greater pleasure. They were well patronized and the audience was more than pleased.

Mrs. Rebecca Dickinson is back again after a pleasant visit of five weeks with relations at Colburn. Her sister, Mrs. Bolender came back with her, and after a stay of a week or so here, Mrs. Dickinson will accompany her to her home at Dayton, Ohio, and will also visit the relatives at Sydney and Anna, in that state.

A new delegation for the Keeley Institute reached here early this week. They are friendly, bright, intelligent men and behave themselves in a way to suit the most exacting. And they are to a man, in dead earnest and determined to be cured. And they are cured before they leave. There have been no failures and there will be none. The Auburn Keeley Institute is doing a grand work.

Our farmer readers need a steady and reliable market at Auburn for selling their produce. Read B. C. Zeigler's ad, on the first page. He is going to build up a produce market here, and while he expects to ship the most of it to dealers abroad, such a market will also enable Auburn citizens to obtain much needed articles that are sometimes difficult to get. We hope this new enterprise will be a benefit all around.

J. A. Sawyer wishes to have it under stood that if any such person or persons that have started or circulated the rumor that he offers for sale his premises on North Jackson street for $300 will come down with $1,400 there may be a purchase made, otherwise they may forever afterwards hold their peace. I have never offered to sell my premises for $300 or any other price, and wish to have no false statements or misrepresentations in regard to it. Nevertheless I might sell at any time if I can get my price. I have not given any person permission or authority to set the price.

We publish to day the official report of DeKalb's school enumeration, showing the number for last year, and the gains and losses. From Mr. Merica's appended statement, will be seen one of the reasons, the chief one, why taxes are so much higher in one township than in another. The meeting of the trustees Monday was a very pleasant one, and profitable to the school and other township interests. They discussed uniformity of wages and time of beginning schools, and appointed a standing committee of five to control and arrange for the purchase of such supplies as would be needed, they to report at the next meeting, which is set for June 5. This committee is: G. O. Denison, R. H. Sherlock, R. C. Baxter, W. S. Morgan and B. A. Woodcox.

Electric lights play queer tricks, or rather the electricity does. A week or so ago one of the maple trees by W. E. Rush's residence got tangled up with a live wire and several points in the limbs and twigs were brilliantly illuminated. Persons touching the tree received quite a shock. It was evidently fully charged, but after the wires were fixed up again, the tree assumed its usual conditions.

T. C. Mays, formerly of this place and for eight years publisher of the Courier has had a streak of good fortune lately. Under an act recently passed by the Arkansas legislature, he has been chosen superintendent of state printing contracts, April 11th, he was summoned to Little Rock by a telegram, and on his arrival there, was at once sworn into office, and entered on his duties. He still has his interest in the Paragould Press, but will reside at Little Rock. He sends good words to the friends here and especially to Mr. Davis and Mr. Davenport.

A New York daily paper, taking up the idea conveyed in Flammarion's exciting novel, "Omega; The Last Days of World," has interviewed a number of the leading men in all professions as to what they would do if science were to predict to-morrow that the end of the world would arrive within the next thirty days. The answers are various and curious, and heighten the interest which is felt in the second part of Flammarion's great novel, which appears in the May Cosmopolitan. It is a question which everyone will find interesting to ask himself: What would you do if within six weeks the end of the world were certain? Probably no novel which has ever appeared in an American magazine has been more elaborately illustrated by more distinguished artists. Laurens, Saunier, Vogel, Meaulle, Rochegrosse, Geradin and Chovin all contribute to the explanation of the text. A clever story of another kind is that of the new English novelist, Gilbert Parker, in the same number. "American Society in Paris" is an article of another kind, but one which will interest all who have had an occasion to make even a short residence in the French capital. The Cosmopolitan scores a success in producing in its May number, almost simultaneously with the daily papers, an elaborate description of Professor Gray's marvelous invention, the Telantograph, which reproduces the handwriting or the work of the artist, simultaneously, thousands of miles distant from the place where the writer or artist is sitting. Mr. Howells' purpose in "The Travellers from Altruria" is, month by month, becoming more evident, and is now receiving wide attention at the hands of the critics all over the world.

The Great Bicycle Race.

The great bicycle relay trip from Boston to Chicago began Monday at 5 p. m., when a swift wheelman started with a message from Gov. Russell, of Massachusetts to Gov. Altgeld of Illinois. Fresh riders are at proper points along the line. Ed. Robbins of Auburn has been notified to take the run from Butler to Waterloo. He must be ready Wednsday, (yesterday.)

Emery Wheel Burst.

Isaac Grogg came near death Monday by the bursting of an emery wheel he was using at the Church Furniture Factory. The wheel was in high motion when it broke into two parts, one going away and the other towards him. The part that flew his way struck him in the head and chest at the same time, it being about half the wheel. One point struck him in the forehead mashing the flesh down to the bone, and the other point hit his chest, the two blows knocking him almost senseless. Drs. Swarts dressed his injuries, and he is out on the streets, but his head and chest are still very sore.

Married.

Miss Nettie Baker, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Chris. Baker, was married last Wednesday evening to Mr. Jay Love of this place. The ceremony was by Rev. G. W. Healy, and took place at the residence of the bride's uncle, Charles Picker, on South Cedar st. Only the most immediate relatives and a few personal friends were present. Miss Baker, now Mrs. Love, is a most worthy young lady, and though we have no acquaintance with the fortunate groom, we hear him well spoken of by those who do. He has resided here two years or more. We should not omit to say the happy couple remembered the poor printer, the cake loving printer, most generously. We hope the young couple may never lack a supply as nice as that we received.

Suicide.

A terrible tragedy was enacted in Keyser township last Saturday, of which through the courtesy of Herb Weaver we are enabled to furnish an exact account. Mrs. John Embry, was formerly the wife of N. J. Kirk, but some years ago they were divorced, he taking their child with him, a boy, now about thirteen years old. Kirks' home is at Kunkel, Ohio, up the Wabash road. Recently Mrs. Embry took seriously sick, and finally last week, Kirk was sent for, and asked to bring the boy down to the Embry home west of Garrett, so that the mother could see him. Kirk started in a buggy last Thursday, the boy with him, and when he reached Montpelier, he borrowed a revolver of the marshal there. They reached Embry's Friday evening and without going in to see his former wife, Kirk left the boy there, and went to some of the neighbors to stay over night. The next morning about eight o'clock he drove up to Embry's to get the boy to go home with him. The boy did not want to go, but Kirk persuaded him to get in and ride a little ways, which the boy did. After driving about forty rods, they stopped, Kirk went out into the woods, circled around a few minutes, and then came back to the buggy and got in. He told the lad that possibly he would soon have neither father nor mother as he could not stand it to go back home alone, then he pulled out the revolver and shot himself in the mouth. The frightened lad jumped out of the buggy taking the revolver with him, and ran back to the house, but for some reason we did not learn, Kirk was not taken from the buggy. He lived about two hours, then died where he sat, and there he remained. About three in the afternoon, someone notified Merica & Weaver, the Garrett undertakers, who at once sent a man out to bring Kirk to town, also sending an officer along to give any needed assistance. Kirk was found, still in the buggy, and was brought to town, having been all this time, from 8 a. m. to 7 p. m., in the buggy where he was when he fired the fatal shot. In the meantime Coroner Miser was summoned and an inquest was held, at which the above facts, in substance came out. The body was properly cared for by Merica & Weaver and Sunday evening brought to Auburn and sent on the east bound passenger train to his home at Kunkel. It is now believed that Kirk borrowed the revolver for the purpose of killing both himself and Mrs. Embry, but finding her so sick that he could get no good opportunity to kill her, decided on killing herself. Just what effect the tragedy may have on the sick woman, we do not know. Kirk was allowed to remain in the buggy all day, was because so many people think they have no legal right to touch a person who meets a violent death until the coroner comes. They are wrong. The unfortunate should be cared for and they have a perfect right to do it.

THE recent legislation in Maine bearing upon fire insurance, it is thought, may lead to the retirement of companies from the State; as was the case in New Hampshire a few years ago. Some of the companies, regarding it as a sort of prohibitory insurance legislation, are considering the question of withdrawing their agencies.

A PECULIAR weekly recently made the following statement: "To be born of water is to come into knowledge of divine scientifics, through the application of which the new immortal body is structured." It is not too much to say that this thought would never have occurred to the average mind, and possibly had it occurred would not have been recognized as a thought.

IT would be a triumph worth bragging about if American shipyards should get the contracts for the two new battleships for which Japan has asked bids. Such a feather in the cap of Columbia is not probable at present, however, though it may come soon; but it is more than likely that some of the 16-inch guns to arm the new vessels may be cast in this country.

THE funeral as a social function is something new, and is being gravely discussed by women who do not seem wholly brutal or totally devoid of sense. The mooted question is whether one should attend the obsequies of a person upon whom in life she had not called or who had moved in a different set. A woman who would consider such a problem should by all odds attend a funeral without delay. The suggestion that it be her own seems almost superfluous.

AN Indianapolis man has eloped with his mother-in-law. The deserted wife tells a remarkable story of the carryings on of the departed couple. She says they were most affectionate, and made no bones of kissing each other in her presence. It seems very hard for the mother-in-law so to conduct herself as to become an unalloyed blessing. The husband gets into trouble at home for treating her affectionately, and if he takes her to his heart he is in danger of overdoing the matter.

THE experiment of farm life for boys who are deemed incorrigible and who are now sent to industrial schools or houses of refuge is being tried in Maine. It is said to work well. The farm has a large number of buildings, and the boys are kept apart as they cannot well be in the large institutions in cities. It is believed, too, that work on the farm, and especially the association it gives the boys with Nature's works, are better for their moral health than any other treatment would be.

NICKEL is now combined with steel so as to produce the hardest and best armor for war vessels. The discovery of the combination, and especially this use of it with our new American navy, makes the nickel ore of much more importance than it once was. Unfortunately nickel does not seem to be produced in any considerable quantity in the United States. That used for the armor of the war-ships now building in Philadelphia comes from Canada. An English syndicate is reported to have got possession of the mines in Southern Oregon. John Bull still looks out for number one.

WE quite agree with the woman who says that until the men give up making themselves obnoxious at the theaters and operas, by going out between the acts, it is hardly worth while for them to talk about the high hat worn by the women. If there is one thing that is a trifle more annoying than another at such places, it is to be obliged to rise and permit to pass out and in, the procession of men who regard this as an inalienable privilege. Many of them have not even the grace to return before the next act has begun, thus doubly annoying, not only those by whom they pass but all around them.

THE Savannah was the first steamship which ever crossed the ocean. She was built in 1818 by Colonel John Stevens, of New York, and left the port of New York in May, 1819, under the command of Captain Moses Rogers, bound for St. Petersburg, via Liverpool. She reached the latter port on June 20, having used steam eighteen days out of the twenty-six. The log-book of the Savannah, in which Captain Rogers jotted down the incidents of the trip, is yet preserved by his descendants. The alleged steam pioneers, Sirius and Great Western, were built twenty years later. The Savannah was lost off the south coast of Long Island.

AN Omaha judge has introduced a new feature in divorce legislation. A man's wife sued him for divorce, and then, becoming reconciled to her husband, abandoned prosecution of the case. Her attorney presented a bill of $500, which she refused to pay. He then sued the husband for the bill, and recovered, the Judge holding that divorces are a necessary of life. It is hardly possible that this Judge's decision will have any great weight as a precedent. It is difficult to see how a divorce, which the wife herself declared that she did not want, could have been considered a necessary of life. If, however, husbands are hereafter to be liable for their wives' divorce bills, a new responsibility of serious importance has been added to matrimony.

Amusing Ingratitude.

It is often said that physicians are well used to ingratitude, but perhaps they could bear the unpalatable draught with composure if it were always as amusingly presented as in the following case:

Dr. J. M. Warren had been in the habit, for a number of years, of giving professional advice to a lady in reduced circumstances, whom he regarded as hardly able to offer him any compensation.

At length she ceased consuling him, and he did not see her for a long time. Finally, happening to meet her in the street, he said to her:

"Why, Mrs. ——, what has become of you? You haven't been near me for months."

"Well, the fact is, Dr. Warren," she said, in all simplicity, "I didn't seem to gain very much, and I thought I'd consult a pay-doctor!"

Calm but Not Collected.

"Were you calm and collected at the battle of Gettysburg, Major?" "Well, madam, I was calm enough, but I wasn't collected. With a leg in one part of the field, an arm in another, and a left ear in another, collection was difficult."—Harper's Bazar.

GREAT NAVAL REVIEW

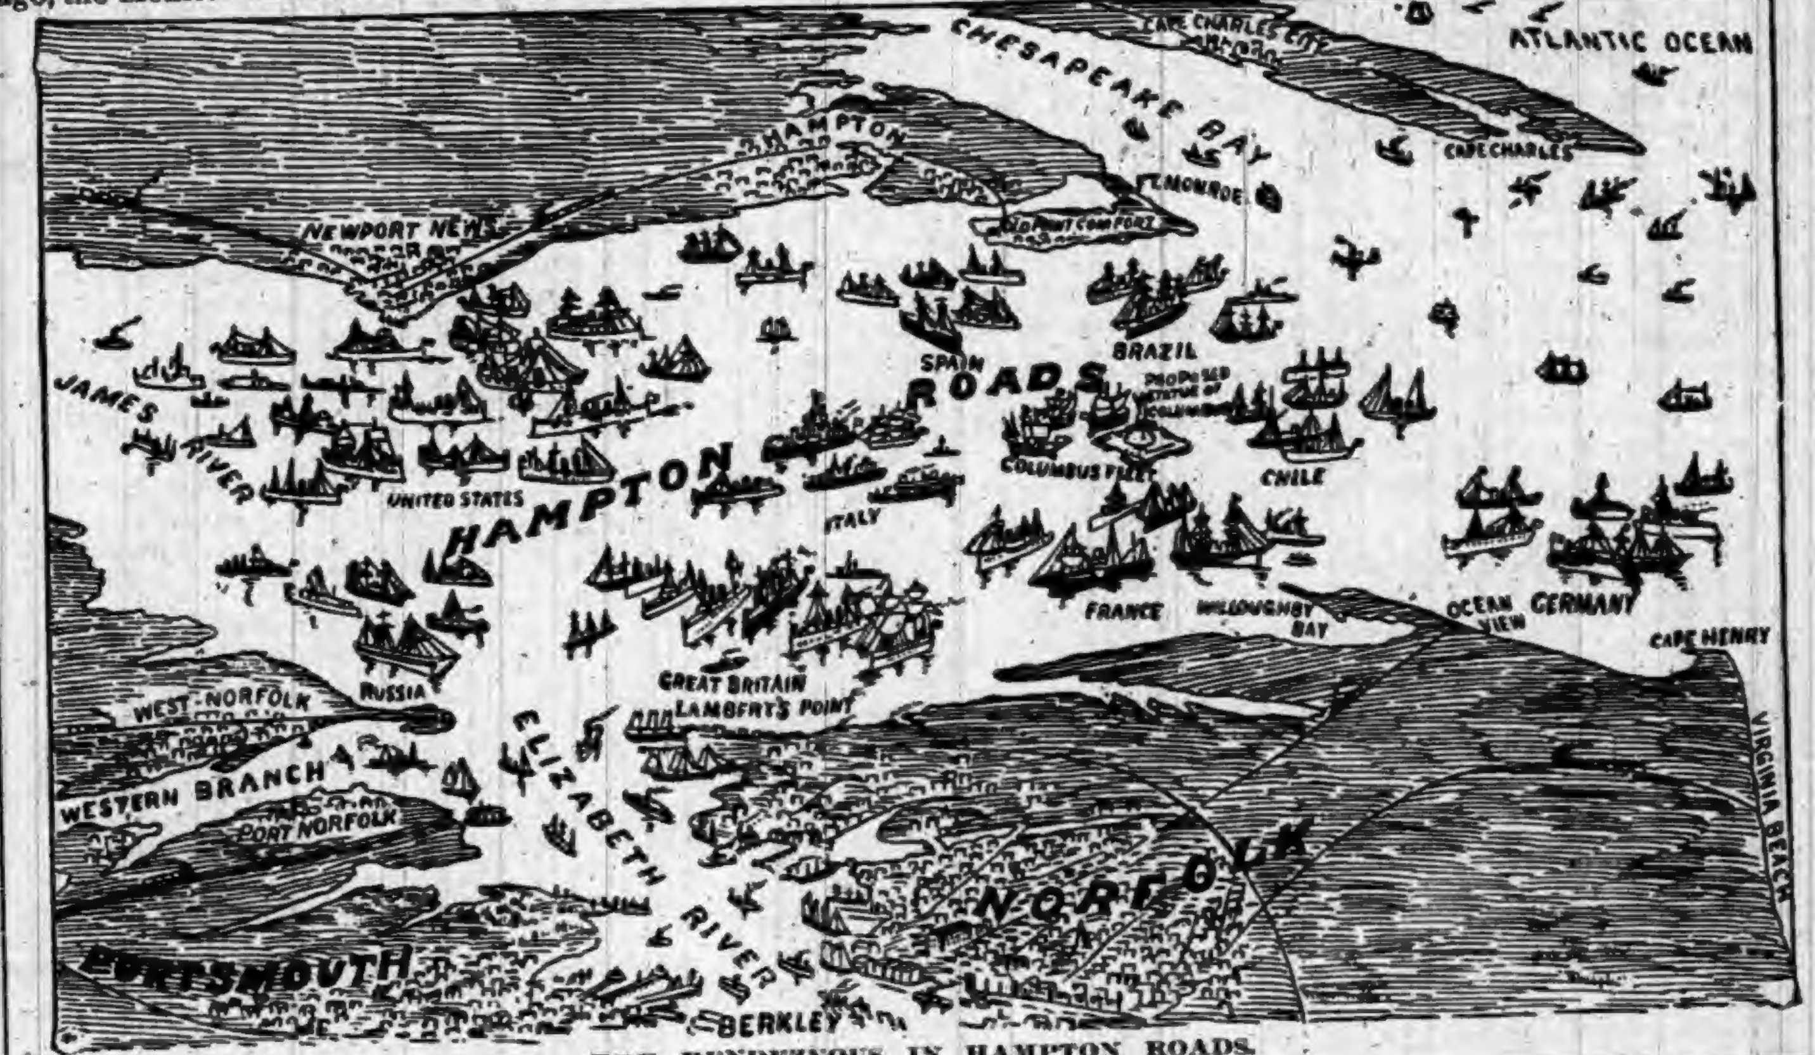
PROUDEST EVENT IN UNCLE SAM'S MARITIME HISTORY.

Nations of the Earth Lend Their Monarchs of the Sea to Do Us Honor—Hampton Roads the Historic Rendezvous—Great Day for Gotham.

An Imposing Spectacle.

WHEN your Uncle Samuel sets about to do a thing it is usually done in the most appropriate and elaborate way, and the great naval review witnessed in New York harbor was no exception to this rule. The imposing demonstration signalized the opening of the Columbian Exposition at Chicago, and its international character lent added attraction to a display of naval glory unprecedented in the history of the world.

Representative vessels from the mighty navies of the most powerful nations of the earth joined with the superb warships of our own country in a display grand and impressive almost beyond conception or description. For two weeks prior to the event in New York harbor, the monster ships had been arriving at the rendezvous in Hampton Roads, off Fort Monroe, at the very spot where, thirty-one years ago, the Monitor and Merrimac engaged in the most decisive naval battle in the civil war, and proved to the world that the days of wooden battleships was over.



THE RENDEZVOUS IN HAMPTON ROADS.

First to arrive was our own flagship, the Philadelphia, Rear Admiral Bancroft Gherardi, commander-in-chief, Capt. A. S. Barker commanding. Several other vessels of the United States navy accompanied her, and as one after another the foreigners were sighted the monster guns pealed forth their thunderous salutes. For several days the scene was one of animation and excitement. The roadstead was gay with flags of the various nations represented, and saucy little dispatch boats darted about with untiring energy.

From the impudent little launch and agile torpedo boat to the ponderous protected cruiser, every species of vessel used in modern warfare was represented, and when finally all were assembled the list was as follows:

American Fleet.

Philadelphia, flagship, Rear-Admiral Bancroft Gherardi, commander-in-chief, Captain Albert S. Barker, commanding.

Baltimore, Captain G. W. Sumner, commanding.

San Francisco, Captain J. C. Watson, commanding.

Charleston, Captain H. F. Picking, commanding.

Chicago, flagship, Rear-Admiral John G. Walker, commanding division. Captain John F. McGlensey, commanding.

Miantonomah, Captain Montgomery Sicard, commanding.

Vesuvius, Lieutenant Seaton Schroeder, commanding.

Kearsarge, Commander A. S. Crowninshield, commanding.

Concord, Commander Edwin White, commanding.

Atlanta, Captain F. J. Higginson, commanding.

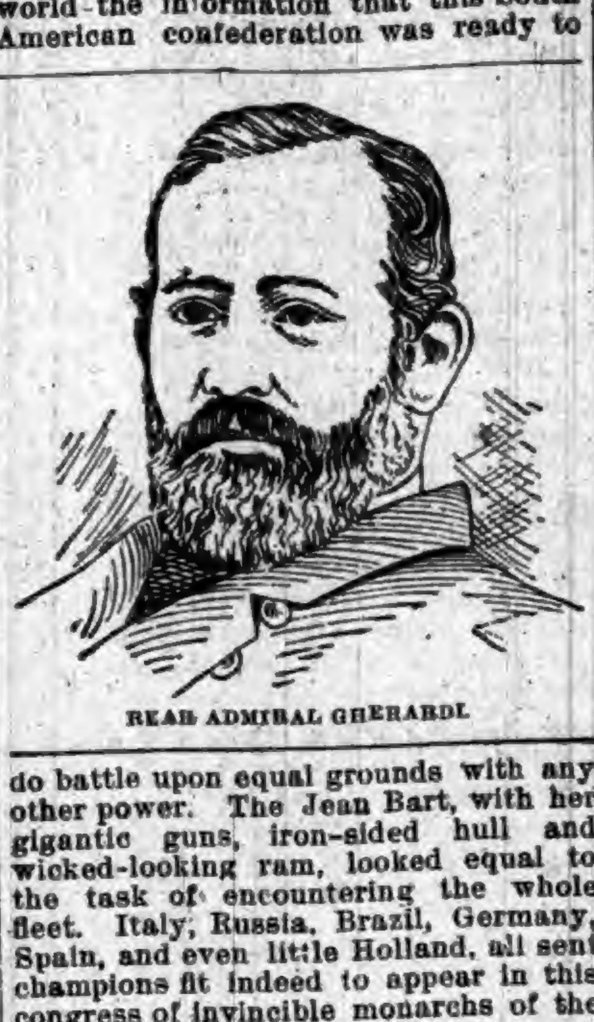
The fleet of Xerxes must have awed the Greeks as did this tremendous array of "armed neutrality" the modern world. The Armada was great in its day, and so were the fleets that gathered to besiege Sebastopol. But the advances in naval construction have been almost miraculous in their prodigiousness, and so it is that the war vessels gathered in Hampton Roads could in a day destroy a coast nation as extensive as the line from Key West to New York.

The new vessels of our now renowned navy have been described so often that further mention is superfluous. Of a type different than those of any other nation, they combine fighting ability with swiftness, and challenge the admiration of the world. But, superb as they are, they were in company which divided honors fairly.

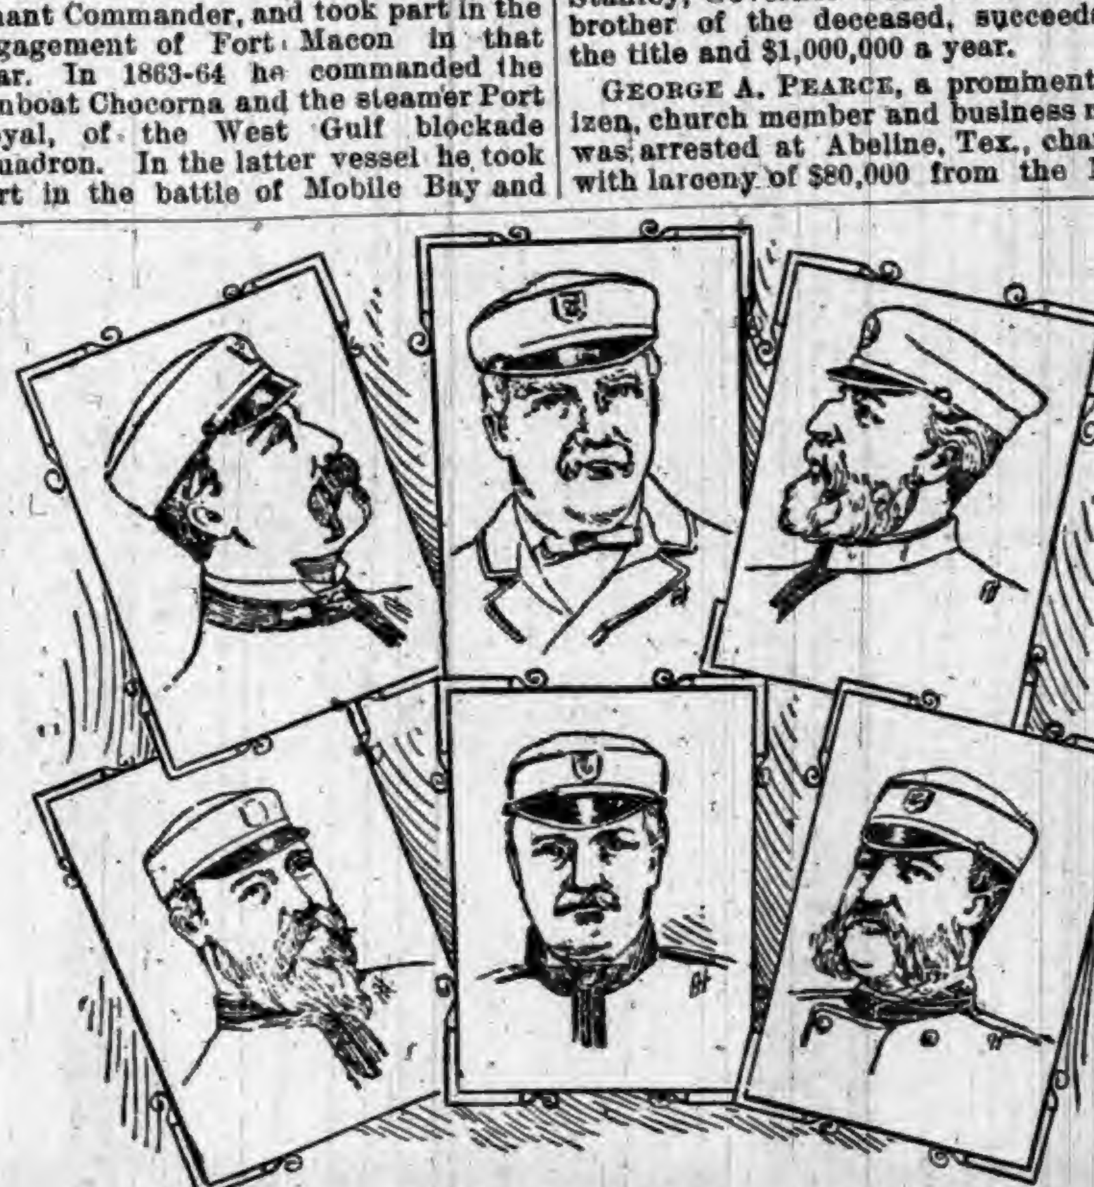
England sent the famous Blake, now the equal and lately the superior of any floating battery in the world. Argentine's Nueve de Julio, just from the yards on the Clyde, gave to the world the information that this South American confederation was ready to do battle upon equal grounds with any other power. The Jean Bart, with her gigantic guns, iron-sided hull and wicked-looking ram, looked equal to the task of encountering the whole fleet. Italy, Russia, Brazil, Germany, Spain, and even little Holland, all sent champions fit indeed to appear in this congress of invincible monarchs of the sea.



REAR ADMIRAL GHERARDI.

Under way from Hampton Roads to New York, the American vessels acted as escorts to the visitors, the Spanish fleet having the place of honor, commanded by the Duke of Veragua, Admiral of Spain. Vice Admiral Sir J. D. Hopkins with the Blake led the British squadron; Vice Admiral Kornakoff the Russian, with Grand Duke Alexis second in command; Rear Admiral Magunghi was in command of the Italian fleet, and Capt. Amavel, ex-Minister of Marine of Portugal, was in command of the corvette Alfonso de Albuquerque.

Admiral Gherardi of the American fleet is a man fitted by education and temperament for the delicate duties intrusted to him. He was born in Jackson, La., November 10, 1832. He entered the navy from Massachusetts as midshipman in 1846, and served on the Ohio, of the Pacific squadron, till 1850, entering the Annapolis Academy in 1852. He became lieutenant in 1855, and at the beginning of the civil war was on the Lancaster, of the Pacific squadron. In 1862 he was made Lieutenant Commander, and took part in the engagement of Fort Macon in that year. In 1863-64 he commanded the gunboat Chocorna and the steamer Port Royal, of the West Gulf blockade squadron. In the latter vessel he took part in the battle of Mobile Bay and distinguished himself for coolness and courage. In 1866 he was made Commander, in 1874 Captain, and in 1884 Commodore. In 1886 he was appointed Commandant of the Brooklyn Navy Yard, and in 1887 he became Rear Admiral.



CAPT. ASA WALKER. FLEET CAPT. BRIDGEMAN. ADMIRAL BENHAM. CAPT. PHILLIPS. CAPTAIN M. SICARD. COM. CHADWICK.

Up the coast the formidable procession swept in close order and at a speed of only seven and a half knots to avoid collisions, and in the evening came to anchor in Sandy Hook to await the morning of review.

Early on that eventful morning every available space for sight-seeing was crowded with spectators; crafts of all descriptions, resplendent with bunting of nearly every civilized nation in the world and lively with the music of scores of bands, steamed out to take positions advantageous for view. Slowly up the Narrows steamed the mightiest fleet ever afloat; they were joined by the Columbus caravels, the Santa Maria, Nina and Pinta, and the assembled thousands roared a mighty cheer as these representatives of the great discoverer's frail craft swept on in company with the others. At last, opposite Forts Hamilton and Wadsworth, came the supreme moment. The coast defense guns belched forth a sheet of flame, and from out the smoke boomed America's salute to the nations of the world. Hardly had the first cheer rolled up from the multitude before the fleet gave answer with a roar and crash that seemed to split the very heavens. Columbia had received the proudest homage in her history.

The rest of the exercises were simple. The fleet came to anchor, President Cleveland, his Cabinet, and other dignitaries boarded the flagship Philadelphia, and slowly down the line the party steamed in review. Flags and bunting were displayed in profusion. As the President of the great republic passed the warships the yards were manned, the bands played national airs, and the multitude ashore and afloat howled itself hoarse.

The Presidential review terminated the parade, and many of the foreign vessels departed at once for their respective stations. Quite a number of the commanding officers, however, proceeded to Chicago to witness the opening of the Exposition.

Upon their return from Chicago the foreign officers are to be entertained lavishly by the citizens of New York. The chamber of commerce has consented to take charge of the banquet and reception, and prominent citizens will vie with each other to impress upon the braided gentlemen from Europe, Asia and South America the fact that American hospitality knows no bounds.

It is the opinion of naval officers that the New York review surpassed in magnificence and grandeur the great English display inaugurated for Emperor William of Germany in 1890. Never in the history of the world have so many nations consented to participate in an international parade—a fact which plainly indicates that all of the great powers are anxious to show their respect for the United States by honoring the memory of the man who discovered the western hemisphere.

REFORM MUST FOLLOW.

FARMERS DEMAND INSTANT AND ADEQUATE RELIEF.

Artisans Not Misled by Protectionists' Clamor—Glove Makers of Gloversville Discuss the Tariff—They Refute the Silly Talk of the High Taxers.

Reform the Tariff.

The abnormally low prices of grain and the ebbing markets for cotton, while the prices of all manufactured goods are kept at high-water mark by a class tariff, make a condition of things that cannot last forever. The agricultural interests of the United States and the interests immediately dependent upon and identified with them are strong enough to overthrow any system that opposes them, and sooner or later they will do it.

Whether the remedy shall come on lines of conservatism and broad wisdom, or with the energy of blind Samson, depends largely on the Democratic majorities in the two houses of the Fifty-third Congress. If the Democratic party uses the power intrusted to it to wipe out class distinction in the tariff taxes, to knock off unearned profits from manufactured goods and enhance the prices of farm products by opening the markets of the world to the West and South to buy and sell in, the whole country will be prosperous and the Democratic lease in Washington will be a long one.

If this is not done, if the tariff is not radically reformed in the interest of the consumer and of wider markets for the products of American farms, the only thing certain is that the work of reform will be turned over to rougher hands. The election returns of 1890 and 1892 say this much as plain as print.

Enormous as their yield already is, the farm lands of the United States are not half developed. The men who till them are shut out by their environments from recourse to the devices by which, in many other industries, the output is kept down and prices up. They follow a natural law in sowing and reaping all they can, and their only way of salvation lies in finding purchasers for all that they produce.

That is an ideal which may never be attained, but the nearest approach to it can be made only by giving everybody a chance to buy what they have to sell; in other words, by throwing down the Chinese wall of protection and allowing people who have anything that we want to send it here and take our farm products—our chief exports—in exchange for it. This was the principle of the Walker or free trade tariff, under which the United States throve as they never throve before or since, and a speedy return to that principle is the only way to solve economic and political problems that are becoming graver than some wise men in Washington believe.

The emotional era of American politics is closed. The era at hand is of dollars and cents, and the problem it has to solve is to keep mercenaries and parasites from consuming the substance of unfavored producers by juggling with the treasury and the taxing power of the United States.

This problem will be solved. It is for Democratic members of the Fifty-first Congress to decide in the next few months whether it is the Democratic party that shall furnish the solution. If the Democratic party is to do it at all, it must before the close of the first regular session of the Fifty-third Congress, enact into law the reforms that the people voted on on the 8th of November last. It is not a day too soon for members to begin to think about these things. St. Louis Republic.

Glove Manufacturers Not Scared.

Since the Reform Club has made public its proposed tariff bill, with duties of 25 per cent. on the great bulk of imported dutiable articles, the protectionists have been predicting direful things if such a bill should become law. The New York Press sets up a calamity howl about the proposed 25 per cent. duty on gloves. It says: "This would be a death blow to one of the most prosperous industries of this State. In Fulton County alone fully 3,000 persons depend for a livelihood, either entirely or in part, in glove making. The 25 per cent. tariff would drive the industry out of existence.

"The labor cost of glove making is something like 150 per cent. more in this country than in Europe. The 'reformers' propose to meet this by a 25 per cent. duty, or one-sixth of the difference between the foreign and American wage rates. Under this schedule the foreign manufacturers would take complete possession of the American markets and close every glove-making establishment in the country."

As this is a sample of the thousands of howls started by the out-of-power Republicans, it may be well to analyze it to see what truth, if any, it contains. We will let the manufacturers have the floor.

Lucien Littauer, the largest manufacturer of gloves in Fulton County and in the United States, said in 1888:

"We can do just as well, pay our employes just as high wages, and conduct just as prosperous a business under a 40 per cent. (Mills bill) as under a 50 per cent. tariff. All this is demonstrable if a man will sit down and think it out for himself."

Mr. D. B. Judson, of Fulton County, the oldest and greatest manufacturer, and, until within a few years, the largest manufacturer of gloves in this country, said in 1888:

"Under a 40 per cent. tariff we shall still have an advantage over foreign manufacturers of from 60 to 75 cents per dozen. That is to say, we will continue to pay about double the wages paid in England, and turn out gloves and mittens at from 60 to 75 cents a dozen cheaper than the English manufacturers. As a matter of fact, the tariff does not affect the manufacture of heavy gloves—the gloves for the million, I mean."

Another manufacturer, also of Gloversville, Fulton County, and one of the five largest there, said in 1891:

"There is no real foreign competition on more than ten per cent. of the goods sold here. Fully two-thirds of the heavy goods made in the United States are of a class of goods neither produced nor consumed anywhere else in the world. Gloves to protect the hands of common laborers are unknown outside of this country. More than ninety per cent. of the ladies' gloves imported are of a class of goods not made here, nor will they be in your or my time."

There seems to be a slight difference of opinion between the Press and these manufacturers. What the Press may have meant, and what it should have said, was that wages are 150 per cent. higher here than in Europe. But wages differ from labor cost as much as steam differs from a steam engine. A highly effective modern steam engine, under high pressure, produces greater effects and uses less steam than an old style ineffective engine, under low pressure. Highly skilled labor, with high wages, produces greater results, than unskilled labor and low wages. Hence the highly skilled labor is cheaper. This is evident from the fact that the high-wage labor of England has for generations been more than able to compete with the low-wage labor of the rest of Europe and of Asia. England's manufactured products sell in all parts of the world.

But it so happens, in the case of gloves, that nearly half of the $16,000,000 worth annually consumed, and fully two-thirds of those made here, are men's heavy gloves, neither made nor worn in any other country. That this part of the industry would not be driven out of existence by a 25 per cent. or by any other duty is clear from what Mr. Judson and many others say. Heavy gloves are, in spite of high wages, like boots and shoes, actually made cheaper in this than in any other country. But then this is the year for the Press and other good Republican papers to close up factories, extinguish industries, and lower wages, and if they sometimes become overzealous and make leaky statements, we should remember that calamity howling is at present their only occupation, as future calamity is their only salvation, and not criticise them too severely. The country must go to the dogs under free trade or the protectionists are lost.—Byron W. Holt.

Reform the Tariff.

If Democrats do not soon give the farmers relief, another party will do so.

The abnormally low prices of grain and the ebbing markets for cotton while the prices of all manufactured goods are kept at high-water mark by a class tariff make a condition of things that cannot last forever. The agricultural interests of the United States and the interests immediately dependent upon and identified with them are strong enough to overthrow any system that oppresses them, and sooner or later they will do it.

It is not a day too soon for members to begin to think about these things.

THE San Francisco Examiner (Dem.) would like to see an extra session of Congress called before September. "McKinleyism," it says, "is not entitled to one day's grace from the Democracy. It is a thing of small moment to the people who shall be Minister to England or Nicaraugua, who Collector of Customs at this port or that, or who Postmaster in New York, San Francisco, or Squashopolis, but it is a thing of vital moment to the people that they should be compelled to pay thieving McKinley prices for the necessaries and comforts of life, and that the business of the nation should be confused by uncertainty as to the future."

The Worst Thing to Do and the Most Sensible.

Commenting on a burning casualty in Philadelphia, by which a young lady lost her life, the Public Ledger makes these pertinent observations: The first thing to teach a girl in this matter is that fire makes headway more rapidly in burning clothes when the endangered person is standing up. The difference in progress between a burning lamplighter of twisted paper held in the hand perpendicularly, flame down, and in the same paper laid flat on a marble hearth can be seen in a moment. The first thing to do when clothing catches fire is to lie flat and cover up the flames, if there is nothing within reach to smother it. If, as is probable, there was a bed in the room where Miss Manship was standing, getting into the bed, between the blankets, and rolling up in them, would have been a sure way of putting out the fire in a burning skirt or sleeve. The worst, the very worst, thing to do was to run down stairs. Opening the door made one draught, the flight down stairs another, and rushing out into the street, in the last frenzied moment, the worst of all. The impulse to get out of doors is very strange in all such cases, because within the house there are always means for putting out a fire, and outside there are none. Rugs, rag carpet torn off the kitchen floor, a heavy overcoat, blankets from the beds, even pieces of bedside carpet, put round the person in the twinkling of an eye, while water pails and pitchers are there to hand, ready to be emptied. In every case let the person whose clothes or hair has caught fire throw herself flat upon the floor and roll upon the flame. If there is anything in the room of thick woolen or carpets to smother it, even a gossamer waterproof cloak, snatch these and smother the fire while calling for help. If the fire has caught in the hair, bury the head in the bedclothes. Fire cannot burn without air, and by shutting out all air from the flames they must go out. But an open door fans the flames, and a standing position gives them headway. Girls are much more liable, from their long, flowing hair, their cotton aprons, and, altogether, thinner and more loosely bouffant dress, to be set on fire than boys, whose stout cloth jackets are not easily ignited. The rules for putting out fire in burning clothing may not be taught in the normal school, but every teacher ought to know them, and so thoroughly that even the fright of mounting flames will not drive them out of mind.

Diamonds on Shoes.

"Do you know that when your shoes glisten with a polish they are really covered with diamonds?" asked a shoemaker the other day of one of his patrons. "This is true," he continued, "and I will show you why. Bone-dust, which is the principal ingredient in shoe blacking, is almost pure carbon. The diamond, you know, is the purest form of carbon. When this paste has been smeared over your shoes the friction of the polishing brush crystallizes the blacking and converts it into millions of infinitesimally small diamonds, and every man with a shine on his shoes may revel in the knowledge that he wears a cluster of diamonds on his feet."—Philadelphia Record.

The Boisterous Atlantic

Is a terror to timid voyagers, scarcely less on account of the perils of the deep than the almost certainty of sea-sickness. The best curative of mal de mer is Hostetter's Stomach Bitters, which settles the stomach at once and prevents its disturbance. To all travelers and tourists, whether by sea or land, it presents a happy medium between the nauseous or ineffectual resources of the medicine chest, and the problematical benefit derivable from an unmedicated alcoholic stimulant, no matter how pure. The jarring of a railroad car often produces stomachic disorders akin to that caused by the rolling of a ship. For this the Bitters is a prompt and certain remedy. The use of a brackish water, particularly on long voyages in the tropics, inevitably breeds disorders of the stomach and bowels. Hostetter's Stomach Bitters mixed with impure water nullifies its impurities. Similarly it counteracts malarial and other prejudical influences of climate or atmosphere, as well as the effects of exposure and fatigue. Use it for kidney complaints, rheumatism and debility.

Too Practical.

"There is but one step from the sublime to the ridiculous." A short time ago, at a penny reading in a small country town, a young gentleman was reciting, much to his own satisfaction, if not to that of his audience, Macaulay's well-known "Battle of Ivry." With great military fevor he was thundering out the lines:

> "A thousand spurs are striking deep,
> A thousand spears in rest;
> A thousand knights are pressing close > Behind——"

when a voice from the back seats was heard to shout: "Old 'ard, guv'nor. Why, that's only one spur apiece for them 'ere knights!"—London Tit-Bits.

All Run Down
A Puzzling Case—How Health Was Restored
Gained from 135 to 176 Pounds.

"A few years ago my health failed me, and I consulted several physicians. Not one could clearly diagnose my case, and their medicine failed to give relief. After much persuasion I commenced to take Hood's Sarsaparilla. Have taken several bottles and am much improved. From an all-run-down condition I have been restored to good health. Formerly I weighed

Why not, indeed?

When the Royal Baking Powder makes finer and more wholesome food at a less cost, which every housekeeper familiar with it will affirm, why not discard altogether the old-fashioned methods of soda and sour milk, or home-made mixture of cream of tartar and soda, or the cheaper and inferior baking powders, and use it exclusively?

An Underground Country.

Travelers and scientists are greatly interested in the recent discovery of wonderful caves on the island of Corsica.

A miner who undertook to explore them a few weeks ago found it impossible to do so. He discovered various small caves close together, which led to a mammoth cave some distance from the original openings.

The roof of the mammoth cave was between sixty and seventy feet high.

After traveling underground for some time he came upon an immense lake, which made further progress impossible.

According to his estimates, the lake is situated under the mountain chain La Revellata, near Calva, and gets its water from the ocean.

In support of his theory a small grotto was discovered on Cape Revellata, on a level with the sea, which is believed to be connected with the caves.

Some people estimate the length of the caves along the coast at thirty miles.

An Impressionist Sketch.

One of the good deacons of a certain church is also the superintendent of the Sunday School, and although he is not an artist he frequently illustrates points in the lesson by the use of the blackboard. These exercises are for the special benefit of the younger portion of the school, and the superintendent has a habit of arousing the children's interest by asking questions about what he has drawn. Having drawn the representation of a clown one Sunday, much after the stereotyped style of all such royal appendages, he said: "Now, what one of the little folks can tell me what this is?" Several raised their hands, but the superintendent's eye was caught by a little fellow in the front seat. "Well, Johnnie, you may tell." Proud of his distinction above his fellows the boy rose smilingly and shouted: "A pin cushion?" —Boston Journal.

Made Him Doubt of Omniscience.

A little boy, son of the most exemplary parents, wanted a bicycle, and kept the matter constantly before the consideration of the family purchasing agent. His mother told him to pray for the desired gift, and that night a petition was sent up in the most persuasive of childish voices. While the little fellow slept a tricycle was smuggled into his room and placed beside his bed. In the morning the father and mother were concealed within hearing to learn how the little hopeful would accept the answer to his prayer. He rolled over, fastened his staring blue eyes upon the miraculous appearance, and in a surprised tone said: "Dood dracious, Mr. Dod, don't you know the difference 'tween a bicycle and a tricycle yet?"—Boston Transcript.

A Divided Town.

For many years the States of Virginia and Tennessee have been engaged in a legal controversy as to which holds the town of Bristol. The State line is supposed to run along the main street of the town, and a settlement of the disputed point is as far off as ever. There are in Bristol two City Councils, two Mayors, and two sets of police.

An Awful Abbreviation.

A sculptor of a non-poetic turn of mind, being directed to engrave on a tombstone the words, "A virtuous wife is a crown to her husband," and finding himself somewhat pressed for space, executed his task as follows, "A virtuous wife is 5s to her husband."

KNOWLEDGE

Brings comfort and improvement and tends to personal enjoyment when rightly used. The many, who live better than others and enjoy life more, with less expenditure, by more promptly adapting the world's best products to the needs of physical being, will attest the value to health of the pure liquid laxative principles embraced in the remedy, Syrup of Figs.

Its excellence is due to its presenting in the form most acceptable and pleasant to the taste, the refreshing and truly beneficial properties of a perfect laxative; effectually cleansing the system, dispelling colds, headaches and fevers and permanently curing constipation. It has given satisfaction to millions and met with the approval of the medical profession, because it acts on the Kidneys, Liver and Bowels without weakening them and it is perfectly free from every objectionable substance.

Syrup of Figs is for sale by all druggists in 50c and $1 bottles, but it is manufactured by the California Fig Syrup Co. only, whose name is printed on every package, also the name, Syrup of Figs, and being well informed, you will not accept any substitute if offered.

"August Flower"

"What is August Flower for?" As easily answered as asked. It is for Dyspepsia. It is a special remedy for the Stomach and Liver.— Nothing more than this. We believe August Flower cures Dyspepsia. We know it will. We have reasons for knowing it. To-day it has an honored place in every town and country store, possesses one of the largest manufacturing plants in the country, and sells everywhere. The reason is simple. It does one thing, and does it right. It cures dyspepsia.

REMARKABLE CURES OF AUBURN AND VICINITY

For the past four years the afflicted have been flocking in great numbers to see him, and they always return filled with the greatest enthusiasm, and the stories they tell of his remarkable diagnose and wonderful cures border on that of the miraculous. One says, "I went there on crutches and came away without them." Others say they had been sick and suffered for years, and they were cured. To see him and to be treated by him means health.

He asks no questions but gives a full history of each case as soon as he sees the patient, telling better how a person feels than they can tell it themselves. His knowledge seems perfect and his medicines are specific. They never fail. The work he accomplishes is truly astonishing.

There is no need to live in constant misery. It cost nothing to see him. The fullest examinations are free. A cure can be had for the mere cost of the medicine. He is the sick man's friend and no one is turned away unaided.

Mr. Ward says his eye sight was so bad he could hardly see. He now feels that he could dispense with his glasses. The Doctor performed over twenty cures on his last visit. He will forfeit $5 00 for any case of catarrh he cannot cure. An eye witness to a lady who was helped to the doctor's room four weeks ago, is now doing her own work.

Miss Irene Williams cured of chronic cough and lung disease.

Miss McMillen cured of blood and skin disease of 14 years standing.

Miss L. M. cured of female weakness after exhausting all medical aid.

A tape worm removed from a prominent lady on Main street after doctoring several months for stomach trouble.

MORE CASES REPORTED CURED.

Bright's Disease of the Kidneys, 2; Heart Disease, 2; Rheumatism, 4; Catarrh and Bronchitis, 7; Consumption, 2; Skin Diseases, Sore Limbs and Ulcers, 9; Female diseases, 11; Dropsy of the Heart and Blood diseases, 3; Mrs. W. R. Crow cured of a sore limb of long standing; Samuel Kitchen cured of a skin disease of 18 years standing, after being doctored by several of the eminent physicians; Mrs. S. A. Dangler cured of heart disease and dropsy, given up to die; Samuel Young cured of total deafness; Mrs. Jane Armstrong cured of total blindness; Miss Katie Hague cured of cancer of the stomach; Miss Ella Smith cured of spinal disease. Mr. Samuel Clark cured of deafness in both ears of 20 years standing after taking three months' treatment. He says he can actually hear a watch tick in both ears. He is an old and respected citizen of Leipsic, Ohio. Over 50 cases reported cured in the last month. Dr. Townsend will not treat a patient under treatment by any other physician, and will not take a case only as given up by other doctors. His specialty is in chronic diseases of all kinds only. Consultation free. He will not treat any except there is a possibility of a cure, and he will so inform you. Those failing to see the Doctor can address him care Box 1408, Cincinnati, Ohio.

Mrs. W. R. Leedom says after years of suffering with cancer, she is perfectly well.

Mr. W. J. Roney says he is permanently cured of heart disease.

Mrs. W. H. Thompkins says she is permanently cured of cancer, after being a great sufferer, and having a sister die with one.

A bad case of catarrh cured for Mr. W. S. Wilcox, where he had lost his sense of smell and become partially deaf.

Jonas Walstrum cured of skin and blood diseases, after being pronounced incurable.

MR. EDITOR:—California is a lovely country, the sick get well, the poor get rich, cyclones and frosts are practically unknown. A hundred to three hundred dollars per acre is made each year on fruits with irrigation. The California Land and Water Exchange, of Dayton O., control large quantities of land in California, which they plant cultivate, pay taxes for ten years, paying you $40 per year as your part of the profit, they keeping the balance for the care and cultivation. They give an acre of land away with each 4 certificates. All they ask you to do is to pay for the irrigation, which can be done in small payments each month. They will send you the names of 90 persons who last year received from $25 to $500 on one year's investment. President Harrison says, "half of the good things of California have not been told." The Hon. Jeremiah Rusk says, "Truly California is a poor man's paradise." To five-acre holders the California Land and Water Exchange of Dayton, O., give a free return ticket to view the property. Why should any one be poor when such a chance remains open and you do not have to do any labor or work to get the profits and do not have to leave home. Write them today and get full particulars. 15 19

Covered Her Face with Magnetic Mineral Mud.

"What for?" smilingly queried the lady, of the reporter who was questioning her. "What for, indeed!" why it makes my skin soft, pure and beautiful; it takes the wrinkles out, and the action of the Magnetic Mineral Water baths, make me young again. I have found and so many of my friends, in the wonderful magnetic mineral mud and water baths of the Indiana Mineral Springs, "the Fountain of perpetual Youth."

This great resort for health, pleasure and beauty, is on the main line of the Wabash railroad. Send to F. Chandler, Gen. Pass. Agt., Wabash R. The Paper on the Wall.

You've often noticed how or how poorly it looked—and you know too, that a few dollars expended for the proper paper brings more for the money than any improvement that you can make; but then, did you know that there is a man—Mr. Alfred Peats—who has spent a fortune and years of study for perfecting the details, so that you, no matter where you live, can get the latest and most exclusive designs of wall paper effects, at less than half the local dealers' rates.

All this, and much more, is told about in a book called "How to Paper, and Economize in Wall Paper Decorations." It will be mailed, free, if you send for it at once to ALFRED PEATS—the Wall Paper Merchant, Dept. A. 136-138 W. Madison st. Chicago, 30-32 W. 13th st., N. Y.

CORRESPONDENCE

WATERLOO.

Joe Beck and wife have a new baby at their house.

Milo Thomas, the Corunna hardware man was here last Saturday.

Who has seen the "flyer" that was to have come through the first of May.

Kitty Koons has been sick for about seven weeks with rheumatism of the stomach.

Capt. Edge has fresh fish for sale three days in the week, Tuesday, Thursday and Saturday.

Phil Kennedy of Spencerville visited his brother Frank, and called on other friends here this week.

W. H. Leas went to Auburn on Saturday on legal business. His law practice takes about all his time.

John Clark's two little boys go to school in town now, as the school in the country is too far away.

Dr. Broughton is digging a drain to run off the surplus water from his property on South Wayne street.

Thus far we see nothing to indicate that people are rushing to Chicago, to attend the great world's fair.

Henry Brown still holds forth at the old stand, and his long continuance in business proves his popularity.

Isaac Speer is looking in much better health than a year ago, though very far from being a sound man physically.

Ex-Sheriff Plum is fully established in his meat market and doing a thriving business. He is in partnership with Mr. Stroh.

Mose Zerkle is always at his post, the flag station on the railroad, and a train has to be a flyer to get by him without his attention.

Dick Bowlly was married the first of last week to a young lady in Uniontown. Tuesday evening the boys did not forget to bell the couple.

A big cannon went through here Saturday on a west bound freight, to be put on exhibition at the world's fair. It was about twenty feet long.

A. M. Yeddis established himself over Huber's grocery, where he has the management of a branch photograph business from St. Joe. And still they come.

Some of the cellars in town have plenty of water in them this spring. The owners undoubtedly think water is good in its place, but the place is not the cellar.

The funeral services of Mrs. Adelbert McEntarfer who died with consumption Tuesday evening of last week, took place Thursday at two o'clock at the U. B. church.

J. D. McAnally has a neat lunch room near the crossing, where the hungry can satisfy their hunger while waiting for trains His room is tastefully fitted up and neatly kept.

The "Y" at the junction has proved a pretty troublesome job, for the ground keeps sinking, and the hands have to keep filling it up. Trains can run over it however, though slowly.

Cedar creek indulges in a tantrum once in a while, and this spring has been one of the times, when her banks overflowed and formed quite a respectable sized lake. The marvel is, how soon it subsides.

Isaac Speer goes to Dayton next Monday as lay delegate for the North Ohio conference of the U. B. church, and will remain a week or so. The ministerial delegates are J. W. Lilly, J. S. Tedrow and D. B. Keller.

Election last Monday. Results a mixed ticket. Ab. Kelley, a democrat was elected one of the trustees; H. K. Leas, dem was elected treasurer again; S. P. Klotz, rep. was the other trustee; S. A. Bowman, rep. clerk; and Frank Fisher, rep. for marshal, again. All are good men.

There are many improvements going on here now, gardens have begun to show a little growth, and flowers in some places, are blooming. Nearly every house in town is full, having as many tenants as it can hold. Our streets in spite of the bad weather, have been good when compared with the other principal towns of the county.

Last Friday was a lovely day, fine for any out of door work and delightful simply to be out to enjoy the pure air. It seemed as if we need only look for summer showers hereafter, growing showers, but the same evening it commenced raining and continued steadily all the night, and most of the time for three days. It is doubtful if it may not commence again. The clouds indicate it.

Gus Beck is fixed up nicely in his new quarters south of the railroad, next door north of Jule Denison's where he has a fine grocery store in connection with his bakery and lunch room. He has his tables neatly arranged and kept clean and nice. He has already got his soda fountain in running order, and will be able at any time to furnish cooling drinks to the thirsty. He is putting in a new bake oven at the rear, and will have it running in good shape.

SHERIFF'S SALE.

By virtue of an execution to me directed from the Clerk of the DeKalb circuit court, in a cause wherein the First National Bank of Auburn, Indiana, is plaintiff, and the Auburn Creamery Company is defendant, requiring me to make the sum of one hundred and twenty-two dollars and eighty six cents, with interest on said judgment and costs, I will expose at Public Sale, to the highest bidder, on

between the hours of 10 o'clock a. m., and 4 o'clock p. m., of said day, at the door of the Court House in Auburn, DeKalb county, Indiana, the rents and profits for a term not exceeding seven years, of the following real estate, to-wit:

Lots numbered ten [10], eleven [11], twenty-six [26] and twenty seven [27] and improvements thereon in Shaffer, Robbins & Boland Addition to the town of Auburn, situated in DeKalb county, state of Indiana.

If such rents and profits will not sell for a sufficient sum to satisfy said judgment, interest and costs, I will at the same time and place expose to public sale the fee simple of said real estate, or so much thereof as may be sufficient to discharge said judgment, interest and costs. Said sale will be made without any relief whatever from valuation and appraisement laws.

* The enumeration from Ashley represents only that part of the town situated in DeKalb. The pupils of Steuben are enumerated in that county.

From the above report, together with the auditor's apportionment of revenues in the county, can be obtained some important information concerning the differences of school taxes in the various townships, and the advantages of having just a sufficient number of schools to accommodate the pupils, but no more.

The apportionment of school revenues in the county for the year was—state, congressional and liquor, $3.85 per pupil.

We will take Wilmington and Newville townships for a comparison. Wilmington, it will be noticed, had 501 pupils enumerated, and received, at $3 85 per pupil, $1,928 85 only $32 lacking of having a sufficient sum to give each of its 8 schools a seven months term, at an average salary to teachers of $35 per month; while Newville with its seven schools and 212 pupils received only $816, lacking $899 of having the same tuition per school. In order then for Newville to have the same school advantages as Wilmington, instead of raising $32 by local taxation, that is by a direct tax upon its people, it must tax them about $900, or else be satisfied with shorter terms of school or cheaper teachers or both.

But the tuition, or teachers' salary, is not the only school expense. It costs just as much to heat the houses, furnish school supplies, and keep in repair the houses and grounds of small schools as large ones, and when we consider that Newville has not half the territory that Wilmington has, it will be readily seen, that for running expenses alone, tuition not included, the people of Newville pay at least two dollars to Wilmington's one.

I have made the above illustrations and comparisons that the people of the county may figure for themselves, and know why the school levies are necessarily higher in some townships than others.

For Musical People.

The Song Friend for April is at hand with its wealth of vocal and instrumental music and its bright, interesting and instructive paragraphs and articles on voice culture, church and instrumental music, theory, musical news, etc. Among the pieces of choice music in this number are "May Margarite" "Tired," both beautiful solos; also, "Land of Love," by S. W. Straub and a charming instrumental number Sparkling Polka. The music in this number would cost nearly $1.00 at regular publisher's price. The Song Friend is a 32-page journal of rare excellence. The subscription price is only $1.00 a year, with a premium of three pieces of select music. The publishers, S. W. Auburn Ind.

GENTLEMAN:

Enclosed you will find a tracing map of DeKalb county, showing the most prominent towns with all the leading railroads running through the county; together with a proposed Electric Street Railway prominently shown from Garrett to Auburn with a probable continuation to Waterloo and to Ashley (the new town on the Chicago extension Wabash Railroad) where their division has been located, which promises to be a rival town and to take rank at once as a business competitor.

This Electric Street Railway (if built) is believed will be a remarkable good investment, not only to stock holders, but to the towns named on the route. It will at once advance real estate in each town and all farm land along the line of road. It is believed that the ordinary traffic on the line will be paying from the start. Besides the large amount of travel from each end of the line, as well as all along the line of road who desire taking trains at Waterloo, Auburn, Auburn Junction and at Ashley; also to summer resort at Hamilton Lake, will find it a great convenience and the travel will be more or less extensive.

Besides this during the fall and spring of the year when roads are almost impassable, this road will be largely patronized by the citizens of the different towns, as well as farmers all along the line in going to the county seat to pay their taxes, attend to court and other business matters. More than this during each year there are a great many gatherings and public days at the different towns On such days the road will be largely patronized.

Besides this, during all campaign years the gatherings are numerous at the different towns, the patronage will be large from this account. Then it has been proved in other towns where good rapid electric street cars are running, that on Saturday evenings after business hours the young as well as the old patronize the line all along the route for pleasure and for health, and especially on Sunday cars are crowded and becoming more and more popular, as fares are cheap and the rides free from dust.

As I said in the beginning, it is believed that this enterprise will be a popular one and a good paying investment to stockholders. There is no question but what it will advance real estate values in all these towns, as well as all farm lands along the road way. It is also conceded that this enterprise will be a valuable accession to DeKalb county in many ways, and no other enterprise will do as much good for the public.

It is believed that to put this enterprise on foot and to insure its being built, that if the right of way should be procured over and along the public highways over which this electric line would pass of the county commissioners, and the right of way by a charter over the streets of the towns named by the town council of each of the towns, and the road bed graded and tied ready for the iron, that bonds could be sold on long time at a low rate of interest for the purchase of iron for track, the rolling stock and the plant to run the same and put it in operation.

I will be pleased to have you talk this matter over in a business way with the citizens who are for further improvements, and report to me as early as possible your opinion regarding this enterprise. The map you will discover is not quite correctly drawn, but gives the outlines of the enterprise.

From one who still has an interest in the future of old DeKalb.

Yours truly,
NICHOLAS ENSLEY.

P. S. The people of Angola would undoubtedly want this line extended to their town via Pleasant Lake or via some other lake that would make a good summer resort, which would increase patronage for the enterprise.

How Paintings in Mosaic are Made.

From Harper's Weekly.

In order to reproduce a painting in mosaic, the artists or artisans, take a flat sheet of iron of the same size as the painting, surrounded by a border about an inch high. This receptacle is then filled with plaster, so as to obtain a perfectly flat surface. On this the outlines of the pictures are drawn The plaster is then cut up into small squares, which are to be removed and gradually replaced by as many squares of mosaic of the same size. In the holes left empty when the plaster is taken away a new plaster, made of travertine dust, lime and linseed oil, is poured. After three days this new plaster acquires the necessary consistency, and in this the artist sticks the littler colored squares. When all the surface of the plaster is covered with these colored pieces of mosaic, the whole is washed with sand and water until it becomes quite smooth. The colored pieces are made of mixtures of different minerals, like arsenic, lead, glass, etc. These minerals are placed in an oven and the different colors are obtained by the different degrees of heat, and as many as 28,000 various colors can be obtained.

Dr. Townsend & Brothers Coming.

As seen by advertisement, these eminent Doctors will be at the Swineford House, Auburn.

MAY 16th.

Among many testimonials we find these: I had spinal curvature that doctors told me was incurable and I am now well. Another said: I was given up by fourteen doctors, who told me I had Bright's disease of the kidneys, but thanks to Drs. Townsend I am a well man. Another: I was bedriden for over ten years with a complication of female diseases. Some of the most eminent specialists, including three professors in medical colleges, and they all told me I could not get well. Four years ago I placed my case in the hands of the Drs. Townsend, and in 5 months and 4 days from the time I commenced treatment I dressed myself and walked across the room, and in another month I felt as well as I ever did in my life and have remained in excellent health ever since. Another says: I had epilepsy for fifteen years and was cured. Another: My whole nervous system was broken down and I was practically an old man at 31. I could not sleep, my hands trembled, I would get dizzy and forgetful and became so bad that I had to give up business. I consulted many doctors, the best I thought, in the country, and finally went to Europe, and spent over $9,000 and three years' time and was no better, but gradually got worse. I returned home to die and closed up all my business affairs. At last a friend, who had been cured, advised me to go to the Drs. Townsend. Without any faith, but to please him, I went, and to my great surprise they told me they could cure me, and they made good their word, for from the first dose of medicine I commence to improve, and in twelve months I was completely cured. A lady says, My case was pronounced to be tubercular consumption by seven of our best physicians, and under whose treatment I got worse all the time. The Drs. Townsend cured me in just four months. One says: I had catarrh that affected my head so I was almost crazy. It went into my ears, and oh! such a roaring, I was almost wild; it had gone down also upon my lungs and the doctor said it was the bronchitis. Thanks to the Drs. Townsend I am entirely well. Another says: I was cured of a bad cancer. A lady of great refinement, who had received serious injuries during a confinement, was cured after other specialists utterly failed. Thousands of cases similar to the above might be cited.

Examination by letter or in person free, and sacredly confidential. If unable to see the doctors write full particulars. Thousands treated by correspondence. Address, with stamp:

Not so Strange.

So many people wonder and ask themselves, why it is that among so many cough syrups, Dr. Marshall's Lung Syrup, is so far superior for coughs. This is not so strange for this medicine was a lifetime study of Dr. Marshall and perfected by him while searching for his own health, the purest drugs are used in its manufacture, hence the results. The only way we can convince you of the true merit, of this medicine is for you, to give it a trial, it is guarranteed to give satisfaction. Price 25, and 50 cts and $1. Sold by druggists and dealers.

"Neither will anyone else. She ought to have taken him along."

Will You do This?

We ask you to try Dr. Marshall's Lung Syrup is a cough medicine that it has not proved beneficial, return the same to the druggist you bought it of, and he will return the same money paid, you cannot ask for more, this medicine is the best cough syrup in the market and for la grippe or influenza it has no superior. Will you give this cough syrup a trial, you will certainly not regret it. Price 25 and 50 cents and $1. By druggists.

Cured Cholera Morbus.

While Mr. T. J. Richey, of Altona, Mo., was traveling in Kansas he was taken violently with cholera morbus. He called at a drugstore to get some medicine and the druggist recommended Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhea Remedy so highly he concluded to try it. The result was immediate relief and a few doses cured him completely. It is made for bowel camplaint and nothing else. It never fails. For sale by Robbins & McCord.

Pain in the Side aud Chest.

The most painful cases of rheumatism may be relieved by a few applications of Chamberlain's Pain Balm; its continued use will cure any case, no matter of how long standing. It is equally beneficial for lame back, pain in the side, pain in the chest, lameness, and in all painful affections requiring an external remedy. A piece of flannel saturated with Pain Balm and bound on over the seat of pain is superior to any plaster. For sale by Robbins & McCord.

Four Bottles Cured Him.

There is nothing I have ever used for muscular rheumatism that gives me as much relief as Chamberlain's Pain Balm does. I have been using it for about two years—four bottles in all—as occasion required, and always keep a bottle of it in my home. I believe I know a good thing when I get hold of it, and Pain Balm is the best liniment I have ever met with. W. B. For Cough and Croup.

The promptness and certainty of its cures have made Chamberlain's Cough Remedy famous. It is intended especiall for coughs, colds, croup and whoopingcoughs, and is the most effectual remedy known for these diseases. Mr C. B. Main, of Union City, Pa., says: "I have a great sale on Chamberlain's Cough Remedy. I warrant every bottle and have never heard of one failing to give entire satisfaction." 50 cent bottles for sale by Robbins & McCord.

AUBURN AND VICINITY.

Some Reminiscences of its Early Day and Pioneer Citizens.

1870—Continued.

We have noted in a previous chapter the early history of the Baptist church and the suspension of church work through the removal west of Elder Towne and many of the then members. The time had now come for a reorganization and articles of association were drawn on Oct. 22, 1870, when pursuant to notice given, a majority of the members of the first Baptist church of Auburn met at the residence of Elder Ward to perfect the organization.

Jeremiah Hemestreet was chosen president, and John H. Ehlers clerk and the object of the meeting was stated to be the selection and purchase of suitable grounds and the erection of a church building.

The members of this association were as follows: church members, J. Hemstreet, S. B. and Laura Ward, John H. and Mary A. Ehlers, Marion Hemstreet, Maria Woolsey, Emily Duck, and Anna Burlingame. Non church members, C. C. Shaffer, Joseph, Martha and Susan McKay, T. B. and Hannah Totten, Martha Shaffer, Adda Reed, Jotham Woolsey, Enos Kuhlman, M. L. Duck and H. C. Shull.

On Nov. 11, lot number 12 W. A. was bought of J. H. Ehlers for $350, and the erection of a fine church edifice was begun and carried steadily forward to completion.

This well planned neat brick building was ready for occupancy in the fall of 1873 and was dedicated in December of that year, the sermon on that occasion having been by Dr. J. R. Stone, of Ft Wayne.

The dimensions are 36 by 56 feet and the seating capacity is about 300. The arrangement for ventilation and heating are simple and excellent. No debt encumbers the society and the entire property is valued at upwards of $4000.

The church gives prominence to missionary purpose and contributes regularly to enterprises of that character. The Sabbath school has ever been auxiliary to the church by which it has been sustained to the end that the young so far as it can reasonably be done, maybe brought under its influence. The school was organized in March 1874, when Elder Ward became superintendent and served until recent date. Attendance averaged from a commencement of ten, to ninety at the highest point. The value of this instrumentality may be judged from the fact that probably four-fifths of the additions have been from the Sabbath school.

The first pastor in the new church was Elder Ward, who was to all interests and purposes, its founder. He yet resides in his old home at Auburn far advanced in years, strong in mind, enfeebled in body, ever interested in church work and held in high esteem by the entire community.

The second pastor was R. P. Jones a Welchman by birth, a clear strong thinker, fairly successful in his two years' service to the church to which he gave half his time.

The next in succession, was W. Langton Sanders, by birth English, scholary and gifted in sermonizing. During his pastorate, the church was prospered by an unusual awakening that increased its membership by sixty or more members when trouble was experienced that caused a serious defection from the previous accessions.

The Rev. J. P. Ward followed; he, too, was English. He was a fine orator and greatly excelled in the beauty of his scriptural readings. Some additions were received during his pastorate.

The Rev. H. J. Finch commenced his pastorate on May 3d, 1884, on a salary of $360 per annum for half-time service. He was a man of strong convictions, zealous and energetic, and extended his sphere of usefulness to Grove Bethel where he held a series of meetings attended with conversions, without neglect of his work at Pleasant Lake and Auburn. He began special labor at Auburn Dec. 21, '84, and lasting into February, '85, brought 27 new members into the church. Responding to a call from Garrett, his success was evidenced by the organization there of a church on Dec. 15, 1885, and this was soon followed by the erection of a fine brick house of worship. Relieved from labor at the Lake by a pastor there, he divided his time between Auburn and Garrett and continued until Feb. 9, 1889, a period of more than five years, when he resigned and removed to Portage City, Wisconsin. Church additions during his charge numbered 42. Many not members of the church esteemed the man, enjoyed his preaching and saw his departure with regret.

On Dec. 7, 1889, Rev. T. C. Smith, of Adams county, Ind. occupied the pulpit that had been filled at intervals by Elder Ward during the interval and continued to March 8, 1891, when he went to Wolcottville, where he still labors. A series of meetings begun Jan. '90, resulted in many accessions, the total for his term of service being 58.

The church save an occasional supply from a passing minister was without a pastor till Jan. 1, 1892, when Rev. O. E. Eagy, of Orland, Ind., was employed and closed his term on Dec. 25, 1892. No special results attended his ministration and the church again without a pastor quietly carries forward its work and rich in future possibilities of growth and usefulness, awaits the coming minister.

In the community at large, religious interest was virile and only when grouped as on occasion of a census, is the public made aware of the strength, importance and actual moral influence of the churches and Sabbath schools within its boundaries.

From the earliest days of settlement, their increase of numbers and growth of resources have ever kept pace with the augmented population, despite difficulties that beset and hamper societies and denominations religious as well as those civil and charitable, and to their consistent and salutary teachings is greatly due the high reputation of this section for respect for law and order and its exceptional immunity from the graver crimes.

In 1870, there were in DeKalb county forty-one church buildings and twenty-nine Sabbath schools. The schools enrolled 402 officers and teachers and 2622 scholars of whom, within the year ending June 1870, 276 had been converted and added to the membership of the churches.

These schools were controlled as follows: Four by the United Brethern, nine by the M. E., five by the Christian or Disciple and three by the Lutheran churches. Eight were known as union schools.

FROM EVERY CORNER

OF THE WORLD THIS FRESH NEWS WAS GLEANED.

Commissioner Blont Made Minister Resident at Hawaii—Gigantic Scheme to Build a Ship Canal—An Armed Expedition to Invade Cuba.

It is Minister Blount.

Officials of the State Department confirm the predictions made that ex-Representative Blount would be appointed Minister Resident to the Hawaiian Islands. It has been supposed that Minister Stevens would remain in charge of the Legation until the 24th of this month, at which time he had announced his intention of sailing for San Francisco. It is now known that Mr. Stevens has been instructed to forthwith turn over the Legation to Commissioner Blount, who has been appointed his successor.

Letters received by naval officers and others in the Government service, indicate that the Provisional Government maintains a firm hold. One letter states that the native sentiment in favor of annexation is growing.

May Be a Deluge.

The whole Mississippi valley from Cairo to New Orleans is threatened with the most disastrous overflow in history. The river continues to rise at an alarming pace and from present indications it will go the highest point ever reached. The water is over a foot above the danger line at Memphis and two feet more are expected. The leves below Memphis are intact, except in Disha County, Arkansas, where the whole country has been flooded and the Missouri Pacific track submerged to a depth of several feet. Railroad traffic in that section has been indefinately suspended. The river above Memphis has left its banks and the whole of Mississippi County, Arkansas, is flooded.

An Armed Expedition to Invade Spanish Territory.

Key West (Fla.) special: Preparations are being continued for what looks like an armed expedition from here to aid the insurrectionists. The other evening about 300 armed men slipped out of town and after drilling on the beach, participated in a sham battle with the avowed purpose of familiarizing the men with tactics likely to be employed in a conflict with Spanish troops. More drills of the kind are to follow. President Jose Marti is recovering from his illness and has promised to speak soon, delivering what may be termed his farewell address here. He will also issue a manifesto on Cuban affairs.

A Ship Canal.

E. A. McDonald of Toronto, Canada, who has been in New York for some weeks, has, it is said, organized a syndicate to construct an aqueduct from Georgian Bay to Toronto, sixty miles, to supply Toronto with domestic water and motive power. The plan also involves the construction of a ship canal projected over forty years ago by the late Mr. Capreal and others, to shorten the route 400 miles between Chicago and New York, and 900 miles between the West and Liverpool, as compared with the Erie canal and New York route. The plan contemplates the expenditure of over $50,000,000.

The Crops.

The weather bureau has issued a bulletin of the progress of the crops, of which the following is a synopsis:

Indiana—Crops in uplands look well; lowlands yet inundated; fruit backward, not much injured.

Ohio—Wheat, oats, grass, rye, barley, and tobacco made slow growth; early potatoes rotting; fruit promising; strawberries blooming.

Michigan — Crop conditions continue backward owing to wet and cold; plowing for corn is in progress in most Southern counties; fruit prospects excellent.

Gas Explosion.

The dwelling house of Eli Murray at Anderson, Ind., was almost totally wrecked by an explosion of natural gas. The shock was terrific and the sleeping inmates were awakened by falling walls and plaster. Murray, his wife, and two children were badly injured. No cause is known for the explosion.

Wrecked an Indiana Saloon.

The saloon of John Smock at Haywood, Ind., was blown up by dynamite. The saloon was completely wrecked, the bar fixtures, furniture, bottles, cigars, etc., being scattered in every direction. Smock, who was sleeping in a room adjoining the saloon, was thrown from his bed and slightly injured.

A Bad Wreck—Brakeman Killed.

A disastrous freight wreck occurred on the Nickel Plate road, just east of Argus, Ind. A freight train parted and coming together again a dozen cars were wrecked. Brakeman Wilson was instantly killed.

Crushed Between Cars.

Henry Flinn, employed by the Big Four at Wabash, Ind., was crushed while coupling cars in the yard there. He will die.

Indiana to the Front.

At Clinton, Ind., twins have just been born to Mr. and Mrs. S. F. Withard, the father being 77 years old and the mother 62. The couple have been married three years. The mother and twins are doing well.

Chief McClaughry Resigns.

Chief of Police McClaughry of Chicago, tendered his resignation to Mayor Harrison, and the latter refused to consider it.

Will Have to Make Honest Charges.

Without notice and incognito, President Higinbotham, Chairman, and Director Schwab, local member of the Council of Administration, made the rounds of the restaurants at the World's Fair, and partook of the viands offered to the public. In almost every instance the officials were compelled to pay extortionate prices for the food, and they will at once bring the matter before the council and insist that the concessionaries shall maintain the schedule of figures agreed upon when they were guaranteed their rights [illegible] of the fair [illegible] volves the dismissal of every restaurant keeper from the grounds, for they are determined to protect the public and the guests of the exposition from outrageous prices. The concessionaries claim that over-charges were entirely due to the acts of dishonest employes during the opening days at a time when such action was possible and that they were then unprepared to prevent them.

HARRIS IS DEAD.

The Fatal Electrical Current Does Its Work.

Sing Sing special: Carlyle W. Harris was electrocuted in the prison here, for the murder of his wife. He protested his innocence to the last.

At 8 o'clock Harris ate a light breakfast. He was cool and collected and appeared to be capable of going through the ordeal which awaited him.

Mrs. Harris, who made her final farewell to him the night before, remained at the Ambler House shut in from all visitors. Her youngest son, Allan, was with her. She was calm and less nervous than usual and awaited with fearful silence the sign which would inform her that her son, Carlyle, had passed out from this world. The flag announcing the successful conclusion of the execution, which was raised from the roof of the Warden's house, could be seen from the windows of the room which Mrs. Harris occupied in the Ambler, and there she and her son, Allan, watched and waited with straining eyes and subdued grief for the fatal signal. Mrs. Harris arose at 4 o'clock and her watch was a long and sorrowful one. She was apparently stronger and better able to bear her grief than she had been for days. At 10 o'clock there was a long string of carriages in front of the prison and hundreds of people were scattered along the hillside. The death warrant was formally read at 8:30 o'clock. He displayed indifference and its reading did not noticeably affect him. Warden Durston said Harris showed no signs of breaking down and appeared cheerful after the reading of the death warrant.

The Rev. John C. S. Wiels, the prison chaplain, went to see Harris at 9 o'clock, and remained for an hour. After he came out Dr. Irving went in and found Harris showing nervousness, but otherwise all right. Harris was shaved and had his hair cut at 11:30. He then put on a new suit of clothes furnished by the State. State Electrician Davis, accompanied by the warden and the witnesses, who had arrived, proceeded to the death room when the final test of the apparatus was made at 11:40 o'clock. At 12:15 o'clock the prisoner was conducted to the chair and 12:37 the fatal current was turned on. Death was instantaneous.

STEAMBOAT EXPLOSION.

Six Persons Killed and Sixteen Injured.

Cairo (Ill.) special: One of the worst catastropes which has occurred in this region for years took place on the Mississippi River at Wolf Island, twenty-four miles below this city the other morning. A rear end of one of the boilers of the steamer Ohio, a Cincinnati and Memphis packet, blew out, filling the deck cabin with steam and boiling water. Several of the deck hands and passengers who were eating breakfast at the time were literally cooked alive and a large number received serious burns. The following is a list of the dead.

William Hurtsman, colored, fireman, St. Louis.

Hampton Collins, colored, Memphis.

Thomas Woods, colored, residence unknown.

Cyrus Myers, white, second mate, of Cincinnati, jumped into the river and was drowned.

Two colored men, unidentified.

Following is a list of the injured, many of whom will die:

F. W. Crews, Danville, Va.; Fred Neal, Columbus, Miss.; Charles Jackson, fireman, Cincinnati; James Howard, Roebloom, Mo.; Gilbert Childers, fireman, Nashville; Colder Tate, Memphis; William Jackson, Washington, Pa.; William Henry, Memphis; Albert Robinson, Cincinnati; George Washington, Memphis; John Ralph, Cincinnati; C. J. Patterson (white), cook, Memphis; William H. Dickey (white), deck passenger, Newport, Ky.

The wildest consternation reigned on board the boat, and the screams of the passengers and the appeals of the victims made the scene a terrible one. The boat could proceed no further, and for several hours it lay at the bank while the unfortunate victims lay on the deck, writhing in agony and calling aloud for aid. At last the tug Ægus hove in sight. She was hailed, and the sufferers, twenty-two in number, were transferred to her deck, and she immediately steamed to this city.

Word had been telegraphed ahead and every physician in town was on the wharf to meet her. The suffering of the victims was alleviated as much as possible, but before they could be removed from the boat four of them were dead. The remainder were transferred to the United States Marine Hospital. Another one died soon after reaching there, and the surgeon declares that ten of the sixteen now in the hospital will die. None of the cabin passengers were injured. The boat was badly injured by the accident.

TERRIFIC CYCLONE.

An Ohio Town Badly Wrecked by a Big Wind and Rain Storm.

Wilmington (O.) special: A cyclone of terrific proportions struck this city the other day. The City Hall, lately remodeled, is badly damaged, the roof is blown off and the interior soaked with water. Every church in town, except the Presbyterian, was badly wrecked. The heavy bell on the Christian Church was blown some distance into the street and the spire was blown off and crashed through the roof and ceiling. Jonathan Hartman and Cableb Hazard were seriously hurt by falling timbers, and William Bloom and several others were slightly injured. The large book store of Hildebrant & Hillard was crushed like an egg shell, and the contents drenched with water. The business houses of Campbell, Hamil & Co., H. G. Cartwright & Co., J. W. Sharks, Benjamin Farquehar, F. S. Taylor, E. F. Marble and many others were badly wrecked. The dwelling houses of W. W. Collins, L. McNamara, two belonging to C. W. Austin and several others were demolished, and numbers of others were unroofed and otherwise damaged. The wind blew so furiously that small sticks and straws were found imbedded in the weather boarding of houses. The terrific rain that followed the wind storm did much more damage.

AWFUL DESTRUCTION.

A Cyclone Carries Away Forty Houses.

Raleigh (N. C.) special: A cyclone swept over the town of Oxford, forty miles west of here. Rain and hail fell at the same time. The wind was terrific. Houses were blown down, trees torn up by the roots and hailstones covered the ground to a depth of four inches and broke almost all the window pains in the town. While the storm lasted the town was in total darkness. Forty-two frame houses were blown down. A score of people were injured, several of them seriously. One negro was killed. The damage to property is estimated at $200,000. Henderson and Greystone, twelve and fifteen miles northeast of Oxford, suffered in the same [illegible] were seriously and four fatally injured. Three-fourths of the log houses in the town were razed to the ground.

It is learned that there was a second blow but it knocked down the telegraph wires and no further news can be had. There must have been another current of wind because at sundown in this city the clouds had disappeared and the heavens appeared to be filled with leaves and it was remarked that there had been a cyclone somewhere not very far distant. The wind blew a gale here but did no damage.

CRIMINALS WARNED

By the Lynching of Three Murderers in New Mexico.

Antonio Martinez, Antonio Jose Barlas, and Victoriano Aragon, three murderers, were taken from jail at Las Lunas, New Mexico, by masked men and lynched. The first two murdered an old woman, Mrs. Manuela Miereles, after first assaulting her and horribly mutilating her body. Aragon was a self-confessed murderer of Mrs. Beatrice Aragon, his cousin. The other night between midnight and 1 o'clock a large body of men surrounded the jail. Three of them approached the jail and told the jailor they were constables with a prisoner. The jailor opened the door, when he was pounced upon, bound hand and foot and the jail keys taken from him. The three murderers were securely handcuffed and shackled and hanged to a tree outside the jail, where their bodies were found next morning. Half a dozen murderers have been committed near Las Lunas in the past two months and the citizens took this method of warning the vicious element that crime must cease.

Arose from Her Coffin.

A woman named Carson, residing near Lake Kushaugua, New York, having apparently died of heart disease, was laid out in a coffin, and while a wake was being held, those in the death chamber were horrified to see the supposed corpse slowly rise to an erect position. Nearly all of those present were women, and they ran out, screaming in terror. A daughter of Mrs. Carson fell outside the house and expired. The mother, in a bewildered way, slowly emerged from the coffin and gazed about her upon the candles and other evidences of death. She did not seem to mind the death of her daughter and is now about as usual, though speaking and moving in a dazed way.

Two Lafayette Rioters Missing.

Lafayette (Ind.) special: Prosecutor Wood has filed an affidavit with Judge Langdon of the Circuit Court, declaring that Peter J. Clark, convicted of assault with intent to murder George P. Rudolph, the ex-Catholic priest, and sentenced to four years' imprisonment, has fled the city and was beyond the jurisdiction of court, and that William Temple, under indictment for the same offense, has also left. Both men were under bond. Bench warrants were at once issued, and Murphy, Carter, and Joice, other defendants, were brought into court. They denied any intention of leaving the city. The officers are looking for Clark and Temple.

Ex-President Gonzales of Mexico, Dead.

City of Mexico special: Gen. Manuel Gonzales, ex-President of this Republic and Governor of the State of Guanajauto, died recently. He was born near Mattamoras, in Tamaulipas, in 1820. He was the possessor of great personal courage, which was largely instrumental in securing him a considerable following. His opportune appearance at Lomas De Teccac was the principal feature in the campaign culminating in the battle of Tuxtepre, in the revolution which brought Gen. Diaz into power. He was president from 1880 to 1884. His wife and two sons survive him. He leaves an estate valued at $7,000,000.

Big Verdict for a Foot.

A jury in Judge Groggin's Court at Chicago, returned a verdict of $25,000 in favor of Augustus Groshon, for the loss of a foot. The West Chicago Street Railway Company was the defendant in the suit. On May 31, 1891, Groshon boarded a West Madison Street car at Spaulding Avenue. He was thrown off by a sudden jerk, and the wheels passed over his foot. He brought suit for $35,000 damages.

A Child Mute Killed.

Laura, the 3-year-old daughter of Robert P. McGregor, a teacher at the State Deaf and Dumb Asylum, at Columbus, was run over and killed by an electric street car. The child was a deaf mute, and could not hear the approach of the car.

A Bank Fails.

The Chemical National Bank of Chicago, which established a branch at Jackson Park, where World's Fair concessionaries have been depositing their cash, has closed its doors.

Poet Laureate.

Mr. Gladstone has offered the place of poet laureate, made vacant by the death of Lord Tennyson, to the distinguished art critic, John Ruskin.

A Rumor.

A special from Durango says it is reported that Lieutenant Plummer has been killed by the Navajos Indians. No confirmation.

Straight to Glory.

Wade Haines, colored, was hanged in the jail yard at Columbia, S. C.

PROTECTION IS A CURSE.

BITTER FRUIT REAPED BY HIGH TARIFF COUNTRIES.

Takes a Large and Well Developed Country to Stand the Test of "Protection" Without Leaving Big Scars—Big Whining Boobies.

High Tariff Countries.

It takes a large and well-developed country to stand the test of "protection" without leaving big scars. Unless a country's industries are well diversified and developed, and unless it has back of it a big population and boundless resources in fertile lands and raw materials, it cannot without great hardship attempt to build up its home industries by tariffs that cut off trade with the rest of the world. But two or three countries of the world can indulge in high protection without great injury, and even these will suffer much if the experiment be too long continued. The United States, with all of its wealth of materials and resources, is staggering under its load of McKinleyism. Mortgaged farms and bankrupt farms; hundreds of thousands of idle workmen; trusts in control of production, prices, and wages; millionaires and paupers. These are the heritage of thirty years of protection.

Russia is, perhaps, the next great country in population and resources. Protection has made it one of the most miserable spots on the earth. A citizen not a land owner or protected miner or manufacturer is fortunate if he can get together enough money to pay his way out of Russia and off of the continent. Protection is in vogue all over continental Europe, and as most of the countries are small and dependent, for many foods and supplies, upon other countries, the effect is marked and the people are emigrating by tens of thousands. The pinch of protection is too strong for these small countries.

Canada is a great and undeveloped new country. It began to experiment with protection but fourteen years ago, before its manufactories were firmly established and its population was great. It is already sick of the system and will soon repudiate it. Nearly 1,000,000 Canadians have emigrated to the United States to obtain greater freedom to buy and sell. The Canadian Government, according to the Mail and Express and other Republican authorities, now employs agents in the United States to give premiums to men who will emigrate to Manitoba and Ontario. When Canada sheds its protection coat and has free trade with the rest of the world its fertile lands and rich mines and forests will talk for it in languages that will be understood by the oppressed of all of the protected nations of Europe.

But it is in Australia that we get the most perfect fruit of protection. The newest and least developed continent of the earth, it has a population of only one person to each square mile of territory, and the 4,000,000 inhabitants are the most intelligent and industrious people on the globe. Surely they ought to be prosperous, and they were until, in their admiration for the United States and all of its institutions, they began to adopt protection in their different colonies a few years ago. Since New South Wales adopted protection about two years ago, Australia has had the most perfect system of protection imaginable. Each colony is doubly barricaded with tariff walls from every other colony.

Believing that what is worth doing at all is worth doing well, they have taken great pains to prevent the passage of pauper goods across their borders. Their McKinley laws are so stringent that when a farmer was returning to Victoria from a visit to his married daughter, who lived a few miles across the border in New South Wales, with his mare and a foal, born during the visit, he was unable to proceed home until he had paid a heavy duty on the foal.

Australia's infant industries were too young to stand artificial foods; their tender stomachs rebel at the stimulants. Hence we are told by W. H. Chadwick, in American Industries, that, "There are millions of square miles of rich land in Australia awaiting the advent of the plow, yet the armies of unemployed in Melbourne, Sidney, Adelaide and Brisbane are to be numbered by their tens of thousands. In these cities there are as foul sweating dens as in any part of the world. In the country districts there are thousands of men systematically 'cadging their tucker'—in other words, perambulating the country and begging a daily meal from farm houses or sheep stations. That such things should be in Australia is simply in consistency with the law that those who sow the wind shall reap the whirlwind."

The April report of the Emigrants' Information Office, London, England, says:

"New South Wales, Victoria, Queensland, and Tasmania continued to suffer from commercial depression, and great damage has been done in Queensland by the recent floods. In none of these colonies is there any demand for labor, except for female domestic servants, and in some country districts of New South Wales for farm hands. In South Australia there is an abundant supply of labor already on the spot."

As in all new countries, protection fosters a few manufacturing industries at the expense of agriculture and other important industries. Young men and women, driven off the farms, flock to the cities to work in factories and live in tenements; the protected manufacturers form trusts to restrict production and raise prices; they close part of their factories and make tramps of the working men, who compete with those who have not lost their jobs, and thus reduce wages to the minimum. This is the present condition of tariff-ridden Australia. Young, and naturally healthy and vigorous, it has taken to stimulants before it reached a mature age. It has already lost much of its vigor and independence. If it does not reform it will be a complete moral and financial wreck.—Byron W. Holt.

Big Whining Protection Boobies.

The United States has survived thirty years of high tariffs, with an increasing amount of protection, because it had vast undeveloped resources, well-established industries of all kinds, and a population of over 30,000,000 of the world's brightest and most industrious citizens, when the experiment was begun. Yet, under these favorable conditions "protection" has been a dismal failure.

Instead of building up new industries and making more independent those already fairly prosperous, after an existence of from fifty to three hundred years, it has envervated and made them industrial pensioners, according to their own admissions. Since the publication of the Reform Club's proposed tariff bill, levying duties averaging about 25 per cent., all of the big and little protection infants have begun to howl in chorus and to threaten to expire if we shall think of weaning them. Great, big boohooing babies! We could spank them until they were willing to accept plain, hard food, if the most were not millionaire trusts, controlling production, wages and prices as well as boards of Aldermen, legislatures and Congress. These big pap-suckers have sucked the substance out of the American farmer and left him a physical and financial wreck. Their colossal cheek, inhuman greed and insatiable maws have combined to corrupt morals and politics; to devastate our fields, forests and mines; to divide us into classes—plutocrats and paupers—inconsistent with the stability of republican institutions.

The American Economist, the kindergartner of these protection infants, is now publishing the whines and bawls of dozens of the lusty-lunged boobies. It supplies amusing reading to those familiar with our protected industries and who know how insincere are their cries. If the Democratic party can succeed in weaning these infants and in making them worthy and self-supporting members of our industrial family, it will deserve and get the support of all good and patiotic citizens, until the end of this century, at least.

No More Star-Chamber Tariffs.

The Hon. John DeWitt Warner, in an interview printed in American Industries of April 8, makes clear the excellent reasons for making public the Reform Club's proposed tariff bill. The main objects are: To give time to acquaint the people with the general principles that must be followed to fulfill the party pledges; to force open discussion, that the people may learn the real friends and the real enemies of tariff reform; and to prevent, if possible, some of the lobbying that is done in Congress whenever the tariff is to be revised. Here is a part of what Congressman Warner says:

"It will not be our fault if public opinion is not so definitely manifested in favor, not merely of tariff reform but of the most important items of it, as to forestall the lobby. We propose either to force the discussion or to demonstrate to the American people that our critics dare not come into the open. Which horn of the dilemma the opponents of tariff reform take is perfectly immaterial to us. If they venture to discuss tariff details, then before Congress meets we shall have beaten them in detail as thoroughly as they have already been routed in general. If they content themselves with snarling at our heels while we stand in the open offering to compare our work with their alternative propositions, there will come to the first session of the Fifty-third Congress no member who will not appreciate at its worth, and be fortified in advance by the definite will of his constituents, to resent the pestilent lobbying which will be promptly inaugurated.

"We propose to have it thoroughly understood that those who are going into sham hysterics at our 'impertinence' in openly proposing measures of tariff reform are mainly those, and the tools of those, who are only waiting for Congress to assemble to fill the Capitol and pester Congress with paid lobbyists to manipulate legislation in favor of plans to tax the people to promote private interests. From now till Congress meets we propose that these gentlemen shall be forced either to meet or dodge the perpetual challenge; 'Tell the American people, if you dare, the sort of tariff reform that you prefer to that which we have proposed.'

"We can have no quarrel with those who are sincerely in favor of tariff reform, but who differ with us as to details. They will be as glad as ourselves to have thoroughly discussed the matters upon which we differ. The ones who will most object to this course are the gentlemen who prefer to work dark lantern plans for their individual benefit. And they are just the gentlemen whom we ask the country to help us thwart."

Charge This to Protection.

One of the incidental losses chargeable against "protection" that is seldom thought of is the enormous expense incurred in producing long statistical reports to establish points in dispute between protectionists and free traders or tariff reformers. Reports containing thousands of pages are distributed every year, to show difference of wages, of cost of living, cost of production, or labor cost in certain products in different countries. The most of these statistics are misleading, inaccurate, and worthless; but it does not matter, for they are read only in part and by a very few persons. They are stored in libraries and archives at great expense and discomfort, to be an everlasting nuisance. Millions of dollars are wasted every year in the different departments of state, treasury, labor, agriculture, etc., that will be saved when protective tariffs are abolished and the people are allowed to take advantage of all actual and artificial conditions and to purchase goods where they are produced cheapest. Free competition will then settle the labor cost of producing all articles, and we will not have to wade through 1,400 pages of small figures to determine whether steel rails are produced at less cost in England than in this country. We will not care. Steel rail producers and consumers will settle that point beyond all possibility of dispute.

Fort Wayne is to have another National Bank in the early future, making five at that city. The capital stock of the new bank will not be less than $200,000, and may be made $250,000.

The ashes of Simon R. Snell of Muncie, were not thrown in the Ohio River, as he requested. His son refused to do it after seeing his father placed in the crematory furnace at Cincinnati.

A pike was caught in the Little Pine Creek at English which measured 32 inches. In the stomach of the fish was found a leather purse containing a well preserved letter and a lead pencil.

North Manchester is to have a complete system of water works. The contract was awarded to Cone & Co. of Chicago, for $27,000, and the work is to be completed within one hundred days.

At the Montgomery County declamation contest, held at Crawfordsville, the first prizes were won by Emery Steele and Mamie Webb; second prizes by Howard Douglas and Josie Fennefeather.

A few miles west of Mitchell, in Martin County, a sawmill boiler exploded, fatally wounding Francis Baker and seriously wounding three others, whose names are not known. The boiler was torn to atoms.

The dead body of Thomas O'Brien, a printer, whose home is in Chicago, was found by the side of the railroad track, just out of Elkhart. He had evidently fallen from a train. He was a member of the Typographical Union of Chicago.

G. H. Higdon of New Castle, has been granted patents and trade marks on a compound used to make lemon pies. He has already commenced the manufacture of the stuff and several tons of sugar and many thousand lemons are used daily.

The Tucker well, just drilled in by the Iowa Oil Company at Portland, is flowing 3,000 barrels a day. Four two-inch lead pipes are required to conduct the oil to the tanks. As most of the Indiana oil wells flow the waste of gas is enormous.

During a recent storm lightning struck the 15-year-old daughter of Albert Mitchell, north of Liberty, killing her instantly. Charles Magee and wife, returning to their home west of town, were also killed by the electric currents. Magee was instantly killed, his wife lived two hours after the stroke.

The City Council of North Manchester has awarded contracts for the construction of water works to the following firms: C. E. Coon & Co., of Upper Sandusky, and the Muskegon Boiler Works, of Muskegon, Mich. The contracts amount to $28,000, and the work of construction will commence at once.

The annual convention of Indiana literary clubs was held at Fort Wayne. The election of officers resulted as follows: President, Mrs. C. R. Dryer of Fort Wayne; Secretary, Mrs. Elliott F. Perkins of Indianapolis; Program Committee, Mr. Evans Woolen of Indianapolis, Chairman; Mrs. Stanley Coulter of Lafayette; Mr. H. T. Eddy of Terre Haute; Mrs. G. E. Bursley, of Fort Wayne, and Mr. J. E. Illiff of Richmond. The next convention will be held at Indianapolis.

The dedication of the M. E. Church of Noblesville, was an event that possessed some remarkable features, not the least of which was the wonderful success of these people in paying off their entire church indebtedness. The church owed $12,630. The day set apart for the dedication had arrived, it was raining, the clouds hung low, the outlook was anything but cheerful, but Dr. Payne said "the Methodists never fail," and so he undertook the work of securing the payment of this debt, and by the close of the evening service more than $13,000 had been secured and the entire debt had been wiped out, a surplus of several hundred dollars being left. The Methodists of Noblesville are jubilant, and commenced a series of revival meetings in their new church.

The appointments of the Trustees for the Northern and Southern Hospitals have been announced by the Governor. Dennis Uhl, of the Northern Board, was reappointed, and the new member of this board is John L. Forkner of Anderson. The appointees to the Southern Board are William L. Swormstedt of Evansville, an active young business man, connected with one of the banks, and Sellman Gimble of Vincennes. The latter is one of the most prominent Jews of the State. The position on the State Board of Charities, made vacant by the resignation of Mrs. Fairbanks, has been offered to Dr. Mary F. Spink, who is connected with Dr. Fletcher's sanitarium. She has the subject under advisement. This concludes the appointive work of the Govenor, as far as the law is concerned.

Michael O'Reilly, an inmate of the Soldier's Home, at Marion, was struck by a Panhandle train and killed. He was fifty-six years old, and came to the Home last November from Chicago, where his wife now lives. He was a member of the Ninth Pennsylvania Cavalry.

Hon. John F. Rodabaugh, representative in the Legislature from Allen County, has assumed charge as manager of the daily Fort Wayne Press. The paper has been managed by C. C. Philbrick, of Columbus, but Mr. Rodabaugh has had an interest in it, and will now own the plant.

John Kirk of Vincennes, who killed his brother-in-law, Luther Smith, last January, and who has been out on bail, was re-arrested the other day and placed in jail, the grand jury having returned an indictment against him with murder in the first degree.

Rufus Haulk and George Cutsinger of Needham Station, have been lodged in jail at Shelbyville, charged with placing barrels of salt and crossties on the tracks of the Franklin and Martinsville branch of the Big Four, near Needham, on the night of April 3, for the purpose of wrecking a passenger. The place would have made a very serious wreck as it was on a trestle. The young men confessed and are held for trial.

A TANGLE OF HEARTS.

The President of a Bachelors' Club Falls a Victim to Love.*

WRITTEN BY E. S. VAN ZILE.

CHAPTER I.

"Gentlemen, one of the brethren asks leave to make a confession."

We looked at our President in surprise. Many months had passed since we heard these portentous words. They were welcome, too, for the club of late had been growing rather dull, and all of us seemed determined to remain bachelors.

There were nine of us, young New-Yorkers, who had formed what might be called an offensive and defensive social alliance. We met every two weeks at each other's apartments, and went through an established order of business over our wine and cigars. Our fraternal bonds compelled us to protect each other from the wiles of the gentler sex. We were not misogynists, by any means, but were sworn to defend one another from hasty and undesirable marriages. We were thus obliged to be frank and outspoken at our meetings, and our President, a confirmed old bachelor of middle age, had become an expert in drawing from an unwilling member the deepest secrets of his heart.

As I said, our gatherings had been for some time unenlivened by anything sensational, and when the President remarked one evening that one of the brethren had a confession to make we all refilled our glasses, lighted fresh cigars, and prepared for an enjoyable discussion.

The youngest member of the club, a handsome fellow not long out of college, stood up, looking rather pale, and bowed to the President.

"I am the victim of a woman," he stated, employing the phrase prescribed by our Book of Forms.

"You are in love?" the President returned.

"I am," answered Fernshaw.

"May heaven protect you," chorused the club.

Fernshaw then reseated himself, smiled nervously and looked around anxiously at our stern, uncompromising faces. It is not an easy task to acknowledge a loss of heart to eight hardened men.

"You say," continued the President, still following the form ordained for this emergency, "that you are in love. Upon what symptoms do you base your diagnosis?" The founder of the club had been a physician, and our ritual was sugestive, in places, of his profession.

"Sleeplessness, inability to concentrate my mind on business, loss of appetite, constant dwelling on the words and appearance of my inamorata. It's a clear case, Mr. President. I've fought against it, but—but—I'm a gone coon."

"No slang, Mr. Fernshaw," said the President, sternly. "This is a serious affair. You are the youngest member of this club. You have been with us only a few months, but in that time you have become a favorite. It pains me greatly to learn that you have not shown more firmness in this matter."

"Mr. President," I said, rising, "it may be that Brother Fernshaw deceives himself. Would it not be well for Dr. Chapman" (ex-President and founder of the club) "to question the victim more closely. At Fernshaw's age biliousness is often mistaken for love."

"Your suggestion is a good one," answered the President. "Doctor, will you kindly examine Mr. Fernshaw?"

Dr. Chapman, a bachelor of thirty-five, placed his cigar on a table and solemnly approached Fernshaw. He felt the young man's pulse, looked at his tongue, asked him a few questions in a low voice, then returned to his seat.

"Case of love," remarked the Doctor sententiously.

Fernshaw colored violently, while a sigh of despair arose from the club.

"Brother Fernshaw," said the President, "I regret to find my worst fears corroborated by Brother Chapman. It will now be necessary for you to state the lady's name, your opinion as to her feeling towards you, and such other details as will enable the club to take intelligent action."

Fernshaw again arose, leaned against a table, and continued his confession. There was something sublimely heroic in his calmness.

"Her name," he said, "is Agnes Upton. I have known her for two years. Her father is a wealthy man who has been twice married. Miss Upton's mother is dead, and she is not fond of her step-mother; Agnes is a handsome girl, dark, impassioned, but a thorough gentlewoman in her self-control. Her mother left her a large fortune. I don't know what she thinks of me; sometimes she is cordial, sometimes cold. One day I think she loves me, and the next I resolve never to see her again. I have never told her that I love her."

"Have you a rival—or rivals?" asked the President, taking notes.

"I don't know, but I think I have. She receives a great deal of attention. At a german last week she did not favor me once, and flirted with a dozen fellows all night long. It was after that that the symptoms I have described began to unfit me for work."

Fernshaw sat down hastily, as though his emotions had become too strong for him.

"Brethren," said the President, gravely, "I really do not like the looks of this affair. The permanent happiness of Brother Fernshaw may hinge upon our deliberations. Are there any remarks?"

Brother Barnes, the Apollo of the club, arose. "Mr. President, I have not the pleasure of knowing Miss Upton, but there is one fact which compels Brother Fernshaw to tear this growing passion from his heart. A mother-in-law is bad enough, but a step-mother-in-law would be fatal."

"The point seems well taken," ruled the President, making a note of it. "Have you considered this feature of the case, Brother Fernshaw?"

"Yes; it is upon this very thing that I base my hopes. I think Agnes would rather marry me than live longer with Mrs. Upton."

"Infatuated boy, can't you see an inch beyond your nose?" muttered Dr. Chapman, surlily.

"There is another point, Fernshaw," said the President. "How does the old man regard you?"

"He and my father are great friends," answered the victim, "but I don't think Mr. Upton likes me. I dress too well to suit him."

"If you really love the girl you will have to dress down to Mr. Upton's level," said the President. Then he continued: "Gentlemen, you have heard our young brother. What is your advice?"

"Let him try travel," said one.

"Write poetry, Fernshaw—it's a great relief," remarked another.

"Suicide is classic and effective," suggested a cynic.

"Abduct the girl and become famous," said a fourth.

The President frowned. "Brethren, you are flippant. This is the most important matter that has come before the club for months. In my opinion Fernshaw's condition should awaken pity, not gibes. It is our duty, as our oath asserts, to defend and guide a brother who catches the disease called love. The youngest member of the club—unarmed by youth and weakened by perfect health—has been able to make no stand against this fatal fever. Frankly he states his condition. Do not mock him. There is not a man among us who is safe. White hair and weight of years are no certain antidote to the poison which keeps the world in its present disturbed state. Excuse this speech, but my heart goes out to Fernshaw, and I want you all to treat him fairly."

"Apollo" Barnes arose: Mr. President and brethren, the words of our leader are full of wisdom. We are sorry for Fernshaw, but do we not well know that he will not take advice? Who ever heard of a lover who listened to the counsel of his friends? And, as I understand it, this club is not formed to discourage a man from following the dictates of his heart, but to defend him from hasty acts of folly. Fernshaw is in love. We cannot help that. But it is our solemn duty to prove that the object of his choice is worthy to mate with a member of the club. The case as it stands now presents some interesting aspects. The point to be determined is whether Fernshaw would stand a fair chance of happiness if he married Miss Upton. It will be necessary for the club to investigate the case in detail. Personally I have an impression that Miss Upton would make a good wife, but that the stepmother and Mr. Upton would form a combination destructive to Fernshaw's peace."

Barnes sat down and there was silence for a moment. Fernshaw was puffing cigarettes nervously, and I watched him musingly. His face was peculiarly handsome, as delicate in outline as a woman's, but with a certain manly firmness about the mouth. His hair curled slightly and gave him the appearance of a poet—one more likely to write "Don Juan" than "Paradise Lost."

"I move, Mr. President," said Dr. Chapman, "that the Chair appoint a committee of three to investigate Fernshaw's case and report at the next meeting of the club."

"Second the motion," said I.

"Gentlemen, you have heard the motion. Are there any remarks?"

Fernshaw arose. He was still very pale, and his hand trembled slightly. "Brethren, I appreciate your kindness," he faltered, "but, really, is it necessary to have so large a committee? I might introduce the President to the Uptons, and he could report to you. There is really no reason why three of you should be put to so much inconvenience."

I felt sorry for the boy, but realized clearly that he was blind to his highest interests.

A committee of three would be much more likely to reach a conclusion of some value to Fernshaw than our President—a good-natured, easy-going fellow, not fitted for prying into the secrets of society. With these thoughts in my mind I arose:

"Mr. President, there is not a member of this club who has not a warm affection for Brother Fernshaw. As an old man, long past the sentimental age, I beg leave to request our young comrade to withdraw his remarks. He may safely trust a committee of his friends to protect his highest interests. I realize that it is hard for him to place this affair in the hands of a syndicate, but in following this course he simply conforms to the custom of the times. Again, if the matter is taken charge of by our president, it will beget a large amount of work, which will prove a burden to one pair of shoulders. Brother Fernshaw must know that three heads are better than one, and that a thorough investigation of his affaire de cœur is not possible unless he conforms to Brother Chapman's motion."

Fernshaw again arose: "I withdraw my words," he remarked. "There is nothing more to be said on my side of the question. I did not see at the moment that selfishness was at the basis of my proposal. Mr. President, I agree to place this affair in the hands of your committee. I know that my happiness will be safe in their care."

A slight murmur of applause arose as the manly young fellow reseated himself. The President lighted a fresh cigar and sat silent for a time. At length he said:

"You have spoken well, Fernshaw. There is no doubt that your interests will be advanced if you place confidence in the club. I would suggest that one member of the committee devote himself to Miss Upton, another to her step-mother, and a third to her father. Does that arrangement please you?"

"Eminently," answered Fernshaw.

"Very well," said the President. "I will select the committee before we adjourn."

Business of minor importance then came up, and for a time the Fernshaw affair was laid aside. Just before we parted for the night, however, the President announced his committee, namely: Dr. Chapman, "Apollo" Barnes, and myself. Barnes was to devote himself to Miss Upon, Dr. Chapman to the step-mother, while Mr. Upton was allotted to my care.

Fernshaw and I walked home together. He was nervous and talkative and I realized that he was far from pleased with the night's work.

"I wish Barnes had not been ascribed to Agnes," were his last words, and I could not chide him for the suspicion implied therein. For Barnes was a very handsome man and extremely attractive to women.

CHAPTER II.

It was at a ball at Delmonico's that the committee first began active operations. Fernshaw came up to me early in the evening and pointed out Agnes Upton. She was a beautiful girl, tall, lissome, dark, with fine-cut features, rather haughty expression, and a smile which was attractive though cold. "She has never been in love," I said to myself, as I went forward on Fernshaw's arm to be presented.

"Apollo" Barnes, tall, impressive, distant, stood by her side as we came up.

"I have often heard Mr. Fernshaw speak of you," said Miss Upton, graciously, and turning she introduced me to Mrs. Upton and her father. Dr. Chapman was talking to Mrs. Upton, a portly, aristocratic-looking woman, who eyed me as though I had attempted to steal her diamonds, and bowed coldly.

"Would you like a cigar?" I whispered to Mr. Upton, a good-natured old gentleman who looked extremely bored and whose evening costume was not at all becoming. Just how his dress suit offended the eye it would be hard to explain, but he seemed to radiate an undefined protest against the costumes and customs of fashionable society. Mr. Upton smiled at me benignly, whispered a few words to his wife, glanced at his daughter proudly, placed his arm in mine, and moved slowly toward the exit.

"I hate this kind of thing," he whispered confidentially. "It always reminds me of a cross between a Turkish bath and pawnbroker's shop."

I was rather shocked at this comparison, but smiled sympathetically. When we reached the smoking-room, I seated myself beside him and made a remark about the beauty of his daughter.

"Pretty fine girl," he assented reflectively. "Sorry she isn't a boy, though. Always wanted a boy."

"But," I commented, holding a lighted match to his cigar, "she will bring you a son."

He looked at me rather angrily. "There's a vast difference, my dear sir, between a son and a son-in-law. As much difference as there is between—between—between a mother and a step-mother."

Knowing what I did, his remark startled me.

"Yes, you are right. But some men are hard to satisfy. You have a prepossessing wife, a beautiful girl, fame, fortune and good health. And yet you grumble because you do not possess a son. You are ungrateful to fate, sir."

I had weighed my man, and realized that his rather coarse nature would stand heroic treatment.

"Perhaps you are right," he answered meekly. "A boy is apt to go to the bad. It may be that I am better off as it is."

"How many fathers find their later years unhappy because their sons are not what they should be," I remarked. "But now and then a son is a great blessing. There is young Fernshaw, for example. He must be a great comfort to his father. He is bright, industrious, presentable. He stood high at college, and is doing well as a lawyer. Such a son must be a source of pride to his parents."

I felt as though I had been talking from a Sunday-school novel. Mr. Upton colored violently.

"A dude, sir. If I had a son like that I would make him go West. New York has spoiled Fernshaw."

He said this with so much emphasis that I did not dare to pursue the subject. As soon as we had finished our cigars we returned to the ball-room. I posed for awhile as a wall flower. Mr. Upton had returned to his wife, and I stood watching the dancers.

Presently Agnes Upton passed by on the arm of Barnes. Her face wore a look of animation, and she gazed up at him smilingly.

"Do you see that? Just look there," exclaimed an excited voice at my elbow. I turned and saw Fernshaw.

"What's the matter?" I asked, gently.

"Matter," he returned, passionately. "Can't you see? Barnes thinks because he is on the committee and assigned to Agnes that he must monopolize her attention. It isn't fair. I'll resign from the club. I'll call him out. He has no right to take such an advantage of me."

"Gently, my dear boy," I said soothingly, leading him toward the smoking-room. "You must not be too hasty. Dr. Chapman has spent the evening with Mrs. Upton. I have devoted myself to the old man. You forget that the rules of the club make the duties of a committeeman in such an affair as this very arduous."

He puffed a cigarette spitefully.

"Do you think Barnes finds his task unpleasant? He is to dance the cotilion with her. He hasn't left her side. I haven't a ghost of a show. This comes of being soft. Confound the club."

"I am shocked, Fernshaw. You have no right to talk in this strain. Barnes is devoting himself to your interests. He is a much older man than you, and his impression of Miss Upton will be of great value."

"And how about Miss Upton's impression of Barnes? Will that be of great value?"

I was silenced for the moment. Fernshaw's jealousy was so acute that I could not find words to reply to his last remark. At length I said:

"Be a man, old fellow. You don't want to marry a girl who does not love you. If she cares for you the attentions of Barnes will have no effect."

He seemed soothed for a moment, and at that instant Barnes entered the room.

"Good-evening," he said, approaching us and lighting a cigarette. "The committee seems very faithful to-night."

"Too d——d faithful," muttered Fernshaw under his breath.

"Pardon me," remarked Barnes, looking at him suspiciously.

"Nothing. I was expressing my gratitude."

[TO BE CONTINUED.]

A Good Cup of Coffee.

A really good cup of coffee is at all times a luxury, and one that is very frequently difficult to obtain. Simple as the operation of making it appears, it is not every one who understands how to produce a more than barely palatable drink.

If you wish to make the French drip coffee, for every cup of coffee you need use a heaping teaspoonful of pulverized coffee and place it in the canvas strainer on the top of the coffee pot, pouring a cup of water for every teaspoonful of coffee. Have the water brought to a first boil, pouring it over the coffee after it has passed through the strainer. Pour the contents of the liquid in a warm vessel, emptying it back two or three times over the contents of the coffee in the strainer. The result will be a good cup of coffee as clear as wine and a grateful food and stimulant.

Use the following directions to make plain coffee: First purchase the coffee only in a whole berry, grinding it coarse as wanted. For each cup of coffee needed use a tablespoonful of the ground coffee, not heaping. Mix the ground coffee with with an egg and add a cupful of boiling water for each spoonful of coffee used. Let it boil five minutes, remove from the fire, add a little cold water and let it settle. The result will be a delicious cup of coffee.—St. Louis Republic.

Eiffel's Tower.

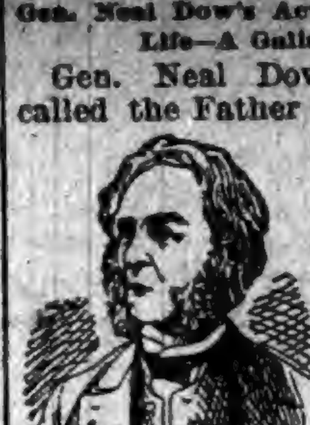
French war office experts are divided in opinion concerning the value or danger of Eiffel's tower in case of a siege of Paris. German staff officers have written quite freely about the matter, principally holding the view that the tower would afford a fine target. Some French officers agree with this view; others say the forts around the city would keep the tower out of range, while it would afford an excellent post for observation. From it the operations of an enemy could be observed for a radius of forty-four miles.

No Smoking.

The Governor of the federal district in which the City of Mexico is situated has just discovered that smoking in the theaters are objectionable, and has issued an order forbidding this indulgence to playgoers either during the performance or between the acts.

"FATHER OF PROHIBITION."

Gen. Neal Dow's Active and Interesting Life—A Gallant Soldier.

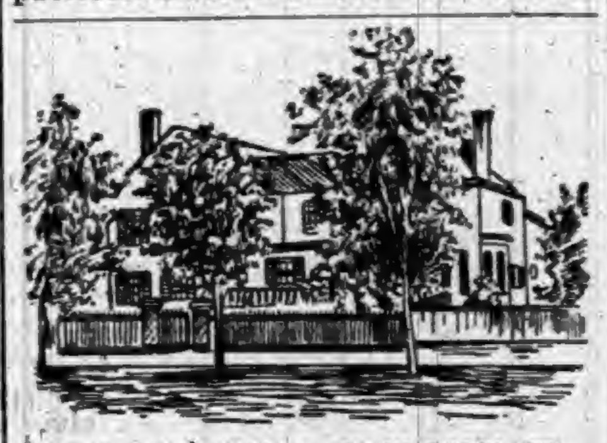


NEAL DOW.

Gen. Neal Dow, who has been called the Father of Prohibition, recently celebrated his eighty-ninth birthday. He is still hale and hearty, and takes an active part in all political movements which especially interest himself, and is far from showing any of the weakness which old age usually experiences. His life has been a most interesting one, and has been filled with activity in various directions and fraught with far-reaching influences.

Neal Dow was born at Portland, Me., in 1804. His family were Quakers and he early received a strong impress toward the doctrines of that society, which has influenced his whole life. After attending school in his native place he was sent to the Quaker Academy at New Bedford, where he spent several years. He then returned to Portland, where he entered into mercantile life. He soon began to take a strong interest in the affairs of his native town and in 1839 he was elected chief of the Portland Fire Department. He held no other office for some time, but his influence was growing among his fellow citizens, and it was generally felt that he was destined in the future to be a man of great prominence. Neal Dow was especially interested at this time in the advocacy by James Appleton of legislative measures prohibiting the making or sale of intoxicants in Maine. In 1837 Mr. Appleton had presented a report to the Legislature in favor of these prohibitive measures and the cause was warmly embraced by Neal Dow. Though he toiled laboriously to have Mr. Appleton's resolution embodied in a law, yet his efforts were for a long time without avail, and it was in 1851 that he finally was successful.

On the breaking out of the war Mr. Dow felt it his duty to go to the front, and December 31, 1861, he was appointed Colonel of the Thirteenth Maine Volunteers, and with his regiment he joined Gen. Butler's expedition to New Orleans. Here he served with great bravery and proved a military leader of ability and skill. He was always a great friend of Gen. Butler and upon the latter's death a short time ago he delivered an eloquent address in praise of the great leader. April 28, 1862, Col. Dow was appointed Brigadier General of Volunteers and placed in command of the forts at the mouth of the Mississippi and afterward of the whole district of Florida. The next year in the attack on Fort Hudson he was wounded twice and while lying in a house near by was taken prisoner. Eight months of imprisonment at Libby Prison and Mobile followed, during which he suffered greatly. He was then exchanged, and November 30, 1864, he resigned. Gen. Dow's military career was brave and gallant and such as to give him a national reputation. He has always been proud of it and only last year he delivered a stirring and patriotic address before the veterans of the regiment which he led to the field.



NEAL DOW'S RESIDENCE IN PORTLAND.

The passage of the restrictive liquor bill in Maine has not been the only work which Gen. Dow has done in this direction. In 1857, '66 and '74, he went to England at the invitation of the United Kingdom Temperance Alliance, and in all the large cities delivered addresses before enthusiastic audiences. As the years have passed on his zeal in this chosen field has increased and become even more ardent. By speeches and newspaper articles he has endeavored to win popular approval of prohibitive legislation, and all over this country and Canada, as well as in England, has his voice been heard in advocacy of his favorite measure.

In 1880 Gen. Dow was candidate for President of the United States on the ticket of the Prohibitionists and received 10,305 votes. He is a man whose influence has been and is widely felt, and one who is honored and respected by all.

Improving the Opportunity.

The woman of forty who clings to the airs and graces which made her charming at twenty, and still expects society to take an active part in amusing her, makes a sad mistake. Society is gay, delightful—to many, even fascination; but it is eminently selfish. It cares only for the man or woman who has something to give it. The maiden of eighteen charms by her beauty and freshness; when these pleasant gifts have faded, if she be wise she offers something else in their place, or something more enduring and enchanting than mere surface graces. Forty is not twenty, says Bazar, neither ought it to wish to be. At forty, a woman's sources of enjoyment should be double what they were at twenty. At twenty, she is selfish; at forty, she should have learned some lessons of self-sacrifice and their rewards, and these lessons should make her—indeed, they cannot fail to make her—a more agreeable friend, a more valuable companion. But in the uncertain period, a woman too ofter falls a victim to certain other temptations. She is tempted by hobbies. Ten years ago her little opinions were listened to with gay raillery or tender seriousness and respect. Now, if she is at all strenuous in advocating or persistent in introducing these same themes to which she has given mature thought, her conversation becomes wearisome. She must avoid hobbies, in society at least, particularly if they run counter to fixed opinions. But the single woman may successfully cultivate a certain brightness of appearance which results from being genuinely interested in the great world and all its happenings. Reading will do much for one, but reading alone is not sufficient. Interchange of thought, the ready expression of opinion, a certain flavor of keeping in touch with all bright and pleasant things, will serve the older maiden in good stead when the little day of youth goes by. There is no assumption in this. Her happiness comes from the cultivation of this spirit, and a happy woman is sure to have friends. Cheerfulness wins its way anywhere. A cultivated and avowed talent almost invariably wins a place in society for its possessor, and age has little to do with its enjoyment. A lady who can and will render a fine musical selection on the piano, harp, or guitar, or whose sweet voice can and will lend its power for song for the pleasure of others, finds herself appreciated and sought after. A pleasant story-teller, who has the discretion to tell short stories and adapt them with tact to her audience, is a winning companion. The grand thing to remember is this: If you wish to be still beloved in society and to find your invitations still numerous, you must have something to give in return for social favors. Some people have good looks, an honored name, a long purse, a talent for being agreeable, or a distinguished grandfather; but tact and kindness are fair rivals for the distinguished grandfather, and often win in the race for social popularity.

An Industrious Lawyer.

The ingenuity of lawyers in making business for themselves is in course of illustration in a reference case now in progress down-town. An estate is involved in the litigation. An unsuccessful contest of a will left some of the litigants dissatisfied. This furnished the lawyer his chance. He found that about 125 persons might be entitled to a dip into the estate if the will could be broken. He addressed a note to each of them, proposing to attack the will, and tendering his services on a contingent arrangement. In this note he informed them that proceedings would be begun, and that he would make defendants of all who did not join his movement. With the apparent necessity forced upon them of accepting his services without charge or hiring various lawyers to protect their interests, they flocked to him. When proceedings were started, he issued circulars of information to his clients, and kept them posted on every move. This involved some trouble and expense, in which the clients were asked to assist. In this way, while receiving nothing that could be called a fee from anyone, the small contributions of his 125 clients are said to have helped the lawyer's bank account an average of $300 per month. As he is very industrious and does his work earnestly, his clients are glad to help him out, and, while he seems to be basing his chances of reward solely on the success of his suit, he is making quite a comfortable income.—New York Times.

Parboiling.

There are various and sundry whims about cooking, but none of them are more absurd than the idea that beans must be parboiled. One would hardly think of turning off the water from meat while it is cooking, but it might just as well be done, as in either case it takes away a great portion of the nutriment and flavor of the dish.

Beans should be carefully looked over, thoroughly washed and put to soak over night in about their bulk of water. Put them in the kettle soon after breakfast the next morning, add about as much water as at first, place them where they will not burn, and let them cook slowly and without stirring until about 10 o'clock. Then add half a pound of salt pork thoroughly washed and cut across the rind in small dice. Place the pork on top of the beans and let it boil for an hour or more. Then lift the meat out, turn the beans and liquor into a baking pan, press the pork down until only the rind is out of the water and bake in a slow oven for several hours.

Many persons complain that beans are indigestible and cause dyspepsia. It is said by eminent authorities that if beans are cooked for six or eight hours no complaint of this sort can be made against them.—New York Ledger.

Ancestry of the Pen.

The earliest mode of writing was on bricks, tiles, oyster-shells, stone, ivory, bark, and leaves of trees, and from the latter the term "leaves of a book" is probably derived.

Copper and brass plates were very early in use; and a bill of feoffment on copper was some years since discovered in India, bearing date 100 years before Christ.

Leather was also used, as well as wooden tablets. Then the papyrus came into vogue, and about the eighth century the papyrus was superseded by parchment.

Paper, however, is of great antiquity, especially among the Chinese; but the first paper-mill in England was built in 1588 by a German, at Dartford, in Kent. Nevertheless, it was nearly a century and a half—namely, in 1713—before Thomas Watkins, a stationer, brought paper making to anything like perfection.

The first approach to a pen was the stylus, a kind of iron bodkin; but the Romans forbade its use on account of its frequent and even fatal use in quarrels, and then it was made of bone. Subsequently, reeds, pointed and split, like pens as in the present day, were used.

Little Mary and the Bishop.

A good story is told of the Bishop of Atlanta, Ga. He recently addressed a large number of Sunday-school children, and wound up by asking, in a very paternal and condescending way: "And now is there a-a-n-y little boy or a-a-n-y little girl who would like to ask me a question?"

After a pause he repeated the question: "Is there a-a-n-y little boy or a-a-n-y little girl who would like to ask me a question?"

A little shrill voice called out: "Please, sir, why did the angels walk up and down Jacob's ladder when they had wings?"

"Oh, ah, yes—I see," said the Bishop; "and now is there a-a-n-y little boy or a-a-n-y little girl who would like to answer Mary's question?"—Southron.

DEAR SIRS:—"Last winter I had La Grippe in its worst form, leaving me in a terrible condition, my Brain was confused, my Heart weak, and my legs refused to hold me up, and the muscles were so sore that it was painful to lie down. I had continual Headache, and everything I ate distressed me. I could not work, sleep, or eat, and my right side became numb. Several doctors told me I had Incipient Paralysis, and that I could get no better. I grew so weak that I could not leave the house. Hearing of PITCHER'S LIVURA I got a bottle and it helped me from the first. I took 4 bottles in all, and am PERFECTLY WELL in every way, and now work all day. I know that PITCHER'S LIVURA CURED ME."

The Old Thirtieth.

The Thirtieth Indiana had its reunion at Monroeville, April 27, as noted in the COURIER and several of the DeKalb members attended. The exercises brought out several well known here. Rev. D. F. Kain made an address, and so did Phillip Noel, the latter being spoken of as the "Bill Nye of the day." Miss Ollie Elson, daughter of Wm. Elson received many compliments. "Her recitations," says the Monroeville Breeze, "brought tears into the eyes of the old soldiers, and many others." She recited several times and was always roundly cheered. The paper adds that "Miss Elson's program was not long enough to satisfy the audience." The paper is full of compliments for this young DeKalb county girl.

List of Patents.

The Dispatch's Position.

The Dispatch thinks "the election of Rakestraw an endorsement of the republican position on local questions." We are not sure what this means. The republican party don't seem to have any opinions on local matters unless it be the opinions of the Dispatch. And the only well-defined policy the Dispatch has is to criticize democratic officers and commend republican officers. The only other "position" in the recent city election, in which Rakestraw was elected, was the school house question, and on this, if the Dispatch quotes Mr. Rakestraw correctly, he stood exactly as did his competitor, Mr. Miller; both being against an expensive building. If the republicans were agreed in this, they all voted for Rakestraw, while the democrats who believed in building a good school house, voted against Miller under the mistaken belief that Rakestraw favored a big school house. So it will be seen that the "position" taken at the election was a little mixed.

* * *

The Dispatch also illustrates the way "the State educates its people," etc., having reference to what we said about his "free education." There is nothing new in the "explanation," for everybody knows how that matter is arranged. And even a man of "Barn's" intelligence understands it. The point, however, is, that we quoted the editor's own words, in which he distinctly told the editor of the Butler Record that "the great State of Indiana educated" him. We have not "tried to have our readers believe the State paid for the education of the editor of the Despatch." We only quoted the editor's own words, and if they convey a wrong meaning, it is his own fault. Nor do we object to the editor's receiving even a "free education" at the expense of the state. We are glad he did receive it. It would not have damaged him if he had received more. But what we do object to is, after having received these very manifest advantages, he is not willing to put himself out a little in the way of 25 or 50 cents in taxes annually to help give other people's children better school facilities. In other words: if A, as a minor, receives a benefit from B, a taxpayer, then A does a small thing when he comes to be a taxpayer, if he is opposed to giving a similar benefit to the school children of C.

* * *

The Dispatch says, "there is no excuse for a single dollar of the town debt except the school bonds.' Well, that's bad, especially considering the fact that nearly every item of expense the town has incurred for some time has been favored by the Dispatch.

Sons of Veterans.

The Auburn Sons of Veterans Camp is in a prosperous condition, for the membership has worked faithfully to that end. But we understand the most of the other Camps in this county have gone under. The successful management of the Auburn Camp ought to commend it to the favor of all, and no doubt it will. The latch string of the Auburn Camp is out, and all eligible persons, both here and elsewhere, are invited to come in and join here. There are many sons here and at other points in the county, who would be desirable members and would be heartily welcomed. Those who never belonged, and members of other camps that are now disbanded will be made welcome, and the boys here ask them to come in and help make this one of the strongest and best in the state. Let us hear from the Sons elsewhere—at Waterloo, Hamilton, Butler, St. Joe and Garrett.

NOTES.

The total vote polled was about up to the average, being the highest on mayor, 631.

Now can Garrett see the need of having a democratic paper? The last two issues of the Clipper contained no allusion to an election in that town, nor did it mention a candidate, except a single allusion to Mr. Frederick. But it was full to the brim with Auburn politics. We noticed one column in the issue of April 27 that contained 29 items, 19 being devoted to Auburn and 4 to Garrett. This must be interesting to Garrett citizens. If the Clipper would keep its nose out of Auburn's affairs where it has no business, and pay even a little attention to the interests of its own town, it might not accomplish any more, but the people of the two towns would be better suited

W. J. Frederick would have made a good mayor, and we cannot help thinking the Garrett people made a mistake in defeating him. We are equally sorry to see Mr. Behler, Mr. Arnold, Mr. Driscoll and Mr. Singler get left. The other democrats, Mr. Smith, Mr. Donnelly and Mr. Widmer, are also said to be good men. The whole democratic ticket should have been elected. As it is, the first city government of DeKalb's first city goes into the hands of the republicans.

The Great Bicycle Race.

The second long distance relay trip with bicycles began last Monday at Boston and ended on Friday at Chicago. As we announced last week, the riders took a written message from Gov. Russel to Gov. Altgeld, the letter being in a small packet slung over the rider's neck. Every few miles a fresh rider was waiting to whom the packet was hurriedly given, and he went speeding on to the next. As the roads were bad, each could ride but a little distance. So besides those first notified, others were taken. Ralph Cobb of this place was put in to take a part of the run originally assigned to Ed. Robbins. He started at Butler, taking the packet from the hands of an exhausted rider, who had barely strength to hand it to him, and then fall over. Mr. Cobb ran about three miles to the station where Ed. Robbins was waiting. This was Thursday afternoon. The fast train that goes west through Waterloo at about four o'clock was close up to him, and then passed him as Cobb threw his wheel out of the way, and cast the precious packet over Robbins' neck. As Robbins sprang into the saddle and flew away, the great train load cheered, and cheered again, waving hats and handkerchiefs as far up the road as they could be seen or heard. It was an exciting episode. Every man, woman and child on the train seemed to be in sight. They had probably been told they would pass the relay riders soon after leaving Butler. In fact many of the riders themselves were on the train, having been picked up at different stations so they could get through to Chicago to see the finish. Mr. Cobb rode on to Waterloo, to which place he had sent his coat, and he and Robbins staid there till morning. Cobb went to Chicago Friday noon to see the close of the great race. The total time taken from Boston to Chicago was 140 hours.

WHO Cares to pay for name or fame in this the Nineteenth Century? When we buy goods we buy them on their merits

WHEN We are asked as we often are "Why do you sell goods so much lower than other houses?" we usually answer, "We DO because we CAN." One reason

WHAT We say we have — the Goods, the Amount, the Quality and the Price. Another reason is that we know exactly

WHERE Cash can buy them the cheapest, and all we ask is for every sensible person to do likewise and you will surely come to the Boston Clothing Store. A most reasonable reason—

WHY We can leave others behind in the race and sell first class goods for 15 to 25 per cent less than others can, particularly when it comes to advertising certain goods, is because our patrons know that when we advertise goods at a certain price we have just

HOW when and where to buy goods, so that we can undersell all others. Now, if you are wise and desire to save money on a fine class of goods, this is your greatest of opportunities. Please call and examine these goods, remembering that always and in all cases WE DO AS WE ADVERTISE.

SHERIFF'S SALE.

By virtue of a certified copy of a decree to me directed from the Clerk of the DeKalb Circuit Court, in a cause wherein Hezekiah K. Leas is plaintiff and Sanford S. Smith, Mary E. Smith, Elnora Y. Wyatt, Julia A. Wyatt and Allen Shultz are defendants, requiring me to make the sum of Three hundred and twenty seven dollars and forty cents, with interest on said decree and cost, I will expose at public sale to the highest bidder, on Saturday, May 13, 1893,

between the hours of 10 o'clock a. m., and 4 o'clock p. m., of said day, at the door of the court house, in Auburn, DeKalb county, Indiana, the rents and profits for a term not exceeding seven years, of the following real estate, to-wit:

Situated in the southwest one-fourth (¼) of section three (3) in township thirty-four (34) north of range thirteen (13) east, described as follows, to-wit:

Commencing at a point twenty-five (25) feet north of and four (4) chains and seventy (70) links east of the northeast corner of lot number one hundred and three (103) in the original plat of Waterloo, DeKalb county, Indiana, running thence east along the center of Marion street, two (2) chains and twenty-nine (29) links, thence south parallel with the aforesaid lot number one hundred and three, one hundred and thirty (130) feet, thence west on a line parallel with the north line aforesaid two (2) chains and twenty nine (29) links to a point one hundred and thirty (130) feet south of the place of beginning, thence north on a line parallel with the east line aforesaid one hundred and thirty (130) feet to the place of beginning; and the improvements thereon, situated in DeKalb county, State of Indiana.

If such rents and profits will not sell for a sufficient sum to satisfy said decree, interest and costs; I will at the same time and place, expose at public sale the fee simple of said real estate, or so much thereof as may be sufficient to discharge said decree, interest and costs.

Sale will be made without any relief whatever from valuation or appraisement laws.

G. C. RALSTON, Sheriff of DeKalb County.
By R. Blum Deputy.
W. H. Leas Att'y for Plaintiff.
Auburn Indiana, April 18, 1893.

Dr. Miles' New Heart Cure at Druggists.

Kruger's family grocery has good potatoes for sale at 90 cents a bushel. Kruger sells cheap so that his customers may have the advantage.

The attention of our readers is called to the advertisements upon the inside pages of this paper, among which will be found some important announcements.

BUCKLEN'S ARNICA SALVE.—The best salve in the world for cuts, bruises, sores, ulcers, salt rheum, fever sores, tetter, chapped hands, chilblains, corns and all skin eruptions, and positively cures piles, or no pay required. It is guaranteed to give perfect satisfaction, or money refunded. Price 25 cents per box. For sale by Robbins & McCord. tf

The "God bless you, Dr. Wheeler," of Geo. W. Cooper, 15 Lawn St., Cleveland. Ohio, is genuine and from the heart. He writes, July 28, 1892: "My son commenced to have fits when 10 years old. He had them three or four times a month, and as high as 19 in three days. I had him treated at the hospital and by different doctors, but it did him no good. Sixteen months ago he commenced to take Dr. Wheeler's Nerve Vitalizer, and he has had only one fit since. I think him entirely cured. Will gladly answer any questions about your great medicine." The makers offer $50 reward for an incurable case of Nerve Disease. Large $1 bottles at F. E Davenport. 3

For soothing an overworked brain, nothing equals a good cigar, and such is the Bill Head.

Do you lack faith and love health? Let us establish your faith and restore your health with DeWitt's Sarsaparilla. Robbins & McCord.

RHEUMATISM CURED IN A DAY.—"Mystic Cure" for rheumatism and neuralgia radically cures in 1 to 3 days. Its action upon the system is remarkable and mysterious. It removes at once the cause and the disease immdiately disappears. The first dose greatly benefits. 75 cents. Sold and guaranteed by Robbins & McCord druggists, Auburn.

A late prominent medicine manufacturer once gave his opinion that we couldn't make Brant's Balsam a great seller, because we gave such large bottles for the money, there wouldn't be the large profits made by other manufacturers with which to advertise the goods. He hadn'd learned that quality and quantity are advertising always fully appreciated, as proven by the rapid growth of sale of Brant's Balsam, the leading seller everywhere. Large bottles small doses, quick effect. 25 and 50 cent sizes at F. E. Davenport's 3

Mr. and Mrs. Geo. Schaab, Auburn, Ind., a boy. This is one of the many items of good news the COURIER sends out to-day. Date, Thursday, May 4th.

MARRIED- At the Lutheran parsonage May 6, 1893, Perry A. Muhn of Auburn, and Lina Warner of Allen county, by Rev. J. D. Brosy. We wish them much success.

Among the COURIER callers last week was our young farmer friend Douglas Kelley. Like other farmers, and everybody for that matter he was hoping for an improvement in the weather.

The Auburn ladies who attended the state literary meeting at Ft. Wayne last week, returned on Friday, all greatly delighted with the meeting and with the people of Ft. Wayne, they met there.

Dr. Johnston and Mr. Healy went out Sunday to see E. S. McDowell who has been sick so long. They found him no better and it is not likely that he will recover, though he may live some time yet.

Dr. C. E. Nusbaum is now fully established in the office here with Dr. W. H. Nusbaum, and they are ready to extend their practice into the line of most difficult cases. See the card they publish this week.

St. Joe held a meeting last week to decide whether they would incorporate the town. A vote was taken which stood about 6 in favor of it. The prospects now are, that it will be the sixth incorporated town in this county.

MARRIED: At the residence of the bride's parents, C. W. Oiler in Smithfield, May 7, Geo. W. Bowman to Bessie E. Oiler, Rev. A. McChloe officiating. Both are of this county and the COURIER joins with their many friends in wishing them all possible happiness.

R. B. Showers paid up his regular installment on the COURIER yesterday We have for many years depended on him to prove the old saying, that "the new broom sweeps clean," and he has never failed us. If the COURIER office is not neatly kept it is not Robert's fault.

See Miss Hoffman's notice of her musical Kindergarten for beginners in music. She is an able teacher, and this will give the younger boys and girls a chance to get the rudiments of a musical education. The class will meet at the music store June 5, and all who contemplate entering the class should call there to see her before that date.

Joseph Pfefferl, who has served us so faithfully and efficiently as marshal for the past three years, retired Monday evening after a faithful service of several years. He has earned the good will of the best of our citizens and has inspired a wholesome fear of the law, in the breasts of some who needed it. We believe he retires with the respect and confidence of all.

Hollister started in last week to put on the third story to his hotel. This made necessary an arrangement on the north side to put up lumber. etc., over the Kiblinger block, and an extensive system of scaffolding on the east front, over the hotel entrance, to enable the workmen to put up the front brickwork which being a veneer of brick had to be put on from the outside. The big scaffolding posts, etc., give the street along there a look of "same like Chicago."

Mr. Healy next Sunday, will preach his farewell sermon here, closing his work in Auburn. His people regret greatly to have him leave for he has been an untiring and faithful worker, as well as an able and eloquent preacher, and his many amiable qualities have endeared him to many outside the circle of his congregation. Mrs, Healy also will be greatly missed, for she too, has been active, and earnest in all good works. The Sunday school especially, will lose one of its most successful leaders.

The Dispatch is everlastingly finding fault, without regard to justice, reason or good breeding, with every step taken by any democratic officer. To show that it is all a matter of politics and not the merits of the case, we need only allude to the fact that democrats only are criticised and advised. And suppose we put the boot on the other foot. Last week Jake Raut, republican clerk of the village of Auburn, took authority on himself to let a street fakir, the man with the potato peeler. have a license to sell on the street at the small sum of $1 though the board had fixed the license at $3. Here is where the Dispatch should rise up and shout against the bad management of the democratic board that objects to letting fakirs sell for less than $3, thus taking $2 out of the hard earnings of the poor farkir. And if Jake had been a democrat the same editor would have wept to see those two big, but lost, round iron dollars escape. What we wish to ask is: By what right has a town clerk to fix a license fee at a different sum from that fixed by the town board? We pause for a rep'y.

Dr. Miles' Nerve and Liver Pills. 50 doses 25 cts.

McElree's WINE OF CARDUI for female diseases.

For good health use TUTT'S PILLS.

Big display of trimmed hats at Harter's. 17-19

Hollister has the framework up for his third story.

Frank Swartz, of Garrett was in town last Thursday.

Court begins next Monday. Get ready for business.

Remember we have only one price and that the lowest, on millinery at Harter's.

Any lady that fails to get one of those sets of cake pans at Kiblinger's will miss it.

Special sale of chenille and lace curtains now in progress at Foster's at Ft. Wayne.

Miss Lyda M Ensley of Garrett was the guest of Miss Lulu Stonebraker over Sunday.

Wall paper is cheaper now than it will be next year. You cannot afford to miss seeing Davenport's samples.

Buy your children's hat of Cowan Sisters where you will find a complete assortment of everything in that line.

Mrs. Fannie Smith had something like a stroke of paralysis last week, and has been lying in a critical condition ever since.

As will be seen by our "list of patents" our former townsman, S. R. Heberling has received a patent on his chimney attachment.

The Lake Shore road will give all its employes time to go to the World's fair, and will also furnish transportation for their families.

Mrs. Nill and Mrs. Heller, of Ft. Wayne, returned to their home Tuesday, after a visit with the family of Mrs. Nill's son, I. H. Nill of this place.

MARRIED: At the Lutheran parsonage May 10, by J. D. Brosy, C. E. Sell and Hannah Reesch of Auburn. May success be their portion in this life.

Mrs. Fox and Will Madden have bought the Baker farm east of town and have movdd out there. It will make them a nice home, and be very handy to town.

Mrs Frank VanAukuken and daughter, of Pleasant Lake, visited their relatives here last week. They reported Frank in "perfect health," which we are pleased to hear,

Before purchasing call and see Mrs. Lane's line of millinery. Her goods are finer than ever, flowers beautiful, everything just lovely. Call and see her, south side Public square.

It is a truth in medicine that the smallest dose that performs a cure is the best. DeWitt's Little Early Risers are the smallest pills, will perform the cure, and are the best. Robbins & McCord

John Picker went to Angola Tuesday as a witness in the suit between J. W. Clark, of Ashley, and W. H. Maxwell who put up Mr. Clark's building there. It was a dispute about the contract.

Rev. Cyrus Alton, so often mentioned in our "early marriages," was visiting among his early friends in the southeast part of the county, recently. He has been living somewhere in the west for many years.

Peter Ditmars of the Junction called up to see the COURIER this week. Mr. D., like other farmers, find it hard to get along with poor crops and low prices for wheat, and then have to buy potatoes, corn and oats.

J. C. Henry is at Goshen this week, in the interests of the Keeley Institute, with which he is now connected. He and those associated with him, have the ability and push to make the enterprise a success wherever they locate.

A friend at Grand Rapids, Mich., last week sent Mrs. L. E. Lane a quantity of the lovely trailing arbutus flowers. They are not only beautiful but fragrant and being so rarely seen here, Mrs. L. took pains to show them to her friends.

There will be a prohibition rally in Auburn July 4, to which all are asked to come. Good speakers, both local and from abroad will address the meeting. Among these will be the celebrated Luther Benson. Full particulars will be given later.

The Picker boys put on about half a dozen flags at the top of the big Kiblinger smoke stack when they finished it last week. And no republican as he goes over the country distributing British flags, will pull them down. They float at a height of 135 feet.

DeWitt E. Lewis a brother of G. W. Lewis died at Crystal Mich., April 22, at age of 83. He was Mr. Lewis' last surviving brother out of nine, the original number. Some of the early settlers in southeastern DeKalb will remember him, as he lived there at one time.

Henry A. Shull and his daughter, Mrs. Allison, started for Montana last week, and by this time are oncemore citizens of Phillipsburg in that mountain state. He expects to remain there some time, making his home with his daughter, and with his son, Josiah. We hope he may have a pleasant time.

Auburn has lots of music, and good music too. Besides the regular Auburn band, there is the Borst's orchestra, composed of some of its members, and Sheet's Military Band, composed of younger players. Ernest Sheets is the teacher of this band, which has twenty members. They are getting ahead nicely.

J. E. Rose was up at Angola last week and will be there a part of this week. He is acting as judge on several cases in which Judge Powers could not sit, as he was an interested party. Mr. Rose speaks in complimentary terms of the bar of that county, a good word that as far as our own observation goes is well deserved.

MARRIED: May 1, 1893, at the residence of the officiating minister, Rev. J. W. Lilly in Waterloo, Joseph Girardot to Tillie Link, both of this county. Mr Girardot is a son of Justin Girardot, and the bride is a daughter of David Link, both families being well and favorably known. The COURIER sends the young couple its heartiest good wishes,

Do not fail to hear Marie Kniblos at the Lutheran church May 18, 1893. She is one of the few artists who attract her audience from her first appearance on the platform, and holds their undivided attention throughout the entire evening Admission 25 cents for adults; 15 cents for children under 12 years. Tickets will be so'd before the evening of the entertainment.

Avilla News—Fred Huelsenbeck has quite a rare and valuable collection of antiquities He showed us on Saturday a collection of over eighty coins of various nations, some of them hundreds of years old and very valuable Another thing he prizes highly is a map of Westphalia, published at Nuremberg, Germany, in 1761. While yet a boy he was one day walking between two towns along the Russian border, and a lady at a hotel wrapped up his lunch in this map. He has preserved it carefully and values it highly.

Sebastian Tustison was here Saturday to close up his work as administrator of the Shirey estate.

Ashley, according to the Ashley Times is ready to give the new electric railway a favorable consideration.

Chas. E Miller, optician, next visit to Auburn is Friday, May 19, at Yesbera's jewelry store. Remember the date.

Mr. Healy was at Albion Tuesday, where he assisted at the installation of a pastor for the Presbyterian church there.

Streets were scraped Tuesday. After mud comes dust, and the new sprinkling company started their sprinkler yesterday.

The ladies nickel social of the Lutheran church will meet at the home of Mrs. Sam Campbell, Friday afternoon. All are invited.

SEED CORN FOR SALE: I have good seed corn for sale. Call on me at my home six miles east of Auburn on Newville road. W. H. Pepple. 18-20

G. C. Lahnum will do teaming for any parties who need his services. Leave orders at Snell's grocery, or call at his residence on South VanBuren st.

Ex-Surveyor A. P. Foltz was here Saturday and "got even" with the COURIER. Mr. Foltz is still teaching, a part of the time at least, and is prospering generally.

The popular Eckhart carriage Co. has a big notice of their business in to-day's paper, and will continue to address the COURIER readers for a time in the interest of their work.

J. G. Johnson, the Waterloo millinery dealer was in town last Friday. He is secretary of the fair there and says they expect to have the best races there this season they ever had.

Little Katie Kiblinger was taken very sick this week with hemmorrhage of the stomach, a very dangerous disease. She is under Dr. Nusbaum's care, and we understand is improving.

Mrs. Ehlers came home last week from her winter's stay at Raleigh, North Carolina, and will soon go west, to Denver, Colo., where she will attend the general missionary meeting held at that place.

Those who have had difficulty in getting spectacles adapted to their eyes will have an opportunity to have them accurately fitted by Chas. E. Miller, optician, Friday, May 19, at Yesbera's jewelry store.

Miss Katherine McQuilkin desires to say to her patrons that it will not be possible for her to work during the month of August, but she will be glad to do all the work she can for them before that date.

"There is a salve for every wound." We refer to DeWitt's Witch Hazel Salve, cures burns, bruises, cuts, indolent sores, as a local application in the nostrils it cures catarrh, and always cures piles. Robbins & McCord.

The most intelligent people of our community recognize in DeWitt's Little Early Risers pills of unequaled merit for for dyspepsia, headache and constipation. Very small, perfect in action. Robbins & McCord.

Marie Kniblos comes recommended very highly, she is a prominent member of the Christian Endeavor and is a christian lady. The entertainment will be given under the auspices of the Christian Endeavor of the Lutheran church.

The S. H. G. meets Saturday with Mrs. Moss. Program, roll call, quotations about Socrates; Renaisance and Reformation, Ignatius and Loyola; Mrs. Moody; Chicago and the World's Fair, Mrs. Moss; Organized Labor and the Law, Mrs. Penfield; music, Mrs. McIntyre.

Aside from a very full line of wall papers of all grades kept in stock, Davenport is showing a line of extra fine samples ordered as desired. In this way you can select from all the fine papers made. Prices lower than any one can sell who carries these papers in stock. Davenport.

Goshen parties have finished the survey of an electric railway from that place to Elkhart, a distance of ten miles. There is also talk that it may be continued farther in that direction and eventually may turn off and go to Niles and Benton Harbor. Auburn don't want to be the last to move.

The new town board met Monday evening and organized by making Ezra Ensley president. The new marshal, Alvin Baker, was inducted into office, Mr. Pfefferl retiring. Jake Raut for clerk and Ezra Ensley for trustee for the fifth ward took their old places, while Mr. Rakestraw is the new member who takes Mr. Lanning's old place.

C. A. Yotter, of Angola came through here last Saturday on his way home after spending a few weeks in Iowa. Mr. Yotter is a rising young attorney, but we understand the school board at Angola are trying to have him accept the position of principal in their schools. He is a young man of energy and ability and would no doubt do them valuable service.

C. J. Porter, the Waterloo optician, made his regular visit here last week, and fitted a number of our citizens with spectacles. He has been many years in this business and has made a study of the human eye and how to relieve all its defects. His work, as far as we have ever heard, has been satisfactory, as his long residence in the county, and many years of visits here and to other points will prove.

You cannot usually buy furniture to any advantage in a small town. The goods are apt to be old style and dear. Then too, the assortment is so small you can hardly make a selection, and picking goods out from a wood cut or photograph, to have them ordered for you, is very unsatisfactory. Better board the cars and go to Ft. Wayne and make your choice from one whole acre of floor surface, covered with all the new designs in furniture, at the great store rooms of the Foster Furniture & Carpet Co. They will ship your goods to Auburn free.

BLANK BOOKS.

We want to call your attention to the fact that we have a very Complete Stock of Blank Books. Don't you need anything in this line?

When reading does your head ache, eyes pain, or reading blur? If so, you should consult Chas. E. Miller, the specialist in lenses for the eye, 211 S. Walnut street, Muncie, Ind.

C. C. Buss made a business call on the COURIER last week which leads us to remark that a man who will pay a little account that the creditor has totally forgotten is a pretty good man to deal with. Come again.

Bad complexion indicates an unhealthy state of the system. DeWitt's Little Early Risers are pills that will correct this condition. They act on the liver, they act on the stomach, they act on the bowels. Robbins & McCord.

You always buy goods at the lowest possible figure in a one price store Nine times out of ten you pay too much for goods in a store that has two prices, The Foster Furniture & Carpet Co., at Ft. Wayne is a one-priced store.

The breaking up of the winter is the signal for the breaking up of the system Nature is opening up the pores and throwing off refuse. DeWitt's Sarsaparilla is of unquestionable assistance in this operation. Robbins & McCord.

Ladies wishing the best article in the world for cleaning ladies and children's hair, may have a free box of Dr. Simmons Dandruffane by calling at Mrs. L. E. Lane's millinery store south of the public square. This is merely to introduce Dandruffane and after May 29th there will be no more free boxes given away. 19-21

The Keeley Institute.

J. C. Henry of this place is now associated in the Keeley Institute as a stockholder, and is vice-president. The territory in which he is interested includes northern Indiana, and gives them room to locate another branch Institute, which we understand will be at some town along the line of the Lake Shore road, say Goshen, Elkhart or South Bend. At whichever point it is located the work will go on the same as at the Institute here, and be in charge of a physician with the general oversight in the hands of Mr. Putt and Mr. Henry. Mr. Putt thoroughly understands the work, having had abundant and successful experience, and he and Mr. Henry are both able business men. Mr. Henry is a prominent and successful business man of this city, and our friends "up the line" can tie up to whatever he says or does. We look to see the good work go on with renewed vigor in this broader field.

Business Change.

An important business change has taken place this week in the drug business here. Theodore Gerke, the druggist who has been employed at the Physicians' drugstore since last September, has bought out Dr. Casebeer's interest and he and Dr. Matheny now own the entire plant. Mr. Gerke is a young man of more than average ability, has an excellent education, and above all, a course of education at a college of pharmacy, where he learned all the scientific and practical phases of the drug business. Besides he was actively employed as clerk in a drugstore at Ft. Wayne and at his old home in Decatur, Ind. He also speaks, reads and writes German fluently, his parents being of that nationality, and his education in that direction having been made a speciality. This will be good news to our German speaking people. We believe Mr. Gerke will make the business a success and fully uphold the popularity of the Physicians' drugstore.

We say that spring is here—we say
The same thing every pleasant day;
We turn to thoughts of new spring clothes,
And then—it snows!

Disheartened now, our hopes give way
Till sun shines, then again we say
The spring is here—when, as before,
It snows some more.

Musical Kindergarten.

I will organize a musical kindergarten term, of 10 weeks, commencing June 5, for the purpose of giving musical instruction to children between the ages of 5 and 13. Two lessons each week to each class. For further particulars call on me at the music store, North Main street. The whole class should be present June 5 to have work laid out.

FLORA HOFFMAN.

NOTICE.

Is hereby given that the lot assessments for Evergreen cemetery, Auburn, for current year are now due and payable at my office in said town on or before the first day of August, after which a penalty of ten per cent will be added for collection, to meet current expense of maintenance. A prompt response is very desirable. By order of the Board of Trustees.

R. McDOUGALL, Sec.

Dates for Commencement Exercises.

May 18th—Concord.
May 25th—Auburn.
May 26th—Waterloo.
June 1st—Garrett.
June 2d—Fairfield.
June 3d—Richland and Grant. (Joint.)
June 9th—Troy.

Franklin and Wilmington will hold joint exercises May 31st.

Butler, because of a change in its course of study several years ago, will have no graduates this year.

THE SUMMER SCHOOL.

Of the Tri-State Normal College will Open May 23.

Another able man has been added to the faculty who will give his time to the training of teachers. Let every one who wants any and all his difficulties as a teacher removed, come. There will be opportunity to study most any thing. At least 75 classes will be organized and we guarantee you shall have what you want. Come for review. Come for advanced work. Come for professional training, and you can have what you come for. Board and lodging in private families $2.00 per week.

High School Commencement.

The Eleventh Annual Commencement of the Auburn High School will be at the First M. E. church, April 25, beginning at 8 p. m. The class is the largest that has graduated in our schools so far, numbering eleven. There will be two or three orations by the class, but the chief speech will be the class address by Prof. J. J. Mills of Earlham College. Mr. Mills has been prominent in educational circles of Indiana for many years, is an eloquent speaker, and we can promise our people a literary treat worth hearing. Borst's orchestra will furnish the music, and the whole entertainment will be of a high order. As usual an admission fee will be charged to help defray the expenses of the graduating exercises. The fee will be 25c. and 15c. We hope our people will give the class of '93 a liberal support.

The First National Bank.

As briefly mentioned in the COURIER a short time ago, the First National Bank of Auburn will increase its capital stock. It has been at $50,000 but will be put up to $100,000 or possibly $150,000 Parties have already subscribed over $25,000 of this, and we suppose that when attention is called to it many others with means to invest will also take stock. In fact the action to increase the capital originated in the desire of other parties to become stockholders The directors of the bank would prefer to have all the stock taken by parties in DeKalb county rather than by parties outside, and so will give them ample time to consider the matter. Business men and farmers will find the stock a good investment, and time will be given to invest up till July 1. One half the amount taken must be paid in by July 10, and the rest in installments of ten per cent a month.

The reports of the bank show a good condition, that has been also continually improving. The amounts on deposit, amounts loaned, cash on hand and surplus have continually increased. The earnings for the first three months of 1889 were $2,982; same months in 1893, showed $3,408 Parties desiring to take stock should apply for information at the bank or of some of the officers. Judge McClellan is president; Wm. McIntyre, vice-president; Don Garwood cashier, and associated with them as directors are M. Boland, Isaac Hague, Charles McClellan and E. L. Siver.

And yet some folks say women are not capable of becoming successful politicians.

WILLIAM HOGAN, the pugilist, thought his muscle was bigenough to enable him to bulldoze a Deadwood bartender. The pugilist received a chunk of lead where the hen got the ax and the daisies now bloom over him. The Deadwood bartender may not be an angel, but there will be no general complaint if the court deals gently with him in this case. He has abated a nuisance.

CRUELTY, once natural, and still natural with those who are in the stage of simplicity, is becoming so unnatural to a large proportion of mankind, and especially of womankind, that they may be inclined to deny that the title of this article embodies a truth. It is a diminishing if not a disappearing fact that men are naturally cruel, because the tendency is overtaken by our training of the young before it has had time for expansion.

THE Cramps of Philadelphia have begun to lay down the keels of the two gigantic steamships that are to be added to the new American line as consorts of the Paris and New York. These ships will be 511 feet long, and have a displacement of about 15,000 tons. We hope that they will prove superior in every respect to the Campania and Lucania, which the Cunard people are to add to their fleet, for, like the Paris and New York, the new American vessels are to be available as cruisers in time of war.

THE Chicago river is, metaphorically speaking, between the devil and the deep sea. Since the United States government declared it navigable water the city solons refuse to pay for dredging it, rightly enough claiming that the cost of the work should come out of the national river and harbor appropriation. The government doesn't seem disposed to look after its self-claimed protege, and hence the turgid stream is filling up and will soon be impassable to large craft. Meanwhile as a sanitary nuisance the river remains the same old howling success as of yore.

THE churches of Gotham, says the Chicago Times, have gone into the peripatetic lunch business. They will run all night sandwich carts in the "Tenderloin" and tough down-town districts. The first of these carts is coining money, it is said, and when all of them are started the churchly proprietors expect to make a good thing out of their investment. Some people may criticise this mingling of spiritual and temporal catering, but if the churches will stick to religion and sandwiches and abolish bazaars and fairs the public at large will give them enthusiastic support in their new venture.

IT would be hard to depict or even to imagine the emotions which the great city of Chicago and the great fair must excite in the breast of that fierce old warrior, Rain-in-the-Face. There is no doubt that many of the Indian chiefs who in the past have so valiantly led their people in their vain struggle against the encroaching civilization of the white man have had but an imperfect idea of the latter's power and resources. They have believed that civilization was represented only by what they saw in the far West, and that the troopers led against them formed the chief strength of the white man's army. Perhaps Rain-in-the-Face now gains for the first time a correct idea of the puissance of civilization and of the certain extinction that awaits any people, however brave, who oppose it.

THE conviction of a highway robber 10 years old would be an unusual event in any community, and is doubly so in a civilized city. Vincent Shevlin of Chicago, who is not much more than a baby, held at bay last February a street car load of people, including a policeman, and wounded the officer with a revolver when the latter attempted to arrest him. It is an instructive fact that young Shevlin has been brought up in a nest of robbers, and that two of his elder brothers belong to a notorious gang. Early associations and incorrect training are responsible for a large proportion of the criminals that afflict society. The future career of young Shevlin will be a matter of considerable interest. The State will attempt, at the reform school, to correct the wrong impressions of life which he has gained. It remains to be seen whether the criminal instinct can be removed by education from the mind of a 10-year-old boy.

OF course there will be incredulity over the assertion that in a couple of barrels fuel enough can be carried to run Atlantic liners across in three days. George Sheffield maintains that sugar and chlorate of potash can be substituted for coal and that, dipped in sulphuric acid, when commingled in a rod, they will work a piston driving the machinery like a gas engine. Without materially altering the construction of works now in use, he predicts that this new fuel will reduce time between the continents two-fifths, perhaps more. Wild claims are continually made by speculators and experimenters, but none that have proved futile were wilder than Fulton's or Stephenson's. When it was proposed to run steamers across the Atlantic with coal fuel for steam a solemn treatise was published in London by a scientific society declaring that any hull capable of carrying the necessary quantity of coal could not be kept afloat by any machinery man was competent to devise. The Great Eastern reached port when the book emerged from the press. Sheffield may be more poet than mechanician; more dreamer than engineer. Which reminds us—what has become of Keely and his motor?

That Could Be Dispensed With.

A newly made father rushed into a telegraph office the other day and commenced to write on the blanks which bestrewed the desks. It seemed hard for the writer to suit himself with his productions, for he tore up several sheets before he handed to the operator a dispatch which read as follows:

"James Biggerstaff, Cohoes, N. Y.:
Twins arrived this morning. Mother and babies doing well. We are so happy!
JOHN NOOROP."

The operator read it carefully spelling out the names in the way they have of impressing senders with the carefulness of telegraph companies, and then said, in a business-like voice, which cared naught for twins or other forms of infantile population:

"Fifty cents."

"I thought a small message like that would go for a quarter," said the papa.

"You can send ten words for a quarter. You have fourteen here."

"All right. Leave off 'we are so happy!'"—Smith, Gray & Co.'s Monthly.

People Who Survived Scalping.

In San Francisco there lives a man at the present time named Carroll Bronson, a pioneer of the Selkirk Mountains in British Columbia, who was scalped by the Sioux Indians in 1866, and still enjoys comparatively good health, although more than 75 years of age. He was quite an Indian fighter in his time and his face is scarred from arrow wounds received in many a hard fought battle. The marking of the scalping is not visible except when he lifts his long, white hair from the side of his head, then it shows a great circular scar extending from above his right eye around the right side and back of his head almost to the left ear. Mr. Bronson tells of another man who was scalped at the same time he was. The scalp was torn completely off from the whole top of his head, so that it had to be swathed in cotton and olive oil. He lived a year, but, as Mr. Bronson says, "If ever a man knew what suffering meant, that man did."—Pittsburgh Dispatch.

TRUST no one, and put very little confidence in yourself.

ONLY A SWITCHMAN.

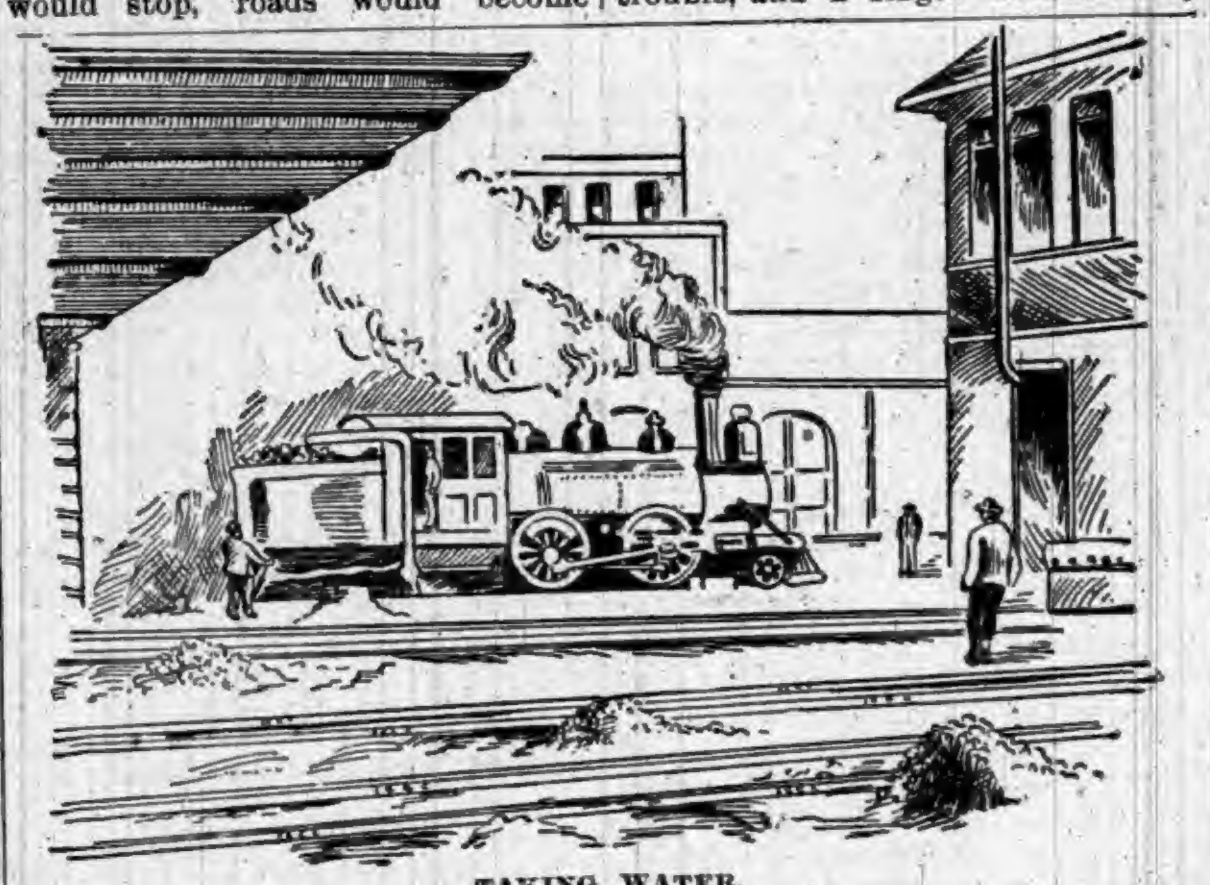
HE FACES MORE DANGER THAN A SOLDIER.

Making Up Long Trains and Guarding the Public—A Courageous Lot of Men Who Give Their Lives to Preserve Others—A Labor-Saving Device.

Thousands Killed Yearly.

Eight hundred thousand men find employment on the various railroad lines which traverse the United States, and of these fully one-fourth are stationed in the yards as switchmen. Of all the men who have anything to do with railroading there are none of whom the public know so little as switchmen. Did you ever notice the one-armed, one-legged man waving his red flag at the crossing? He is known as a flagman, but he was a switchman once, and there are many hundreds of others just like him.

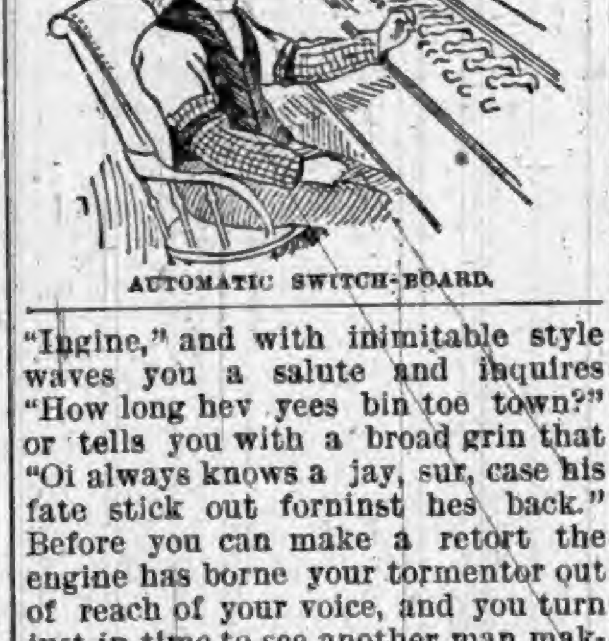
Did you ever see a one-armed man struggling with the patent lock of a switch, his empty sleeve fluttering in the wind? He is only tending switches now, but he once belonged to a switch crew, rode on an engine, and helped to make up the long trains which carried passengers and freight out of Chicago, says the Inter Ocean. It is a dangerous calling—this occupation of switchman, with meager chance of promotion and little recognition by the public, but it is a necessary and important one. They are as much a part of the road as the conductor, who takes charge of the train when it is made up, or the engineer who pulls it, for without them trains would stop, roads would become blocked, and traffic finally cease altogether. More than one thousand men are employed in this capacity in the yards about Chicago.



TAKING WATER.

Multifarious Duties.

No one can fully understand the multifarious duties which fall to the lot of switchmen without paying a visit to some one of the many yards. About the first man you meet will be a great brawny, ruddy-faced son of Ireland, who, in rich brogue, will order you out of the way of a moving locomotive (for you are almost certain to stand on the wrong track), and then sarcastically inform you that this is a "Toosda" or a "Winsda," and that the "Enginer" has a bit o' mind to use that particular piece of track. You realize the possibility of this and move. A second later your informant hops on to the pilot of the "Ingine," and with inimitable style waves you a salute and inquires "How long hev yees bin toe town?" or tells you with a broad grin that "Oi always knows a jay, sur, case his fate stick out forninst hes back." Before you can make a retort the engine has borne your tormentor out of reach of your voice, and you turn just in time to see another man making frantic motions and yelling at the top of his voice, "Gaet uff dose track, da anyan kum, ef yo wan a yob go by da mon, es is bethar es dese." You "gaet" just in time, and realize what a close call you have had as the iron steed with a clang and sputter of escaping steam rolls over the spot on which you stood just a moment before. You resolve to be more careful now, and walk between the tracks, but there is such a labyrinth of iron railing that only the experienced can recognize the betweens, and you walk on trying to look in four directions at once. A minute later a small house with an open space around it attracts your attention. The strain is too much for your nerves, and like the small boy making a frantic dash for the door to escape from the darkness, you rush for this house.



AUTOMATIC SWITCH-BOARD.

The Automatic Switch.

It is a peculiarly fashioned two-story affair, the top very much resembling a continuous bow window, to which ascent is made by outside steps. A stout, florid, well-built man is descending, and in a trice you have asked if you can go up. Turning his good-natured face to you, and taking a pipe from his mouth, he says, "Vhat ist dot?" The request is repeated, and a light shines in his eyes as he answers: "Kumen-see-de-haus-in. Oh! yah, yah," and then struts off among the moving cars, just as a man appears at the door above and invites you in. It occurs to you then that "Hans" has extended the invita- of his country, only you did not know it.

Once in the little house a good view of the yards can be had from all sides, and you commence to realize the danger which these switchmen brave in the performance of their duty. In and out, over and under the moving trains, waving their arms and shouting to the engineers, apparently with as little thought of their perilous position as a man on an ox cart, a happy lot, who seem too busy to let the cares of life worry them for a moment. The switchman's work is not all manual labor, though it is rough and dirty. He must be cool and quick of action at critical moments; he must have a perfect conception of force and distance, and be conversant with the time-cards of all the roads, for those in charge of the transfer trains often visit two or three yards during the day and must give right of way to regular trains.

Some of the stations built within the past two or three years are provided with automatic switch-boards, fashioned not unlike the old-time Gillian telephone board, and operated on the same principle. This is placed in the second story of the switch-house, where a view can be had of all approaches.

A Labor-saving Device.

Sitting before a long table containing a row of numbered levers one man controls the switches that let all trains in and out of the yards at the station. This is regarded as a labor-saving device by the railroad companies, and, though it costs more to operate, it dispenses with the services of six or seven switch tenders, placing the responsibility in the hands of two men and reducing the possibility of accident. At the older stations the old-time manner of managing the yards is still in vogue, and absolute dependence is placed upon the switchmen, who must throw the switches, make the couplings, and be responsible for the safety of all cars arriving or leaving the yards.

One of the most important duties is that of examining the condition of cars while making up trains, and reporting any defect. A weak or imperfect coupling is sure to make trouble, and a single accident may mean serious loss to many patrons of the road or a disturbance in the commercial world.

From 7 o'clock at night to 6 o'clock in the morning is the busiest time in the yard. Then they are making up the trains for the next day. All night long the engines puff and sputter and throw myriads of sparks from their stacks, dropping a car here and one there, like the mail clerk distributing letters, until the engines stand alone exhausting steam as if tired out with work.

A Perilous Life.

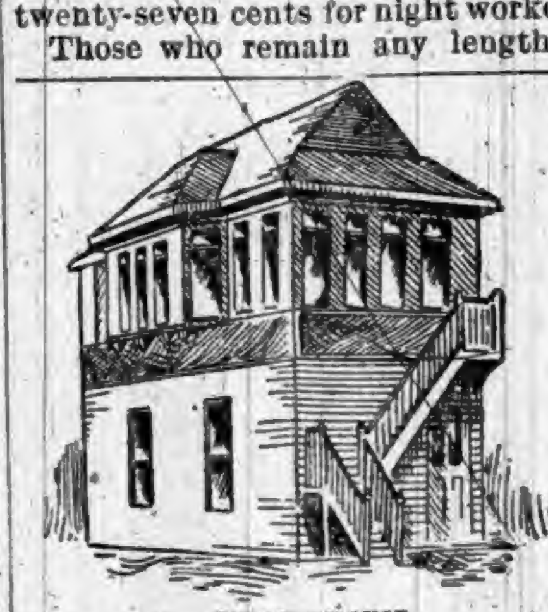
At night, too, the switchmen must be more careful. They must be ever on the watch lest a misstep throw them in the way of a moving car, resulting in the loss of a limb or, what is still more serious, life. Of the 28,000 employes killed and injured on the railroads the past year, fully one-third met with the accident while coupling or uncoupling cars. Statistics show that one man in every thirty who follows railroading meets with an accident, and the chances are about equal when one does occur that the unfortunate is a switchman.

In a law recently passed by the Legislature compelling railroads to equip their rolling stock with automatic brakes and couplers, the switchmen have some hope of lightening their labors and removing the possibility of accident. This will also tend to reduce the rates of insurance, a $500 policy being the most any company will take, and for which they charge the extortionate premium of $37.

An engineer, fireman, foreman, and two helpers constitute a switch crew, unless there is a grade, in which case two extra helpers are carried. When hired by the month they receive a salary of from $45 to $55, ten hours constituting a day, though they not infrequently work extra time when trains are late or the yards blocked. No regular hour is set for dinner and they are compelled to eat at odd moments wherever they happen to be.

These irregular hours and extra pay for overtime are the cause of the switchmen advocating a scale fixing the pay by the hour at the rate of twenty-five cents for day men and twenty-seven cents for night workers.

Those who remain any length of time at this employment do so because they can hope for promotion when occasion offers, or because they can find nothing better. This leads to a constant change of employes, which explains why the foreign element predominates, and why there is often more or less friction in their clans.



SWITCH-HOUSE.

Value of Nickel Metal.

Nickel is a metal of more importance than it used to be, since it has been discovered that combined with steel it makes the best and hardest armor for war ships, and these southern Oregon mines should not have been allowed to pass into the hands of an English syndicate. The nickel for the armor of the battle ships now building at Philadelphia is procured from Canada under a regular contract with the navy department. It is almost the only material entering into the new war vessels which is not produced in the United States.—Boston Journal.

TEN MEN WERE KILLED

DISASTROUS WRECK ON THE BIG FOUR RAILROAD.

Fast Passenger Train Leaves the Track and Crashes Into the Depot—All the Trainmen Met Death at Once—Others Killed on the Platform.

Brakes Wouldn't Work.

Ten men were killed and six were seriously injured by a disastrous wreck on the Big Four Railroad at Lafayette, Ind., at 1:30 o'clock Monday morning. The dead are:

E. D. Meyers, a mail clerk of Cincinnati.
A. R. Chadwick, mail clerk, Cincinnati.
Jesse H. Long, mail clerk, Lebanon, Ind.
Express Messenger McMahan, of Cincinnati.
C. S. Cahill, traveler, Indiana.
Otto Jesselson, Alhambra Hotel, Chicago, passenger going to train.
Mike Welsh, engineer, Indianapolis.
S. McInnis, fireman, Urbana, Ohio.
Charles Myers, bus driver, Lafayette.
John Lennon, driver mail wagon, Lafayette.

The injured are:

Lottas Burganhole, Milwaukee, Wis.
William Place, Frankfort, Ind.
Jeff Reese, Kempton, Ind.
Richard Jones, Pontiac, Ill.
Lewis Leffler, Fowler, Ind.
Richard Jones, Logansport, Ind.

The accident occurred at the depot on a sharp curve and was caused, it is thought, by the failure of the air brakes to work while the train was entering the city on a sharp down grade. The engine and three cars, including two mail coaches, one express car, and a combination smoker and baggage car, left the track while running at a terrific rate. The ladies' coach and three through sleepers did not leave the track. All the trainmen were killed. None of the passengers was injured. As the engine left the track it struck and instantly killed three men standing on the platform. They were Otto Jesselson, who had purchased a ticket and was waiting to board the train; Charles Myers, a bus driver; and John Lennon, who was in charge of the United States mail wagon at the depot. The dead that lay under the immense pile of wreckage were not removed for three hours after the accident, a wrecking train being necessary to do the work.

High bluffs rise on the west bank of the Wabash just opposite the city, and there is a long and steep grade at that point. The ill-fated train must have been a mile up the grade from the river when the engineer discovered that there was something wrong with the air, for the vigorous whistling of the engine for brakes could be heard when the train was still a mile west of the city. The engineer's desperate efforts to stop the train was shown by the large amount of sand thrown by him on the bridge through which the train came just before the fatal crash. The speed by that time had increased so terrifically, however, that its control was beyond human agency. With almost lightning-like speed the monster engine dashed around the curves and across the long bridge, although the man at the throttle had reversed the machinery, and immense streams of fire were being dashed from the driving wheels running in opposite direction to that of the swiftly flying cars that followed. Just after leaving the east end of the long bridge over the Wabash the tracks describe a semicircle, at the midway point of which the Union station is located. When the engine struck that sharp curve it left the track, followed by the cars in an awful swirl, and they piled upon each other 100 feet away, after crashing through train sheds and bringing down tons of structural iron to add to the terrors of the situation.

EXTRA SESSION SURE.

Finance and Tariff Engage the Attention of Congress.

The recent flurry in financial circles has revived the talk of an extra session, says a Washington dispatch. Before leaving for the West a few weeks ago Vice President Stevenson intimated that Congress would convene in September, and Mr. Cleveland has since stated to a couple of members of Congress that the extra session would be called between the 1st and 15th of that month. This information was repeated to Mr. Outhwaite, of Ohio, who called upon the President on Friday, and Mr. Outhwaite now entertains the opinion that the Fifty-third Congress will be in session continuously from September until the following June, barring the usual holiday recess in December. It is deemed probable that financial and tariff legislation alone will be sufficient to engage the attention of Congress until long after the December recess. The two questions will doubtless be considered as part of the same general problem, and to that end several of the administration leaders are already at work upon them.

DON'T BOTHER THE PRESIDENT

Mr. Cleveland Finds It Necessary to Establish a Few Rules.

The following has been issued by President Cleveland for publication:

EXECUTIVE MANSION.

It has become apparent after two months' experience that the rules heretofore promulgated regulating interviews with the President have wholly failed in operation. The time which under those rules was set apart for the reception of Senators and Representatives has been almost entirely spent in listening to applications for office, which have been bewildering in volume, perplexing and exhausting in their iteration, and impossible of remembrance. A due regard for public duty, which must be neglected if present conditions continue; and an observance of the limitations placed upon human endurance oblige me to decline, from and after this date, all personal interviews with those seeking appointments to office, except as I, on my own motion, may especially invite them. The same considerations make it impossible for me to receive those who merely desire to pay their respects, except on the days and during the hours especially designated for that purpose. I earnestly request Senators and Representatives to aid me in securing for them uninterrupted interviews by declining to introduce their constituents and friends when visiting the Executive Mansion during the hours designated for their reception. Applicants for office will only prejudice their prospects by repeated importunities and by remaining at Washington to await results.

DEATH OF MRS. C. M. DEPEW.

She Passes Suddenly Away at Her Home Sunday Afternoon.

Mrs. Elise Hegeman Depew, wife of Chauncey M. Depew, died at her residence in New York City at 12:30 Sunday afternoon. Although Mrs. Depew was known to be seriously ill, this sudden termination of her illness was not expected by her family and those who were most intimately connected with her. Her condition showed no material change Saturday, and early Sunday morning the turn for the worse came.

During the last two years Mrs. Depew has been an invalid. She never entirely recovered from an attack of the grip that she had during the epidemic two years ago. During the recent festivities at Fort Monroe, attendant upon the visit of the foreign warships, Mrs. Depew made a trip to that place in the hope of improving her health. This expectation was not realized, however. She became much worse and was brought home feebler than when she left.

Physicians Have Found Out

That a contaminating and foreign element in the blood, developed by indigestion, is the cause of rheumatism. This settles upon the sensitive sub-cutaneous covering of the muscles and ligaments of the joints, causing constant and shifting pain, and aggregating as a calcareous, chalky deposit which produces stiffness and distortion of the joints. No fact which experience has demonstrated in regard to Hostetter's Stomach Bitters has stronger evidence to support than this, namely, that this medicine of comprehensive uses checks the formidable and atrocious disease, nor is it less positively established that it is preferable to the poisons often used to arrest it, since the medicine contains only salutary ingredients. It is also a signal remedy for malarial fevers, constipation, dyspepsia, kidney and bladder ailments, debility and other disorders. See that you get the genuine.

A Serious Mistake.

An Illinois conductor tells the following story: "We pulled into Alton one day, and among other passengers to get aboard, were two very large colored people of the common 'persimmon class,' and very ignorant. As I came by taking up tickets, the old gentleman dug out two tickets from the deep recesses of his tattered vest, and as he handed them up, said: 'One of dese is foh me, the udder is foh her.' I looked at the tickets carefully, and then, turning sharply to the old fellow, I asked: 'Which is yours and which is hers?' The old man began stammering something, but the old lady cut him short by hitting him a terrific whack with her fist on the side of the head, exclaiming: 'Dar now, you ignorant niggah, I done told you yuh'd git us into trouble, and now you see yuh done got de law on us.'"

DON'T LISTEN to the dealer who is bent on bigger profits. The thing that he wants you to buy, when you ask for Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription, isn't "just as good." Proof of this is easy. The only guaranteed remedy for the ailments of womanhood is the "Favorite Prescription." If it ever fails to benefit or cure, in making weak women strong or suffering women well, you have your money back.

Anything "just as good," or as sure to bring help, could be, and would be, sold in just that way.

This guaranteed medicine is an invigorating, restorative tonic, especially adapted to woman's needs and perfectly harmless in any condition of her system.

It builds up, strengthens, regulates, and cures.

For periodical pains, bearing-down sensations, ulceration, inflammation—every thing that's known as a "female complaint," it's a remedy that's safe, certain, and proved.

A Gentleman.

I knew him for a gentleman
By signs that never fail;
His coat was rough and rather worn,
His cheeks were thin and pale—
A lad who had his way to make,
With little time for play—
I knew him for a gentleman
By certain signs to-day.

He met his mother on the street;
Off came his little cap.
My door was shut; he waited there
Until I heard his rap.
He took the bundle from my hand,
And when I dropped my pen,
He sprang to pick it up for me,
This gentleman of ten.

He does not push and crowd along;
His voice is gently pitched;
He does not fling his books about
As if he were bewitched.
He stands aside to let you pass;
He always shuts the door;
He runs on errands willingly
To forge and mill and store.

He thinks of you before himself;
He serves you if he can;
For in whatever company
The manners make the man.
At ten or forty, 'tis the same,
The manner tells the tale;
And I discern the gentleman
By signs that never fail.

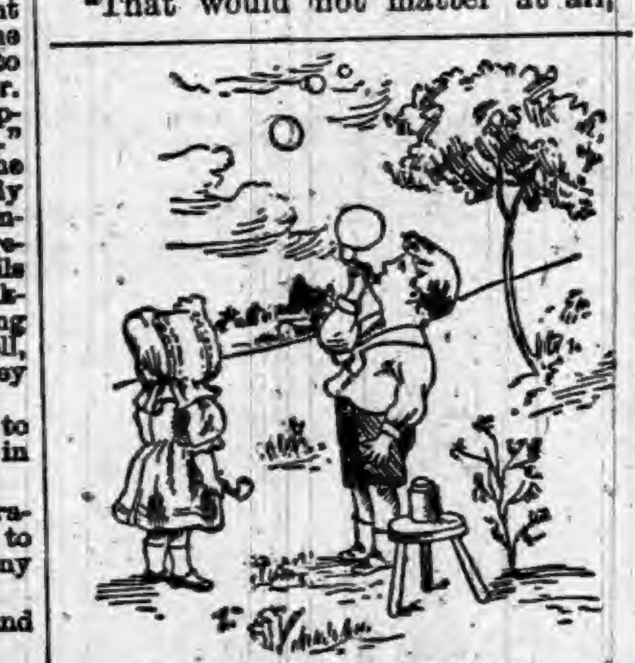
Paul and the Soap Bubble.

Two children were blowing bubbles. Paul said, "My bubbles are larger than yours, Mattie."

"You are bigger than I am," replied little Mattie, "so you ought to make bigger bubbles out of your pipe, and my pipe is only a little one."

"My bubbles are pink and yellow and all colors, and they go sailing away into the sky like balloons. Oh, Matty! Perhaps our bubbles are fine balloons for the fairies to ride in. That pink-looking one is so large that I think it must be full of little fairies going to the golden land, where the sun goes to bed."

"But Paul, the fairies would tumble out, for the bubble has just burst," said Matty.



BLOWING THE SOAP BUBBLES.

"That would not matter at all," replied Paul, "for fairies have wings and would fly the rest of the way."

"I can't see any fairies, and I don't think they are there," said Matty.

"That is because you are not a Sunday child. Nurse says that only children born on a Sunday can see fairies—and you were born, she says on a Tuesday."

Matty looked unbelieving. "And can you see any fairies, Paul?" she asked.

"No," said Paul, "but I have read so many tales about them that I can think what they are like, and I often make little stories about them in my mind."

"Tell me one of them, Paul," said Matty.

"Well, go on blowing bubbles, for that makes me think of them." So Matty blew several little bubbles that rose into the air, while Paul blew such a large one that Matty gave a shout. "Hush, Matty!" said Paul. "The fairy princess is asleep in the large bubble, and many court ladies are with her, singing to keep her asleep, for they do not want her to wake till she gets up to that little cloud up there. You can't see it, but inside that cloud is a golden castle. They have taken a large thrush with speckled breast prisoner, and will not let him go till the princess has come home."

"What has the thrush done?"

"The thrush thought the princess was a butterfly, and he was just going to pounce upon her when a wood pigeon, who knew better, drove him off, and drove and drove till they came to a cloud, and then the fairies seized upon him. They will keep him till the princess is safe at home, and then he will fly away."

"Oh, dear! oh, dear! the great bubble is bursting!" said Matty; and so it was. And at that moment a thrush on the tree behind them began to sing. "Oh, dear! oh, dear! Is it the thrush from the golden castle?" asked Matty.

"I dare say it is," said Paul, "and the princess is safe at home."

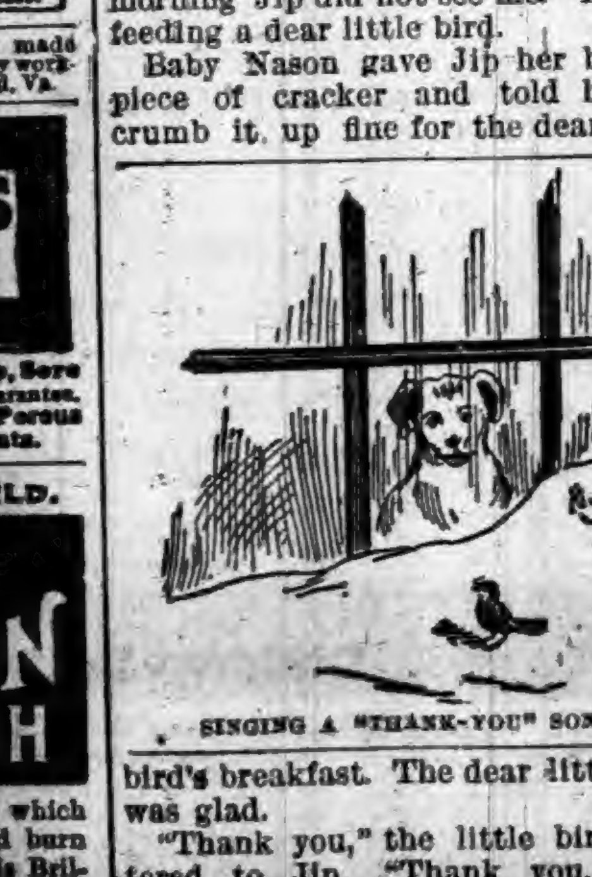
"How glad the king and queen must be!"

"Yes," said Paul, "and all the fairy people!"—Exchange.

Jip and the Bird.

Every morning when I go to Baby Nason's house Jip is looking out the window. He always smiles in a nice doggie way and nods his head. This morning Jip did not see me. He was feeding a dear little bird.

Baby Nason gave Jip her biggest piece of cracker and told him to crumb it up fine for the dear little bird's breakfast. The dear little bird was glad.



SINGING A "THANK-YOU" SONG.

"Thank you," the little bird twittered to Jip. "Thank you, thank you, thank you."

Then the dear little bird sang Baby a pretty "thank you" song, and Jip held the cracker in his mouth until the little bird was ready to eat the good breakfast Baby Nason sent out. I hope the dear little bird will come again.—Babyland.

New Game for Children.

"Hunt the Whistle" is a new game for little folks. It requires a certain number who are ignorant of the game. Those who know it make a large ring. The others leave the room and are admitted one at a time. At a signal one enters. She is told to enter the ring, kneel down and confess to the mother confessor. She kneels and buries her face in the mother confessor's lap. She is then asked some questions that bear on her likes and dislikes, her friendships, faults, or some other actions, as "Who ate the frosted cake?" This question gives time to fasten on to the back of her dress a whistle attached to a string. She has, of course, denied the charge. She is then asked to prove her innocence by discovering who blew the whistle. As she goes around the ring the children steal up behind her and blow the whistle. The sound is always behind her, and her frantic endeavors to trace the sound are funny enough. As soon as the trick is discovered a fresh victim is ushered into the ring.

How Persian Boys Wait Upon Guests.

If you enter a merchant's house in Persia or pay a visit to a Persian nobleman, the master of the house offers you coffee just as soon as you are seated. If you stay an hour, he will give you one, two or three cups. The coffee will be brought in by young boys, who bow low and lay their hands upon their heart as they present it to you. The coffee will be served in cups of Persian porcelain, which are handed to you inside of other cups of metal, to keep them from burning your hands. The outside cup is called a zarf. It is made of copper, silver or gold, heavily set with precious stones. The Persian lads who serve the coffee stand behind the chairs of the guests, so as to politely replenish the cups as soon as they are emptied.

Ingenious Kaffir Boys.

The Kaffirs are great swimmers. They can do things in the water which other boys would look upon with astonishment. For example a Kaffir boy could ford a stream, shoulder-high, running as swiftly as if shot from a torrent. The way they accomplish the feat is this. Just before entering the water they get a huge stone, sometimes as heavy as themselves, and with the help of a companion place it upon the head. A weight like this gives the boy balance and he can keep his footing against the heaviest stream. If he were to drop the stone, he would be so light that the water would sweep him off his feet. And this is just one of the Kaffir tricks to accomplish things against tide and flood.—New York Ledger.

Scientific Modes of Execution.

"Tying weights to a boy's legs in hanging him, so that the drop will break his neck, is something that a New Jersey Sheriff has just thought of," said L. F. Dunn, of Philadelphia, to a St. Louis Globe-Democrat reporter. "He is to hang a youthful murderer who only weighs 92 pounds, and he says he will have to fasten ten pounds to each of the young fellow's legs to furnish weight enough to dislocate his vertebræ. This sounds pretty inhuman, doesn't it! But I once saw a heavy executioner in Turkey slide down the rope and fall on the suspended man's neck with all his avoirdupois to break the spinal column. Of course, it was a barbarous proceeding. The most careful and conscientious executioner I ever saw was near the dividing line between Turkey and Russia. I was riding through some woods when I suddenly found myself in a clearing before a cabin. A man was at the door tying a thread around a sheep's neck. I asked him why he was doing that. He picked up a cleaver, and, with a quick blow, cut off the sheep's head, making the cut exactly along the line of the red thread. 'You see now,' he said, 'why I did it. I tied that thread between two joints so that there would be no bone to offer resistance to the passage of the blade.' 'But why do you slaughter sheep in this way?' I asked. 'Come to-morrow to ——, (naming a near-by town) and you will see.' I was in the town the next day, and met the sheep-slayer. He was a public executioner, and he had a man to behead that day. I saw him do it. He had a sword with a curved blade. The blade and hilt were hollow, and there was quicksilver in the space, so that when the weapon was held aloft the quicksilver ran down into the hilt and steadied the hand, but when the sword was swung down the quicksilver ran to the end of the blade and gave added weight and impetus to the blow. The doomed man knelt and bent his head forward. The executioner tied a red thread carefully around the bared neck, and with one swing of the weapon cut off the head. It was a clean, scientific cut between the vertebræ, and the unfortunate man, I presume, never felt it."

An Indiscreet Hunter.

Patrick and Michael went out hunting one rainy day—it was the only day that they could get off. All went well with them until, when they were several miles from home, they discovered that neither one had brought a cartridge, and that not a shot could be fired.

"Begorra," said Pat, cheerfully, "what's that to do wid the huntin'? Is the want of a cartridge anny rayson to prevint a man from huntin'?"

"None at all," said Michael.

So they continued to hunt. By and by a rabbit started up close to Pat and then came to a stop, curiously watching the hunters. Pat instantly brought his gun to his shoulder.

"The gossoon that ye air!" exclaimed Mike. "Wud ye shoot him widout a carthridge?"

The rabbit hopped away.

"Whisht!" said Pat, angrily, "there ye go, shpilin' the sport wid yer blatherin' tongue!"

"Patrick! An' yer gun was not loaded!"

"Sure, ye spalpeen, but the rabbit would niver 'a' knowed is it ye'd hild yer blather!"

Obeyed Orders.

One of the worst cases of a literal mind is reported by the Chicago Mail:

A guest hurried up to the hotel clerk's counter. He had just ten minutes in which to pay his bill, reach the station and board his train.

"Whew!" he exclaimed. "I've forgotten something. Here, boy, run up to my room, B 48, and see if I have left my tooth-brush and sponge. Hurry; I've only five minutes now."

The boy hurried. In four minutes he returned, out of breath.

"Yes, sir," he panted. "You left them."

U. S. Government Baking Powder Tests.

The report of the analyses of Baking Powders, made by the U. S. Government (Chemical Division, Ag'l Dep't), shows the Royal superior to all other powders, and gives its leavening strength and the strength of each of the other cream of tartar powders tested as follows:

	LEAVENING GAS. Per cent.	LEAVENING GAS. Cubic in. per oz.
ROYAL, Absolutely Pure,	13.06	160.6
The OTHER POWDERS TESTED are reported to contain both lime and sulphuric acid, and to be of the following strengths respectively,	12.58	151.1
	11.13	133.6
	10.26	123.2
	9.53	114.
	9.29	111.6
	8.03	96.5
	7.28	87.4
	4.98	65.5

Royal Baking Powder is absolutely pure, and of greater leavening power than any other powder.

Greatest Ruins in the World.

George Curzon, the English member of Parliament, recently returned from a seven months' tour of the far East, and in giving a Pall Mall Budget man an account of his wanderings said that he had visited the ruins of Angkor, an ancient Chinese city, with remains of the most magnificent and stupendous character. He photographed the temple of Angkor Wat, which, it is supposed, was built by the Kumers, who came from India between A. D. 700 and 1100. The ruins of these temples and palaces, Mr. Curzon thinks, are the most remarkable in the world. They are situated in the midst of a tropical forest. The forest growth is so thick that to approach them it is necessary to cut a way with billhooks. So dense was the undergrowth that the journey to some of the ruins was made in darkness. So little is known about them and so thoroughly are they hidden by the forest that many of the people in the neighborhood have forgotten the actual site.

Hotel Swindling by Telephone.

A Paris hotel-keeper is lamenting the loss of $100, which was extorted from him under exasperating conditions. He was telephoned by a person who pretended to be speaking from the Prefecture of Police, and who stated that a swindler who was being shadowed by the police would shortly present himself at the hotel with a claim for $100 on some pretext or other. The person telephoning added that the hotel-keeper was to give the money, and that the swindler would be arrested on leaving the hotel. The instructions to pay were acted on, and the clever swindler, who had telephoned to his victim himself, walked quietly off with the $100. It is believed that he belongs to the Paris police force.

Must Earn His Fee.

Dr. Pighead visits Mr. Coldham, the great pork manufacturer.

"Well, my dear sir, I don't see that there is anything radically wrong with you. Go to bed early, don't drink anything stronger than coffee, and you'll be all right in a week."

"What! Are you not going to give me any medicine?"

"Certainly not. You don't need it."

"But you get your money just the same."

"Yes. Just so."

"Well, I don't think it is a square deal. S'posing you put a mustard plaster on the back of my neck and gimme a dose of medicine. Everybody that works for me's got to earn his salary."

Gold Underfoot and Gold Overhead.

Nuggets of gold, nearly as large as those they take from their orange trees, are occasionally picked up from the ground by ranchmen about Wheatland, Yuba County, Cal. The "Four Corners" notes the recent finding of two chunks of solid gold by Mr. W. P. Lipp, of that place, at different times during the past four weeks, whose aggregate value was $766. We challenge the world to show another place where golden nuggets may be gathered both from the orange trees themselves and from the soil they grow in at the same time. Gold above and gold below! Wheatland against the world.—California Fruit Grower.

Both Were Shocked.

The custom of wedding harmonious strains to inferior verse sometimes causes amusing complications. A London newspaper relates that not long ago Queen Victoria was greatly charmed with a piece of music performed by the band playing in public at Osborne, and sent one of her attendants to learn the name of the piece. The attendant came back and reported, with some embarrassment, that it was entitled "Come Where the Booze is Cheaper."

SHERIFF'S SALE.

By virtue of an execution to me directed from the Clerk of the DeKalb circuit court, in a cause wherein the First National Bank of Auburn, Indiana, is plaintiff, and the Auburn Creamery Company is defendant, requiring me to make the sum of one hundred and twenty-two dollars and eighty six cents, with interest on said judgment and costs, I will expose at Public Sale, to the highest bidder, on

Saturday, May 20, 1893,

between the hours of 10 o'clock a. m., and 4 o'clock p. m., of said day, at the door of the Court House in Auburn, DeKalb county, Indiana, the rents and profits for a term not exceeding seven years, of the following real estate, to-wit:

Lots numbered ten [10], eleven [11], twenty-six [26] and twenty-seven [27] and improvements thereon in Shaffer, Robbins & Boland Addition to the town of Auburn, situated in DeKalb county, state of Indiana.

If such rents and profits will not sell for a sufficient sum to satisfy said judgment, interest and costs, I will at the same time and place expose to public sale the fee simple of said real estate, or so much thereof as may be sufficent to discharge said judgment, interest and costs. Said sale will be made without any relief whatever from valuation and appraisement laws.

Dr. Townsend & Brothers Coming.

As seen by advertisement, these eminent Doctors will be at the Swineford House, Auburn.

MAY 16th.

Among many testimonials we find these: I had spinal curvature that doctors told me was incurable and I am now well. Another said: I was given up by fourteen doctors, who told me I had Bright's disease of the kidneys, but thanks to Drs. Townsend I am a well man. Another: I was bedriden for over ten years with a complication of female diseases. Some of the most eminent specialists, including three professors in medical colleges, and they all told me I could not get well. Four years ago I placed my case in the hands of the Drs. Townsend, and in 5 months and 4 days from the time I commenced treatment I dressed myself and walked across the room, and in another month I felt as well as I ever did in my life and have remained in excellent health ever since. Another says: I had epilepsy for fifteen years and was cured. Another: My whole nervous system was broken down and I was practically an old man at 31. I could not sleep, my hands trembled, I would get dizzy and forgetful and became so bad that I had to give up business. I consulted many doctors, the best I thought, in the country, and finally went to Europe, and spent over $9,000 and three years' time and was no better, but gradually got worse. I returned home to die and closed up all my business affairs. At last a friend, who had been cured, advised me to go to the Drs. Townsend. Without any faith, but to please him, I went, and to my great surprise they told me they could cure me, and they made good their word, for from the first dose of medicine I commence to improve, and in twelve months I was completely cured. A lady says: My case was pronounced to be tubercular consumption by seven of our best physicians, and under whose treatment I got worse all the time. The Drs. Townsend cured me in just four months. One says: I had catarrh that affected my head so I was almost crazy. It went into my ears, and oh! such a roaring, I was almost wild; it had gone down also upon my lungs and the doctor said it was the bronchitis. Thanks to the Drs. Townsend I am entirely well. Another says: I was cured of a bad cancer. A lady of great refinement, who had received serious injuries during a confinement, was cured after other specialists utterly failed. Thousands of cases similar to the above might be cited.

Examination by letter or in person free, and sacredly confidential. If unable to see the doctors write full particulars. Thousands treated by correspondence. Address, with stamp:

Mrs. Fred Roby, of Chicago, will visit Mrs. Stevens this week.

Rev. J. M. DeWeese preached last Sunday evening in the M. E. church to a full house.

The school entertainment last Saturday evening was well attended, as they usually are.

Mrs. Blair was improving the pleasant day Saturday by visiting several parts of town in a tricycle chair. Miss Blair accompanied her mother.

Mrs. Nill, of Toledo, and Mrs. Heller, of Ft. Wayne, after visiting Mrs. Phil Morell for several days, returned to their homes Monday of this week.

There is said to have been a big fight on Wayne street some time Sunday, liquor and gambling the first cause of it. The parties engaged in it were arrested.

Daniel Stroh has left the farm to his newly married son, while he and his wife take up their abode in town. Mr. Stroh has purchased Mr. Abbey's property on the right hand of South Wayne street.

Fruit trees are loaded with buds just ready to bloom, and yet it is not a fixed fact from that circumstance that this will be a fruit year. The buds and blossoms were fully as abundant last year, when we had very little fruit, or none at all.

Mr. and Mrs. Benajah Long go to Chicago the latter part of next week to meet Mrs. Dora Long and son Clarke, of California. After spending a week in visiting the fair, they will all come to Waterloo, where Mrs Long will remain some time visiting relatives and friends.

Will Getz is at work on some of the tin roofs in town putting them in shape to defy leaking. It seems to be pretty well demonstrated that asphaltum on the tin roofs to prevent leaking is not a success, and yet when once on it is a great labor and expense to get it off.

The L. M. C, at their meeting Tuesday evening of last week, at the home of Mrs. Rena Smith, elected the following officers: Chloe Kennedy, president; Olive C. Jackman, vice president; Mrs. Plum, secretary; Mattie Maxson, treasurer; S. C. S. Winslow, critic; Emma Keep, custodian of queries.

The School of Methods for the W. C. T. U. will assemble in Waterloo Thursday and Friday of next week, May 18 and 19. The meetings will be held in the Presbyterian church. Programs of the exercises will be circulated through the town, and an invitation is extended to all who are interested in the cause of temperance to be present.

Mrs Eliza Patrick of Leipsic, Ohio, who has been visiting relatives, and especially her brother, Geo. McDougle, returned to her home Monday. Mrs. Henry Lawson accompanied her as far as Ft. Wayne.

The Ashley Puzzle.

Ashley should all be in DeKalb county, as the confusion arising from having one part of an incorporated town on one side of a county line, and the other part in another county is bewildering. The two county school superintendents are already having difficulty to arrange the school children. The town board will find it awkward to have part of the trustees living out of the county, and so on in many things. School children will have to be transfered from one side of the county line to the other, and the Ashley school board will be found transferring scholars from itself to itself. The school board, may be made up of citizens of different counties, so that a part of them will be doing public business in a county where they are not citizens. The school house will be on one side of the line, while part of the pupils will be on the other. The school taxes of one county will have to be paid over into the county that has the school house. The town taxes will likewise be mixed up. The whole thing is a puzzle, in more ways than we have time to study up or name. It can all be made easy by annexing a small piece of territory to DeKalb county.

A USEFUL INVENTION

Brief Description of an Article Patented by S. R. Heberling.

[From the Fremont Eagle.]

Mr. Heberling, proprietor of the Hilton House, has just been granted a patent for a device which will render the proverbial family stove-pipe as inoffensive as any other article of furniture. The invention consists of a combined collar, face plate and soot-chamber to be attached to a chimney already built or built into the chimney while being put up. The upper part is a collar with a semi-circular piece in its upper side, which is pressed down upon the pipe by a set screw, not only holding it firmly in its place so that it can neither pull out nor be pushed too far into the flue, but preventing smoke and soot from escaping into the room. About six inches below this, and connected to it by a face-plate, is a receptacle for the soot and ashes which always gather in a chimney. This consists of a drawer, which is made of sufficient length to reach to the farther side of the chimney, and may be pulled out and emptied at any time, making it unnecessary to take down the pipe every few months for the purpose of cleaning the flue. In attaching the device to a chimney already built, it is only necessary to chisel out an opening in the chimney to receive the soot drawer; the face-plate is then is firmly clamped on by means of bolts extending through a bar placed across the inside of the chimney. Where a chimney is built with a view to attaching the device, the inner part of the casting is walled in and the face plate bolted to that.

The fact that stove pipes, by the vibration of the floor, will work out of the flue, and that chimneys will become clogged with ashes, is a source of much danger and annoyance. The most superficial observer cannot fail to see the advantages secured by Mr. Heberling's attachment. It is made of cast iron, weighs only four or five pounds, is handsomely finished and polished, and is ornamental in its appearance. Mr. Heberling will take pleasure in showing the device to anyone interested. We believe he has not yet decided in what manner he will place it upon the market, though he has had several applications from parties desiring to handle it. The patent was issued April 18, 1893, and is numbered 495,887.

There can be no question as to the practical utility of the invention, and its general adoption, as it can be manufactured at a very low price. It is also entirely alone in that particular field, there being, so far as we know, nothing else used for the same purpose.

Total Number of Prizes for this County, 226.

CAUTION.—No Tags will be received before January 1st, 1894, nor after February 1st, 1894. Each package containing tags must be marked plainly with Name of Sender, Town, County, State, and Number of Tags in each package. All charges on packages must be prepaid.

READ.—SPEAR HEAD possesses more qualities of intrinsic value than any other plug tobacco produced. It is the sweetest, the toughest, the richest. SPEAR HEAD is absolutely, positively and distinctively different in flavor from any other plug tobacco. A trial will convince the most skeptical of this fact. It is the largest seller of any similar shape and style on earth, which proves that it has caught the popular taste and pleases the people. Try it, and participate in the contest for prizes. See that a TIN TAG is on every 10 cent piece of SPEAR HEAD you buy. Send in the tags, no matter how small the quantity. Very sincerely,

THE P. J. SORG COMPANY, MIDDLETOWN, OHIO.

A list of the people obtaining these prizes in this county will be published in this paper immediately after February 1st, 1894.

REMARKABLE CURES OF AUBURN AND VICINITY

For the past four years the afflicted have been flocking in great numbers to see him, and they always return filled with the greatest enthusiasm, and the stories they tell of his remarkable diagaose and wonderful cures border on that of the miraculous. One says, "I went there on crutches and came away without them." Others say they had been sick and suffered for years, and they were cured. To see him and to be treated by him means health.

He asks no questions but gives a full history of each case as soon as he sees the patient, telling better how a person feels than they can tell it themselves. His knowledge seems perfect and his medicines are specific. They never fail. The work he accomplishes is truly astonishing.

There is no need to live in constant misery. It cost nothing to see him. The fullest examinations are free. A cure can be had for the mere cost of the medicine. He is the sick man's friend and no one is turned away unaided.

Mr. Ward says his eye sight was so bad he could hardly see. He now feels that he could dispense with his glasses. The Docter performed over twenty cures on his last visit. He will forfeit $5 00 for any case of cataarh he cannot cure. An eye witness to a lady who was helped to the doctor's room four weeks ago, is now doing her own work

Miss Irene Williams cured of chronic cough and lung disease.

Miss McMilien cured of blood and skin disease of 14 years standing.

Miss L. M. cured of female weakness after exhausting all medical aid,

A tape worm removed from a prominent lady on Main street after doctoring several months for stomach trouble.

MORE CASES REPORTED CURED.

Bright's Disease of the Kidneys, 2; Heart Disease, 2; Rheumatism, 4; Catarrh and Bronchitis, 7; Consumption, 2; Skin Diseases, Sore Limbs and Ulcers, 9; Female diseases, 11; Dropsy of the Heart and Blood diseases, 3; Mrs. W. R. Crow cured of a sore limb of long standing; Samuel Kitchen cured of a skin disease of 18 years standing, after being doctored by several of the eminent physicians; Mrs. S. A. The Old Liberty Bell

We find the following interesting clipping in a late copy of the Lagrange Register:

"At this time a brief history of the famous liberty bell will be found interesting. The liberty bell was cast in London in 1752 by order of the Pennsylvania assembly for use in their state house. The bell reached Philadelphia the following year, but it cracked without any apparent reason when it was rung to test the sound, and it was neccessary to have it recast. This was done by Philadelphia workmen, and in June, 1753, it was again hung in the belfry of the state house. On July 4, 1776, when the continental congress declared the colonies independent of Great Britain the bell was rung for two hours, so the story goes, by the old bellman, who was so filled with enthusiasm and excitement that he could not stop. It was taken down when the British threatened Philadelphia in 1777 and removed to Bethlehem, Pennsylvania, but was returned to the state house in 1778, and a new steeple was built for it. A few years afterward it cracked under the stroke of the hammer and although an attempt has been made to restore its tone by sawing the crack wider it has been unsuccessful. During the world's fair in New Orleans in 1885 the bell was sent there for exhibition.

It left Philadelphia January 24, in the charge of three custodians appointed by the mayor of the city, who did not leave it day or night until it was returned in June of the same year. The train carrying the bell was preceded over the entire route by a pilot engine. The following words are incribed around it. "By order of the assembly of the province of Pennsylvania, for the state house in the city of Pennsylvania, 1752," and underneath, "Proclaim liberty through all the land unto all the inhabitants thereof—Levit. xxv. 10." Its weight is about 2,000 pounds.

Chicago the Main Exhibit.

It has been truly said by a talented correspondent of the London Times, that in the great Colambian Exposition, the City of Chicago will form the main exhibit. Never in the history of city building has there been such marvelous developement. London and Paris were each a thousand years old before Chicago was dreamed of. At the time of the Great Fire, 1871, Chicago was a city of somewhat over 30,000. The Great Fire swept through the city, destroying the entire business portion, and one-third of the resident district, converting a busy city into a wilderness of ashes a ruin, between two successive sun sets. Now, after twenty-one years, she is completely rebuilt with the largest aggregation of elaborate and costly buildings to be found in any part of the world, and has added over a million to her population during this time. It is especially fortunate, and many of our readers will be glad to know, that there is on exhibition on Michigan Ave., in the World's Fair City, a Cyclorama of the Great Fire in which the scenes and incidents of that fearful calamity are faithfully, and in a most realistic manner, presented for public view. From the central platform of this remarkable exhibition one may see a thousand acres of crumbling walls and red hot ruins; a thousand acres more a literal sea of fire, while tens of thousands of panic stricken people are fleeing for their lives. It is a scene of awful grandeur and indescribable confusion, and is said to be the most elaborate and expensive work of art ever produced. Let one stand within it and view the wreck ruin and disaster about him; see what Chicago was twenty odd years ago, then take a walk through the busy streets of the city to-day and he will have seen two pictures the like of which history furnishes no parallel.

The Preservation of the Forests.

[C. W. Whitney, in Harper's Weekly.]

While the protection of game has occupied the public mind for a considerable time, the preservation of our forests has had comparatively but recent attention. The past five years especially have seen more done in this direction than probably the previous ten. President Harrison and his Secretary of the interior, Noble, brought their influence to bear in the good work, with the most satisfactory results. By their efforts alone no less than fifteen timber reserves were established, which included 1,239,000 acres adjoining the Yellowstone Park; 4,000,000 in central California; 1,337,000 in southern California; 4,000,000 in Colorado; 967,000 in Washington; 1,850,000 in Arizona, comprising the grand canon of the Colorado river, the site of the most rugged and magnificent scenery probably in the world; 311,000 in New Mexico; and 142,000 in Oregon—altogether upwards of 13,000,000 acres.

Such an example by the government has had its effect on the states, and the general agitation of the subject has done much for the cause, not only in preservation of timber land, but in the protection of game.

Of all the states that have taken up the grand good fight none has accomplished so much as New York, and no single official has done so much as Governor Flower. Too much praise cannot be given Mr. Flower for lifting the matter of forest-preservation out of politics. It is to his efforts alone, it may be said, that the "Forest-Preserve Bill," recently passed by the New York Legislature, received the serious consideration it merited. He alone, of all in political power appeared to grasp the necessities of the case, and in doing so he responded to the earnest desire of those who want to see the forests perpetuated in good order. What these great breathing-spots are to the people any one who studies the situation must realize. It is a subject of general rejoicing that they have been finally secured.

Covered Her Face with Magnetic Mineral Mud.

"What for?" smilingly queried the lady, of the reporter who was questioning her. "What for, indeed!" why it makes my skin soft, pure and beautiful; it takes the wrinkles out, and the action of the Magnetic Mineral Water baths, make me young again. I have found and so many of my friends, in the wonderful magnetic mineral mud and water baths of the Indiana Mineral Springs, "the Fountain of perpetual Youth,"

This great resort for health, pleasure and beauty, is on the main line of the Wabash railroad. Send to F. Chandler, Gen. Pass. Agt., Wabash R. SIX SPASMS A DAY.

Dr. Miles Medical Co., Elkhart, Ind.

GENTLEMEN: I never lose an opportunity to recommend Dr. Miles' Restorative Nervine to any one afflicted with nervous complaints with the assurance that it will not disappoint them. When our boy was eighteen months old he was attacked with violent spasms. Sometimes he would have five or six spasms in a single day. WE TRIED MANY PHYSICIANS WITHOUT BENEFIT; finally our druggist recommended Dr. Miles' Restorative Nervine. We tried a bottle, and could see that he was BENEFITED FROM THE FIRST DOSE. We used three bottles, and I am happy to say the child was ENTIRELY CURED. We used no other remedy, and his cure is complete. He is now three years old and perfectly healthy. You are at liberty to use my name in SOUNDING THE PRAISE OF THIS WONDERFUL REMEDY.

The Libby Prison War Museum.

Of the many attractions outside of the World's Fair in Chicago, there are but few in which there is so much interest centered as there is in the Libby Prison War Museum. In 1889 this celebrated prison was removed from Richmond to Chicago and converted into a war museum. The project was undertaken by a syndicate of the best known business men of the city whose enterprise was conceived in a commercial spirit, but has attained a national reputation. A project such as this was never before heard of. To move a brick and stone building the size of Libby more than a thousand miles, across rivers and mountains, was an enterprise that many of the best known contractors in the west refused to undertake at any price. But the move was made with success. Then the famous old structure was filled with war material that represents the work of a lifetime and the expenditure of half a million dollars. The great collection is conceded to be second to none in the country and includes much of the most valuable material that the greatest civil war the world has ever known has left to posterity. The collection includes thousands and thousands of relics of every description, many of which form important links in the history of the nation. The old building itself is fraught with interesting memories and the story of the celebrated tunnel escape of Feb. 9, 1864, never fails to interest the visitors. One hundred and nine Union officers made their escape through that tunnel, which formed one of the most thrilling events in the history of the war.

The Crucifixion at Chicago.

No event in the history of the world is is so far reaching in its results and influence as the Crucifixion of the Savior, and no spot on earth is so rich in historic interest and tender association as Jerusalum and her environments. probably more people have a desire to visit the Holy Land, and Jerusalem in particuler, than any other place in the world. What a matchless subject for a grand Panoramic production wherein shall be shown, not alone the scene of Crucifixion, with the surging multitude of scoffers, the small and almost panic stricken party of friends of the Savior, but also the ancient city gorgeous for the festival season, the great temple, palaces, walls, the whole city fairly alive with people from the country round about. This great scene, 50 by 400 feet high, is now being produced, and will be ready for public view by May 1st, on Wabash ave. and Hubbard Court, Chicago, where it will remain as one of the leading down-town attractions during the World's Fair. The work is in the hands of Messrs. Reed and Gross, who produced the World's Famous Cyclorama of the Chicago Fire, now on exhibition in that city.

$40 Found.

MR. EDITOR:—California is a lovely country, the sick get well, the poor get rich, cyclones and frosts are practically unknown. A hundred to three hundred dollars per acre is made each year on fruits with irrigation. The California Land and Water Exchange, of Dayton O., control large quantities of land in California, which they plant cultivate, pay taxes for ten years, paying you $40 per year as your part of the profit, they keeping the balance for the care and cultivation. They give an acre of land away with each 4 certificates. All they ask you to do is to pay for the irrigation, which can be done in small payments each month. They will send you the names of 90 persons who last year received from $25 to $500 on one year's investment. President Harrison says, "half of the good things of California have not been told." The Hon. Jeremiah Rusk says, "Truly California is a poor man's paradise." To five-acre holders the California Land and Water Exchange of Dayton, O, give a free return ticket to view the property. Why should any one be poor when such a chance remains open and you do not have to do any labor or work to get the profits and do not have to leave home. A Delightful Book—Ik Marvel's Dream Life.

Not many books by American authors will receive from book-lovers so nearly unanimous a verdict of "delightful" as Ik Marvel's [Donald G. Mitchell] "Dream Life"; so the new edition of it, reduced in price from $1.25 to 20 cents (postage 5 cents extra) just now offered by John B. Alden, Publisher, is sure of an immense sale. It is a very pretty volume, large type and dainty cloth binding, notwithstanding its fabulously low price, which is accounted for by the expiration of copyright and the passing into Mr. Alden's hands from the higher priced publishers. Mr. Alden's Catalogue of Choice Books, 128 pages, issued monthly and sent for a 2-cent stamp is a veritable "literary gold mine." Address, John B. Alden, Publisher, 57 Rose Street, New York.

Not so Strange.

So many people wonder and ask themselves, why it is that among so many cough syrups, Dr. Marshall's Lung Syrup, is so far superior for coughs. This is not so strange for this medicine was a life-time study of Dr. Marshall and perfected by him while searching for his own health, the purest drugs are used in its manufacture, hence the results. The only way we can convince you of the true merit, of this medicine is for you, to give it a trial, it is guarranteed to give satisfaction. Price 25, and 50 cts and $1. Sold by druggists and dealers.

Alva Gage has presented to the Unitarian church of Charleston, S. C. a handsome brick parish house costing over $11,000.

Will You do This?

We ask you to try Dr. Marshall's Lung Syrup is a cough medicine that it has not proved beneficial, return the same to the druggist you bought it of, and he will return the same money paid, you cannot ask for more, this medicine is the best cough syrup in the market and for la grippe or influenza it has no superior. Will you give this cough syrup a trial, you will certainly not regret it. Price 25 and 50 cents and $1. By druggists.

Cured Cholera Morbus.

While Mr. T. J. Bichey, of Altona, Mo., was traveling in Kansas he was taken violently with cholera morbus. He called at a drugstore to get some medicine and the druggist recommended Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhea Remedy so highly he concluded to try it. The result was immediate relief, and a few doses cured him completely. It is made for bowel complaint and nothing else. It never fails. For sale by Robbins & McCord.

AUBURN AND VICINITY.

Some Reminiscences of its Early Day and Pioneer Citizens.

1870—Continued.

The uncertain issues of the Auburn Times so sensibly affected its patronage that the publisher Emory Higley experienced a growing difficulty in providing means from a poverty of resources for its continuance. The need of a live newspaper at Auburn and the field for an energetic publisher attracted outside attention and when with the issue of No. 28, Vol. 2, July 7, of the Air Line, J. F. Radcliffe retired and James A. Barns became the publisher and editor of that promising paper as an organ of democratic sentiment, it was expected that he would remove to Auburn and then issue the sheet,

Such had been his original intention in the expectation that the Auburn Times would be sold and taken away but this not being the case, the Air Line continued to be published the remainder of the year in a room of the Abbey Block in Waterloo.

On August 4, the paper was enlarged and evidently gave satisfaction to an increasing number of subscribers. Early in September Mr. Barns purchased the subscription list of the Auburn Times, but not the material and with its suspension Auburn for the last time was without a newspaper and the Air Line became the only democratic paper in the county.

On the last week in December Mr. Barns sold the Air Line to Thomas C. Mays, by whom it was to be removed to Auburn.

As the practical founder of the Courier which has so long been the exponent of democracy in this county as well as the advocate of all measures conducive to the welfare of Auburn under his management, Mr. Barns merits as he receives the hearty support of the community.

He is a native of Onondago county, N. Y., and in common with thousands was brought up on a farm. Educated at Hillsdale college Mich., he became a teacher in the schools of Laporte county, Ind., and of Berrien county, Mich. Following two years as principal respectively in the High schools of Wolf Lake, Pierceton and Ligonier, he came in Aug. 1869 to Waterloo of whose schools he was for a year the principal, when wearied of the uncertainties of teaching, he bought the Air Line and changing its position from independent to democratic, engaged in the political campaign of 1870. He succeeded W. H. McIntosh as county school examiner in 1871 when the official term was three years, became county superintendent in June 1873 and served as such till 1879 and again from 1881 till 1883 since which he has given his time to the editing and publication of the Courier.

Interested in pioneer life, the columns of this paper freely offered, contain many an obituary biography of departed early settlers. Knowing the vicissitudes of teaching from long experience in schools, the common school teacher has ever found in Mr. Barns a sincere friend and space has never been been refused for reports concerning schools. While decided in political views, he is not extreme in partisanship and commands the respect of acquaintances and patrons by conservative and dignified journalism.

The campaign of 1870 was spirited and manfully contested. It closed with an election that gave the county officers to the democracy by an average majority of about sixty, so closely at this time was political sentiment divided. Of officers chosen were Wm. McIntyre, of Corunna, for Auditor; Frank Ryan for treasurer and Jeremiah Plum for sheriff.

In the democratic convention, the name of George Kuhlman had been presented for auditor and received strong support when it is considered that the unwritten law of public sentiment limits the incumbent of that desirable office to a single term.

Mr. McIntyre received the nomination, and shortly following his election, purchased what was known as the Wyllys Griswold property on Seventh St. for a permanent residence, and has ever since identified himself in official and business interests with the fortunes of Auburn.

C. P. Houser who had exemplified Terre Haute Normal theories by successful teaching in district schools became for a time deputy auditor, and the antiquated wheel-shaped device for computation of taxes, used at times in the office as compared with the tax rate sheets now employed, is in marked contrast with the improved methods of book keeping at present in vogue.

Mr. Ryan a pleasant and sociable man conducted the routine of his office without especial incident, sending funds as they were received for safe keeping to Ft. Wayne banks as precaution against the perils of his predecessor and the consequent litigation and innuendo. At the close of his term, he remained for a while in Auburn and engaged in business but finally exchanged property with John Butt and removed to Waterloo.

Uncle Jerry Plum now well advanced in years and justly proud of having seen his son Philip occupy the same office a score of years later, was elected sheriff and became custodian of the old jail whose exterior and interior alike were a reflection upon the public spirit of the people and called for its displacement by a structure more in harmony with public need and local progress.

Railroad construction often employs men of low and turbulent instincts and criminals accompany the progress of public improvements to prey upon the unwary; this increased the responsibility of the sheriff and filled his cells with hardened characters, calling for increased vigilance, despite which escapes were effected and on one occasion nearly cost the officer his life when a desperado, known as "Michigan Bill" had nearly brained him by a cowardly blow, in his successful break for freedom.

The county commissioners were Daniel Gonser, who later become treasurer; George Ensley, a wealthy farmer and a prominent resident of Auburn and William Richmond, a once well-to-do farmer resident in the eastern part of the county.

Obituary.

Elijah S. McDowell, the subject of the sketch, was born in Wayne county, Ohio, April 18th, 1825, died May 11th, 1893, aged 68 years and 23 days. He was a son of John and Mary A. McDowell.

He received a good education completing it at the High school of Dalton, Ohio. He lived on the farm with his parents till 1850, when he went to California, where he remained four years engaging in mining the greater part of the time, returning to Ohio, where he followed agricultural pursuits till 1862 when he moved to DeKalb county, Ind., where he lived till his death.

Mr. McDowell was married May 29th, 1855, to Mary Ann George. Mr, and Mrs. McDowell have had eight children, five of whom survive him. He has been a member of the Presbyterian church since 1857. He had been sick for a long time, and for some time past confined to his bed. His end was not unexpected to his large circle of friends. Mr. McDowell had a wide acquaintanceship, and was highly regarded. He served his township two terms as trustee, which office he filled with ability. The funeral was at the home in Richland township at 1 p. m. Sunday May 14. Rev. G. W. Healy conducted the services. The burial was in Evergreen cemetery.

The Fashionable Rest Cure.

It's not the least uncommon event, nowadays, to receive, in one's post, cards, not to teas or to bid farewell, but to acquaint friends that Miss or Mrs. Extravagant has retired to Dr. So-and-so's sanitarium. They regularly take to their beds, and rest. They enjoy absolute mental and physical repose, put themselves on a careful diet, have a low voiced maid read aloud from the latest novels ignored for social duties all the remainder of the winter; and have in, three times a week, a masseuse, a manicurist, and a hair dresser. They are rubbed, polished, and coddled, to their hearts' content, and come out of the rest cure whole and happy, and quite recovered from the effects of late hours, imprudent eating, and too much dancing.—From "Society Fads," in Demorest's Family Magazine for June.

EVENTS OF INTEREST

THAT OCCURRED DURING THE PAST WEEK.

Another Lynching on Hoosier Soil—Escape of Convicts from the Jeffersonville Penitentiary—The Crop Report—The World's Fair Will Open Sundays.

REPEATED THE ACT!

Another Lynching Occurs on Hoosier Soil.

Seymour (Ind.) special: Lou Trenck, who murdered Henry Faedler, was hanged at Brownstown by a mob from this place. The lynching party was composed of the same men who hanged Tooley recently. At midnight an engine and two cabooses were loaded with a large party. The train was on the Ohio and Mississippi Railroad. The run to Brownstown was made quickly. Arriving at the place the men had to walk a mile to the jail. The Sheriff had left the jail and the guard had no keys. The doors were battered down with sledge hammers. It took the men only a few minutes to get Trenck out. He was taken to the west side of the Court House, where he was asked if he had anything to say. He replied he did not think he was receiving fair treatment, and begged God to bless his soul. The noose was placed over his head and the rope was thrown over the limb of a tree, and the murderer was pulled skyward.

The crowd returned to this city. The heavily masked and well armed men who participated in the lynching were well pleased with their work. The murderers of Price and Faedler having been hung, the people are satisfied.

Escape of Convicts.

Four of the most desperate criminals escaped from the Prison South at Jeffersonville, Ind. The men are Robert Adams (six years), of Jackson County; Nathan Bell (nine years), of Hancock County; William Nelson (five years), and Frank McCarthy (six years), both from Jackson County. They were confined in cells No. 17 and 18, ground floor, cell house A. The two inmates of No. 17 removed the stone floor of the cell, and the men in No. 18 broke through the wall into No. 17. They tunneled out into the yard, making a tunnel twenty-two feet long and two feet in diameter, and about two feet underground. The dirt which they took out they put in sacks, which they hid during the day in the tunnel. They must have been at work many months, using knives to cut the dirt and then carry it out in their hands. After they were out in the yard their escape was easy, no guards being on the outside of the wall at night, and the wall consisting only of a board fence.

The Crops.

The following bulletin of the weekly crop report has been issued:

Indiana—Weather more favorable to crops and farm work; much corn planted; wheat is jointing; rye heading; oats, grass, and fruit in good condition.

Michigan—Wheat, grass, and clover have improved rapidly; all kinds of fruit promise well.

Ohio—Condition more favorable. Much plowing and planting done. Oats and corn not all planted. Wheat, oats, grass, clover, timothy, rye, pastures, meadows, tobacco, and potatoes improved. Fruit blooming. Prospects good. Gardens backward.

The Sunday Opening.

Chicago special: The Directors of the World's Columbian Exposition have decided to abrogate their contract with Congress by which they bound themselves to close the fair on Sunday in consideration of an appropriation of $2,500,000. The money will be returned to the Government and hereafter the fair will be opened Sundays. This course was decided upon at a special meeting of the Directors. When the roll was called on the resolution there were but two votes opposed, those of Hamson and Camp.

Teamsters at Indianapolis Strike.

All the union teamsters and laborers in Indianapolis (about 2,000) are on a strike. All public street work is at a standstill. The contractors and representatives of the union have been in conference for several days, but have been unable to agree upon a scale. The men demand eight hours. The police are kept busy going from place to place and keeping down incipient disturbances. A few non-union men are working and are being hissed and hooted by the strikers.

Appealing to the President.

The officers of the American Sabbath Union, which claims to represent 20,000,000 Christians, have telegraphed to President Cleveland, requesting him to take steps to prevent the proposed opening of the World's Fair on Sunday.

Disposes of Pinkertons.

Governor Rich of Michigan, has signed the bill fixing the qualifications of deputy sheriffs. This prevents the appointment of Pinkerton men by sheriffs as deputies.

Wreck on the Pan Handle.

In a freight wreck on the Pan Handle at Frazeysburg, Ohio, caused by the breaking of an axle on a draw bridge spanning the canal, two tramps, names unknown, and Brakeman Frank Forsythe of Steubenville, were killed.

Damaged By Fire.

The establishment of O. F. Day, Son & Co., Baltimore, was badly damaged by fire. Loss, $100,000; insurance, $70,000.

Cyclone in Michigan.

A cyclone passed two miles east of Pickney, Mich. It first struck the barns and outbuildings of Louis Dryer, completely destroying them. His orchard was also destroyed. The cyclone next struck the premises of William Thompson and William Placeway, half a mile farther east, destroying all their farm buildings, orchards, windmills, etc. All the members of both families were injured, but it is said that none are seriously hurt. Many horses and cattle were killed. One mile east from Placeway's farm the house and out buildings of John Fitche were struck and completely wrecked, not a post remaining standing. The family, consisting of seven persons, were all injured, but none seriously.

VAN LOON WEAKENS.

The Columbus Grove, Ohio, Bandit Finally Gives Up.

Frank Van Loon, the daring young bandit confined in the Penitentiary Annex at Columbus, Ohio, under sentence to hang July 7, has confessed his crime. That it was he who robbed the Columbus Grove Bank and murdered old Farmer Vandemark there is now no longer doubt. The confession is made for the purpose, if possible, of modifying the decree of justice under which he stands in the shadow of the gallows. He hopes to interpose certain technical points in connection with the motive for the killing that might secure him a commutation of sentence to life imprisonment.

While the details of his admissions are kept secret, it is known that he has acknowledged his guilt to three respectable citizens. To these persons he has said he was in Columbus Grove on the day preceding the commission of the crime, and that he got the money taken from the bank. This is a practical admission of everything—a confession of the robbery, with a reservation as to the murder of Farmer Vandemark. On this point there is no doubt as to the killing, but the degree of the crime furnishes a theme for debate in the minds of many familiar with all the circumstances. Van Loon has virtually confessed to the killing, but when the full text of his declarations on this subject are made public it will probably present a technicality. He has already confessed to getting the money, and since only one person was concerned in the crime—the actual execution of the robbery—his full confession must naturally admit the killing of Mr. Vandemark, but with the claim that it was not first degree murder in the meaning of the law. The confession will claim that he had no intention of killing the farmer; that there was no malice aforethought, and that the shot which took his life was accidental. This claim will be supported by reference to the fact that the ball took effect low in the body, to sustain the claim that the revolver went off when the robber accidentally dropped his hand.

HELD UP A TRAIN.

Bold Road Agents Rob an Express Car.

Passenger train No. 6, on the Mobile and Ohio Railroad, was held up by four train robbers near Laketon, thirteen miles south of Cairo, Ill. When the train stopped at the water tank one mile south of Laketon, Messenger Ray heard a man climb upon the platform, and pounding on the door, ordered him to open it. The messenger surmised it was a train robber and told him to "go to h—." The robber then placed a stick of dynamite under the door, and exploding it, blew out a panel. The explosion scattered all the small packages of envelopes, etc., in every direction and filled the car with smoke. The robber then pushed a Winchester through the aperture and commanded Messenger Ray to unlock the door. The messenger at first refused, but when the robber told him he would kill him if he did not hurry, he obeyed the request and the robber entered the car. He had a red handkerchief tied across his face, completely hiding his features. One of his accomplices stood guard on the platform with a shot-gun and two other confederates kept the train crew at a distance. The man who entered the car went directly to the safe, the door of which was unlocked, and rifled it of all packages and envelopes supposed to contain money or valuables. Both robbers then jumped from the car, and joined by their companions, disappeared in the darkness.

GOVERNMENT ROUTED.

Revolutionists Are in Control of Nicaragua.

Washington special: The Nicaragua revolutionists have practically overthrown the government and are in complete possession of the Nicaragua Canal. A dispatch received at the State Department confirmed this.

The dispatch was sent from San Juan Del Sur, a port on the west coast of Nicaragua, by Mr. Newell, Consul at Nicaragua, which in substance is that the revolution commenced April 28, headed by ex-President Zavalla. The revolutionists hold Grenada, Managua, Rivas, Contales, Matagalpa, and San Juan Del Norte. The Government forces number 2,000 poorly organized and led, while the well armed revolutionists number from 3,000 to 5,000, commanded by prominent generals. The Government's force made three unsuccessful attacks on Managua. Martial law has been declared and a decree has been issued for a forced loan of $600,000.

It is learned from another authentic source that the revolutionists are in possession of the Nicaragua Canal, and it was on this information contained in the dispatch from Mr. Newell that Secretary Gresham applied to Secretary Herbert for another vessel to be sent to Nicaragua.

CUBAN FILIBUSTERERS

Preparing to Sail from Florida's Shores.

Key West special: The revenue cutter McLane, Captain Littlefield commanding, which was telegraphed for by order of the Secretary of the Treasury to return to this port immediately on account of the demonstrations of the Cuban filibusterers here and reports of an expedition being fitted out to sail for Cuba, has arrived. Her commander had a conference with the collector of customs, the result of which could not be ascertained, but no liberty to officers or men was granted.

Boats were lowered and armed and every preparation made to intercept any boat or vessel entering or leaving the harbor. A force of customs house officers nightly patrol the south beach with a code of signals arranged between them and the cutter. The McLane is under steam and ready to slip her moorings and steam out at the signal. The federal officers here say that they have reliable information of preparations to send an expedition from here, or one of the adjacent islands, to Cuba, and are of the opinion that the attempt will soon be made.

AN INDIANA LYNCHING.

John Terrell Met Death at the Hands of a Mob at Bedford.

At 2:10 o'clock the other morning a mob of 100 men appeared before the jail at Bedford, Ind., forced the sheriff to give up the keys, and took John Terrell, who murdered Conductor L. F. Price at Seymour, from his cell and hanged him in the jail yard. Terrel begged for his life, but his appeals were met with silence. The lynching was conducted in the most orderly manner, Terrell's cries being the only sound heard.

After lynching their man the mob requested that the body not be taken down until daylight, after which it dispersed. The mob hanged Terrell to a tree in the jail yard, within twelve feet of the railroad track, so that all passing trains could see his body. He was dressed as though he had been expecting them. There were forty-three men at the jail masked and about fifty or sixty standing guard at different points over the city.

Columbia Bank to Resume.

At a meeting of the board of directors of the Columbia National Bank of Chicago, all but one of the directors being present, after full discussion of the affairs of the bank it was unanimously resolved to resume business at an early date, and committees were appointed to perfect the plan outlined and to immediately carry into effect the course determined upon.

Plenty of Power.

A syndicate has been formed in New York with a capital of $4,000,000 for the construction and equipment of a line between Niagara Falls and Albany, N. Y., for the transmission of electric power generated by the Niagara Falls Power Company with the waters of Niagara River passing through wheel pits in a tunnel, which has just been completed. The tunnel is 18,000 feet in length and 24 feet in diameter. The Niagara Falls Power Company has expended nearly $5,000,000 in its development at the falls and consumed nearly three years in the work. It now seeks a market for the electric energy thus generated. Stations are to be erected to regulate the voltage.

Dynamite Outrage.

Considerable consternation has been raised in the city of Valencia, Spain, by a dynamite outrage, apparently intended to strike terror into the aristocratic families of that city. A dynamite cartridge was exploded at the door of the Colegio Lorete, which gives entrance to a school attended by young ladies belonging to the most select families of Valencia and vicinity. The door was shattered by the explosion and the inmates of the school were thrown into great terror by the affair, which is attributed to the anarchists, who are growing more active in Spain.

Idiot Immigrants Barred.

Superintendent Herman Stumpf, with the approbation of Secretary Carlisle, has made a new and important ruling, overturning former practices as to the admission of idiot immigrants when accompanied by their parents. He holds that it was the intention of the act to make each class of debarred immigrants separate and distinct. It debars an idiot absolutely, and the fact that the idiot might have a private fortune or relations amply able to provide for his wants cannot be taken into consideration.

Burning Bonds.

Washington special: The recent recommendation of Acting Register Smith for the destruction of $125,000,000 of unissued registered four and a half per cent. bonds of the funded loan of 1891 has been approved by the Secretary of the Treasury and the bonds will be destroyed. The story in circulation to the effect that the bureau of engraving and printing was quietly printing some bonds with the view of issuing the same shortly is without foundation. No bonds save the 3.65 district bonds have been printed for some time.

Destructive Fire.

Half of the village of Spring Lake, a short distance from Grand Haven, Mich., was destroyed by fire. The steamer Barrett, in passing up the river, set fire to a sawdust pile by sparks from her smokestack. A stiff gale was blowing, and in an hour the greater part of the residence portion of the town was burning. The Baptist and Methodist Churches, an engine house and a school-house were burned, together with about fifty houses. Eighty families are homeless. The loss will be about $80,000; insurance not yet known.

Will Open on Sunday.

On and after May 21 the World's Fair ground will be open every Sunday. This decision was reached at a meeting of the directors of the exposition. After considerable discussion a resolution was proposed to open the gates every Sunday on and after May 21, and to close the main buildings containing the exhibits. The resolution was carried by a vote of 22 to 7. Of the seven who voted nay, six were in favor of opening the Fair in every department, and the seventh was opposed to opening the gates under any conditions.

Postoffice Robbery.

The postoffice at Rushville, Ind., was entered the other night. Admission was gained through the rear door. The safe was drilled into the top and the door was blown off. The burglars secured $410 in cash from the money order department, $400 in stamps, $20 in stamped envelopes. Five registered letters were taken from a sack, which was cut open.

China to Retaliate.

Rev. J. S. Baldwin, for twenty-two years a Methodist minister in China, says that if the Chinese are shipped from this country to China simply because they are here without taking out certificates, Americans in China will be likewise deported from that county to the United States.

Constitutional.

The United States Supreme Court through Justice Gray, has sustained the decision of the New York courts in favor of the constitutionality of the Geary exclusion act. Justice Brewer dissented.

Fatally Injured.

A tramp who was walking along the Pennsylvania tracks at Fort Wayne, Ind., was struck by a passenger train and fatally injured. His head was crushed and one leg mashed. He cannot recover.

Three Killed.

A Philadelphia and Reading engine exploded on the Lebanon Valley Road at Reading, Pa., killing the engineer, Levi Yodum, and two others.

HOW WORK GOES ON.

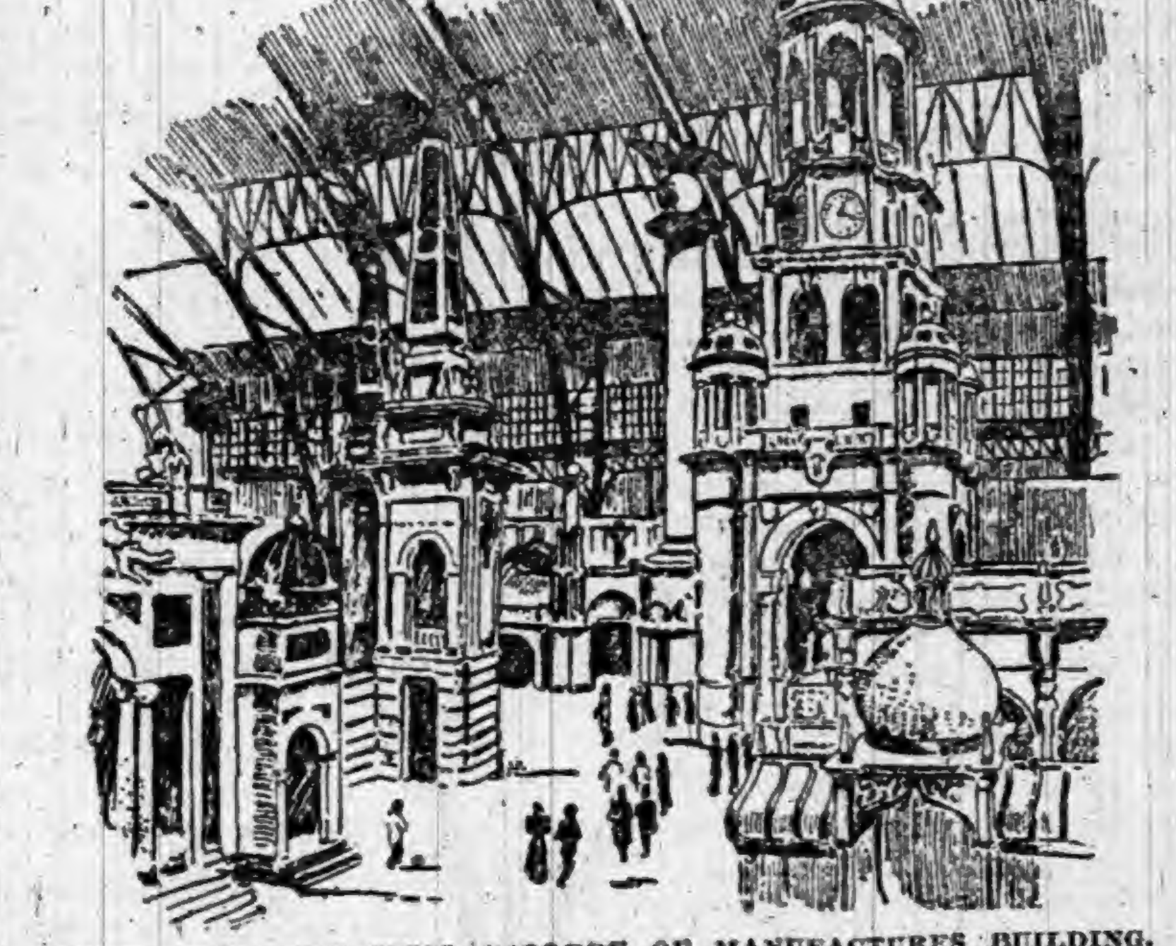
PROGRESS AT THE WORLD'S FAIR NOT RAPID.

Exhibits for Many Departments Seem to Be in Slow Hands and Many Days Required for Complete Installation—Details of the Big Buildings.

The Week at Jackson Park.

Chicago correspondence:

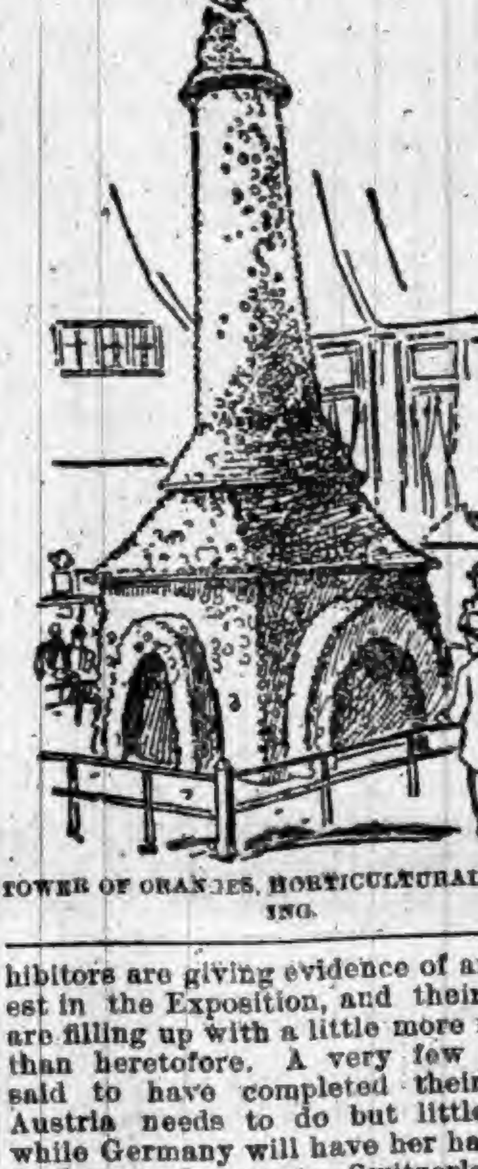
Progress in the installation of exhibits in most of the World's Fair buildings is being made much more slowly than there was reason to expect on the opening day of the Exposition. The promises of several of the chiefs that the mechanical work would be completed and the refuse cleaned out within ten days will not be fulfilled. At the present gait it is doubtful if the sound of hammer and saw shall cease to be heard within twice the promised ten days. This prolonged delay can no longer be charged to the railroads; about everything which will be shown on the Exposition grounds is within reach. There are no labor troubles and no burdensome exactions from the Exposition management. Every exhibitor is free to make haste. He did hurry before the opening, but he seems to be making life as easy for himself as possible. The weather at present is most favorable for manual labor, and there are too few people in any building to cause the least interference. Some work is done at night. The chiefs of every building say they cannot get sufficient light and refuse to issue any peremptory orders for night work. The exhibitors will not incur the additional expense of overtime labor bills until they are compelled to. In Manufactures Building Great Britain is in most presentable shape. This is accounted for, in part, by the fact that she built no elaborate pavilion or facade, as Germany and France are doing. As in the American section, each exhibitor has acted independent of all others. But, unlike the American, the British exhibitor constructed his pavilion or booth at home, and it came along with the exhibit. On arrival there was nothing more to do than put it together and arrange the goods within it. This has been quickly done, and the visitor may walk through the British section and see as much now as he ever will here of the products of the three isles over the sea.



VIEW FROM THE WEST GALLERY OF MANUFACTURES BUILDING.

The Canadian Display.

Canada was induced by Chief Allison to inclose her space, which appropriately adjoins that of the mother country, and there is no mistaking her typical facade on Columbia avenue. Within there is a display of manufactured articles, but the American idea that quantity is more impressive that quality apparently prevailed. France moved so slowly with her staff ornamentation as almost to seem not to move at all. French exhibitors have tired of waiting for the completion of the ornamental work and are installing their wares in the rear of it. But they find it necessary at once to surround their boothes with canvas to keep out the staff dust, and visitors get little benefit from them, to say nothing of the fact that they are almost inaccessible. These goods are of the choicest kind, and peculiarly attractive to Americans because of their artistic excellence. The exhibitors profess to sell only by sample, or with the reservation that the goods cannot be removed until after the close of the Exposition, as the rules of the Fair require. But they are permitting customers to take away almost anything they are willing to pay the big prices for when the customs officers are not on watch. American exhibitors are giving evidence of an interest in the Exposition, and their booths are filling up with a little more rapidity than heretofore. A very few may be said to have completed their work. Austria needs to do but little more, while Germany will have her hands full for many days yet. Switzerland can sit down and wait for sightseers in her completed pavilion. Belgium, just across the street, is ready for guests. Other countries have little to exhibit except unopened boxes and miscellaneous debris—not including Japan in this category, which is more than half ready.

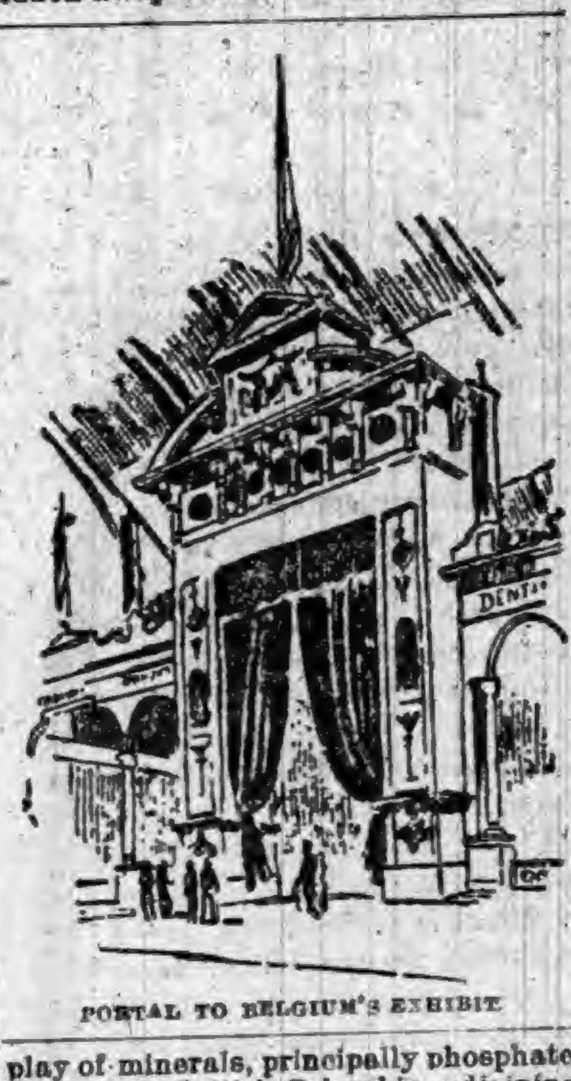


TOWER OF ORANGES, HORTICULTURAL BUILDING.

Educational Exhibit Advanced.

The educational exhibit is well advanced, and some things in it will bear close inspection. This is especially true of that of Pratt Institute, of Brooklyn. This is an industrial school, and the specimens of work in all the practical arts are excellent. They show what a pupil in school can be taught to do in architecture, building, plumbing, iron work, millinery, dressmaking, etc. The exhibit is presented with good taste. The Chicago educational exhibit, if present at all, has hidden its light under a bushel; no one has been able to find it. Leaving the sections of the gallery assigned to Great Britain, France, Germany, and Austria, there is much vacant space to fill, although it is said to have all been assigned.

In Mines and Mining Building New South Wales presents an exhibit the most nearly complete of those from foreign countries. Germany and Austria are getting into shape slowly, excepting the great display of the former near the center of the building. Quebec is hidden away behind Ontario with a display of minerals, principally phosphates and mica. British Columbia, adjoining, strikes the visitor with amazement by an exhibition of what appears to be a pyramid of gold ingots, some ten feet high and five or six feet square at the base. On closer examination the blocks prove to be cheaper than dross, for they are nothing but bronzed plaster. The pile is supposed to give a comprehensive idea of the province's production of gold, as the bars represent in bulk the amount of refined gold sent to market since the mines have been systematically worked. The compound value is $52,000,000. England shows a good deal of coal, one piece weighing fourteen tons having been installed. South Africa has a large space inclosed and a model of a mill set up, but no exhibits opened. Mexico is inclosing the largest individual space in the building, and has her cases ready to be filled with minerals. Chili is already prepared to give a good idea of the nitrate industry. She boasts of the fact that 1,050,119 tons of this mineral were exported in 1890. Samples of crude nitrate and as prepared for a fertilizer are in place.



PORTAL TO BELGIUM'S EXHIBIT

In the agricultural building Wisconsin is ready to entertain visitors and Iowa nearly so. The incomplete exhibits at the end of next week in this building will be the exception and not the rule, as in some others, if work proceeds as rapidly next week as it has this. It is already second in popularity to Manufacturers building, apparently; a crowd of visitors lingered in it all day and reluctantly withdrew at night.

The big engine in Machinery hall is turning a thousand wheels, and an air of early completeness pervades the building. In spite of the delay in handling the ponderous machinery there is a prospect of a finished exhibit before many days. Electricity may be able to reach a specified point in a very short space of time, but the installation of the machinery and appliances through which it operates is slow beyond comparison. Apparently, the Electricity building will be last on the list for the visitors.

Transportation building has no new surprises, but is monotonously slow in some departments. The carriage exhibit is about complete and of a high order.

WEATHER BUREAU BULLETIN

In Most Localities the Seeding Season Is About Ten Days Behind Time.

The Washington weather bureau has issued a bulletin of the progress of the crops for the past week, of which the following is a synopsis:

New England—Season cold and backward; frost not all out of ground in north.

Maryland—Fruit in some sections reported injured by heavy rains, high winds and frosts; wheat, rye, oats and grass improved; potatoes and tobacco plants thriving.

Louisiana—Crops show improvement, but are becoming grassy; some complaints of lice in cotton and worms injuring corn; sunshine needed.

Texas—Favorable for cotton and corn; cotton planting delayed by continued dry weather in west portions; early wheat being harvested.

Missouri—Crops advancing slowly; fruit prospects improved.

Illinois—Conditions beneficial to wheat, but retard other crops; fruit prospects improving; plowing and corn planting making fair progress; thousands of acres of wheat still submerged and will probably be a total loss; season about ten days behind.

Indiana—Crops on uplands look well; low lands yet inundated; fruit backward, not much injured.

West Virginia—Wheat, oats, grass, rye and tobacco growing finely; promising reports relative to fruit; stock in good condition.

Ohio—Wheat, oats, grass, rye, barley, and tobacco made slow growth; early potatoes rotting; fruit promising; strawberries blooming.

Michigan—Crop conditions continue backward, owing to wet and cold; plowing for corn is in progress in most southern counties; fruit prospects excellent.

Montana—Warm weather during past two days very beneficial.

Wyoming—Weather too cold for anything to grow and too damp for farm work.

Arizona—Melons, figs, and strawberries ripe; other fruits promise well.

Utah—Crops have not been much injured, although set back, and with good warm weather will do well.

Washington—Winter wheat doing fairly well; grass is improving more rapidly and stock is looking well; all fruit trees but apples are in bloom except in Wahkiakum County; prospects very good for large crop in most sections.

California—Grain crop short; cherries, prunes, almonds and berries average; peaches two-thirds and apricots one-third crop; hops improving rapidly; sugar beets in San Bernardino, Orange and Monterey Counties good.

Wisconsin—Seeding will be finished this week and corn planting begun; season very late; no damage except slight rotting of seed.

Minnesota—Seeding general; grass and early sown grain doing nicely; low lands in central and northern districts still too wet; fruit trees budding; some corn planted.

Iowa—Large acreage ready for corn, and planting begun in southern districts.

MISS ANNA ENGLAND, aged 26, of Medora, was found dead, near the O. & M. tracks. Supposed to have been killed by the cars.

AMOS HEWITT, aged 78, had his skull fractured at New Albany, by a piece of wood flying from a lathe and striking him in the forhead.

ONLY $5,000 of the necessary $10,000 to keep the Y. M. C. A. from disbanding at Richmond could be collected, so the organization is a thing of the past in that city.

DEPUTY PROSECUTOR THOMPSON of Knox, has filed twenty-one cases against the L. I. & I. Railroad Company for its failure to bulletin trains, at Stark County stations as provided by the law of Indiana.

A SON of Henry Hileman, aged 11 years, was killed at Diskoe. He had climbed on a freight to ride and fell between the cars, the wheels passed over both legs, necessitating amputation. During the operation he died.

AT Madison, Alfred Lockard, an old soldier of the Fourth Ohio Cavalry, was found in an unconscious condition and died soon afterward. He had just received his pension money and is believed to have been drugged and robbed.

THE dead body of Elmer E. Wolf of the Marion Soldiers' Home, was found in Deer Creek, near the home. He is supposed to have been drowned when trying to cross the stream. He had been a member of Company B, Eighth Missouri Infantry.

WILLIAM SPRINGER of Fortville, is constructing a novel threshing machine which is designed to cut the bands and do its own feeding and stacking the straw, thus doing away with more than half of the help required with the old style separators.

A RUNAWAY team at Flora dashed into a carriage containing Philip Voorhees and a little 2-year-old grandchild. Mr. Voorhees died soon after the accident and the child was fatally injured. He was one of the most prominent farmers in Carroll County.

MRS. CHARLES JOHNSON, aged 48, while crossing the track of the Big Four Railroad at the east end of the depot platform, at Batesville, was struck by an engine and instantly killed. She was the wife of one of Batesville's most prominent citizens.

MAJORS CENTLIVRE and Friend, the newly-appointed members on the Governor's staff, were tendered a banquet at the Fort Wayne Club the other night. Both were presented with costly swords, with which to defend themselves during their military terms.

THE statement has been made that Wabash College was not represented at the World's Fair. This is incorrect. In the educational departments there are twenty interior and exterior views of the college buildings and fifteen in the Presbyterian department.

JOHN HOBE of Elkhart, has a genuine $8 bill issued by the United States of America in 1778. It is good on its face for eight Spanish dollars, but Mr. Hobe has refused a standing offer of $200 for his prize. He claims that it is the oldest specimen of United States money in existence.

HIRAM CURRY, the little son of Dr. H. M. Curry, of Grandview, had a narrow escape from drowning. He and his Newfoundland dog were playing on the large iron bridge over Big Sandy River, when the boy fell off the bridge into the water, a distance of thirty feet. He sank and rose the second time, when the dog sprang off the bridge and rescued him.

AT Mitchell, Dennis Davidson, aged 11, was shot and killed by his brother Dora, aged 14. The boys were playfully throwing water on each other, when Dora seized the shotgun and ordered Dennis not to throw any more water. On his refusal to comply with the order, Dora pulled the trigger, and the load tore a large hole near the heart of his little brother.

HARRY JENKINS, the 5-year-old son of James Jenkins, residing in Brazil, met with a fatal accident. His father had several dynamite cartridges, which he intended using in blowing up stumps. The child got one, and while playing with it, dropped it, causing an explosion. The force was terrific, tearing off the child's right arm and mangling its shoulders and face to such an extent that it will die.

A SAD and fatal accident occurred nine miles south of Goshen, resulting in the instant death of the 3-year-old daughter of Charles McCrants. The father was engaged in hauling wood when his two little children ran out to meet him, approaching on either side of the wagon. He did not notice them until one was under the wheels. The wagon was on the down grade at the time, and before it could be stopped the wheels had passed over the head of one, crushing out its brains.

THE following patents have been granted to citizens of Indiana: James F. Boman and J. Cornelius, Flat Rock, hog trap; Alfred Heine and W. K. H. Woerner, Evansville, typewriting machine; William T. Kimsey, Michigan City, car coupling; Jeremiah H. Matthews, South Bend, transportable circular sawmill; Jeremiah H. Matthews, South Bend, door securer; John J. Newman, Elkhart, machine for water-proofing or coating paper; James Nortney and F. Schefold, New Albany, electric lamp support.

JAMES PETTY, the well-known saloonkeeper of Frankfort, was found dead in his carriage house the other morning, where he had hanged himself. His suicide cannot be accounted for, except on the theory of insanity. He was prosperous in his business and his home life was happy. He left a letter containing instructions as to the settlement of certain business affairs, but made no reference to his intentions, further than to say that he was "going to the happy hunting grounds." He was known to have money hidden about the house, and $2,055 in gold was found in an old iron box in the attic.

ROBERT ROBINSON, the veteran of the Northern Prison, is dead. He was sent to Jeffersonville in 1857 for life, for murder. When the Prison North was completed he was transferred there. He had been a trusty for several years and during Gov. Williams' term refused a pardon.

ARTHUR MCWHORTER, the 4-year-old son of Mrs. Ella McWhorter, residing with his grandfather, J. A. Machtell, at Riverside, was found unconscious at the heels of a pony in the stable, with his head crushed in where the animal had kicked him. The boy was an admirer of the little horse and had gone to the stable to see his pet. He cannot recover. His parents were both mutes.

A TANGLE OF HEARTS.

The President of a Bachelors' Club Falls a Victim to Love.

WRITTEN BY E. S. VAN ZILE.

CHAPTER II.—Continued.

We returned to the ball-room soon after. Dr. Chapman was waltzing with Agnes. For a man in middle life he was extremely graceful, and his partner seemed to enjoy her waltz with him. I began to think it was time I made some impression on Fernshaw's inamorata. I was anxious to see whether she was really the coquette she appeared to be.

"May I have a dance, Miss Upton?" I asked, approaching her.

"I have none left," she said, smilingly, "but I am very tired. If we could find a retired corner, I might escape the next number."

I felt flattered, and, offering my arm, bore her away in triumph. As we passed Fernshaw I saw that his face wore a look of despair. Foolish boy! He seemed to forget that emotion is considered by society eminently vulgar.

We pushed our way through the crowd, and at length found a quiet little nook where we could converse unobserved and uninterrupted.

"You are fond of society?" I asked, as I threw a wrap around her white shoulders.

"I don't know," she replied, musingly. "I don't think I am. But I don't want to be neglected."

"Then you go through all this kind of thing from pride, not affection."

"Yes; I suppose so. But what can a woman do? She has to have some excitement. Perhaps it doesn't pay, in the end; but then, what does pay? Society and life are much the same. After we have passed through them we find there was nothing in them. But this fact does not render suicide or seclusion any the more attractive."

I gazed at her in surprise. Youth, beauty, health, admiration were here, but she spoke and looked as though she were weary from wisdom and wise from weariness.

"Your argument is sound, but you are too young to consider society the only alternative to a nunnery or prussic acid. How about the quiet joys of domestic life?"

She laughed outright.

"The joys of domestic life! Your question proves that you are a bachelor. What does marriage offer to a New York girl? She becomes the vanquished rival of a club, the lonely watcher for a husband's late return, either a spiteful gossip or a moping invalid. But, like death, it is a fate which must be borne. Yes, I suppose that will be the outcome of it all."

She looked at me musingly, as though in search of sympathy. She was so confidential, so trustful, that it seemed to me I had known her for years. As I gazed into her large dark eyes, I regretted that as a member of the committee I had not been ordered to take charge of her. I could readily understand how Fernshaw had lost his heart to her, and I even began to suspect that Barnes, the cynical and worldly, would find it difficult to resist her subtle charm.

"I should judge, then," I remarked, "that your marriage, when it occurs, will be simply a ceremonious conformity to the customs of society. You do not seem inclined to fall in love."

"Love! Love! What is love?" she asked.

"An ancient question," I replied. "How will this do for a definition? Love for a being of the opposite sex is that feeling of affection which demands expression at all hazards."

"Well said," she exclaimed. "You have placed the passion in a philosophic light. Love must be delightful. I should like to fall in love."

She glanced at me wistfully. There was a far-away look in her eyes and there really was no reason why I should turn red. But I did. I was an old hand at this kind of thing, and knew by instinct that Barnes was in her mind, but for a moment I longed to take her in my arms and tell her to love her father's committeeman with all the ardor of her youthful heart.

"I wonder what Mr. Fernshaw will think!" she exclaimed a moment later, looking at her dance-card. I followed her gaze and saw that I had stolen my young brother's turn. My conscience troubled me, and I hurriedly offered her my arm. We returned to the ballroom.

"The cotillon is about to begin," remarked Barnes, as he joined us. "We had better find a place."

Miss Upton took his arm and whispered to me:

"I will give you my first favor."

I moved away gloomily. I did not intend to dance the german, and I was annoyed to think that the words of this girl had led me to regret that I was not as handsome as Barnes or as young as Fernshaw.

As I entered the coat-room I found the latter talking to Mr. Upton.

"Do you dance the cotillon?" I asked Fernshaw.

"No," he answered, crossly.

"Won't you join me in a cigar at the club, then?" I asked, including Mr. Upton in my invitation. They both accepted and a moment later we were hurrying up 5th avenue.

"Who is this Mr. Barnes who paid Agnes so much attention to-night?" asked Mr. Upton, as we seated ourselves at a table in the club dining-room and ordered a bottle of champagne.

"A broker quite well known on the street. He has made a great deal of money in the last few years," I answered.

"Nice-looking fellow. Seems to be a gentleman," remarked the old man.

"Perhaps," spoke up Fernshaw, "but he dresses too well. Don't you think so?"

Mr. Upton looked at the speaker in surprise. He seemed to suspect that Fernshaw was sarcastic. I began to fear that I had done an imprudent thing in bringing the young man and Mr. Upton together.

"Well, I don't know," answered the latter, slowly. "He can afford to, perhaps. He has made his pile."

This was a home thrust, and Fernshaw sipped his wine nervously. He had not "made his pile," and he reddened at the thought. His father, it is true, was a rich man, but Fernshaw owned nothing himself, and was conscious that in this age of the world poverty is a crime.

"Yes, I like the looks of Barnes," continued Mr. Upton. "I must ask him to dine with us. Bring him with you tomorrow, Fernshaw. I think you are booked, are you not?"

"Yes. But I hardly feel that I know Mr. Barnes well enough to take such a liberty. Hadn't you better write him a line?"

Fernshaw was pale with anger, but Mr. Upton did not notice his emotion.

"You're right, I will."

The old man sent for some note paper, and, having laboriously composed a rather stilted invitation, placed it in Fernshaw's hands.

"Mrs. Upton said you were to return for her. Give that to Barnes when you get to the ball, will you?"

Fernshaw bowed, and a few moments later bid us adieu.

Poor boy, the world had used him badly that night! There was a desperate look in his eyes as he left the room, and I felt that in his rage he would destroy the note when he got outside. It is a dangerous thing to drive a passionate young man too far.

CHAPTER III.

A week passed by, and the committee had accomplished a large amount of work. Barnes, Chapman and myself had proved acceptable to the Uptons, and we had been taken into the family as old friends. Fernshaw grew more and more disturbed, and was always on the verge of an outbreak. Agnes seemed to maintain a perfect poise and showed no preference toward any one of us.

Matters were in this condition when the club met, two weeks after the committee had been appointed. The gathering took place at my rooms, and, moved by an inexplicable impulse, I had prepared a handsomer entertainment than was customary. We met at 10 o'clock. After we had partaken of salads, birds and a few bottles of Roederer, we were ready for business, but Fernshaw had not appeared. As he was in the habit of being punctual, it was evident he had temporarily deserted us.

Nothing of interest took place until the president called for "reports of committees." Dr. Chapman arose and said that the committee in the Fernshaw affair begged leave to report progress.

"That won't do," exclaimed Barnes, rising excitedly. Then, as if suddenly remembering the words of the Book of Forms, he folded his arms and solemnly remarked, "I am the victim of a woman."

There was an awful silence in the room for a moment. Tragedy was in the air and our president turned pale.

"You are in love," he managed to return at length.

"I am," answered Barnes.

"May Heaven protect you," murmured the club, fervently.

"Her name?" exclaimed the President, sternly.

"Agnes Upton," said Barnes.

An earthquake could not have created greater consternation than resulted from his words. I felt the blood rush to my face, for I realized that I might have to follow the example set by the club's "Apollo." Before I could arise, however, Dr. Chapman was on his feet.

"I am the victim of a woman," he said.

"You are in love," whispered the President, as though he were gazing at a ghost.

"I am," answered Chapman, ceremoniously.

"May Heaven protect you," muttered the club, perfunctorily.

"Her name?" queried the President, ominously.

"Agnes Upton."

"Is this a joke?" cried the President, in anger. "What do you mean?"

I sprang to my feet, folded my arms, and looked calmly at the President.

"I am the victim of a woman," I said.

"What's this?" The President's voice rang out in tones that stirred the hangings and made the fire flicker in the grate. "Are you all mad? Has Agnes Upton bewitched you—for I suppose you, too, are her slave?"

I bowed low in answer and sat down.

No one spoke for some time. Not a man in the room dared to move. It was a great relief to see the President take a cigar from his pocket and hastily light it. His hair seemed to have grown whiter in the last ten minutes and his good-natured face wore an expression of mingled disgust and perplexity.

"I'm glad Brother Fernshaw is not here," he managed to remark after a time. We all said "amen" to this in our hearts.

"Move the report of the committee be accepted," said one of the brethren presently.

"What do you mean?" asked the President. "The committee has reported altogether too much progress. It must be discharged at once. I have never been so thoroughly nonplused in the whole course of my career. I was annoyed at Fernshaw for falling in love, and here I find three men of wildly different tastes who have succumbed to the same influence which destroyed the peace of our youngest brother. It is very evident that the present status of this affair threatens the very existence of our club. Four of our brethren are now in love with the same woman. Four of us, fortunately a majority, still remain free from the witchery of Agnes Upton. But what shall I do? It is my duty to protect Fernshaw and I dare not expose any more of the brethren to the fatal influence of this woman. Some action must be taken at once. I really don't know what course to follow."

Barnes arose. "I would suggest," he said, "that you yourself, Mr. President, take the place of our committee of three. As you say, four of the brethren now love Agnes Upton. But we are still loyal to the club and will gladly abide by your decree. It would give me great pleasure to make your task as easy as it can be. May I not present you to the Uptons?"

I thought I caught the gleam of malice in the "Apollo's" handsome eyes, but my nerves were too much shaken for me to oppose the suggestion he had made. After all, perhaps it was best to place the matter in one man's hands. We were bound by our oath to obey the command of our President in all affairs of the heart, and I realized that he was a man who would act justly in a case of this kind.

"Your proposition is acceptable to me, Brother Barnes," said the President, after pondering the suggestion in silence for a time. "If there is no objection from the club, I will discharge the present committee on the Fernshaw case and appoint myself in their place. But what am I to do? The question at present before us is very different from the one which came up at our last meeting. Then it was for us to decide whether Fernshaw would be happy if he married Miss Upton. Now I am called upon to say which one of four men has the best right to sue for Miss Upton's hand. I really feel that the responsibility is too great for one man to discharge."

Dr. Chapman arose hurriedly. His voice betrayed suppressed emotion, and he seemed to be making a strong effort to maintain his self-control.

"Not at all, not at all, Mr. President. You are just the man for this task. We all repose confidence in your justice, your loyalty to the principles of the club, and your knowledge of human nature. Now, it should be borne in mind that only one of us can marry Agnes Upton. Three out of the four must still remain bachelors and members of the club. It is well, therefore, that there should be no hard feelings between us. We should remember that, though we are rivals in love, we are brethren by choice. After looking the ground over with great care, we expect you, Mr. President, to decide which one of the quartette shall remain in the field. Arbitration is a great modern principle, and may well be employed in such a case as this."

"I agree with Brother Chapman," I said.

"He has spoken well," remarked Barnes.

And so it was settled that our president should take upon him the settlement of the most stupendous complication that had ever agitated the peaceful circles of our club. But it was with heavy hearts that my friends left my rooms that night. They all seemed to feel that the future promised to be stormy, and our president, as he walked slowly through the hall, looked depressed and anxious.

I returned to my lonely parlor, lighted a cigar and watched the fitful frolics of the dying blaze. I had not intended to confess my love for Agnes Upton to the club, but had been forced to that step in self-defense. In fact, I had hardly dared to acknowledge to myself that the passion which had seized me at the ball, had grown in force during the succeeding fortnight. But so it was. I, who had given up all thoughts of matrimony, now longed passionately to make a life companion of Agnes Upton. And, behold, I had three rivals!

I sat in reverie until the clock struck two, but the more I pondered the problem the more I became convinced that when four men love the same woman not even the worldly wisdom of such a man as our President can beget a satisfactory outcome.

CHAPTER IV.

Agnes Upton had an interesting experience during the next two weeks. Although our committee had been discharged, Barnes, Chapman and myself were not obliged to desert our new friends, and not a day passed that one of us, or perhaps all of us, did not call at the Upton mansion. Our President was also very assiduous in his attentions and even went so far as to take Agnes and Mr. Upton out driving twice or thrice.

The Uptons, of course, did not realize that there was any bond between the new admirers of Agnes. Five members of the club had become intimate with the Uptons, but the existence of our organization was unknown to them, and when we met in their drawing-room there was a coldness in our manner towards each other which disarmed suspicion. This coldness was in part affected and in part the outcome of the fact that four of us were rivals for the hand of Agnes.

One evening we were all asked to dine at the Uptons'. Fernshaw was present, and turned red when he saw our President enter the room. The young man had been out of town for some days and did not know that the head of our club had become the arbiter of his fate.

Mrs. Upton, who, by the way, had never been cordial to me, frowned when she saw how warmly I was received by her step-daughter. Agnes and I had become good friends, and she treated me with more frankness than she did my rivals. Whether this was an encouraging fact I had not been able to determine. Timeo Danaos et dona ferentes. For "Danaos" read "women."

I was separated from Agnes at dinner, and was obliged to make myself agreeable to an elderly woman, who talked continually about the English nobility and seemed to have been reading Burke's "Peerage" before she left home. Fernshaw was seated by a pretty debutante, but kept his eyes fixed constantly on Agnes, who was making herself fascinating to our President. Chapman and Barnes were snowed under somewhere on the other side of the table.

There were several handsome women present, but the face of Agnes was beyond all rivalry.

"She is a queen," I exclaimed abstractedly.

"No, no—a duchess," returned the matron at my side, looking at me as though she considered me woefully ignorant. I don't know to whom she referred, but I remembered vaguely that she had been talking about some American girl who had married a titled foreigner.

Mr. Upton was in high spirits. He was not a witty conversationalist, but his cordiality as a host made up for a certain lack of tact apparent in his manner.

"You have been away, Fernshaw?" he remarked. "Glad to see you back."

"Thank you," said Fernshaw coldly. His poetic face had taken on of late a cynical expression, as though a multitude of rivals had changed his views regarding the value of existence.

[TO BE CONTINUED.]

Unexpected Alarm.

The church at C—— had a new communion service, solid silver, of handsome design, the gift of a wealthy friend. It was kept in a heavy iron chest, securely placed in a stout closet in the church; and yet it was near being stolen before it had been in the society's possession a month.

It was communion Sunday. The new service was used for the first time, and was then replaced in its strong chest and the closet securely locked. Meanwhile a thief had secreted himself in the church, and when the building was closed and locked for the night, he began operations.

With the aid of skeleton keys and other tools he opened the closet and the iron chest. He packed the silver in a bag, slung it over his back, and prepared to make his escape through one of the vestibule windows.

Suddenly he was startled by a sound as of approaching footsteps at the farther corner of the vestibule. It may have been a rat or a mouse, for besides the thief there was no human being in the church.

The fellow made haste to reach the window-stool, and feeling his hand in contact with a rope, on the impulse of the moment he seized it. It was the bell-rope, and the next instant a series of sonorous peals broke the stillness of the night air.

"Fool!" said the thief, "to sound the alarm myself."

The ringing of the bell aroused the village. The thief was caught, and the communion service was saved.

British Flunkeyism.

In England trade takes away a man's social standing, but sport doesn't. An impecunious nobleman may breed horses and sell them and still be in the Prince of Wales' set. But let him sell beef or mutton and he is ostracized. He may train horses for a salary and still be a gentleman. He may be a starter and still retain his social standing. But he must not go into trade.

THE outcome of a courtship nowadays is largely a question of income. —Elmira Gazette.

NEW REFORMED DRESS.

GOWNS RECOMMENDED FOR WOMAN'S WEAR.

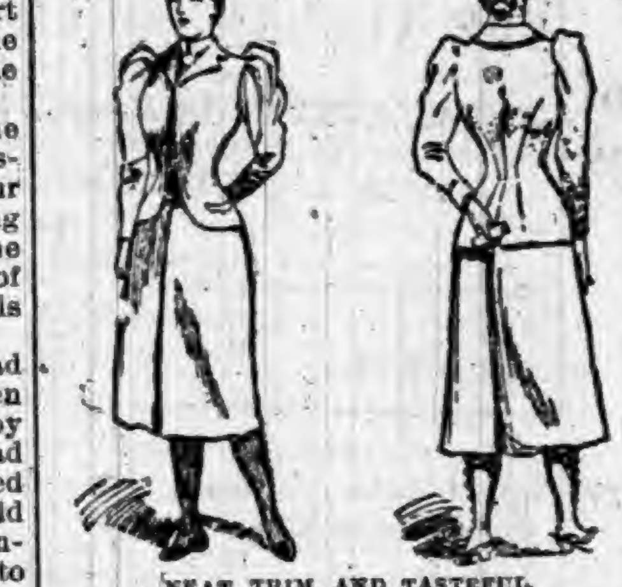
The National Council of Women Suggests Some Sensible and Hygienic Costumes that Will Be Shown in Chicago During the Summer.

Short Skirts for Walking.

Of the four different styles of walking costumes recommended by the committee on dress of the national council of women, one at least is trim, neat, artistic and withal womanly, although truly the skirt is unconventionally short, says the Chicago Post. This costume is in four pieces and is of one colored material. There is a long, graceful jacket opening over a blouse bodice; a skirt reaching several inches below the knees, and leggins, neatly fitted and buttoned as are gaiter tops. These leggins extend up over the knees. While this costume is, of course, exceptional in being short of skirt, it is one that recommends itself, not only because it is comfortable, convenient and hygienic, but from the fact that it is not calculated to challenge adverse criticism.

Another costume suggested by this committee is what they call the "American costume," which is a short one-piece gown with a zouave jacket open in the back as well as the front. This gown has two box plaits in the back and also in the front and follows the outline of the figure without fitting it closely.

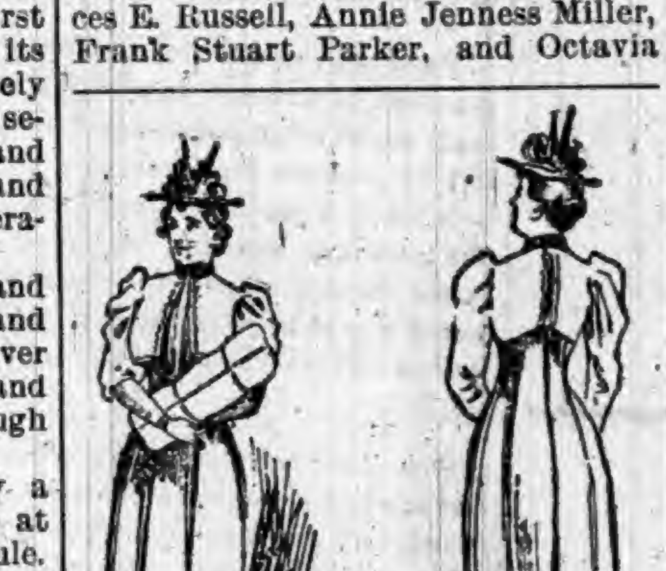
The Syrian costume, also recommended by the committee, is the one which was so much mooted in the London papers a few months ago. The directions for making the skirt, which closely resembles full Turkish trousers, are as follows: Take two full breadths of double-width material, or four of medium single-width goods, and for the length measure from under the heel to the usual waist line. The divisions begin just above the knees, where gores nine inches wide are inserted, with the wide part uppermost, and joined. At the waist this skirt is either gathered or plated rather full in front and very full behind, leaving it somewhat scant in front. Pockets may be placed on either side in front of the hips. When buttoned on a skirt the placket is in the back. However, this costume may be made as a one-piece costume by carrying the length right on to the shoulders. In this case the skirt should have two short plackets in the fullness at the back, with a short band between to button to the waist. In the front it may open in the front fullness. With this costume no leggins are required, as high-topped boots reach to the lower gathered edge. A garment somewhat scanter of this sort is recommended to be worn under a short princess dress.



NEAT, TRIM, AND TASTEFUL.

The fourth of these costumes is "the modified Syrian." This, while much like the Syrian, has the division beginning under the turn of the skirt about ten inches lower than in the regular Syrian costume. In this the extra fullness is taken out over the hips by means of several small gores on each side. To the waist lining is attached a pair of loose linen drawers that do not extend quite to the knee, and the outside material, instead of being sewed to a band or held in place by an elastic, is slightly gored and sewed to the lower edge of these drawers. In this way the support of the costume from the shoulders is secured. In walking the division is not defined in the Syrian costume, and as the upper part of the dress is more conventional it is not so exceptionally striking. A "gymnasium dress," not in any important aspect different from the ordinary gymnasium costume, is also suggested.

The committee members who have recommended these costumes—Frances E. Russell, Annie Jenness Miller, Frank Stuart Parker, and Octavia W. Bates—together with several other women prominent in the national council of women—have pledged themselves to wear some one of these costumes during the World's Fair. That they will succeed in popularizing something which, while modest and tasteful, will free womankind from the thralldom of bedraggled dress skirts, worn binding braid, and, as a famous doctor calls it, "the savagely unhygienic dress that is the vogue for women," is not too much to hope for, although one may not be able to confidently expect it.

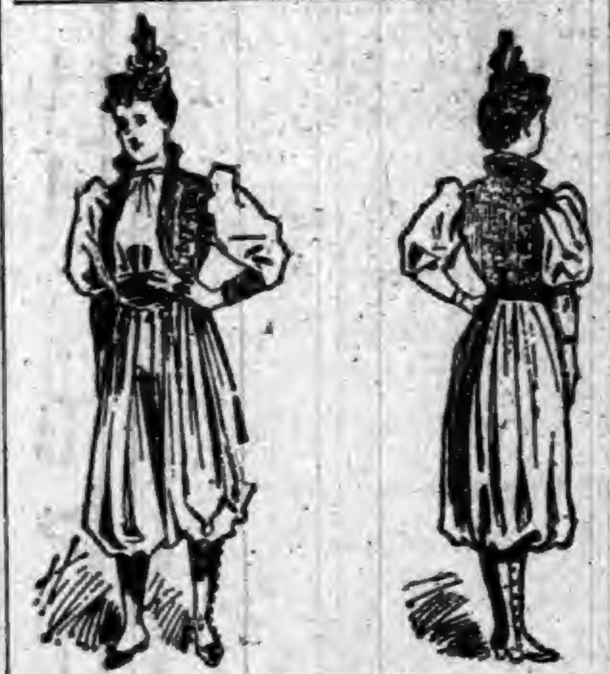


THE AMERICAN COSTUME.

Anything in the nature of a uniform or a dress exclusively for business women will never be successful so long as human nature remains what it is. In the work undertaken by the committee on dress of the national council this fact has been recognized.

The report of the committee opens with the statement that the members have concerned themselves with endeavoring to devise costumes suitable for business hours, for shopping, marketing, housework, walking and other forms of exercise. The further statement is made that anything in the form of a uniform is deprecated; that they desire to make their recommendations such as to insure a large liberty of choice, and that they hope to assist in delivering women from the bondage in which fashion has so long confined them.

In this connection it is of interest that a number of those who have pledged themselves to wear one of these short costumes during the World's Fair are women of wealth and leisure. All that the committee has aimed to accomplish is in the line of walking costumes.



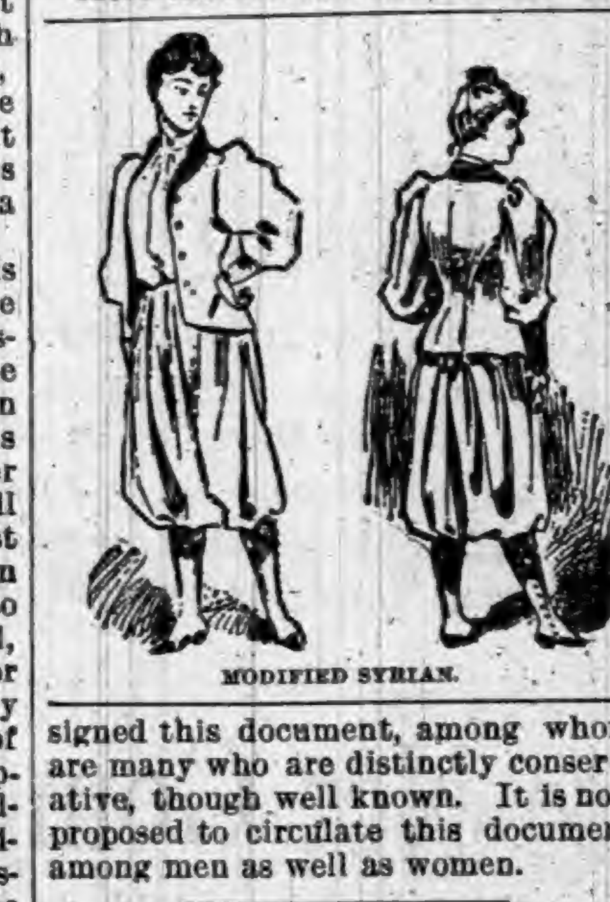
SYRIAN COSTUME.

As to evening or reception toilets, or indeed gowns for the house or any function, the trailing robe of rich material with all the features of the conventional full dress gown is approved both by precept and example by these women. Indeed, it is keynote of the movement that they do not set aside one jot or tittle of the conventionalities of life. In fact, several of this committee have recently had handsome evening gowns made by Miss Barry, of Marshall Field & Co., who makes a specialty of costumes that are in every respect hygienic and yet that perfectly conform in general contour to the best and latest modes. Some of these evening dresses are not only rich and elegant but are so truly artistic that they would delight the soul of a painter.

In the interests of this reform, in which the committee on dress has taken the initiative, the national council of women started a few months ago a sort of petition called a "consent," the text of which is as follows:

"We, whose names are signed below, consent to give our influence in favor of an improvement in woman's dress which will allow her the free and healthful use of the organs of her body when walking or taking exercise. In signing this paper no one of us becomes responsible for the suggestions of any one else, nor do we promise to wear or to indorse any particular style of dress. We simply give our influence to help start a strong and healthy movement in favor of freedom and common sense in dress, leaving ourselves free to work for it as seems best to each one."

More than a thousand women have signed this document, among whom are many who are distinctly conservative, though well known. It is now proposed to circulate this document among men as well as women.



MODIFIED SYRIAN.

Its Effect.

In a fire, by the way, one gets curious peeps at human nature, which throws off all disguises in moments of peril. Not long ago an apartment house took fire. There was no time to be lost by the inmates. A mother, scantily clad and crying, took out her two little children. A wife buttoned herself in her long newmarket and ran, leading her brown-eared setter. A devoted son and daughter on the top floor dressed warmly their helpless old mother of 80 and waited to carry her, if need be, across the fire escape. One woman put on a fur-lined cape over her nightdress and came forth with a traveling bag filled with silver. Another put her valuables in her sealskin coat, and, finding the smoke not too threatening, fished out her long-tailed coat and the black silk silhouettes of her grandfather and grandmother, which she knew she couldn't replace. Another, who had full as much time in which to act, left all her belongings and fled in her nightdress, blistering her bare feet on the cinders, and ran down the street calling for a carriage. One man contented himself with a bath robe, while another dressed himself in his four-in-hand tie and a scarf pin.

Cotton Manufacture in the South.

"In 1880," says the Manufacturers' Record Magazine, "the South contained only 667,754 spindles out of the total of 10,653,435 in this country—little more than 6 per cent.—while the spindles in the South in 1890 numbered 1,722,930 out of a total of 14,088,103, or more than 12 per cent. In the ten years the capital in the Southern cotton manufacturing industry increased from $21,976,713 to $61,124,026; the hands employed from 20,827 to 41,481; the wages paid from $3,517,115 to $8,951,514; and the value of the products from $21,038,712 to $46,971,503. The number of looms increased from 14,323 to 39,231. The South produces 26 per cent. of all the sheeting made in the United States, 36 per cent. of the ginghams, and 41 per cent. of the yarn."

MR. J. L. WEAVER.

LIVURA M'F'G. Co.,

DEAR SIRS:—"Last winter I had La Grippe in its worst form, leaving me in a terrible condition, my Brain was confused, my Heart weak, and my legs refused to hold me up, and the muscles were so sore that it was painful to lie down. I had continual Headache, and everything I ate distressed me. I could not work, sleep, or eat, and my right side became numb. Several doctors told me I had Incipient Paralysis, and that I could get no better. I grew so weak that I could not leave the house. Hearing of PITCHER'S LIVURA I got a bottle and it helped me from the first. I took 4 bottles in all, and am PERFECTLY WELL in every way, and now work all day. I know that PITCHER'S LIVURA CURED ME."

TIPTON now has the latest from the umbrella mender who was once a congressman, but fell by too much whisky. Now, let us hear about the other fellows who fell by whisky and didn't get to be congressmen.

THE INDIANAPOLIS SUN is the latest victim of the "Ulster County Gazette" business. Editors up this way have been explaining about these "old papers" for fifteen or twenty years. It is an ingenious copy, made on paper so stained as to appear ancient, and many thousand copies were sold all over the country.

THE INDIANAPOLIS SUN got out a big edition Saturday, on a splendid new press and with a new outfit generally. It is a great credit to the managers. But the greatest credit to which we think them entitled is the new and spicy matter tastily dished up, that always characterizes the Sun, and has for its five years of existence. Long may the Sun shine!

POPULISTS in the state of Washington resolved at a recent meeting that Cleveland ought to be impeached, because he did not enforce the Geary law that compels all Chinese to be registered. If all the laws that are not enforced would cause the impeachment of some one, the world would be depopulated, or at least no one left but the populists—to let them tell it.

COL. POPE the great bicycle maker is out in a letter against having bicycles taxed, and wants to hear the opinion of editors on the subject. We can give him the opinion of one, and that is, that bicycles should be assessed the same as any other property. If a man has a horse that he rides or drives, it is worth about as much as a good bicycle. He is taxed on the horses; why not on the bicycle?

THE National Chemical bank at Chicago failed last week and carried down with it their branch at the world's fair grounds known as the Columbian bank. The stockholders of these banks had established about twenty small banks, in the smaller towns in Indiana, and of course the failure of the parent bank took these little ones down also. Among them was the bank at Churubusco and one at Monroeville.

New Wabash Time Card.

Sunday noon the new time card at Auburn for the Wabash road went into effect. The trains to Chicago were all taken off and run over the new line. The two mail trains run as they did before, but in place of the two evening through trains, they have two trains meet here at 7:28 p. m. Then there is a west bound passenger at 7:34 a. m., and an east bound one at 5:21 a. m.

Two Views of Auburn.

We give below, two different views of Auburn and DeKalb county, the first written in a gangrened and cankered ill will against the people of his own town and county, the other by a fair minded and truthful newspaper man outside its limits. The first is from the Garrett Clipper, whose editor lives in Auburn The people here expect this weekly attack on every thing we have, but we were greatly surprised last week to see it copied by the Columbia City Post and sent broadcast over Whitley county. What a picture this will be for our Whitley county friends, and what an idea they must gain of things over in DeKalb, if they believe this stuff! We have always found the Post, an able, fair and cautious journal, and hence as said above, we are surprised. Here is the part of the Clipper's article we allude to. Its editor had been at Columbia City to have his case against Cal. Husselman tried, and in his next paper he taffies Columbia City, and lies about his own home, in the following style, which we take from the Post's reproduction.

"It would give a DeKalb county man a pain to spend a day in that town and then return home. Here we have nothing. No court house, no jail, no poor farm buildings and close to $80,000 in debt. Columbia City simply owes for her court house, a pride to the tax payers and a guarantee of good management and enterprise to every visitor to the place. It does not seem that there could be such a wide difference in business transactions. Those people are prosperous, happy and contented, while we are miserable, down-hearted and disgusted."

Now, believing the Post has no intention to misrepresent Auburn and her interests to its readers, we want to call attention to a few of these mis-statements. First, the writer says "Here, we have nothing, no court house, no jail, no poor farm buildings, and close to $80,000 in debt." The writer knew he was lying when he penned this. We have a comfortable court house, that serves us very well; we have as fine a jail as the one he boasts of at Columbia City in fact the two are exactly alike; we have large, comfortable buildings on our extensive and well managed poor farm, where we care for in comfort about thirty inmates; our county debt is not $80,000, but as shown by the auditor's last annual report, which was published in the COURIER June 16, 1892, it was $47,639. Then the Clipper says the Columbia City school building "is not behind the times and towers far ahead of anything in this (DeKalb) county." The facts are the Auburn building, while not as highly ornamented outside as that at Columbia City, is fully as good a building, and in some ways more convenient. And we are just now in a struggle to get another and even better school building, while the writer of the above attack is fighting tooth and nail against it. He fights at home everything he boasts of at Columbia City. It is such truck as this that "gives a DeKalb county man a pain."

Now for the other view. We see in last week's Ligonier Banner, an allusion to our recent election and the fact that our contemplated public improvements entered into the contest, and after taking sides with the progressive element here, the editor adds: "Auburn is a rich community, wide awake and progressive and the fellows that stand in the way of modern public improvement should be crushed. If the ice wagon should run over a few more over there it would be a good thing."

The COURIER has never published a word against Columbia City or Whitley county, and has no desire to do so. But articles like that we complain of are calculated to deceive. The facts are that DeKalb has everything that Whitley has except a fine, new court house, and has many desirable things Whitley has not. DeKalb owes a debt of $47,000; Whitley's debt is $78,000. DeKalb is able to pay her debt; Whitley is able to pay hers. There is no need for one to belittle the other.

Memorial Service.

Will be held at the Presbyterian church May 28th at 2:30 p. m. All ministers of the Auburn churches and their congregations are respectfully invited to be present. Comrade Rev. J. N. Wilson will deliver the address. Decoration services May 30. See program next week.

COMMITTEE.

Court.

Business began at the old stand Monday at 10 a. m., with Judge Powers at the throttle, and Prosecutor Butler as fireman; D. D. Metcalf is courtroom bailiff again while Sam Campbell holds the lever on the boys in the grand jury room. Business started out a little slowly at first, but later on it was a little more brisk in the afternoon. Then the judge cornered six sad eyed men, and gave them a long and fatherly talking to. They looked relieved when he was done, and they got up and walked into the grand jury room. They were the members of that awe-inspiring body, and at roll call will answer to the following correctly spelled names: J. A. Potter, Dr. D. N. Fitch, S. J. Zimmerman, Frank Goode, J. Y. W. McClellan, J. M. Carnahan.

Business Changes.

Harry Martin has sold out the Baltz livery barn that he has been controlling for a time, to Edward Kunderd. Mr. Martin will go on the road now, selling buggies in connecton with W. H. Mader. They will keep and sell all the best makes, including of course those made here. We understand, they will include in the list the buggies made by Obe Cool at Logansport.

Mr. Gandy has purchased the Glazier hotel building of Mr. Cavins.

F. E. Davenport has bought Gene Trout's residence on North Main street. Trout goes into the Glazier Hotel, and will take charge of it Mr. Glazier retiring.

Charles E. Rainier goes into partnership with Wm. Sheffer & Co. The business of course continues at the old stand as Mr. Sheffer owns the fine block in which he is located.

The Hawaiian Scandal.

[Indianapolis Sentinel.]

The more the Hawaiian matter is investigated the worse it looks for Minister Stevens. This gentlemen is a Maine product, a friend and worshiper of Blaine, and there is no doubt that the Hawaiian affair was deliberately arranged as a brilliant piece of jingoism. Intimations were given some months ago that startling events might be expected from that quarter, and that this country would have an opportunity to acquire possession of these islands, and to that end the energies of Mr. Stevens seems to have been directed. When the time for action arrived he was in so much haste to have the revolution accomplished that he actually paused troops to be landed for the support of the provincial government before the provisional government was formed Mr. Charles Nordhoff, who is reporting the progress of Hawaiian affairs for the New York Herald, says:

Minister Stevens was in such haste to land troops that he embarassed his friends. They sent him word early Monday afternoon to delay the landing of troops, as they had the proclamation ready, and it is reported to me by one who was present that the answer was brought to the committee of safety from Mr. Stevens that he had given orders for the landing of the troops and if the committee did not do something he would take possession of the town himself. The navy forces were actually landed between 4 and 5 o'clock Monday afternoon and it was not until the following day that the provisional government, under their shelter, proclaimed itself.

This was a gross violation of the rights of the queen and of the country, an utterly unjustifiable interference with the affairs of a country with which we were at peace. Instead of merely disavowing the act, President Harrison ought to have recalled Stevens at once and undone his work so far as possible.

WHO Cares to pay for name or fame in this the Nineteenth Century? When we buy goods we buy them on their merits

WHEN We are asked as we often are "Why do you sell goods so much lower than other houses?" we usually answer, "We DO because we CAN." One reason

WHAT We say we have — the Goods, the Amount, the Quality and the Price. Another reason is that we know exactly

WHERE Cash can buy them the cheapest, and all we ask is for every sensible person to do likewise and you will surely come to the Boston Clothing Store. A most reasonable reason—

WHY We can leave others behind in the race and sell first class goods for 15 to 25 per cent less than others can, particularly when it comes to advertising certain goods, is because our patrons know that when we advertise goods at a certain price we have just

HOW when and where to buy goods, so that we can undersell all others. Now, if you are wise and desire to save money on a fine class of goods this is your greatest of opportunities. Please call and examine these goods remembering that always and in all cases WE DO AS WE ADVERTISE.

After an absence of 15 years will again visit Waterloo every Saturday at Lock's Hotel, Waterloo.

His success in the treatment of piles can be amply attested by hundreds whom he cured during his former visits. I can cure any case of piles, no matter of how long standing, or how hopeless the case may be. The patient suffers no pain or inconvenience. In most cases one treatment is sufficient, which takes only a few minutes, and the time required for a cure is about two weeks, during which time the patient is not inconvenienced from business. 20tf

For soothing an overworked brain, nothing equals a good cigar, and such is the Bill Head.

Do you lack faith and love health? Let us establish your faith and restore your health with DeWitt's Sarsaparilla. Robbins & McCord.

The attention of our readers is called to the advertisements upon the inside pages of this paper, among which will be found some important announcements.

It is a truth in medicine that the smallest dose that performs a cure is the best. DeWitt's Little Early Risers are the smallest pills, will perform the cure, and are the best. Robbins & McCord

The most intelligent people of our community recognize in DeWitt's Little Early Risers pills of unequaled merit for for dyspepsia, headache and constipation. Very small, perfect in action. Robbins & McCord.

The breaking up of the winter is the signal for the breaking up of the system. Nature is opening up the pores and throwing off refuse. DeWitt's Sarsaparilla is of unquestionable assistance in this operation. Robbins & McCord.

BUCKLEN'S ARNICA SALVE.—The best salve in the world for cuts, bruises, sores, ulcers, salt rheum, fever sores, tetter, chapped hands, chilblains, corns and all skin eruptions, and positively cures piles, or no pay required. It is guaranteed to give perfect satisfaction, or money refunded. Price 25 cents per box. For sale by Robbins & McCord. tf

It does the work. Mr. Chas. Gocha, Gaylord, Michigan, says; "I am asked, 'Did Brant's Balsam do you any good?' Well, I should say it did! LaGrippe left me with a serious cough and lung trouble, for which I took about all the cough remedies I had ever heard of, without benefit. Mr. Russell, our druggist, suggested Brant's Balsam. As it was a large bottle for 25c I took one. It helped me: I used six bottles and was cured completely. (Cost $1.50.) Can heartily recommend it; it's a great medicine." 25 and 50c bottles at F. E. Davenport's. 4

Women, thousands of them, whether in society, family, factory or store, from neglect of health laws, family cares, too hard or confining work, and many causes become completely run down, lacking nervous and physical vitality, until they just drag themselves through life, feeling always tired, discouraged and lifeless. Dr. Wheeler's Nerve Vitalizer will give strength and vitality to the exhausted nerves, lightness to the step, bloom and beauty to the cheek and restore the health which appeared wholly lost. Don't expect too quick cure, but give it a fair trial. Price $1. Guaranteed by F. E. Davenport. 4

Harry Scott and wife, of Angola were here Sunday to attend the McDowell funeral.

For a nice, cool, spring and summer smoke, Young America has no equal.

Mr. and Mrs. Frank Rose of Garrett, were here over Sunday, being guests in J. E. Rose's family.

Dr. Johnston, dentist, has the new method of filling teeth without pain, as well as painless extraction of teeth.

Reserved seat tickets for the High School Entertainment will be on sale at Robbins & McCord's on and after Monday next.

John S. McTighe, of Memphis, has been here a few days, a guest in the family of Wm. McIntyre. He is Mrs. McIntyre's brother.

Frank Reynolds and wife of Butler were here Sunday to attend the funeral of E. S. McDowell, Mrs. McDowell being Mr. Reynold's neice.

A little ill, then a little pill. The ill is gone the pill has won. DeWitt's Little Early Risers the little pills that cure great ills. Robbins & McCord.

Bird Dickinson, now a resident of Hillsdale, was here over Sunday visiting Mr. McDougall's family, and his little child now in their care, as well as many other friends.

G. W. Campbell, now a resident of Ft. Wayne was here Sunday and Monday. He had been to Butler to visit his son Elton, who is employed on the Wabash road.

Pretty cold again this week, especially Tuesday. Caused we suppose by the awkwardness of the newly appointed secretary of Agriculture or his weather clerks.

Mrs. Com. Urie was here over Sunday, the guest of her sister, Mrs. T. J. Cuppy. Mr. Urie, himself, was then on a visit to his mother at Burr Oak, Mich., as she was sick.

Frank Shugers has rented the residence of Mrs. Shull, where E. T. Hull has been for some time. This makes Frank a resident of Auburn. We welcome all such substantial citizens.

Alfred Schoup of Richland was here Monday, and settled up his father's COURIER ahead, as Uncle William was not able to come to town himself. He is, we are sorry to say greatly afflicted with rheumatism.

Mrs. C. C. Shaffer came home last week after some time spent at the Mt. Clemens Springs, where she had gone for her health. Her daughter-in-law, Mrs, Elza Shaffer, of Albion has been staying with her a few days.

The Huntertown band gives a strawberry and ice cream festival at that place Saturday evening May 27. The proceeds are for the benefit of the band and all are cordially invited to come and help the boys, and have a good time.

Charlie and Bert Dawson, sons of Mrs Mattie Dawson arrived here Monday. They will stay here till about June 10, when they and their mother will go to see the World's fair for a time and then return to their home in Denver, Colo.

O. H. Downey is now at Lacon, Illinois, where he is publishing the Marshall County Democrat, which is evidently a live sort of journal, if we are to judge by the number we received last week. We hope Brother Downey and the Democrat may prosper.

The S. H. G. meets Saturday with Mrs. Moody. Program, quotations about poverty or wealth, Renaissance and Reformation John Calvin, Mrs. Moody; In and about Modern Athens, Mrs. McIntyre; The Standing army of the United States, Mrs. Henry; Music, Mrs. Moss.

J. E. Rose visited the world's fair a day or two last week. While there is a vast amount of wonderful sights there, there is also a vast amount of extortion. Mr. Rose especially objects to paying an admission fee to see one of the oldest and most familiar waterfalls the world has ever known.

Mrs. Croiry a deputy of the L. O. T. M., is at work organizing a hive of the Ladies of the Maccabees, an independent beneficiary order. Aside from the endowment features, the regular hive exercises are entertaining and instructive. She has secured the names of many of our estimable town ladies, and expects to effect the organization of a very large hive.

L. J. Gengler and Al Bevard of Garrett, were over here last week. This reminds us we were a little off in our report of the Garrett election. Two democrats were elected instead of one. We beg pardon of Will Hathaway for classing him as a republican, He is all right. But the Clipper had too much to do to take care of Auburn politics either to notice their own election or to report it afterwards.

Levi Treesh and H. M. Fretz two of our Richland friends were here Saturday to talk business to us. They reported a fine meeting of the Richland township Sunday school institute at its recent session. There was a very large attendance and good interest all through. They were here to attend the meetings of the stockholders of the fair at least that portion of them who had guaranteed the money due Mr. Lockwood. This money the guarantors are to pay up.

Ashley Times; George Kirkpatrick bought two dwelling lots, Monday, and will build fine residences on the same, at once. * * * W. D. Miller, the leading grocer, of Butler, was in town last week, looking for a place to locate. He seemed favorably impressed with Ashley. * * * The machinery at the brick yard was started yesterday, and worked finely. The plant has a capacity of 20,000 brick per day, and will be crowded to its utmost to supply the demand. * * * The Wabash Plain Dealer says the Eel River road from Butler to Logansport, now operated by the Wabash will within the next eighteen months, be operated by an independent company. * * * M. K. Houlton's Star Circus, will give a day and evening performance at Ashley, Tuesday May 16th, 1893. They give a good show, admission 15 and 25 cents. * * * The new passenger train service which goes into effect, next Sunday, is as follows: Western bound trains, No. 55, leaves at 1:30 a. m ; No. 53, at 5:13 p m. and No. 51, at 12:25 p. m. Eastward bound trains, No. 50, at 2:30 p m.; No. 50, at 7:30 p. m', and No. 56, 3:52 a m. * * * The machinery in the shops was set in full motion Tuesday, and the citizens of Ashley can now wake up and go to work by the shrill blasts of the steam whistle. * * * T. S, Madden of Butler, has taken charge of our station as agent. Mr. Madden is from Butler and is an experienced and competent man.

Jesse Zent has returned to his work in Minnesota, after a weeks stay here. Mrs. Zent is still here.

Wall paper is cheaper now than it will be next year. You cannot afford to miss seeing Davenport's samples.

Rev. J. N. Wilson will deliver the memorial address a week from next Sunday at the Presbyterian church.

Manager Samuel S. Putt, of the Keeley Institute returned last night from a trip in the east. Mr. Putt is all business.

J. R. Moody has been under the weather for several weeks. We trust pleasant weather will be all that is needed to let him out again.

Lockwood & Marzer moved their cigar factory to the rooms over the millinery store of Cowan Sisters, last week. This gives them more room.

Mrs. Lou Click went to Indianapolis Sunday evening over the Wabash. She is a delegate for Auburn to the state meeting of the Rebekahs.

Mr. and Mrs. Charles Schaab have a boy baby at their house now, born Saturday. All well, and two at least are happy, and we are glad to note this.

Aber, at the new green house near Evergreen cemetery has an abundance of fine flowers. He is giving especial attention to choice new varieties of chrysanthemums.

Before purchasing call and see Mrs. Lane's line of millinery. Her goods are finer than ever, flowers beautiful, everything just lovely. Call and see her, south side Public square.

Mrs. Fanny Smith died on Monday after an illness of about two weeks and was buried yesterday. She was a most worthy lady. We expect to publish an obituary next week.

The fine dwelling of Geary Hursh at Garrett was destroyed by fire Sunday evening. It is not known what caused it, but some think it was set on fire, though there is no proof of it.

The many friends of S. C. Swineford will be sorry to learn that his health has been for some time in a very precarious state. Now and then he gets out on the streets, but most of the time is confined to his room.

Sherm Hollister got so full—No, we mean the Hollister House was so full one night last week that Sherm had to get lodgings elsewhere. No wonder he had to build a third story.

The Auburn Band gave their first open air concert, Monday evening. They never played better and no other band we know of plays as well. By the way, their leader, Mr. Williams, is but seventeen years old, but has the ability of a master

Nellie Barns visited her cousin Flora Jones at Butler over Sunday. Mr. Jones is employed by the Wabash road, and is looking to be called on to skip over to Ashley at any moment. Butler is somewhat depressed over the removal of so many desirable people.

J. C. Henry, who by the way is a hustler for our town has been up to Goshen, Elkhart and South Bend in the interest of the Keeley Institute. The company think of establishing an institute in one of the three places. Mr. Henry talks very favorably of Goshen.

The Yesbera block puts on a city appearance now being neatly penciled and last but not least two large, lovely signs adorn the front, one at the second and the other at the third story. Steele & Son made the signs, and there are no more business-like job. in town.

Mrs. Dr. F. B. Wood of Garrett, died suddenly Sunday evening. She had been at church, and was hurrying home to avoid a coming storm, when she fell on the streets, and was carried home, and died soon after reaching there. It is supposed to be a case of heart disease.

Mrs. Frank Clark of Garrett accompanied by Miss Julia Wagner, daughter of J. W. Wagner of the same place, came over Sunday evening and took the train here for Indianapolis. Mrs. Clark was a delegate to the state meeting of the Rebekahs, and Miss Wagner went down to enjoy a visit to the capital of the state.

Last week Dr. H. D. Wood of Angola, assisted by Dr. W. H. Nusbaum and Dr. F. N. Hines, of this place Dr. Dolph of Pleasant Lake, and young Dr. Weir Wood, son of H. D., removed a cancer of the breast, including axillary glands, from the wife of Surveyor C. E. VanAuken. At last accounts she was doing well.

The editor's family are very grateful to Mrs. May McMichael of Manton, Mich., for a generous quantity of the lovely trailing arbutus flowers which grow abundantly there. We wonder if some of our skillful florists could not raise these rare and beautiful flowers. Some of our ladies might try. She is here to receive medical treatment from Dr. Buchtel.

Conner's little team ran away on Monday. Starting south of the jail, they turned north on Main street, and both fell on the street crossing at Davenport's. They then kept on north, and ran into Weaver's express wagon, standing in front of Harter's. The shock knocked them both down, but the express horse, never flinched and before the runaways could get up, men caught and held them. They had got clear of the wagon near Davenport's.

W. H. McIntosh and wife have a profusion of fine flowers in bloom, with a promise of a variety of others, sufficient to furnish them enjoyment all summer, But their flowers are not their only pets. They have a wild red squirrel, that shares their kindness, for when the bright-eyed little fellow comes prying about the woodpile, he seldom fails to find a dish with a few nut kernels in it for him. And he knows what it is there for too. Then there is the family robin, that has built its nest on a bracket inside the front porch, and another that has a nest on a window cap of the second story in the front side. They have other birds that find a welcome among the trees on their lovely grounds and furnish sweet music for them morning and evening.

Jake Ochs, son of Isaac Ochs, is here. His home is now at Jackson, Michigan, though his people still reside at Arkansas City, Ark.

Father Faust went to Ft. Wayne this week to attend the 25th anniversary of Father Brammer, who began his first work May 17, 1868.

The familiar face of Sam Lauferty was seen on our streets last Friday. He is residing in Ft. Wayne and has not been here for several years.

SEED CORN FOR SALE: I have good seed corn for sale. Call on me at my home six miles east of Auburn on Newville road. W. H. Pepple. 18-20

Ft. Wayne has a mud turtle or recently had one, that had its head cut off six months ago and has just died. We take this from the News. Now bring on your spring snake story.

Sherman Dickinson has bought a small farm near Collingwood, and will move onto it in the fall. He thinks it will be nice to have a home of his own and we feel glad for him.

The big, new engine was put into the Kiblinger factory last week, and for two or three nights there was a dearth of incandescent lights. However it was soon in place, and all works well now.

M. E. Griswold of Montpelier, was here last Friday. He was well pleased with the prospect of his town, and the advantages it would derive from the changes going on in the Wabash road.

Those who have had difficulty in getting spectacles adapted to their eyes will have an opportunity to have them accurately fitted by Chas. E. Miller, optician, Friday, May 19, at Yesbera's jewelry store.

Miss Katherine McQuilkin desires to say to her patrons that it will not be possible for her to work during the month of August, but she will be glad to do all the work she can for them before that date.

Purdy & Son put down a driven well for Hollister last week, and they got water to pumping in just thirty minutes from the time they began. The well is for use in mixing mortar for Hollister's third story.

"There is a salve for every wound." We refer to DeWitt's Witch Hazel Salve, cures burns, bruises, cuts, indolent sores, as a local application in the nostrils it cures catarrh, and always cures piles. Robbins & McCord.

June 11, is the anniversary of the founding of the order of the K. O. T. M. O. T. W., and will be celebrated by Auburn Tent No. 51. Rev. J. D. Brosy Sr. Kt. Chaplain, will preach a sermon on the Maccabees at the Lutheran church that evening.

J. C. Jackson of Howard, Kansas, was here over Sunday on his way to Washington to present in person, a petition to have his son appointed postmaster at Howard. The postoffice patrons there number a little over 600, and Mr. Jackson's list contained 406 of these.

J. S. Fetters, one of Butler's livest young business men, has moved from that place to Edgerton, Ohio, where he has established himself in business. We commend the new firm to the good graces of the Edgertonites, and hope to hear of its continued prosperity.

Jack Dorland, one of the most gentlemanly of all the traveling printers, called on Tuesday. He has not been here for several years. He generally visits his relatives, the Sheets families, early in the spring to get a taste of new maple syrup, but was a little late this time.

Aside from a very full line of wall papers of all grades kept in stock, Davenport is showing a line of extra fine samples ordered as desired. In this way you can select from all the fine papers made. Prices lower than any one can sell who carries these papers in stock. Davenport.

We have received a finely printed program of the commencement exercises of the Syracuse High school held jointly with the schools of the township, at Syracuse last Saturday evening. The work was done by our friend L. B. Fretz, at the Register office and does him great credit.

See Miss Hoffman's notice of her musical Kindergarten for beginners in music. She is an able teacher, and this will give the younger boys and girls a chance to get the rudiments of a musical education. The class will meet at the music store June 5, and all who contemplate entering the class should call there to see her before that date.

Congressman McNagny notified the interested parties here last week, that he would recommend ex treasurer, S. J. Brandon for postmaster at Auburn. This could hardly be called news, and the COURIER does not publish it as such, for the three or four who assume to have charge of the party in this county kindly permitted it to be given out several months ago, that this would be the result. The people as far as we are able to learn, were not consulted.

As will be seen by our Waterloo locals Governor Matthews has pardoned Isaac Williams and Charles Benner, of that place. It will be remembered, they were sent to the penitentiary for five years, for a dirty piece of business at Waterloo. As the crime was committed while more or less under the influence of liquor, there has always been a feeling with many, that the sentence should be shortened. We know nothing of Benner, but Mr. Williams, before he took to drink, was a respectable man, and a man of some ability. We hope this lesson will teach him the necessity of letting liquor alone, and keeping away from vile companions.

Economy in house decoration interests all good housekeepers. Some little advice on this subject, together with instructions how to paper can be had by sending your address to ALFRED PEATS, Department B. 136 138 W. Madison St., Chicago, or 30-32W. 13th St. N. Y. He will also send you samples of wall paper at a lower price than you have ever seen before. They are all first quality and arranged with wide borders and ceiling decorations according to the latest style.

Found a Strange Coffin.

When the sexton of the Evergreen cemetery, Mr. Sawyer, dug the grave for E. S. McDowell's interment he came across the coffin of an unknown man, at least one who had been forgotten for it took sometime for the older citizens to make out whose it was The rough outer box was considerably decayed, and broken in but the coffin was apparently made of solid walnut and was well preserved. It was opened and the corpse was found to be a man of middle age, with sandy beard J. E. Rose, who was present when the coffin was opened, said the upper part of the body had little left but the skeleton, but the feet seemed to be natural and the stockings looked as fresh and as well fitted as if of recent burial. The coffin was put into the tool house, and carefully kept till it could be re-interred. It is supposed to be some one who was buried there without permission.

Musical Kindergarten.

I will organize a musical kindergarten term, of 10 weeks, commencing June 5, for the purpose of giving musical instruction to children between the ages of 5 and 13. Two lessons each week to each class. For further particulars call on me at the music store, North Main street. The whole class should be present June 5 to have work laid out.

FLORA HOFFMAN.

Kunderd's Livery.

Edward Kunderd has bought out Harry Martin in the Baltz livery barn and refitted it up in good style. He has put in new horses, new bugies, had the whole interior whitewashed and tidied up generally. He will keep first-class rigs and have a number one livery in every way. He asks the public to give him a share of their patronage and he will try to suit them.

New Harness Shop.

E. T. Hull who has been employed so long in the harness shop of Wm. Sheffer, has started an establishment of his own. He is located in the room south of Mossey's bakery on South Main street, and here his old friends will find him ready at all times to wait on them, and give them good, sound work at reasonable prices. Don't forget to call on him when you want a new harness, or any repairing.

A Birthday Party.

There was a nice birthday party at Harvey Smurr's in Wilmington township May 12, that being Mrs. Smurr's 50th birthday. About 60 were present including relatives, friends and neighbors and friends from a distance. Many useful gifts were received, among them being the unique gift of a setting of duck's eggs, by Mrs. Hinsdale, and a setting hen to take the job of hatching them out, the hen being the gift of Mrs. Julia Harwood. Mrs. Smurr says she will have the ducks hatched out and roast them on her next birthday. A splendid dinner followed and all had a good time.

MARRIED.

Harry Rainier and Annie L. Fisher were married last Wednesday evening, May 10,1893, at the home of the bride's mother in this place. Rev. A. S. Wooton of the First M. E. church, officiated, the ceremony being witnessed by a number of guests, relatives and friends of the families. There was also an infare reception the next day at the home of Joseph Rainier, the groom's father, at which Mr. and Mrs. Rainier entertained their guests in royal style. Among the guests from abroad were Mrs. Brad Harris, of Chicago, the bride's brother from Kendallville, and Joseph Rainier's brother, whose home is at Fayette, Ohio. The groom and bride are worthy young people, highly respected, and a host of friends welcome them to the ranks of those who are happily united for life.

CHILDREN who dine at the second table take after their parents.

THE cranberry has been introduced into Turkey. An eminently proper combination.

THE maiden spends her money for a butterfly cape, while her father has all he can do to get his grub.

THE American postage stamp will be 52 years old in May, 1893, the United States being one year behind England in its use.

KING ALEXANDER of Servia is only a boy in years, but he seems with great success to be living up to his mature-looking whiskers.

THE scheme of getting England to accept American corn products for table use is an excellent one. If the idea ever gets established over there it will doubtless find imitators in this country.

HOW to keep husbands at home is a problem to which an Eastern paper is devoting columns. As if the husband who has to be bribed, cajoled and entreated to stay at home were worth the trouble.

THE word to spell was "nincompoop." Several of the class had tripped on it, and finally a dullish-looking lad whose parents were humble but famed for horse-sense, slowly achieved the task as follows: "W-a-r-d-M-c-A-l-l-i-s-t-e-r."

THE jury considering the case of Anton Woode, Colorado's boy-murderer, failed to agree. He had killed and robbed a man in cold blood, but he is only 11 years old, and the jury believed evidently that erring childhood should be gently dealt with.

A MAN charged in the Buffalo Police Court with raising a money order from $8 to $80, grabbed the order, the principal piece of evidence against him, wadded it up, and swallowed it. He is out of jail, and the economical United States Government is just $8 in.

WARD MCALLISTER says that an American minister to be a success abroad should have plenty of money and a charming wife and be a good after-dinner speaker. A man so blessed should not be given a foreign mission. He has enough of the good things of life already.

AN applicant for divorce in a New York court made affidavit that at the time of his marriage in Russia his wife and himself, who had never seen each other, were blindfolded. This was doubtless rash, but the great mistake seems to have been that they did not remain blindfolded.

AN Oakland (Cal.) Justice fined a prisoner $20 for carrying concealed weapons. The man made an audible protest, and the fine was raised to $40. One more roar lifted it to $60. The prisoner will probably hereafter carry his tongue concealed even more rigidly than the weapons that got him into trouble.

AN Indian went to Sherman, Texas, a short time ago to find a soldier in the United States army who had eloped with his wife. When the soldier saw the Indian he ran away, but the redskin overtook him and quieted his fears. He gave the soldier $140 which belonged to his wife, and which he desired the other to give her. The noble red man said he would not kill a man for a woman he could no longer respect.

SO ALARMED are our English cousins at the number of girls picked up in this country, by their marriageable men, at the expense of Briton's fair daughters, that they are said to be thinking of trying to check this importation of wives from Columbia's shores. They evidently think this year an especially dangerous one; but what can they do in cases when, in the words of their own favorite Scottish bard:

> "To see her is to love her,
> And love but her forever."

THE best of men appear sometimes to be a strange compound of contradictory qualities; and were the accidental oversights and folly of the wisest man, the failings and imperfections of a religious man, the hasty acts and passionate words of a meek man—were they to rise up in judgment against them, and an ill-natured judge to be suffered to mark in this manner what has been done amiss, what character so unexceptionable as to be able to stand before him

OYSTER-PLANTING in Virginia waters has been much discouraged of late years by the fact that private oyster beds are not adequately protected. The law of Virginia permits any person twelve months a resident of the State to take oysters from any natural bed, and forbids any person to make private property of such beds. Where private beds are not near natural deposits they are pretty safe from pirates, but where oysters have been planted in open water near the natural beds it is almost impossible to protect them.

A LABORER in the employ of the Queen of England has been sued for debt. He testified that he received only 10 shillings per week, and was unable to make both ends meet. He also volunteered the information that the Queen's laborers received less than any other people and had to work harder. "Ah," said the Judge, "but you must think of the honor." To which the man sturdily replied: "There isn't much honor to get out of 10 shillings a week." Shakspeare never put a wiser speech in a man's mouth, not even in Jack Falstaff's when he soliloquized over Harry Hotspur's body. A man cannot pay his debts with honor.

DEAD as whaling is on the Atlantic coast it is sufficiently lively on the Pacific, though the most valuable product of the voyage is no longer oil, but whalebone. The crude bone fetches in San Francisco from $4 to $6 a pound, and a great many hundred pounds may be taken from the mouth of a single whale. The demand is steady, and much of the bone is used in the manufacture of rich and heavy silks. No substitute has been found for it, though other things are used for corsets and stays. Dressmakers make the use of real whalebone the excuse for charging especially high prices for their work, and the genuine article is vastly more durable and satisfactory than any substitute.

DON'T shut up your house lest the sun should fade your carpets, nor your hearts lest a merry laugh should shake down some of the musty old cobwebs there. If you want to ruin your sons, let them think that all mirth and social enjoyment must be left on the threshold without when they come home. When once a home is regarded as only a place to eat, sleep and drink in, the work is begun that ends in disappointment. Young people must have fun and relaxation somewhere. If they don't find it at their own hearthstone, it will be sought at other and less profitable places. Therefore, let the fire burn brightly at night, and make the homestead delightful with all those little arts that parents so perfectly understand.

IF there is any city in the world with a greater amount of snobbery than New York it is Washington. There is quite a dispute in "sassiety" circles of that municipal corporation as to whether the accent should be placed on the first or last syllable of Postmaster General Bissell's name. A similar discussion arose in 1885, when Colonel W. F. Vilas, now United States Senator from Washington, was appointed Postmaster General. At the national capital a crowd of snobs with extra creased trousers assured him that his name should be pronounced "Velaw." The Democratic Badger statesman and orator told the surrounding dudes in plain terms that his name was "Vilas," of honest Vermont Democratic derivation, and that he would not have it Frenchified if he could help it. The snobs subsided.

IN a recent work on criminology, the learned investigator says that out of ninety-eight young men criminals 44 per cent. did not blush when examined. Of one hundred and twenty-two female criminals, 81 per cent. did not blush. If our novels are to keep up with science, they must change their indicia of emotion. It must be the men who blush, and the other sex whose sensitiveness must not be a regular feature. Leander blushes as he declares himself or is suddenly brought up against a sentimental outcrop. But Hero takes it calmly. The scientist also notices that women blush about the ears rather than on the cheek. This, also, requires a change in the novels. It is a pointer, too, for the ladies' man who is watching for signs that he is making an impression. If he fastens his gaze upon the left ear he may see something that will tell him he may consider himself happy.

NEWSPAPERS IN ODD CORNERS.

Among Them Is a Unique Sheet Issued in the Canadian Northwest.

At Prince Albert, a remote but busy village in the Canadian northwest, a weekly newspaper is, or recently was, regularly published in the handwriting of its proprietor, editor, reporter, advertising agent and printer, the five being one man. He adorned his lively four-page sheet with caricatures rudely copied from comic papers, and decorated his horse and stock "ads" with rough cuts. The paper appeared in purple ink from a gelatine copying-press, or hektograph, and its editorials and local news were usually so clearly presented that the little journal was influential in the territories, read with avidity in the newspaper offices of Eastern Canada and constantly quoted as an authority. A newspaper by the same process is the Mashonaland Herald and Zambesi Times, conducted by an Englishman in the wilds of Africa, and supported by subscriptions and "ads" from miners and traders. The most northerly of newspapers is said by the Youth's Companion to be the Nord Kap, published weekly in Hammerfest, Norway, by Peter Johannsen, who lives and works in a little turf-roofed house. The Nord Kap is, however, regularly printed from news received by a ship which touches at Hammerfest but once in eight days. Sometimes the latest news arrives on the day of publication for the former batch, and then "the latest" does not get into the Nord Kap till it has been known fourteen days or more to the great world to the southward. But the most curious paper of all is that described by G. A. Sala, as formerly published in the Deccan. This paper was lithographed every morning on a square of white cotton cloth. After having perused it the subscribers employed it as a pocket handkerchief. Then they sent it to the local washerwoman, who returned it, a clean square of white cotton, to the publisher, who lithographed and issued the same sheets again and again.

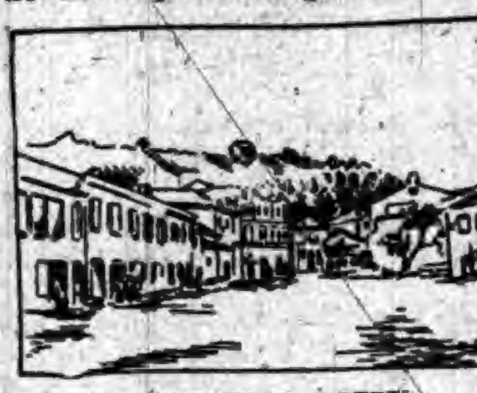
ZANTE'S AWFUL FATE.

BEAUTIFUL ISLAND RUINED BY AN EARTHQUAKE.

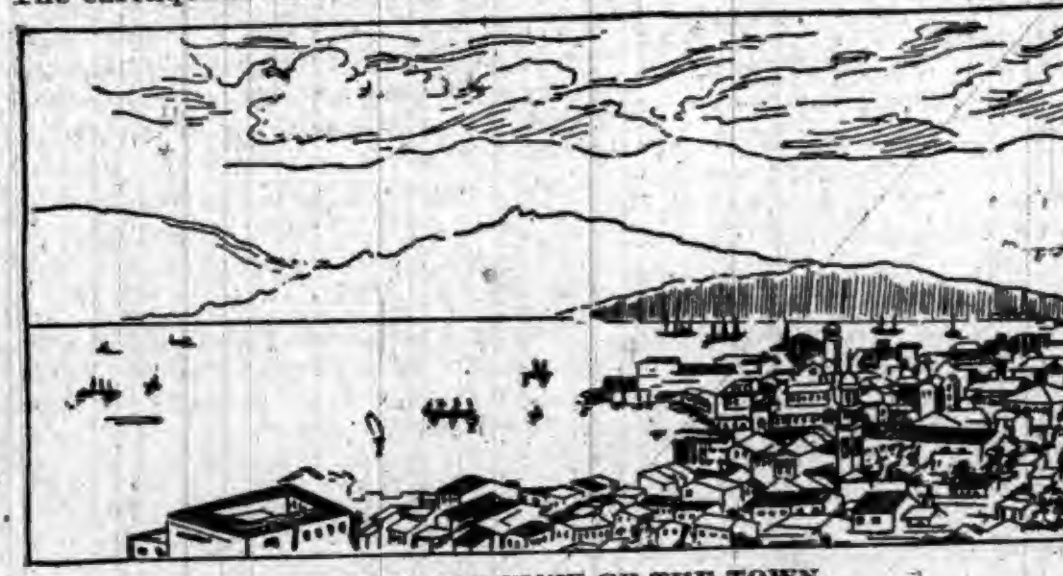
Paradise of the Ionian Group the Center of an Eruption—Hundreds of Lives Lost and the Chief City Rendered Desolate—The Calamity Foretold.

A Frightful Catastrophe.

Zante, the largest and most beautiful of the Ionian Islands, recently experienced the most destructive earthquake that has ever visited the island. This is saying a great deal when it is considered that earthquakes of a serious nature are by no means uncommon in these regions. The city of Zante sustained irreparable damage, as it seemed to be the very center of the upheaval. It may be a curious coincidence or not, but it is very singular that Prof. Falb in his prediction should have been so fatally correct. This gentleman, who can now be considered an indisputable authority on earthquakes, had cautioned the people to be prepared for a shock, which he said would occur during or immediately following the total eclipse of the sun, which took place on the 17th.

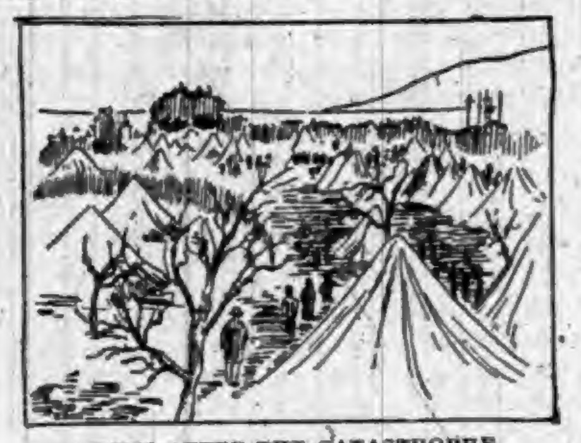


PRINCIPAL STREET.



GENERAL VIEW OF THE TOWN.

The earthquake did arrive on the day designated, and the loss of life and property in consequence was appalling. The city is but little better than a huge ruin. The streets were made impassable and in most cases totally obliterated by the enormous masses of stone and timber from the wrecked houses. Hundreds of lives were lost. The night following the principal shock was marked by tremblings of the earth and terrific noises, which almost frightened the life out of the people that remained in the city. Nobody dared to sleep, and there was the greatest lamentation and expression of grief on all sides. All open spaces were crowded with terror-stricken people.

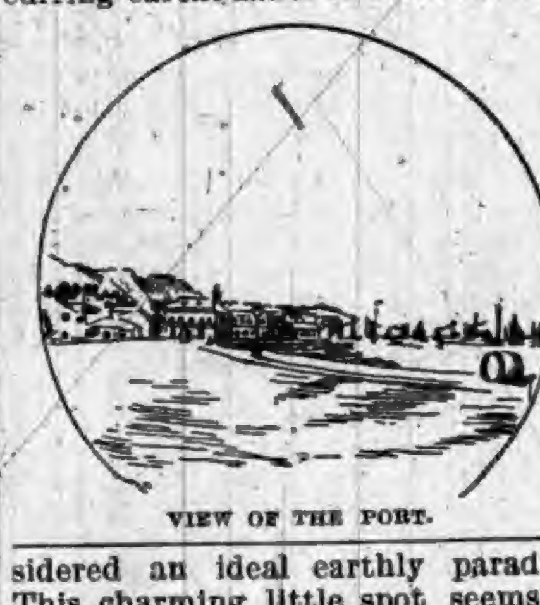


TENTS AFTER THE CATASTROPHE.

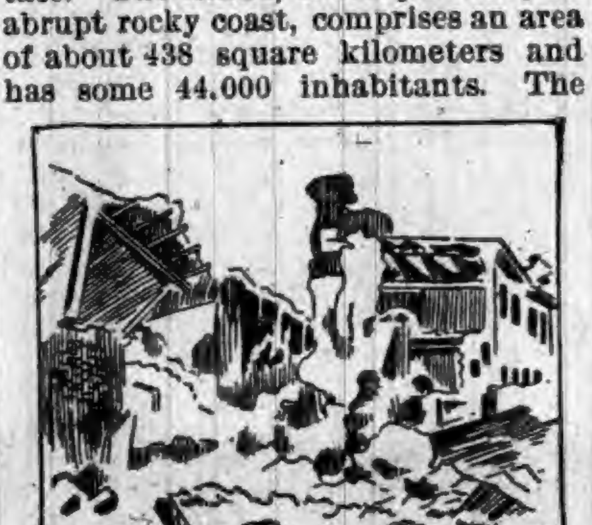
Invoking Aid from a Saint.

The day after the church dignitaries held a solemn, imposing service, beseeching the intervention of St. Denis, patron saint of the island. The relics of the saint were placed in a gold case on a pedestal in view of the immense crowd kneeling on the bare ground. The greatest devotion was evinced, and the people seemed greatly pacified.

The island of Zante or, as the Greeks call it, Zakynthos is by far the most beautiful of the Ionian Islands. Nothing can surpass the loveliness of its scenery or the delights of its exhilarating climate. Were it not for the periodically occurring earthquakes it could be considered an ideal earthly paradise. This charming little spot seems to unite all the requisite conditions for an existence of unalloyed pleasure. Olives, oranges, the most delicious grapes and other tropical or semi-tropical fruits grow here in a riotous luxury. The only blemish in this ravishing picture is the fact that Zante is the very seat of volcanic eruptions which, from time immemorial, have persisted in upsetting one's equilibrium as well as causing undesirable movements in real estate. The island, encompassed by an abrupt rocky coast, comprises an area of about 438 square kilometers and has some 44,000 inhabitants. The capital bearing the same name is situated like an amphitheater at the foot of a hill on the eastern coast. A large citadel crowns the top of the hill and the city is or, perhaps rather was the best and most substantially built city of all the Ionian Islands.



VIEW OF THE PORT.



AFTER THE EARTHQUAKE.

Churches in Ruins.

It has nearly seventeen thousand inhabitants and is the see of a Greek archbishop and a Catholic bishop. It had a number of very handsome churches and other buildings, but most of these are now in ruins. All the prominent and historically interesting structures are nothing but heaps of stones and a chaos of broken timber and twisted iron. Among the most noted buildings thus swept away was the Church of St. Mark. This was a fine specimen of Venetian architecture of the tenth century. The ancient Venetian castle, splendidly situated far above the city, and which served as the residence of the Governor of the island, is also a thing of the past. This was one of the most charming spots in the island. The castle itself was built of heavy, richly ornamented blocks of marble, and contained treasures of old Gobelin tapestry, paintings and, above all, an almost priceless collection of rare Venetian glass. The grounds about this place were laid out as a pleasure garden, almond, lemon, orange and pomegranate trees being planted in great abundance. Innumerable marble statues and splendid mosaics were scattered throughout the park at frequent intervals. All there is left of this is a heap of ruins and an area of blackened earth. The Governor himself barely escaped from being killed and was seriously wounded.

There were exciting scenes at the jail and workhouse. The massive walls caved in here and there and the frantic prisoners could be seen clinging to the window bars in desperation clamoring for help. The poor wretches that escaped from being crushed to death by the falling walls were unable to get out, as all doors had become obstructed. The hospital was badly damaged, but the patients were rescued and taken to the residence of the Catholic bishop, whose house had escaped the general destruction.

The number of ruined houses in Zante exceeds 3,000, and there is not a house left that is not more or less damaged. The damage done by the earthquake in the interior is incalculable. The shocks seem to have been greatest in the southeastern part of the island, near Cape Chien. Five of the most flourishing villages in this vicinity were wiped out entirely.

Zante has frequently been the scene of severe earthquakes, notably those that occurred in February, 1642 and 1746, and in October of 1840. This year's earthquakes have nevertheless been by far the most destructive, and it is a question whether Zante will ever recover from the effects.

Ventilation of Sleeping-Rooms.

The proper arrangement of draughts for the ventilation of sleeping-rooms has perplexed all. One thing, however, is certain. It has been proved by actual experiment that a layer of air lies against the walls which is subject to very little movement even when there is a strong circulation in the middle of the room. It is, therefore, important that a bed should not be placed close to the wall. If kept there during the daytime, it should be moved at least several inches out into the room at night. Alcoves and curtains should be avoided. In an alcove inclosed on three sides a lake of air forms, which may be compared to the stagnant pools often observed along the margins of rivers. A few yards away a rushing tide may be moved swiftly along, but these placid pools are unruffled by the current.

While placing the bed, especially the head of it, where it will be shielded from the strongest draught, there should still be enough motion to the air in that vicinity to insure fresh supplies constantly throughout the night. The prevailing lack of appetite for breakfast, as well as many cases of anæmia and worse diseases, are due to the breathing over and over again of the same air in restricted bed-rooms, where beds are too often placed in alcoves or are shielded by curtains, which are far too seldom shaken out in the fresh air.

Trees in Nature.

Nature invariably does two things when she tries to grow a tree, she protects the bark from the hottest sunshine, and roots from severe changes of temperature. Both these points are invariably overlooked by man.

Observe a maple or elm or birch as it shoots up from the ground. Its sides are clothed all the way with small twigs, unless removed by knife or browsing.

Any tree starting in an open lot is thus protected from the sun. Otherwise the extreme heat will rupture cells, and the bark will dry or split. As far as possible there must be equal development of cells on all sides of the tree. But care of the roots is even more important.

The feeding of a tree is at unequal depths, but most of it is near the surface. If the sun be allowed to strike directly on the soil the finer rootlets that do the foraging are destroyed, and extreme droughts will affect the roots for a foot in depth.

What is worse, the extreme changes of temperature also affect the tree and suck its life away. In some cases such conditions are produced as encourage the development of fungi or other enemies to plant life.

Nature guards against this by laying down each autumn a layer of leaves to emulch her forests or solitary pets.—St. Louis Globe-Democrat.

Alarming.

Charles Henry Pearson, an Englishman, has written a book in which he claims to have proved that the great races of the world are losing ground and that the Chinese, Hindoos, and South American half-breeds are the coming leaders of civilization.

Too Much Curiosity.

The new servant girl came to the lady crying and holding on to her finger.

"What's the matter?" asked the lady

"I've run a fork into my finger, and if it's this plated stuff I'll get lockjaw."

"Don't be afraid. All my silver is genuine. I don't keep any plated ware in the house."

Next morning the servant girl and all the silver were missing, and the table ware was all plated for some time after, until the times were better.

Brightest Part of My Trip.

A New York fashion correspondent of a Southern paper gives out the following:

A lady writes: "I have read your letters for a long time, and have often envied you the opportunity you enjoy of seeing the beautiful things you describe. I used to think when I read of those charming dresses and parasols and hats at Lord & Taylor's, that theirs must be one of those stores where a timid, nervous woman like myself, having but a few dollars to spare for a season's outfit, would be of so little account that she would receive little attention; but when you said, in one of your letters a few months ago, that goods of the same quality were really cheaper there than elsewhere, because they sold more goods in their two stores than any other firm in New York, and that because they sold more they bought more, and consequently bought cheaper, I determined, if I ever went to New York, I would go to Lord & Taylor's.

"That long-waited-for time came in the early autumn, and I found myself standing before that great entrance, with those wonderful windows at either side. I summoned my courage and entered, as I suppose tens of thousands of just such timid women as I have done before. My fears were gone in an instant. The agreeable attention put me at my ease at once, and I felt as much at home as though I were in the little country store where my people have 'traded' for nearly a quarter of a century.

"And now, as I wear the pretty things I purchased, or see them every day and find them all so satisfactory, I think of my visit to this great store as the brightest part of my trip to New York."

KNOWLEDGE

Brings comfort and improvement and tends to personal enjoyment when rightly used. The many, who live better than others and enjoy life more, with less expenditure, by more promptly adapting the world's best products to the needs of physical being, will attest the value to health of the pure liquid laxative principles embraced in the remedy, Syrup of Figs.

Its excellence is due to its presenting in the form most acceptable and pleasant to the taste, the refreshing and truly beneficial properties of a perfect laxative; effectually cleansing the system, dispelling colds, headaches and fevers and permanently curing constipation. It has given satisfaction to millions and met with the approval of the medical profession, because it acts on the Kidneys, Liver and Bowels without weakening them and it is perfectly free from every objectionable substance.

Syrup of Figs is for sale by all druggists in 50c and $1 bottles, but it is manufactured by the California Fig Syrup Co. only, whose name is printed on every package, also the name, Syrup of Figs, and being well informed, you will not accept any substitute if offered.

S.S.S. CURES MALARIAL POISON

Nature should be assisted to throw off impurities of the blood. Nothing does it so well, so safely or so promptly as Swift's Specific.

LIFE HAD NO CHARMS.

For three years I was troubled with malarial poison, which caused my appetite to fail, and I was greatly reduced in flesh, and life lost all its charms. I tried mercurial and potash remedies, but to no effect. I could get no relief. I then tried S.S.S. A few bottles of this wonderful medicine made a complete and permanent cure, and I now enjoy better health than ever. J. A. RICE, Ottawa, Kan.

DENOUNCE THE BILL.

NEW TARIFF MEASURE MEETS WITH OPPOSITION.

Manufacturers Condemn It Because Their Power to Rob the People Would Be Lessened—Twenty-five Per Cent. More than Is Necessary.

Why They Object.

The Reform Club's tariff bill was drawn up by enlightened, unselfish, and disinterested men—men who are anxious to see their country prosper. The worst that the protectionists can say of them is that they are "theorists and hobby-riders." They propose a bill which, as compared with the present tariff, would be justice itself; yet even their bill does not do away with special privileges, for it leaves an average protection of 25 per cent. to the favorite industries of McKinley. This is an offer to compromise with the manufacturers who now get an average of 50 per cent. protection.

The manufacturers manifest great anger at the proposition to split in two their rates of levying taxes upon the consumer. They dance and stamp and say all manner of foolish things.

If a band of pirates were in control of all of our ports and had become so strong that they could not only levy tribute upon the great bulk of our imports but could dictate legislation so that they would collect from the people 50 per cent. of the selling value of clothing, and of some kinds of foods, furniture, utensils, implements, etc.; then, if they had held this special privilege for thirty years, we could imagine how red in the face they would get and how they would storm and curse at the proposition to break down their industry by allowing them to take only half as much plunder as formerly. It is not strange, then, that the manufacturers who have enjoyed similar privileges should rave at the Reform Club bill as they do in their organ, the American Economist. The issue of April 21 contains letters from fifteen manufacturers on the effect of the proposed measure.

"It would necessitate a reduction of at least 50 per cent. in wages paid in my industry," says the proprietor of the Riverside knitting mill. "It would blot out the fine kid glove business entirely in this country," say Dempster & Place, glove manufacturers. "Would cripple our industry seriously," say Pratt, Read & Co., ivory cutters. "There would be no wages paid here by us, for we would have no business," says Jas. Lindsley, manufacturer of lime and cement. "A soup-house incubator," is what E. A. Hartshorn, flax, hemp and jute spinner, calls the bill. "It would certainly wipe out our industry, unless our operatives would submit to a reduction in their wages of at least 50 per cent.," say the British Hosiery Co. "There would be no wages paid, as we would wind up the business," says the Southington Cutlery Company. "We would cease to be manufacturers," say W. C. Fayerweather, manufacturer of iron and steel bridges. "It would ruin my business," says S. B. Vrooman, proprietor of a planing mill.

To tell the truth not all of the manufacturers belong to the pirate class, though piracy has become so elevated that it has become quite the fashion for manufacturers to claim membership. Planing mills would continue to turn; knitting mills and spinning machines to revolve; hammers, chisels and saws to pound and cut; and machinery to run at even greater speed than formerly. It is true that in some branches of manufacture some departments might have to cease; but the increased work in the other departments, due to cheaper raw materials and to the greater demand for goods at lower prices, would more than off-set the loss to the wage-earner, though it might not do so for the manufacturer.

The one strange feature of this whole business is that it should, apparently, never occur to the American Economist to consult any but these piratical manufacturers. In its opinion, the Reform Club men who drafted the bill are theorists, and not "practical business men," because they do not belong to the pirate band. For thirty years this band has told us what rates of duty would be good for it and the country. Shall we, now, think of fixing rates without consulting it? "Impossible, supremely ridiculous!" says the band's chief mouth-piece.—Byron W. Holt.

Twenty-five Per Cent. More than Enough.

Mr. A. H. Saxton is connected with Alfred Field & Co., hardware and cutlery, Chambers street, New York, and is a recognized authority on tariff matters in the hardware business. To a reporter of American Industries, on the Reform Club's tariff bill, he said:

It is well arranged, placing the highest rates on the things that can best stand them, and will leave no incentive for dishonest people to violate the law by false invoices. It may seem like a revolution to change from the present tariff to that proposed by the Reform Club; but, as everybody now knows that the present tariff is a barefaced robbery of the people, a revolution in rates must come sooner or later. If the Democratic party do not do their full duty, and do it at the earliest practicable moment, they will, in my judgment, lose the opportunity of a generation, and be false to the issue which revolutionized them into power.

All this silly claim and talk about the necessity of protecting manufacturers is, and has always been, absolutely absurd. If put into proper wording it would mean, "robbery of the people for the benefit of the manufacturers." There is no class of people in the States that need less aid from the Government than these same manufacturers, and it was demonstrated over and over again during the last tariff discussion that their claimed need of protection was false and insincere, and simply set up to increase the advantages they had already long enjoyed. As a single illustration of this the table cutlery manufacturers went to Washington and claimed that unless they could obtain a large advance over the then existing rate of 35 per cent., they must go to the wall and out of business, and this, in the face of the fact that table cutlery had been successfully made here, and was growing and prosperous, under a 24 per cent. tariff. In order to show up the absurdity of their claim for any increased duties, I went to the trouble of finding out what I could duplicate some of their leading patterns for abroad, and this was the result: That if table cutlery was on the free list, I could not import, as it cost me as much in Sheffield as I paid for it here, and then I had the freight and expenses besides.

It was also proved by an annual statement of one of the table cutlery companies that they were earning large dividends under the old tariff, so that a duty of 25 per cent. on this article, as suggested by the Reform Club, is not low enough to afford the Government much revenue, as only a few of the finest and most reputable goods can come in under it. Also, take pocket cutlery, which was made here and prospered under a tariff of 24 per cent. The manufacturers of these goods did not stop at any sort of misrepresentation to gain their object under the McKinley bill, and gave out the impression that it was for life or death if the increase asked for was granted or not. After they had succeeded, four of the companies representing an actual investment, according to their own statement before Congress, of $400,000, offered the same to the public for $1,600,000, or four times its actual value, and it is now interesting to hear the reasons they give in their prospectus as to why their plants are worth four times the original investment. I quote from their prospectus.

"This business, with a record of over twenty years, has steadily grown into a profitable undertaking. The manufactured goods now equal the best foreign makes, and it is impossible now to turn the channel of trade back to the foreign manufacturers," and "the business of these companies has steadily increased year by year—the profits for 1892 may be fairly estimated to be not less than sufficient to pay 8 per cent. on the ($800,000) preferred stock, and 15 per cent. on the ($800,000) common stock."

In other words they calculate to pay in dividends $184,000 per annum, on an actual investment of $400,000. So that it seems that a tariff of 25 per cent. on pocket cutlery is ample protection, even if that side of it is considered.

I am in thorough accord with the Reform Club's idea that all metal manufacturers should come under the uniform rate, and I am also in accord with their plan that all duties should be ad valorem. The plan of the complex duties of the McKinley bill was simply to hide the enormity of the advances. They did not dare put a duty of 100 per cent. ad valorem on cutlery, and 300 per cent. on pearl buttons, but they endeavored to hide these rates by a system of specific duties. How well they accomplished their object the last two elections amply demonstrate. The protection ostrich did not succeed in hiding himself by sticking his specific head into the sand. The intelligence of the people to find him out had not been counted on. The intelligence of the people was demonstrated, however, by the political revolution that followed.

I am inclined to think that as a revenue measure the Reform Club's suggestion will be worth the most careful consideration and study of our Washington statesmen. What we want is a simple, straightforward revenue tariff. There must be no coquetting with this interest or that interest. The day of paternalism must be in the past, and the responsibility is on the Democratic party to see to it that no laws are put on the records for the specific purpose of swindling one set of men for the benefit of another set. There were lots of rates in the old war tariff that had become absolutely ridiculous, except from a protective standpoint.

Increased Interest in Taxation.

The increased interest, during the last few years, in the subject of taxation is simply marvelous. Previous to 1888 the subject was supposed to interest only theoretical men, professors, economists and editors, who, to maintain their dignity, felt called upon to discuss the subject occasionally. The occasional articles by Wells, George, Sumner, and others appeared, at least to the careless observer, to have been seed sowed in stony places. Cleveland's bold message of 1887, compelling the two leading parties to make the tariff the leading issue, precipitated a discussion which has extended into other kinds of taxation and which is thickening and deepening during political campaigns, and between them, and which will not cease until radical reforms have occurred.

Instead of occasional campaign articles on the tariff question, prepared for partisan papers, interest in the subject is now so wide-spread that it pays nearly all the leading dailies to employ a tariff editor and to devote much space to the subject. Numerous press bureaus supply several columns a week of tariff matter to thousands of country papers which are trying to keep up with the times by supplying what is most demanded by their readers. Many of the legislatures of different States have devoted more time than usual to the subject of taxation and have appointed committees that have spent days listening to reformers of varying opinions and intelligence. The New York Daily World is now printing a series of articles, each several columns in length, on frauds in State and local taxation.

Henry George's paper, the Standard, did much to arouse discussion, but it was never self-supporting and ceased to exist more than a year ago. Its function is now performed by more than 100 self-supporting Single-Tax papers. The truth is that there has never, since man began to cultivate fields, to build cities and to carry on an extensive trade, been any real reform in taxation. Under monarchies, where the masses had only to obey laws, it was not strange that the unjust and slipshod methods handed down from ancient times should have remained practically unchanged; but in a republic of enlightened citizens, it is astonishing that the great evils of unjust and unnecessary taxation have not long ago attracted sufficient attention to lead to what will now soon follow the complete overthrow of all kinds of indirect taxation.

Indian Methods of Fighting.

There is a great difference between fighting Indians and fighting white men. The savages always get in a position where they will be shielded, and only fight when they want to, and soldiers are forced to fight whether they want to or not, and these scouts know better how to surprise them than our soldiers, for they are intelligent warriors and take advantage of every little circumstance. Every Indian is a General, and knows exactly what to do under any circumstances. He knows which is the best position for him and how to take the enemy at a disadvantage. He is always, under all conditions, perfectly self-possessed, and there is an individuality about him at all times. The soldier is mechanical and part of a great machine, and thereby loses his individuality. If there is a weak spot in a line and a lot of Indian boys are in front they will drop on that point and make as much out of it as a Cæsar, Napoleon or Hannibal could do, for they will do exactly right, and that is all the best General in the world could do. The Apaches are the shrewdest and best fighters in the world. They will strip themselves and ascend a precipice like a cat, and they will do all this after making a day's march. During an expedition they danced through one night, to the discomfort of our soldiers, who were trying to sleep, marched all next day, and climbed places where a coyote would have trouble in getting. I have known them to run suddenly on a quail and kill it with a stone, and run down a wounded antelope. They are just as much smarter than any other Indian as anybody could be. They have wonderfully good eyesight, being able to follow a trail on a starlight night as well as I could in daylight. I have seen these fellows ambuscade in a place as level as a floor.

There was a wagon train in 1871, going out of Arizona into California, with an escort in advance. The Indians saw them coming and ambuscaded in the road, which was perfectly level, with here and there a clump of grass. The Apaches lay upon their stomachs, threw dust over themselves and tied grass in their hair and were passed by the escort unnoticed. After the escort was some distance off, the Indians jumped up and captured the wagons in the rear and killed the teamsters. These fellows take all the chance, whereas, other Indians seek a place where they will be safe, and shoot the enemy.—Gen. George Crook.

Ambition.

In passing the ruins of a building that had burned a few days previously, writes a contributor, my attention was attracted by a little boy who stood on the wreck of a printing-press and howled vociferously.

Fearing that he was caught in the machinery and that a serious accident had befallen him, I hastened to the spot and asked in an anxious tone:

"Are you caught? Does it hurt you?" No answer came but a howl.

"Where does it hurt?" I inquired.

"Nowhere, mum, only. Tommy Knapp said I couldn't climb as high as he could, and I can't."

Always Welcome.

So courteous are Manxmen, that in the Isle of Man, no matter at what hour of the day or night a stranger arrives he is said to be "just in time," for something or another. There is a story that early one morning a dance was in progress on one of the piers, when a shipwrecked sailor, who had been drifting about on a spar and had fortunately "landed" on the girders below, crawled up the steps. A committeeman came forward—they are never surprised at Blackpool—smiled, bowed and said: "Pleased to see you, sir. Can I find you a partner?"

At a Touch.

A neat little experiment in electricity is to soak half a sheet of stout foolscap paper in water, drying it rapidly before a fire, spreading it while warm on a varnished table or dry woolen cloth and then rubbing the surface sharply with a piece of India rubber. The paper becomes so electrified that it will stick to a smooth wall or looking glass, and also attracts small bits of tissue paper like a magnet, and on being laid upon a japanned tray which is stood upon three thoroughly dry goblets will cause the tray to give out sparks at a touch of the finger.

Danger!

If you have a feeling of oppression and uneasiness a little above the diaphragm, and just below the right ribs, aggravated by lying on the right side, look out! As sure as fate, your liver is disordered. Perhaps not seriously as yet, but—fatal hepatic abscesses are not uncommon. Hostetter's Stomach Bitters is the precise remedy to regulate the liver, and prevent its congestion and inflammation, and to disperse such minor indicia of its derangement as yellowness of the skin and ball of the eye, furred tongue, sourness of the breath, nausea on rising in the morning, dizziness, sick headache and constipation. By relaxing the bowels painlessly, it opens a channel of exit for the superfluous bile, checks a tendency to congestion and engorgement of the liver, at the same time giving a gentle impetus to its secretive action, and affords relief to the stomach, which is usually inactive, out of order and oppressed with wind when the bowels are costive. Use the Bitters also in fever and ague, rheumatism and kidney troubles.

Compressed Air.

Careful experiments made in England show that the effect of compressed air on men depends largely on their physical condition and temperament. Those of plethoric habit suffer most. A pressure of two atmospheres does not appear to injure men in good health, and periods of four hours of continuous work are common in air of this density. As the pressure is increased the time of continuous working is usually shortened. Paralysis is the common trouble induced by working too long under high pressures.

A reversible coasting hill has been the wish of many a heart since sleds were invented. Not every one has expressed the wish as well as the boy mentioned in Harper's Young People.

Bob was sledding. "Oh dear!" he sighed, as he pulled his sled up the steep hill, "I wished I owned a tame earthquake to turn this hill upside down for me whenever I want it to."

Housekeepers Should Remember.

The Government Chemists, after having analyzed all the principal brands of baking powder in the market, in their reports placed the "Royal" at the head of the list for strength, purity and wholesomeness; and thousands of tests all over the country have further demonstrated the fact that its qualities are, in every respect, unrivaled.

Avoid all baking powders sold with a gift or prize, or at a lower price than the Royal, as they invariably contain alum, lime or sulphuric acid, and render the food unwholesome.

Just Like Her Sainted Mother.

John Reis was struck on the head by his daughter Julia with a potato-smasher, and for a while it was thought he was very seriously injured. He was attended by an ambulance surgeon. Julia is 14, and wanted to attend a dance with her beau, but her father objected, and the girl, in her rage, snatched up the potato-smasher and knocked her father senseless. To-day, in the Ewen street Court, he, having in the meantime recovered, refused to make any charge against his daughter, whom he looked at admiringly as she stood before the bar. "She's just the same as her dead mother was, Judge, full of pluck," said the happy but wounded parent, "and I cannot make a charge against her." She was discharged. —Philadelphia Times.

Custom Founded by Sun Worshipers.

How many can tell the origin of the habit of closing the eyes in prayer? Far back in the past the sun was the universal object of worship. As it rose above the horizon the devotee thanked it for its return to bless the world. As it set in the west he implored its early return. His face was always toward the sun in prayer, and his eyes were closed to prevent blindness. The habit has passed down from father to son for thousands of years. Though the object of worship has been changed, the custom survives. —Progress Thinker.

The Rear Guard.

Flight from the field of battle may be due to prudence, not cowardice; yet when retreat is necessary, there are few laggards in the race. It is said that when a famous French General was obliged to retreat, as he and his aid-de-camp were fleeing before the enemy he breathlessly inquired:

"Who are the rear guard?"

"The men, who have the poorest horses, General," replied the aid, who was making good use of his spurs.

ROOT AND COMPANY

SHERIFF'S SALE.

By virtue of an execution to me directed from the Clerk of the DeKalb circuit court, in a cause wherein the First National Bank of Auburn, Indiana, is plaintiff, and the Auburn Creamery Company is defendant, requiring me to make the sum of one hundred and twenty-two dollars and eighty six cents, with interest on said judgment and costs, I will expose at Public Sale, to the highest bidder, on

Saturday, May 20, 1893,

between the hours of 10 o'clock a. m., and 4 o'clock p. m., of said day, at the door of the Court House in Auburn, DeKalb county, Indiana, the rents and profits for a term not exceeding seven years, of the following real estate, to-wit:

Lots numbered ten [10], eleven [11], twenty-six [26] and twenty-seven [27] and improvements thereon in Shaffer, Robbins & Boland Addition to the town of Auburn, situated in DeKalb county, state of Indiana.

If such rents and profits will not sell for a sufficient sum to satisfy said judgment, interest and costs, I will at the same time and place expose to public sale the fee simple of said real estate, or so much thereof as may be sufficent to discharge said judgment, interest and costs. Said sale will be made without any relief whatever from valuation and appraisement laws.

GEORGE C. RALSTON Sheriff of DeKalb county

McClellan and Garwood, Att'ys for plaintiff.
Auburn, Indiana, April 26, 1893. 17-20

Curious Names in Martindale's American Law Directory.

While the ordinary reader would not find the work much more interesting reading than a dictionary, yet the student of nomenclature who has any appreciation of the humorous might not find it so dry. For instance, there are five Doolittles and only one Dunmore in Utica, N. Y. In Missouri we find Doolittle & Steele, and in a former edition Lay & Belch. William Shakespere is in Michigan, as is also C. U. Legg. In New York we find Walter Scott and Peter C. De Wolf, and in an early edition was Rod & Furlong. Oliver Cromwell is in Ohio, Mr. Dunwell of New York. B. A. Man of Minnesota and Charles B. Earley of Pennsylvania are creditable names, but Sauerherring of Wisconsin. A. Jay Valentine of West Virginia, Hollowpeter of Pennsylvania and Bumpass of Texas are certainly unique.

Free to Home Seekers.

The Northwestern Home Seeker is the name of a newspaper just issued, giving valuable information regarding the agricultural, mineral and other resources of South Dakota.

This new state is enjoying a wonderful prosperity and any person looking for a desirable location, or interested in obtaining information concerning the diversified resources of South Dakota, will be mailed a copy of this paper free of charge by sending their address to W. Cures Despepia.

Rebecca Wilkinson, of Brownsvalley, Ind., says: "I have been in a distressed condition for three years from nervousness, weakness of the stomach, dyspepsia and indigestion until my health was gone, I had been doctoring constantly with no relief. I bought one bottle of South American Nervine, which did me more good good any $50 worth of doctoring I ever did in my life. I would advise every weakly person to use this valuable and lovely remedy: a few bottles of it has cured me completely. I consider it the grandest medicine in the world." Warranted the most wonderful stomach and nerve cure ever known. Trial bottle 15 cents. Sold by Robbins & McCord.

The total recorded immigration to this country is 16,004,093, almost as many as the whole population of Spain.

King of Remedies.

The Great South American Nervine Tonic is absolute king of remedies in this country. It will cure every case of Nervous Dyspepsia and Indigestion in this nation. It will raise the invalid from a bed of Nervous Prostration of years duration to refreshing health in a few weeks. It quickly cures all cases of St. Vitus's Dance; prevents heart failure and failure of the mind. Warranted the greatest nerve cure ever known. It is pleasant to the taste as the sweetest nectar. Sold by Robbins & McCord, Auburn, Ind.

If an "at home" means an evening reception, an after call is necessary; if it is simply a tea, no call is necessary.

Relief in Six Hours.

Distressing Kidney and Bladder diseases relieved in six hours by the New Great South American Kidney Cure. This new remedy is a great Surprise and delight to physicians on account of its exceeding promptness in relieving pain in the bladder, kidneys, back and every part of the urinary passages in male or female. It relieves retention of water and pain in passing it almost immediately. If you want quick relief and cure this is your remedy. Sold by Robbins & McCord, Druggists, Auburn, Ind.

The L. M. C. held their session with Mrs. Emma Keep, on North Wayne street, Tuesday evening of this week.

The M. E. church held their quarterly meeting Sunday and Monday, May 14 and 15. Rev. L. E Knox, of Wawaka, Ind., preached the sermon Sunday morning.

A letter from Chicago, received this week, states that "the exhibits are now coming in and being put in place very rapidly," also that everything in Chicago now is "fair."

Mrs. John Jackman and Mrs. Frank Kennedy went Thursday of last week to Fort Wayne on a shopping expedition, spending the day and returning in the evening to Waterloo.

J. B. Hoover was buried in the cemetery in Waterloo at one o'clock Friday, May 16. Mr Hoover was visiting his son in Ashley at the time of his death. See obituary in another column.

The 13th annual commencement of the high school will take place May 26. The contest will occur the evening of the 25th. There will be six graduates—one young lady and five young men.

Bishop H. J. Becker delivered his lecture on "Walks about Sacred Places, Ruined Temples and Palaces of Jerusalem, Nazareth, Bethany and Bethlehem" with a prelude on "Greece and the Forum and Catacombs of Rome," Monday evening. He is a highly educated man and very interesting speaker.

Frank McEnterfer and Miss Anna Graves were married Sunday afternoon at 4 o'clock. It was a very quiet wedding, only the near relatives of the contracting parties being present. Mr. McEnterfer is in the employ of Boyer & Leas and has been in the employ of Mr. Boyer for many years. He is an estimable young man. May happiness and prosperity attend them.

ECKHART CARRIAGE CO. AUBURN IND.

TO THE PEOPLE OF DEKALB AND SURROUNDING COUNTIES:

We wish to say that we have the finest line of Surreys, Buggies and Road Wagons ever offered in this county. Our work is so well known that it seems unnecessary to speak of its merits. We have been engaged in the manufacture of Carriages and Buggies at Auburn for the past nineteen years and our entire experience dates back to 1857. Come and see us before you buy and we will deal fairly with you and give you prices that will suit the times.

Factory and Repository, East 7th St., Auburn, Ind.

ECKHART CARRIAGE CO.

Dr. A. A. Corkins, the pile cure physician, will be here again regularly now on each Saturday.

Mr. Nevada Walter, wife and son Russell, of Garrett, spent Saturday and Sunday with the family of D. W. Fair.

The weather for the past week has been very good for plowing and all of the farmers in this neighborhood have been improving their time.

The Sunday school at Butler Center is still progressing. A large number of people, especially the young, were present last Sabbath. Mrs. Etta Houser is superintendent and Cora Heitz secretary.

A very serious accident happened last Monday about one o'clock in which Mrs. William Ensley received a serious injury. Mr. Ensley had been grubbing out a tall tamarack stub and it seemed as though the stub started to fall in another direction from that in which they intended it to fall, and fell in the direction of his little girl about five years old. Mrs. Ensley, thinking the stub would strike the child, ran to save it, and in so doing got under the stub just as it fell. It struck her across the shoulders, but the doctor reported no bones broken. The stub fell about a foot and a half from the child and it would have escaped injury. Mrs. Ensley is resting easier at this writing.

Obituary.

Jacob B. Hoover was born in Stark county, Ohio, March 25, 1817, and died at the home of his son, Frank P. Hoover in Ashley, Ind., May 14, 1893, his age being 76 years, one month and 19 days. He was united in marriage to Louisa Zentner Oct. 13, 1839, with whom he lived till her death, which took place at their home in Waterloo, Oct. 30, 1888. To this long and happy union, eleven children were born, of whom six survive. Of those dead, Benton died at the age of 24, of wounds received at the battle of Resaca, Ga., May 15, 1864; Winfield died at Chicago, in 1873, at the age of 22; Alice died at the home of Isaac Hague in Auburn, at the age of 22; Esther died at the age of 8, and Emmett at 3 months. Of those who survive, Emmeline is Mrs. Charles Raut, Julia is Mrs. Isaac Hague, Frances is Mrs. Herman Lobmiller, all residing in Auburn. Hattie is Mrs. Geo. A. Smith and she as well as Elias reside in Chicago. Frank is a resident of Ashley.

Mr. Hoover moved from Ohio to DeKalb county about 1849 and settled on a farm in Union township. He afterwards moved to Auburn and later to Waterloo, where he had his home till the death of his wife in 1888, since which time he has made his home with his children. Mr. Hoover was a man who secured and retained the respect of all who knew him He held at various times several important positions, including that of postmaster at Auburn, and was several terms marshal of Waterloo, to which he was elected by the votes of men of all parties in a republican town, though he was a democrat. He was at all times a man of many social and friendly qualities, well informed on almost every subject, and his familiar and friendly greeting and well known face and form will be missed by our people. One more pioneer has gone to his rest, but the respect of the community will follow him. The interment was at the Waterloo cemetery at 1 p. m. Tuesday, when he was laid to rest by the side of his wife.

Out of Potatoes.

Mr. and Mrs. Sherman Dickinson were in town Saturday and bought two bushels of potatoes of Kruger, and put them in a box to take them home. An acquaintance got in to ride home with them. He had a parcel of pork that he bought, and a box in which it is supposed he had brought eggs to town. They soon noticed he was picking up their potatoes and putting them into his box, Mrs. Dickinson asked him to hand this box to her, but he handed her the parcel of meat instead. This was done three times, but finally, as he saw Mrs. Dickinson was going to take the box, and that he was discovered, he emptied them out, the box, though a small one, being nearly full. He offered to pay her to keep still, but she preferred, to do as she pleased and so gave the whole story to the COURIER. We did not ask her for the name, but they add, that for some time they have had various articles stolen, and they think they have a clue now.

READ.—SPEAR HEAD possesses more qualities of intrinsic value than any other plug tobacco produced. It is the sweetest, the toughest, the richest. SPEAR HEAD is absolutely, positively and distinctively different in flavor from any other plug tobacco. A trial will convince the most skeptical of this fact. It is the largest seller of any similar shape and style on earth, which proves that it has caught the popular taste and pleases the people. Try it, and participate in the contest for prizes. See that a TIN TAG is on every 10 cent piece of SPEAR HEAD you buy. Send in the tags, no matter how small the quantity.

Very sincerely,
THE P. J. SORG COMPANY, MIDDLETOWN, OHIO.

A list of the people obtaining these prizes in this county will be published in this paper immediately after February 1st, 1894.

Not so Strange.

So many people wonder and ask themselves, why it is that among so many cough syrups, Dr. Marshall's Lung Syrup, is so far superior for coughs. This is not so strange for this medicine was a lifetime study of Dr. Marshall and perfected by him while searching for his own health, the purest drugs are used in its manufacture, hence the results. The only way we can convince you of the true merit, of this medicine is for you, to give it a trial, it is guarranteed to give satisfaction. Price 25, and 50 cts and $1. Sold by druggists and dealers.

AUBURN AND VICINITY.

Some Reminiscences of its Early Days and Pioneer Citizens.

1871.

Than Auburn, no town in Northern Indiana has better surroundings, railroad facilities, more promising business attractions and hence no peer in normal and steady growth.

Practically the commercial center of this section of country its natural advantages and geographical position offered inducements that the practiced eye of the experienced manufacturer readily recognized and the streets of the quiet town began to be trod by many a stranger intent on leaving the chances for safe and lucrative investment in real estate and the probable result of possible business ventures.

Senator Sherman Renews His Attack.

Senator Sherman renewed his attack and refused to be convinced even by the oratory of the Iowa senator. He wanted the senate to do the straightforward thing and not fizzle about it [illegible] do not make believe that you are deceiving yourselves in giving it a 70-cent silver dollar, or two 35-cent half-dollars." If the children cry for it, as the Senator has said they did, "Why not give them Castoria?" said Sherman. He knew that it was a popular thing with the little ones, more popular he thought than even the souvenir half-dollars would be. The galleries looked down in surprise as these remarks came from Sherman, and congressmen who entered the chamber just as Mr. Sherman uttered them, dropped into the vacant chairs nearest the door.

A Pottery Party.

A pottery party is a late artistic novelty for an evening entertainment. The invitations are written on paper having the watermark in squares, and so cut that when open it will suggest a vase. The guests are expected to bring some fact about pottery, either historical, technicial, or decorative. The hostess provides a variety of specimens of pottery to be looked at, and to start the conversation. A professional elocutionist is engaged to tell some anecdotes concerning the making of pottery. A vase stands by each plate at supper, holding, not flowers, because many vases are decorated with flowers, but a roll of paper on which the guest's name is written. As the general term pottery includes porcelain ("china," as it is commonly called), stoneware, earthenware, faience, majolica, and terra cotta, there is a chance for everyone, who will take the trouble, to have something interesting to say.—From "Artistic Noses, in Demorest's Family Magazine for May.

Republican papers are howling because postmasters of the fourth class are being changed so rapidly. But it is not half as bad as when Harrison went into power four years ago. Now compare these two months with Harrison's first two months. A dispatch from Washington dated May 4th, settles this question. It reads:

The total number of fourth-class postmasters appointed was 3,804 as against 5,104 made during the first two months of Harrison's administration. The number of appointments made during the last two months to fill vacancies caused by resignations and deaths was 2,685 as against 1,608 made during the corresponding period of the last administration. The number of removals made during the last two months is shown to have been only 1,209, while the number of removals made during the first two months of the Harrison administration reached 3,496. The excess of appointments four years ago was therefore 1,210 and the excess of removals 2,287, while the number of appointments made on account of resignations and deaths was 1,077 more than four years ago.

Frank Leslie's Popular Monthly.

The [illegible] Valley, sympathetically described by one of the residents, Dr. Peter MacQueen, and illustrated with a score of charming views, occupies with vernal seasonability the front place in Frank Leslie's Popular Monthly for May. Another timely paper, bearing as it does upon the question of a National Quarantine for the United States, is the graphic sketch of "Caribbean Quarantine" experience, by Henry Arthur Herbert of Muckross. An exciting narrative of the ascent of Mount Etna is accompanied by numerous views of the great Sicilian volcano, and its recent eruption. Among the other illustrated articles are "The World's Fair Fisheries Exhibit," by Charles Bradford Hudson; an entertaining account of Chinese cuisine and restaurant life in Mott street, New York City, by that vivacious journalist, Don Seitz; "Persian Pottery," by James Bassett, the eminent Orientalist; and "Carnivorous Plants," by Colonel Nicolas Pike. The department of fiction includes an exquisite story by Paul Bourget, the author of "Cosmopolis," entitled "Dom Griffi."

Selling Tobacco to Minors.

We clip the following from a recent number of the Lagrange Democrat:

J. F. Thomas, the druggist, was arrested on Tuesday on a charge of selling cigarettes to minors and on the following morning pleaded guilty to two counts and Justice Bingham assessed fines amounting to twenty-nine dollars and fifty cents.

A number of other dealers are being looked after by the parents of young boys who are addicted to the use of these "coffin-nails," and will no doubt be prosecuted. The habit is an infernal nuisance as well as one of exceeding danger [illegible] regulating their sale should be rigorously enforced.

A Costly Bell.

[Indianapolis Sentinel.]

The Columbian bell, which will be cast next month in Troy, N. Y., will be a most wonderful bell. Valuable relics recalling important events of our national history will be cast into the bill. It will weigh 15,000 pounds and will cost $6,500. Rare coins, old swords, silver goblets and gold pens that were used in signing documents will be used. A link of the watch chain worn by President Lincoln at the time of his assassination, a spoon belonging to John C. Calhoun, flints taken from the room in which Thomas Jefferson wrote the declaration of independence, and souvenirs of Washington, Hamilton, Gen. Schuyler and other great men are included among the most valuable relics. Two hundred packages each one representing from one to fifty contributions, have been received. Will Indiana and Indianapolis contribute something. Have not the citizens of the great Indiana commonwealth something valuable in connection with the history of the state that can be used to make up the great bell? If so, send it to the Meneely bell foundry, Troy, N. Y., promptly.

The Inventor of the Telephone.

[From Harper's Bazaar.]

Professor Alexander Graham Bell, the inventor of the telephone, has just completed a new residence in Washington, his former home having been purchased by Vice-President Morton four years ago. During this time Professor Bell and his family have been much abroad, and have passed each summer at their cottage at Cape Breton and in voyages on their large house-boat. Mrs. Bell, who was a deaf mute until taught the lip language by her husband, is a young and beautiful woman, who converses and understands all that is said with perfect ease. As soon as her new home was ready for occupancy Mrs. Bell returned from Paris and began a series of entertainments, the gatherings at her house bringing together the scientists and literary people of the capital, with the better elements of the official and the smart set in interesting combination. The members of the National Academy of Science were especially entertained during the week the savants of the country were in session at the Smithsonian Institution.

Lagrange Democrat—A student in the Valparaiso school has just been fined fifty dollars for misrepresentation in hiring a livery rig. He employed the rig to drive to a certain place and it was afterwards learned that his objective point was twenty miles further away. The punishment is just. Seedy Individual (in editorial sanctum)—Does the editor of this paper make any effort to secure poetic talent?

Office Boy—Does he? He chased the last poeck as far as the river.

Not so Strange.

So many people wonder and ask themselves, why it is that among so many cough syrups, Dr. Marshall's Lung Syrup, is so far superior for coughs. This is not so strange for this medicine was a lifetime study of Dr. Marshall and perfected by him while searching for his own health, the purest drugs are used in its manufacture, hence the results. The only way we can convince you of the true merit, of this medicine is for you, to give it a trial, it is guarranteed to give satisfaction. Price 25, and 50 cts and $1. Sold by druggists and dealers.

Customer—This overcoat you sold me last fall is worn so thin that I can almost see through it.

Dealer—Yaw. Dot ees our patent sanitary overgoat. Ten you leaf it off in der spring you von't catch cold.

Will You do This?

We ask you to try Dr. Marshall's Lung Syrup is a cough medicine that it has not proved beneficial, return the same to the druggist you bought it of, and he will return the same money paid, you cannot ask for more, this medicine is the best cough syrup in the market and for la grippe or influenza it has no superior. Will you give this cough syrup a trial, you will certainly not regret it. Price 25 and 50 cents and $1. By druggists.

Father—Harry, why don't you sit down?

Harry—This morning I asked you how many made a million an' you said darned few. I told teacher that in arithmetic class to-day, an' that's why I can't sit down.

King of Remedies.

The Great South American Nervine Tonic is absolute king of remedies in this country. It will cure every case of Nervous Dyspepsia and Indigestion in this nation. It will raise the invalid from a bed of Nervous Prostration of years duration to refreshing health in a few weeks. It quickly cures all cases of St. Vitus's Dance; prevents heart failure and failure of the mind. Warranted the greatest nerve cure ever known. It is pleasant to the taste as the sweetest nectar. Sold by Robbins & McCord, Auburn, Ind.

Chicago Girl—I wonder who invented sugar-cured hams.

Boston Adorer—I presume it was some Egyptologist who noticed the excellent preservation of the mummies of nice girls.

Pain in the Side and Chest.

The most painful cases of rheumatism may be relieved by a few applications of Chamberlain's Pain Balm; its continued use will cure any case, no matter of how long standing. It is equally beneficial for lame back, pain in the side, pain in the chest, lameness, and in all painful affections requiring an external remedy. A piece of flannel saturated with Pain Balm and bound on over the seat of pain is superior to any plaster. For sale by Robbins & McCord.

"Mary, will you name the wedding day for next Thursday?"

"I don't want to, George; it's Lent."

"Who borrowed it?"

Four Bottles Cured Him.

There is nothing I have ever used for muscular rheumatism that gives me as much relief as Chamberlain's Pain Balm does. I have been using it for about two years—four bottles in all—as occasion required, and always keep a bottle of it in my home. I believe I know a good thing when I get hold of it, and Pain Balm is the best liniment I have ever met with. W. B. Denny, dairyman, New Lexington, Ohio. 50 cent bottles for sale by Robbins & McCord.

Mr. Hardhead—I saved a big pile of money to-day.

Mrs. H.—That is lovely! How?

Mr. H.—Instead of suing a man for what he owed me I let him have it.

Cures Despepia.

Rebecca Wilkinson, of Brownsvalley, Ind., says: "I have been in a distressed condition for three years from nervousness, weakness of the stomach, dyspepsia and indigestion until my health was gone, I had been doctoring constantly with no relief. I bought one bottle of South American Nervine, which did me more good good any $50 worth of doctoring I ever did in my life. I would advise every weakly person to use this valuable and lovely remedy: a few bottles of it has cured me completely. I consider it the grandest medicine in the world." Warranted the most wonderful stomach and nerve cure ever known. Trial bottle 15 cents. Sold by Robbins & McCord.

AUBURN AND VICINITY.

Some Reminiscences of its Early Days and Pioneer Citizens.

1871.

Than Auburn, no town in Northern Indiana has better surroundings, railroad facilities, more promising business attractions and hence no peer in normal and steady growth.

Practically the commercial center of this section of country its natural advantages and geographical position offered inducements that the practiced eye of the experienced manufacturer readily recognized and the streets of the quiet town began to be trod by many a stranger intent on leaving the chances for safe and lucrative investment in real estate and the probable result of possible business ventures.

Alive to the opportunity at last presented most praiseworthy effort was taken by townspeople to meet these visitors in a proper spirit, to give them a favorable impression and to make known these many inducements to settle with us, which have long established a formidable guaranty for Auburn's future expansion, resources and prosperity.

The year 1871 was marked in local history for the public spirit of the people and the fruits of untiring united labor for the town's welfare. At last Auburn responding to these potent influences awoke to a new life and began to grow. Evidences of prosperity were everywhere noticeable, in the springing up of business buildings and comfortable residences at many points and there was no lack of that spirit of thrift and enterprise that turns the tide in a channel of lasting and happy development and municipal prosperity.

We have seen the Ft. Wayne, Jackson & Saginaw railroad built and trains running, and have noted the partial disappointment over the results, and now an old project revived and a long contemplated public work was brought forward to claim completion or final failure.

This was the Detroit, Eel River & Illinois railroad with whose earlier history, COURIER readers are familiar and which now suddenly claimed popular attention.

A meeting of Butler and Auburn citizens was held to consider the subject of raising subscriptions to help build the road at which a resolution was introduced and passed that $50,000 be raised, each town to assume $25,000. In September 1870 it was current report that the contract for completing the road through this county had been let to parties from Illinois, the work to be finished from Logansport to Butler on or before Nov. 1. 1871. An estimate having been made by competent engineers as to amount of labor previously done, they reported that forty-five per cent of the grading for the road bed had been completed.

At a meeting of stockholders held at Columbia City, Oct. 27, 1870, directors were elected, among whom were George Ensley, of Auburn, and G. W. Young, of Butler, On Feb. 9, 1870, contracts were made for delivering ties east of out town and a sufficient force was to be set at work when spring opened to perfect the grade.

James S. Collins stated most truthfully, "The road will add to your tax duplicate and for all future time, many thousands of dollars which would all be foreign capital, this would have the effect to lessen the percentage on the county and all other taxes."

The recent unanimous decision by our State Supreme Court affirming the legality of railroad assessments made in accordance with the new tax law has added force to Collins' utterance in the material and permanent increase of railroad valuation and Auburn as well as DeKalb county will long continue to reap an unexpected reward for the wise forethought of 1871. It was said by a mutual friend to road and towns: "We want to see the iron horse puffing away towards Butler and to realize the fact that we are within fifteen minutes of that thriving and enterprising town." He little thought that the time was coming when over that line destined to become one of the great trunk roads, express trains would be run to and fro, by night as well as by day, at a speed of nearly a mile a minute, making the Wabash the quickest route between the east and west and attracting large passenger traffic, while numerous freight trains, in heavy laden sections, would come and go thundering by our town unnoticed, upon their long journey.

Parties known as "The Union Construction Company" having contracted to build the road, were compelled to suspend operations for want of money. Payment of subscriptions was not forthcoming and an attempt was made to negotiate for a temporary loan. The friends of the road were in a dilemma. There were those found to take the contracts, pay for labor done and for material furnished, but they doubted the ability and to some extent, the final disposition of subscribers to pay; took legal advice and the question went for decision to the State supreme court. Meanwhile the date set for the completion of the road, viz. Jan. 1872, was approaching. Immediate action became imperative and request was made by the railroad company that responsible parties guarantee to make good the subscriptions or negotiations must end. The plan was suggested to take notes, payable only if the aid law was not sustained. The assistance so brought to the company was to be applied in payment for preparing the road bed for the iron.

Messrs. Buell, Quirk & Co., a wealthy firm finally proposed to undertake the job of building the road, provided its officers would guarantee $4000 per mile, and these officials in turn asked the people to endorse them to a certain extent. Individual notes for $25,000 were solicited on condition that they should not be payable until the road was built from Auburn to Butler. With this understanding, the effort to raise the money began. After considerable vexatious delay and other trouble, work was resumed. The firm above named contracted to build and equip the railroad from Auburn west fifty-six miles by Jan. 1, 1872, and by June 1, 1871, all work had been sublet, engines had been placed on the route and a body of men set to work beginning at Auburn Junction as now known,

It was then expected that within three months' time tracklaying would be well advanced and Messrs. Mansfield and Scanlon, who had the contract west from the Junction set an example of vigorous labor upon their section.

Tracklaying began at Columbia City in September and was continued towards Auburn, till on one of the last days of October, a construction train, the first one from the west, passed the bridge and came up to the depot at the Juction.

Meantime the months had gone by until October 19th when it was announced at a called meeting held at the court house, that no portion of DeKalb county subscriptions had been paid. All attention was then directed to the gap in the line between Auburn and Butler and with this object an extension of notes was asked for one year. To bring this about a committee of six persons, three from each of the towns was appointed.

Those from Butler were Messrs. Boyle, Maxwell and Young, and of Auburn, J. L. Davis, J. P. Widney and G. Ensley. It was their province to secure the right of way within a brief period and secure renewed subscription notes. At the close of the year, one-half had renewed and some new subscriptions had been taken, so that not much was requisite to make up $45,000, the amount of the old subscription. It is well that this unknown or forgotten history should be narrated to the present inhabitants of Auburn and our sister town of Butler that they may understand at the cost of what personal effort, labor and expense, this fine railroad was ultimately continued through the latter town to its terminus at Detroit, In the meantime, the Eel River road having reached the Junction became a feeder to the Saginaw. itself to a degree tributary to the Lake Shore road at Waterloo, and further progress of the work was checked for the time and some hoped, others feared it would prove permanently.

A new enterprise long rumored finally became confirmed and promised to assist materially in the development and growth of Auburn.

FULL OF FRESH FACTS.

ALL RELATING TO PEOPLE AND THINGS IN THE WORLD.

A Severe Storm Sweeps Over the Northern States—Freight House at Peru, Ind., Burned—Saloons Destroyed—Train Collision—Cheated the Mob.

THREE STATES

Swept By a Very Destructive Cyclone.

Lima (Ohio) special: Reports from Buckland, Hume, Rollersville, Olsonburgh and other towns in northwestern Onio, and from Geneva, Camden, and Montpelier, Ind., indicate that the storm was general and destructive. The telegraph operator at Rollersville wires: "I was driving to the office when overtaken by the storm. I drove into a barn for shelter. The barn was blown down over my head, but I escaped with few bruises." Pugh & Co.'s ice house in the city was unroofed. James Wendel, a farmer reports his large orchard a total loss, and that he has lost 200 chickens and some live stock. This is a sample of the destruction wrought by the cyclone. East in the oil fields over fifty derricks are reported blown down.

Dan Miller's barn was unroofed and the roof fell on him, badly injuring him. The plate glass in the O'Connor block was smashed in. The gas works, Globe Machine works, O. B. Selfridge & Co.'s handle factory was unroofed.

Detroit special: A windstorm, which was almost a cyclone, swept over this State, doing great damage to buildings, crops, and wires. At Holly the roof of the Opera House block was lifted off and several smaller buildings blown down. Considerable damage is also reported from Adrian, Fairfield, Dundee, Stockbridge, Tecumseh, Hudson, Milan, and other points. The only fatality reported was at Romulus, where Fred Kugath was struck on the head by a flying board sustaining injuries from which he cannot recover.

Elwood (Ind.) special: For the third time in its brief history the American tin-plate works have been almost demolished by high winds. The roof was torn off, and a portion of the building was wrecked. The loss will exceed $1,000. The storm appeared to be general in Northern Indiana, and much damage was done.

CHEATED THE MOB.

Wm. Sullivan Cut His Throat in His Cell.

Corunna (Mich.) special: William Sullivan, who murdered Farmer Leetch at Durradon, Mich., January 1, was brought here, arraigned, pleaded guilty, and was sentenced to State's Prison for life. The other night a mob was formed for the purpose of lynching the murderer. They proceed to the jail, broke in the doors and made their way to the cell where Sullivan was confined. When they got there, however, they found Sullivan lying on the floor with his throat cut, but whether some one had gotten in and done the deed or whether it was a suicide, is not know.

A rope was quickly placed around his neck, and he was dragged to the door and out onto the steps. The body was then pulled to the ground, where the maddened crowd trampled on the remains and mutilated them in a terrible manner. Then the clothes were torn from the corpse and the rope was swung over the limb of a tree, the crowd pulling it up and down. The murderer's body was finally let down and dragged around the jail yard for some time, and the crowd finally dispersed. The Sheriff made a show of resistance at first, but was overpowered.

The Crops.

Indiana—Weather last half of the week favorable to plowing and planting and beneficial to crops.

Ohio—Corn half planted, some coming up; wheat, oats, grass, rye, barley, potatoes, and tobacco plants growing finely; cherries, plums, and pears falling off badly; strawberries large.

Michigan — Farmers mostly finished oat seeding; considerable preparation made for corn; meadows and pastures improving and oats and rye doing well.

Terrible Landslide in Norway.

Another and more serious landslide has occurred at Vaerdalen, Norway, just north of Trondhjem, where a number of farms were recently buried under an avalanche of slime. An extent of land, five kilometres by ten in the Levanger valley, became dislodged and slid down on the soil below, destroying twenty-two homesteads and fifty cottages. A vast area is flooded and many persons are missing and it is feared they have perished.

Freight House Burned.

Fire destroyed the Lake Erie and Western Railway general freight office and contents at Peru, Ind. The loss, with five cars also burned, will be $12,000; fully insured. The fire is supposed to have originated by sparks from a passing engine.

For an Open Sunday.

The Sunday opening of the Fair was agreed upon by the National Commission in session at Chicago, by a vote of 30 to 27.

Saloons Destroyed.

At Frankton, Ind., the temperance element rose up en masse, swooped down upon the three saloons and literally riddled them, destroying all the contents. The three ring-leaders are under arrest.

Wreck on the Rail.

A train on the Pan-Handle was wrecked half a mile east of Ridgeville, Ind. Engineer Richardson was severely injured. The fireman and head brakeman were also injured from jumping.

A Furious Gale.

Pittsburgh and vicinity was visited by the most violent hail storm ever known there. The effect was most disastrous both to life and property. Heavy black clouds suddenly obscured the light of the sun while the air became oppressively hot. Following a terrific electric flash came the crash and roar of thunder, shaking the very earth. Before man or beast could seek a cover, the deluge of ice came in all its intensity and for five minutes there was a war of the elements most terrifying. Telephone and telegraph wires were prostrated in every direction; electric and cable cars were stopped by bad wires or debris choking the conduits and for a time traffic was suspended. In the east end of Pittsburgh and upper wards of Allegheny City, nearly every window glass on the south sides of the buildings were shattered, while all over both cities sky lights, green houses, private and park conservatories were shattered and foliage ruined. The money loss will be very great, various estimates placing the damage above half a million dollars.

FIRE AT SAGINAW, MICH.

Three Hundred Buildings Destroyed.

Saginaw (Mich.) special: Fire started from the chimney of Briggs & Cooper wafted by a gale, and swept down the mill plant of Sample & Camp on the lumber docks. The Bristol street bridge was caught and a portion destroyed. The flames leaped to the east side of hose house No. 6, and J. E. Winkler's ice house, and eleven residences on Tilden street, and on both sides of Washington avenue down to Holden street, were licked up. Then into the George F. Cross lumber company's planing mill and the mill, lumber and a dozen tenements melted like snow. Next came the Allington Curtis manufacturing company's plant and Hassot's soap factory, both of which were wiped out. Here the fire struck Jefferson avenue and in an hour some of the finest residences in the city were in ashes. A clean sweep was made north to Emerson street, where it continued eastward along Emerson street toward the city limits. It cut a wide swath on Owen, Howard, and Warren avenues. St. Vincent's Orphan's Home succumbed the gale, and it destroyed the planing mill, factory, and lumber yard of E. Germain, and a large number of the dwellings in that section. Here the fuel failed and the fire stopped. Loss, $1,500,000. Insurance $700,000. One thousand men are thrown out of employment and hundreds of families homeless. Three hundred buildings were burned. Heaviest losses, E. Germain, planing mill, factory and lumber, $350,000. Several people are reported missing.

ANOTHER COWARDLY MURDER.

A Gas Company President Shoots a Prominent Attorney.

Calib Brown, President of the Lebanon Natural Gas Company, shot Samuel Wesner, one of the most prominent lawyers, killing him instantly. It occurred in the court room in front of the Judge's desk at Danville, Ind. For several days a suit against the Lebanon Gas Company for damages had been on trial. The argument had been completed, and the Court adjourned. Brown came from the side of the room, muttering threats against Wesner. They met and Brown said: "My reputation is as good as yours." Wesner said: "If you have a gun, pull it. I dare you to." Upon the word Brown drew a revolver and fired two shots. Wesner moved toward Brown and pulled a long dagger, but fell. Wesner died in a few moments. Brown was jailed. Brown was badly cut across the palm of his left hand by the dagger Wesner used. The first ball fired struck Wesner in the left forearm and the second ball struck near the base of the breast bone. The weapon was a 32-calibre, Smith & Wesson, self-cocking. The trouble arose over Wesner's comments on Brown's evidence.

BIG FLOODS.

Lake of Water and Destruction of Property Everywhere.

Pittsburgh special: Only one life was lost in the Pennsylvania floods. At Erie the total loss is $750,000. At Meadville, $260,000. Loss to railroads, Pennsylvania and Ohio, put at $1,000,000. The Anchor line steamer, India, went ashore, off Mill Creek, near Erie. The vessel lies 1,000 feet east of Erie.

Augusta (Me.) special: Kennebec River is on a rage. The wharves are covered four to ten feet and the water reaches the eaves of the freight and passenger station of the Kennebec and Boston Steamboat Company. An immense number of logs, and large quantities of wood pulp are floating out to sea.

Fairfield (Me.) special: The river is the highest for ten years. The Fairfield boom has broken.

Tonawanda (N. Y.) special: All low lands in this vicinity are turned into lakes.

Windom (N. Y.) special: Farms are all under water, and great damage results.

Mount Morris (N. Y.) special: The valley is nearly all under water.

A BAD COUPLE.

A Toledo Preacher Skips to Canada With Another Man's Wife.

Detroit special: C. A. Gordon, a farmer living two miles from Fenton, Mich., came to Detroit recently to look up his wife, who, he said, had eloped with Rev. James Latham, a Methodist minister of Toledo. Gordon learned that the couple had been seen in Detroit and thinking it probable that they had crossed the river to Windsor, Ont., for greater security, laid the facts before the police of that city. An hour's search resulted in their finding them located in a boarding house kept by Mrs. Moore, who said they had been there a week, representing themselves to be husband and wife. The guilty couple were placed under arrest and taken to the police station where they were arraigned on a charge of unlawful cohabitation. They both pleaded guilty, and are awaiting the action of the Prosecuting Attorney. It is said that Latham has a wife and four children in Toledo.

WHITE CAPPED.

A Wife Whipper Tied to a Telephone Pole and Badly Beaten.

White caps called on David Roaney, a market gardener at Martinsville, Ind., and gave him a whipping. He was sitting in his door weeping over domestic troubles when some one caught him by the leg, and as he looked up another man struck him and warned him to keep his head down. He was then taken to the country road in front of his house, his coat and vest removed, and he was tied to a telephone pole, after which lashes were administered with a strap until he was almost senseless. He was then warned to leave the country within two weeks to avoid a repetition of the punishment. The occasion for the visit of White Caps grew out of the fact that Roaney had pleaded guilty of whipping his wife, and had been fined. He is well known to the community as having been brutal in his treatment of his wife. Recently his first wife died, and before two weeks had passed he had remarried.

New Cabinet.

Rome special: Signor Giolitti has agreed to reconstruct the cabinet. The ministry, according to Signor Giolitti's proposed arrangement, would stand as follows: President of Council and Minister of the Interior, Giovanni Giolitti; Minister of Foreign Affairs, Benedetto Brin; Finance, Senator Gagliarado; Justice and ecclesiastical affairs, Senator Cananico; War, General Luigi Pelloux; Marine, Admiral Racchia; Commerce, Industry and Agriculture, Pietro Lacava; Public Works, Francesco Genala; Public Instruction, Ferdinando Martini; posts and telegraphs, Camillo Finocchiaro Aprile; Treasury, Berbadino Grimsldi.

A Thief Shot.

The postoffice at Bartlett, Labette Co., Kan., was entered by burglars and robbed of $200 in stamps and other property. Postmaster Lane, who lives in the building, was aroused just as the burglars were leaving with their booty. He fired three shots at them, one of the burglars being wounded in the leg. The others made their escape without injury.

Warning the Missionaries.

New York special: The Board of Foreign Missions has become alarmed over the Geary act and have cabled all their missionaries in China as follows:

"Exclusion act constitutional; prudence urged; notify stations."

The cable was sent after a consultation of the Mission Council in view of possible dangers which might threaten the American missionaries now in China in consequence of any retaliation which might be taken there by the inhabitants of the country.

The Board also issued an address to the public, a copy of which will be sent to President Cleveland, in which it states that it regrets exceedingly the action of the Supreme Court, and pleads with the President and his cabinet to use all their power against the enforcement of the law.

Forgery and Then Suicide.

C. Bohlinger of Temple, Texas, suicided at St. Louis, taking the morphine route. Bohlinger a month ago went from Temple to Hot Springs and there met Mrs. Rose Peak, her mother and children. He followed her a week later to St. Louis as her intended husband. She rented a handsomely furnished house in a stylish part of the city and frequently received Bohlinger at that place. He took a fatal dose of morphine at her house. He had given her worthless checks amounting to over $10,000 at different times and feard detection. The checks were drawn on the National Bank of Texas, where he formerly had an account but had withdrawn it.

Crowded Out.

Lima special: The latest move of the Standard Oil Company is to declare war upon the oil well drillers of Ohio, of which there are 4,200 in the State. The monopoly is flooding the oil fields of the State with hundreds of second-class workmen, who have been employed for several years in pumping down in Pennsylvania and New York, but these wells have dwindled in production until it has ceased to pay to pump them. Hundreds of these fellows are being poured into the State, and, as a consequence, the price of drilling has dropped 50 per cent. and hundreds of reputable responsible drillers are preparing to leave or enter other business.

Murder and Suicide.

Dayton (Ohio) special: Al Weidner and wife could not get along well together, so they separated at Muncie, Ind., three months ago, and Mrs. Weidner came here to live with her mother. The other morning Weidner arrived and went to the old lady's house, demanding his share of the furniture that his wife had taken. Mrs. Weidner's mother refused to give up anything, and Weidner pulled a revolver and pointed it at the old lady. Mrs. Weidner exclaimed, "Oh, don't shoot mother," whereupon Weidner turned and shot his wife in the breast. As she ran screaming into the house, he shot her in the back and she fell dead. He then shot himself dead.

Miss Cleveland Arrives.

Miss Rose Elizabeth Cleveland, sister of the President, was a passenger aboard the Etruria which has arrived at New York from Europe. Miss Cleveland returns from a two years' sojourn in Palestine, Italy, Switzerland, and England. She remained much longer in Jerusalem, Rome, and Geneva than is usual even for travelers engaged in the study of the customs and people and objects of historic interest, and is said to have brought back a considerable quantity of material that may be used in a literary way.

The Sugar Crop.

The sugar season in Cuba may now be considered virtually ended, as the yield of the stills grinding will have no appreciable effect on the total production. It is estimated that the yield of the whole island will amount to between 750,000 to 800,000 tons, a very large decrease from the average total production.

Talmage's Tabernacle Free of Debt.

In the presence of the congregation that crowded the immense Tabernacle to the doors last Sunday morning, the Rev. Dr. T. DeWitt Talmage officially announced that the floating debt of the Tabernacle had been liquidated, and that his remaining with the church as its pastor was assured.

A Fatal Fire.

A fire in Quinn's livery stable at the corner of Channing Avenue and Locust Street, St. Louis, resulted in the cremation of James Quinn, 27 years old, and 135 horses. Six other members of the Quinn family had narrow escapes. The loss is over $100,000. Quinn was foreman of the stable.

A Double Tragedy.

One of the most terrible tragedies—murder and suicide—ever known in Marietta, Ohio, occurred recently. George Lankford shot and instantly killed his wife, and then shot himself, the bullet in each case entering above the eye and passing through the brain.

An Armistice.

Unofficial advices have been received at the State Department that an agreement for an armistice had been reached by the Government and revolutionary factions in Nicaragua. No further information.

VISITORS TO THE FAIR.

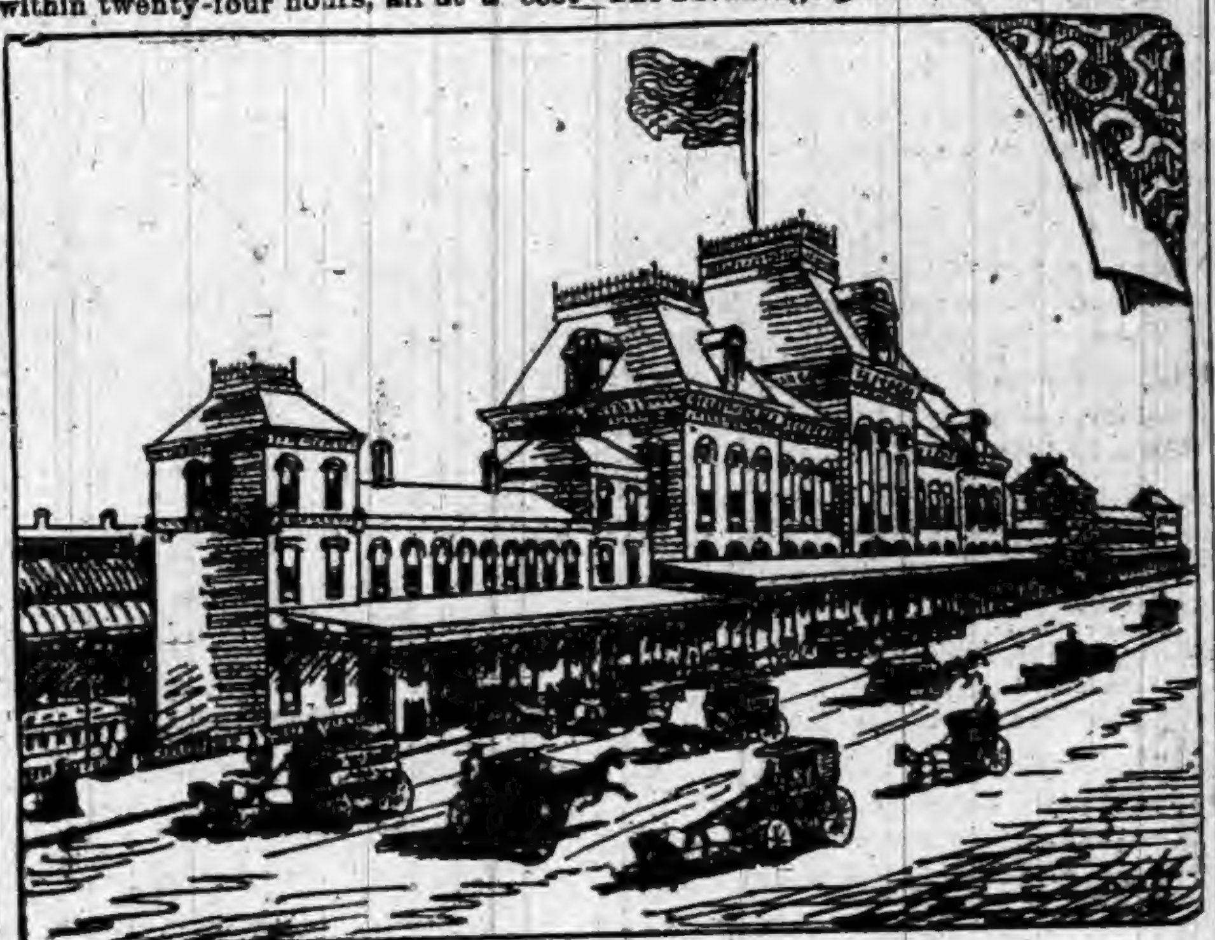
ARRANGEMENTS FOR THEIR COMFORT IN CHICAGO.

The Railway Depots Where Thousands of Strangers from All Parts of the World Will Arrive—Some Information as to Lodgings, Etc.

In the World's Fair City.

Chicago correspondence:

THE person living outside of Chicago who visits the World's Fair for a single day only, will find everything arranged for his comfort and convenience. All railroads coming to the city will land passengers at the terminal station at the Fair for ten cents in addition to the regular railway ticket. Here hand baggage may be checked, here abound toilet rooms, lunch counters, telegraph offices, and desks for writing. The Columbian gnards will direct the visitor to his State building, where he may deposit his extra valuables. He may see the great show, take a terminal train for his depot at nightfall, and return home within twenty-four hours, all at a cost of fare, ticket of admission, lunch, and a trifle for a guide book or souvenir.

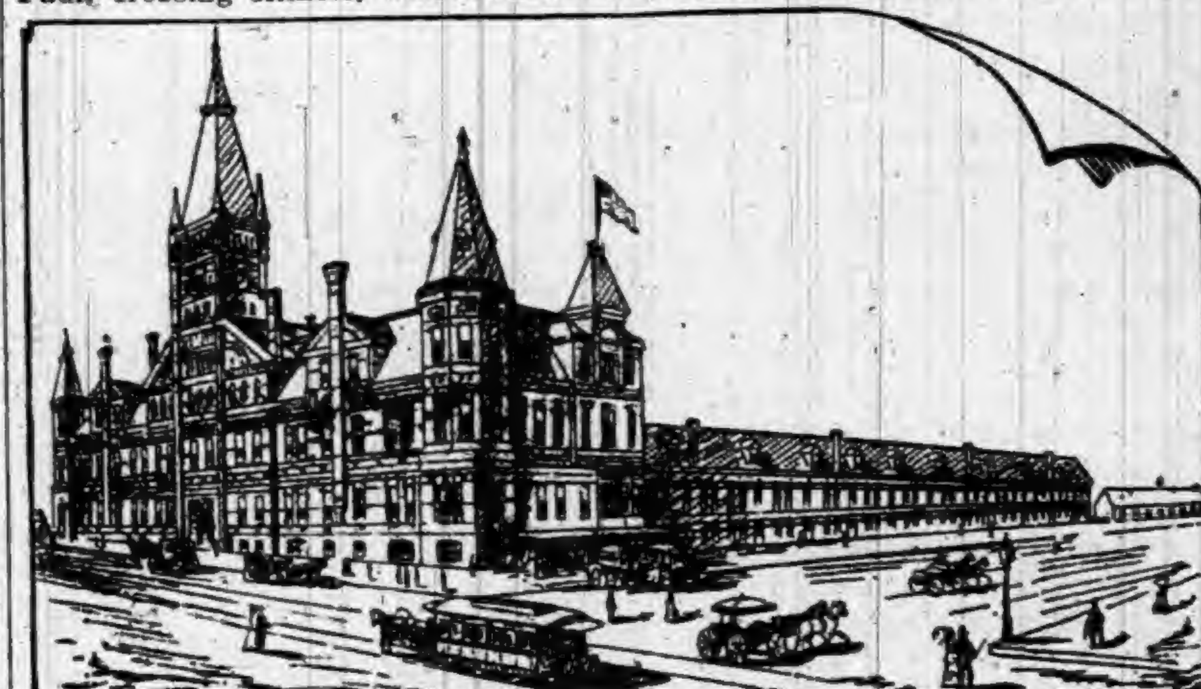


THE UNION DEPOT.

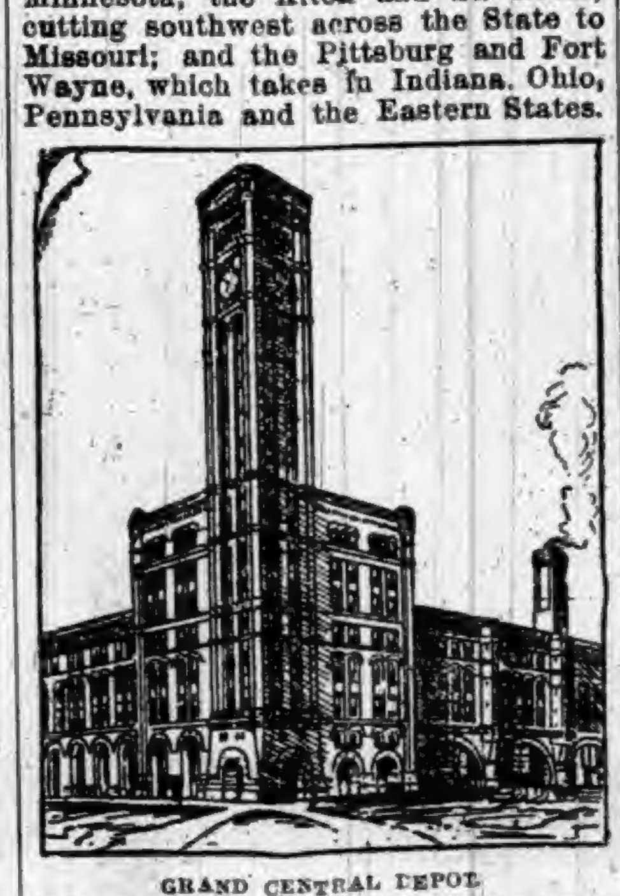
Those coming from a distance, however, and those who wish to thoroughly inspect and enjoy the Exposition for a week or a month, should exercise considerable forethought. It is possible for such to formulate a pleasant and economical system of procedure, provided they know what to do and how to do it. Unless they arrive at night—in which case a stop at some hotel will be advisable—they should devote the first day to the securing of a settled abiding place. That care off their minds, they are on a footing with the native-born Chicagoan, and are independent of restrictions of time and method of realizing the Fair, as of the exactions of of the harpies, who will strive to extort double prices from hurried or uninformed strangers.

Chicago's Great Depots.

There are six great depots in Chicago. The Northwestern is the only one located in the North Divsion of the city. Trains arriving here bring passengers principally from Northern Illinois, Iowa, Wisconsin and other points lying along the route of the Chicago and Northwestern Railway. This depot faces east on Wells street, and a walk across the river and four blocks south, brings the visitor to the very center of the city. The Union Depot is the only one located in the West Division. Here several lines center—the Chicago, Burlington and Qnincy, which runs through Illinois, Iowa and Missouri; the Pan Handle, bringing in mostly passengers from Indiana; the Milwaukee and St. Paul, crossing Illinois, Wisconsin and Minnesota; the Alton and St. Louis, cutting southwest across the State to Missouri; and the Pittsburg and Fort Wayne, which takes in Indiana, Ohio, Pennsylvania and the Eastern States.



THE NORTHWESTERN DEPOT.



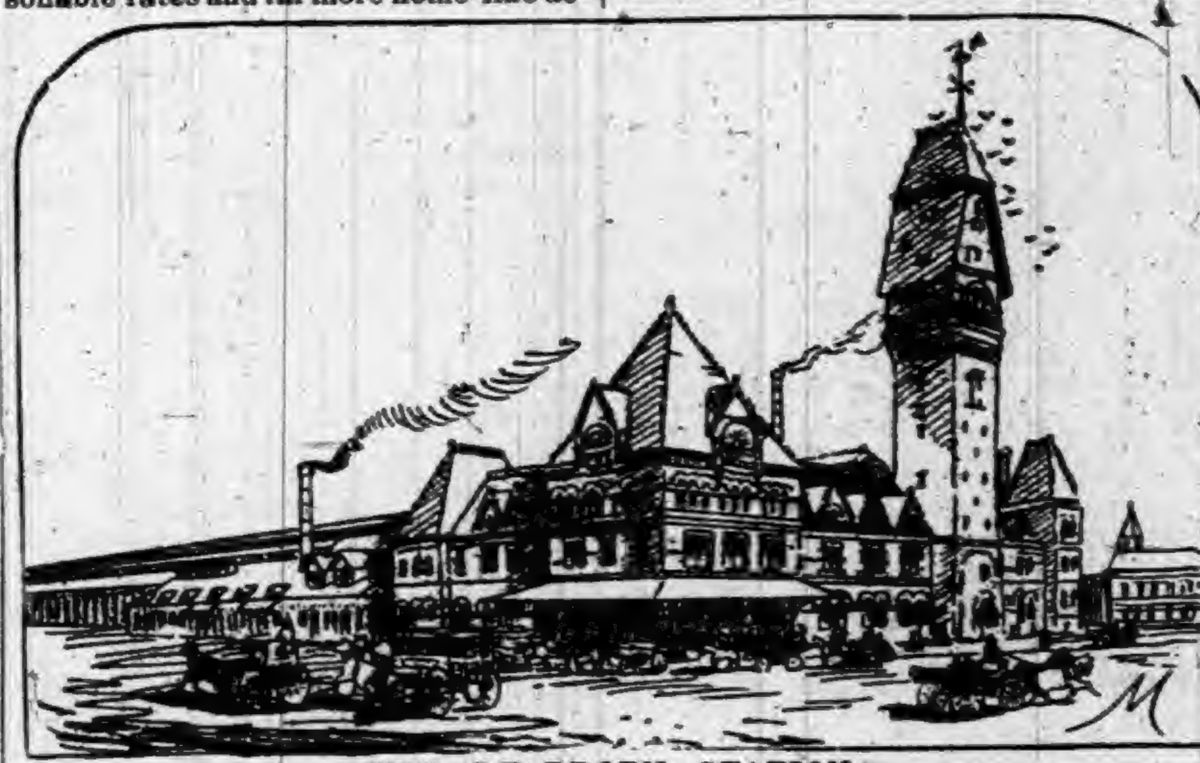
GRAND CENTRAL DEPOT.

This depot fronts on the Canal street, at the corner of Adams. A walk of four squares east on the latter thoroughfare leads across a bridge to the business center. The Illinois Central Depot is on the lake front, and in addition to housing traffic from the State after which it is named, takes in passengers of the Michigan Central Road from Northern Indiana, Michigan and Canada. At the Dearborn depot arrive the trains of the Grand Trunk, the Wabash, the Western Indiana, and the Atchison, Topeka and Santa Fe Railroads. It is located at Polk and Dearborn streets. The Grand Central depot is at Harrison street and Fifth avenue, and is the terminus of the Northern Pacific and Baltimore and Ohio Railroads. The Michigan Southern depot faces on Van Buren, just west of Clark street, and the Michigan Southern and the Rock Island and Pacific lines discharge their passengers here. These last-named four depots are all situated in the South Division, all face the business center, and are within half a mile of the large hotels and of the points where the various street, elevated and cable cars have their down-town terminals. State and Madison streets is a corner well worth keeping in mind as the chief center of Chicago.

A visitor arriving at any of these depots and meditating a sojourn here should, first of all, check his hand baggage, which may be stored for twenty-four hours at 10 cents per parcel. Inquiry at the depot Bureau of Information will elicit courteous response. Should a conveyance be needed, a printed card in the same will give the legal fares, which are fifty cents for one mile in a one-horse vehicle, and double the amount for a two-horse one, one hundred pounds of trunk and twenty-five pounds of hand baggage being carried free. All baggage may be safely left at the depot until the visitor is settled in his new home, when his landlord will take his checks and send for the same, at a cost of about twenty-five cents a trunk.

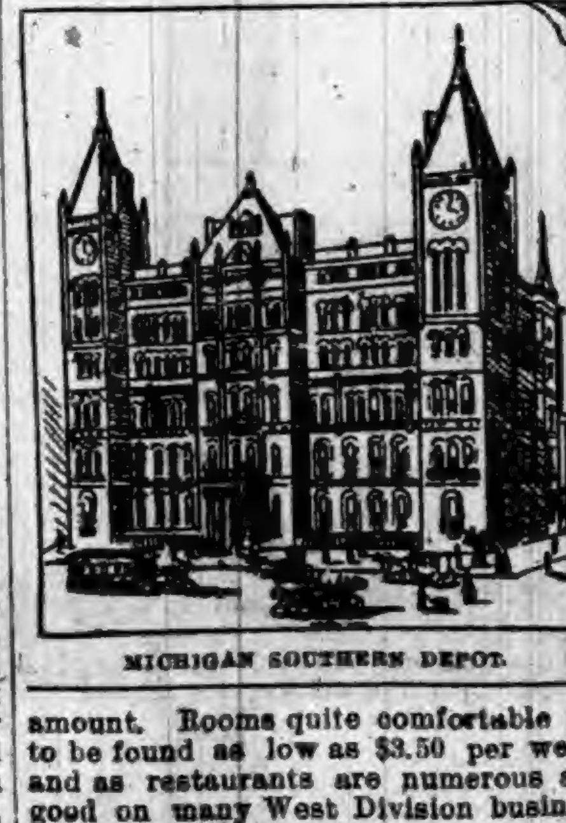
How to Find Lodgings.

The question of finding a temporary domicile is now the all-absorbing one. There are any amount and all varieties of hotels near the business center, but high charges and great crowds go along with them. There are, too, near the Fair grounds, new and large hotels which charge only $3 per day, or, where four room together, only $2; $7 boarding-houses, $1 lodgings, and even 20 cent restaurants. The advantage gained, however, by being just at the Fair gates all the time are somewhat visionary. There is turmoil, rush and discomfort. Many of the new hotels are frail structures, many of the lodgings and restaurants are overcrowded, and the sensible visitors will find quite as reasonable rates and far more home-like accommodations away from the heterogeneous throng that will continually crowd the immediate vicinity of the Fair.



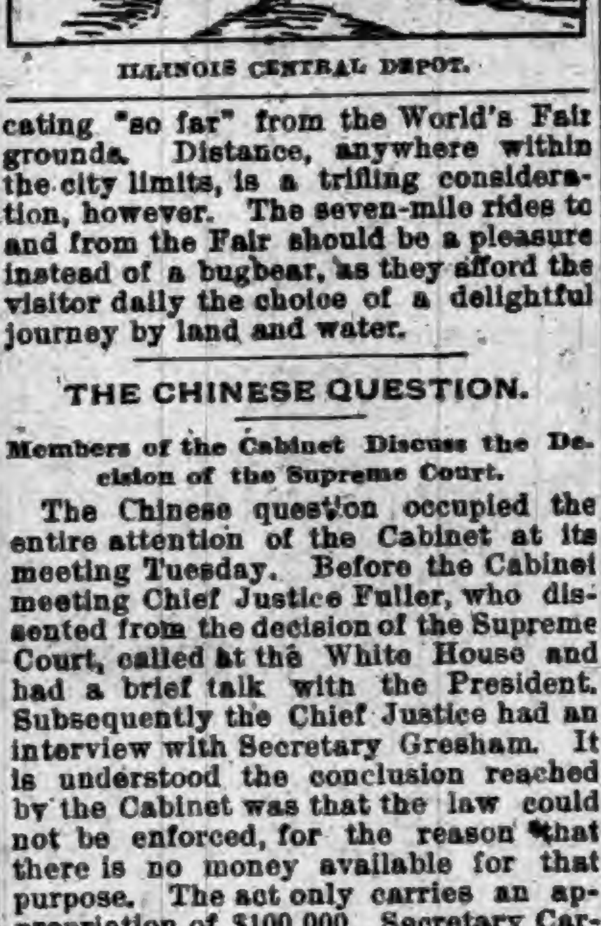
THE DEARBORN STATION.

The Fair grounds are some seven miles from the business center. Between these points are numerous quiet, pretty streets, where arrangements for board and lodging may be made, and in the North Division, just across the river, still more reasonable charges prevail. The West Division, however, comprising the largest section of the city, broad as it is long, affords a still better choice. It embraces a majority of the homes and population, is less crowded, and the visitor making it his objective point for a temporary residence, will probably be more speedily and satisfactorily suited than elsewhere. With this section in view as a prospective place of residence, he will find many hotels which are quite reasonable in their charges, and furnished rooms without number. Taking Madison street as the central line, and proceeding, say, half-a-mile west of the river, north and south are safe, quiet residence streets, well built up. Here a person can secure almost any kind of accommodations, from an elegantly furnished suite of rooms down to one apartment with two beds in it. For a pleasant, comfortable furnished room, the charge should not exceed $1 per day, or $5 a week, and with board in the same house, about double that amount. Rooms quite comfortable are to be found as low as $3.50 per week, and as restaurants are numerous and good on many West Division business thoroughfares, the visitor may get a 25-cent substantial meal, and add trimmings for a dime and a half additional. Ten dollars a week ought to cover the board and lodging, and cover it quite satisfactorily.



MICHIGAN SOUTHERN DEPOT.

Some may make an objection to locating "so far" from the World's Fair grounds. Distance, anywhere within the city limits, is a trifling consideration, however. The seven-mile rides to and from the Fair should be a pleasure instead of a bugbear, as they afford the visitor daily the choice of a delightful journey by land and water.



ILLINOIS CENTRAL DEPOT.

THE CHINESE QUESTION.

Members of the Cabinet Discuss the Decision of the Supreme Court.

The Chinese question occupied the entire attention of the Cabinet at its meeting Tuesday. Before the Cabinet meeting Chief Justice Fuller, who dissented from the decision of the Supreme Court, called at the White House and had a brief talk with the President. Subsequently the Chief Justice had an interview with Secretary Gresham. It is understood the conclusion reached by the Cabinet was that the law could not be enforced, for the reason that there is no money available for that purpose. The act only carries an appropriation of $100,000. Secretary Carlisle showed that not more than $16,000 of that sum remained. It was estimated that it would cost to deport all the Chinese now in the country, who have not complied with the law, more than $6,000,000.

It is evident the administration was surprised by the decision, and the situation is perplexing. With the constitutionality of the law settled, it is embarrassing not to be able to enforce it, but in the absence of the money for the expenses of deporting the Chinese there seems to be nothing that can be done. If the Chinese would simply accept the situation and comply with the law it would simplify matters, but the impression is that most of them will not do this, but will resist as long as possible.

As to the expense of enforcing the law, it is not by any means sure that if Congress were in session the money would be appropriated. W. W. Rockhill, Chief Clerk of the State department, who has correspondents in the Chinese diplomatic service, and also a number of American friends in that country, says he has not heard a word concerning retaliation, and, furthermore, that there is hardly a likelihood such action will be considered, much less taken. Secretary Carlisle has received many telegrams asking for a suspension of the operations of the law for at least six months.

Walter Besant's Maxims.

It is a part of the sage to make maxims. I have for some time suspected that I have arrived at the period of life when the sage is at his best, and I have now therefore tried my hand at a few useful maxims, writes Walter Besant in the London Queen. Here they are—a mixed and miscellaneous lot. Of course the sage at this time of day must be cynical in order to be popular. I hope some of these are cynical enough. Those on riches seem—to a partial parent—to be maxims really worthy of the most Eastern—the most Himalayan—of sages.

Out of ten men nine are born to work for the tenth. Resolve to be the tenth.

Without trampling the cleverest cannot get rich.

Dives is never an example, because nobody considers himself really rich.

If you cannot become rich, remember the many miseries of the rich.

The consolation of those who fail is to depreciate those who succeed.

He who foresees never acts.

The greatest things are done by the greatest fools.

Wise men never attempt anything.

When you lose a leg begin at once to practice with a wooden one.

Men's motives are mercifully hidden by their shirt fronts.

Observe moderation in all things—especially in virtues.

The best way to make a man honest is to make him ashamed of being found out.

There may be pride even in confessing mistakes.

Everybody says that gentle birth is an accident, and everybody treats it as an achievement.

The most charming attribute of friendship is the right of candor.

A Famous Coronet

The famous diamond coronet comb which Louis XIV. gave to Mme. de Montespan, after all its wanderings and strange experiences, has at last fallen into the hands of Mrs. William Waldorf Astor. She wore it in her lovely silken hair at the Queen's drawing-room a few days ago. Mrs. Astor seems to have a love of collecting old jewels worn by famous women. I wonder if she believes in that gem superstition which reads that jewels contain genii that work a good or evil influence on the person who wears them. The price paid for the gem was something like $100,000. How many little hungry mouths that would feed.

A TANGLE OF HEARTS.

The President of a Bachelors' Club Falls a Victim to Love.

WRITTEN BY E. S. VAN ZILE.

CHAPTER IV.—Continued.

A large dinner is apt to be a stupid affair until the dessert is reached. By that time the pangs of hunger—if people so far forget themselves as to indulge in such vulgar things—have been satisfied, and the enlivening effects of judiciously chosen wines begin to be felt. My vis-a-vis seemed to forget all about the peerage until the roast, game, salad, etc., had disappeared. Then, the conversation having become brisker, she turned to me and asked if I knew the gentleman seated next to Agnes. She referred to our President, and I gave her his name and such other details regarding him as were of interest.

"He seems very much struck with Miss Upton," remarked the old lady deprecatingly. As our President was nothing more than a cultivated American he did not appear to be an eligible parti in the eyes of the Angiomaniac at my side.

"O, no," I exclaimed thoughtlessly. "He is simply making a study of her."

"Why, is he an artist—or a doctor?" she asked, in surprise.

Her question brought me to my senses. I looked about me and began to feel as though I was a conspirator, a member of a cabal which might well employ the poniard and the drug. To my eyes the scene took on the colors of romance. We were seated in the old Italian banquet hall. Agnes was the pride of an ancient Roman house. Her father, a haughty lord, had offended the members of our secret council, and, in the guise of friendship, we partook of his hospitality only to work his ruin. When the hour should come one of us would slay the lord, others would seize the girl and before the startled household could recover from its dismay we would be far beyond the walls of the Eternal City and riding for our lives. I awoke from my reverie to find that the ladies had left the room. Agnes had been abducted, but in a modern and ceremonious way.

Barnes came over to my side of the table and lighted a cigar.

"How are you? You look bored."

"I am. And you?"

"Rather! Been talking to a girl who once had a love affair and wants another. Am worn out."

He sipped a liqueur, and looked at me languidly.

"That was fair," I returned. "The girl was talking to a man who once had a love affair—and wants another."

Barnes smiled. "Pretty good, old man. If you weren't a member of the club, however, I'd call you out and have a shot at you. I consider you a dangerous rival. You really seem to have the inside track."

"Nonsense. If you make a girl your friend she will never love you. In this maiden prize sweepstakes for all ages, my boy, I think I'd put my money on Barnes—'Apollo' Barnes, as he is known to fame."

"And lose it. Here comes the winner."

Fernshaw joined us.

"The old man seems to be getting solid at headquarters," he remarked, puffing a cigarette.

Barnes and I followed his gaze and saw that he referred to the President, who was drinking brandy with Mr. Upton.

"What do you mean to imply?" I asked, suspiciously.

"That the President has lost his moss-covered heart to Agnes."

This was too disrespectful to pass unnoticed, and I spoke rather hotly.

"You are unjust and undignified, Fernshaw. The President has been your firmest ally from the very start. You owe him a great deal. Your insane jealousy is driving you mad."

"Perhaps it is," he said, gloomily. "But what are you all here for? Since I made my rash confession to the club I have not had the slightest chance to see Agnes. First it was Barnes, then you, then Chapman, and to-night the President monopolizes her attention. I really don't think it's fair to me. There are still four members of the club who have not met the Uptons. When are they to be introduced?"

He moved away, and Barnes and I looked at each other gloomily.

"He doesn't know what took place at the last meeting," said Barnes. "Somebody ought to tell him."

"Yes—that's so. You have tact. Suppose you break the news to him."

"No. He doesn't like me. Do it yourself."

"Well, we'll toss up for it. Agreed? Heads—I tell him; tails—you. There it goes, tails. Permit me to wish you luck. Be very gentle with him, Barnes. His temper is not as quiet as it used to be."

Barnes frowned, but had no chance to protest, as Mr. Upton at that moment led the way to the drawing-room.

The rain poured down in torrents on the night on which the club met, but by 10 o'clock every member was present. Fernshaw, silent and morose, had come to the conclusion, evidently, that he must look after his own interests. There was rebellion in his eyes, and he hardly deigned to bow to the brethren.

Barnes, Chapman and myself sat together in a sympathetic group. We were rivals, it is true, but were too broad-minded to sulk in each other's presence. And then, we had agreed to abide by the president's decree, and the magnitude of the stake drew us together like sheep who dread the storm.

"What did Fernshaw say?" I whispered to Barnes.

"He was very ugly at first, but after a long argument I convinced him that we had acted as honorable men should. I pointed out to him that it was natural that we should all fall in love with Miss Upton—that by so doing we complimented his own good taste. I further argued that he was as much bound to obey the President as we were, and that he stood as good a chance of winning Agnes in this way as though we were all working against each other secretly. But look at the President. Did you ever see him so pale and nervous?"

It was true, our worthy leader was not himself, and his face had a strangely haggard appearance. As he seated himself in front of us and called the meeting to order his voice trembled and his hand shook as he toyed with a cigar. The routine of his duties seemed to quiet him after a time, and it was not until the critical moment, when the Fernshaw case came up in regular order, that he again lost control of his nerves.

"Brethren," he said, looking about the room as though he longed to escape, "I have a confession to make."

We jumped to our feet and rushed around him.

"Do you love Agnes Upton?" cried Fernshaw.

"Stand back," exclaimed Barnes, pushing forward. "What do you mean?"

"Another Richmond in the field," suggested one of the happy four who had never met Agnes.

"Brethren, I regret to say," continued the President, in a dignified way, "that I have succumbed to the fascinations of Miss Upton.'"

There was a murmur, then a roar of protest.

"It can't be!"

"At your age!"

"Hasn't she enough admirers as it is?"

"Good-by to the club! Let its epitaph be: 'Perished in its maturity through the blighting influence of Agnes Upton.'"

"Oh, spare me, brethren!" exclaimed the President. "I tried so hard to be faithful to my trust. But there was no escape. I loved her the moment I saw her."

A sob broke from Fernshaw, who had thrown himself upon a sofa.

Barnes looked pale but collected, while Dr. Chapman and I pressed each other's hands and moaned in chorus.

"What's to be done?" asked one of the happy quartette.

"Disband the club," cried Fernshaw. "It is not fair to Agnes that this matter should go further. It is a shame that her name was ever brought before you all. Oh, I am a wretch. I wish I was dead."

He buried his Byronic features in his hand, and the sofa shook with his sobs.

"Brethren," said the President, rising with an effort and leaning against a table, "I feel that it is my duty to suggest an expedient whereby the club may be preserved and this tangle of hearts unraveled. If I were more than mortal I would magnanimously withdraw from the contest and leave the field to my younger rivals. But, homo sum. You who love Agnes Upton realize that it would now be impossible for me to give up my hope of winning her. You who know her not are not competent judges in the case. Now, my proposition is this: All other mediation having failed, let us present the matter to Miss Upton herself. You asked me to choose which of you should attempt to win her hand. I suggest that each of us make her a proposal of marriage, and leave the rest to the dictates of her heart. Four of the five must eat the bitter bread of rejection, but I can answer for you all that the winner will receive the heartfelt congratulations of his rivals. What do you think? Shall we lay the matter before Agnes?"

"Miss Upton, you mean, sir," exclaimed Fernshaw fiercely.

"Miss Upton," said the President meekly.

"I see no other way," I remarked. "Under any circumstances she would be sure to learn from each of us the feeling she has aroused."

"You might try a round-robin on her," suggested one of the flippant outsiders.

"Well," remarked Barnes, who was perfectly cool, "I for one, am very anxious that the existence of the club be not destroyed by this strange tragedy. Of course, none of the five is willing to abandon the contest without putting his chances to the test. But whoever captures the hand of Agnes Upton, let it be understood that his defeated rivals shall still maintain toward each other their present fraternal relations."

"Of course," we chorused in a breath.

"Let me ask," broke in Dr. Chapman, "how the situation as it now stands is to be conveyed to Miss Upton? Would it not be well for each of us to write to her?"

"No, no," exclaimed the President. "I never propose to a girl in writing. A personal interview is much more effective."

"But don't you see, Mr. President, that effectiveness is just what is not desired in this case?" asked somebody.

"That's so—you're right," returned the president, moodily. "What shall we do?"

"I don't care what you do," almost shouted Fernshaw. "I'm going to take my own course. I loved her first and I shall be the first to propose. If she rejects me, there will then be a chance for somebody else."

With these rash and boastful words he rushed from the room, and we saw him no more that night.

"I shall write to her," said Dr. Chapman, calmly.

"I shall call on her to-morrow," remarked the President, with a suspicion of pomposity.

"I shall approach Mr. Upton first," said Barnes, looking wise.

"I'll wait," I added; and a few moments later we parted for the night.

CHAPTER V.

It was with a feeling of gloom that I awoke the following morning. The exciting scene of the previous evening had thrown an agitating influence over my sleep, and I had dreamed of duels, disaster, and destruction.

After I had dressed, I gazed at myself in the mirror. Did I stand any chance in this wild matrimonial scramble for the hand of Agnes Upton? Perhaps so, I thought, as I stroked my mustache and noticed with satisfaction that my complexion was not quite as sallow as usual.

The storm had cleared away during the night, and the sun was shining brightly. I sauntered forth in better spirits than had dominated my being when I awoke. There was a sprightly look to the avenue as I hurried along toward Delmonico's, anxious to get a lover's breakfast of toast and coffee. It is a striking fact that the man who is in love and the roysterer who drank too much champagne the night before always eat a very light meal in the morning. In the present instance I played both roles, and the result was that when my coffee and toast reached me I could not touch them.

I sat looking out upon Broadway and thinking of Agnes Upton. Should I propose to her at once or wait until my rivals had had an opportunity to present their claims? It was a hard question to answer. If I went to her immediately I might gain an advantage by the priority of my suit. The tale of Lochinvar came into my mind, and I preferred to ply his part than that of "the laggard in love."

On the other hand, I felt that, as I had told the club I would wait, I was in honor bound to defer my proposal until my rivals had done their worst. All is fair in love, they say, but the assertion is barbarous and should have no weight with a member of such a club as ours—a club based upon the highest ideal of man's duty to his brother.

For several days I was tortured by these conflicting thoughts, I was restless and unfit for work. I spent a great deal of time in my rooms, reading, musing, smoking. I saw no one, did not call on Agnes, and took a kind of morbid delight in making myself thoroughly miserable.

Two weeks went by, and, after dinner one evening, I determined to put an end to my suspense. I trembled when I reached this decision and nervously lighted a perfecto. I realized that my wooing had been what might have been meager, and I feared that Agnes would be so surprised at my proposal that she would be inclined to laugh at me. Surprise, philosophers say, is the most essential factor in the creation of merriment. I did not want to be ridiculed, and, as I strolled toward the Uptons' house, I almost regretted my impetuosity. It would have been better, perhaps, to have waited another week.

I rang the bell, sent in my card, and was pleased to find the drawing-room deserted. A moment later Agnes entered the room. She was dressed in a low-cut evening costume of black and looked radiantly beautiful. I took her hand in silence and knew that I displayed agitation by my constrained manner.

"You are quite a stranger," she remarked, seating herself. "I began to think you had forgotten us."

There was something cruel in the word "us," and my heart throbbed painfully.

"Forgotten you?" I cried. "Indeed, you do me an injustice. I have passed the last week thinking of you. Day and night you have been in my thoughts. Even in my dreams your face was before me. Oh, it has been a fearful week."

"That last remark is very complimentary," she said, coquettishly. "But why do you talk in this way? You are making fun of me, and I thought we were such good friends."

"Friends? That cannot be. I love you, Agnes. I have loved you from the first moment of our acquaintance."

She turned rather pale for an instant, and a peculiar smile crossed her face, but she did not speak.

"Answer me," I said, seizing her hand. "Do you, can you love me? Will you be my wife?"

"Yes," she returned, frankly, looking at me calmly.

I could hardly trust my ears. Accepted by Agnes Upton! What would the club say? I, the least attractive of the five lovers, had captured the prize without an effort. It was hard to believe; but there lay her cold, white, slender hand in mine, and she was gazing up at me smilingly. I bent to kiss her. She released her hand and said:

"Please don't—now. This is all so sudden that I wish to be left alone. Come to me to-morrow, but go away now. I wish to think."

Obediently I arose, a protest in my heart and an acquiescent smile on my lips.

"As you please, Agnes. The task you set me is a hard one, but my reward is great. Good night, my fiancee."

I kissed her hand and hurried from the room. The night air revived me, and my fevered brain grew quieter. Engaged to Agnes! I was walking on air, and listening to the songs of Paradise. I turned my head and looked back at the Upton house. A man stood in the doorway, and I tried to make out who it was. Before I could identify him, however, he had entered the hall. For a moment I felt annoyed, but soon realized that I had no right to be disturbed by the fact that a stranger had called at the house I had just left. It might be somebody to see Mrs. Upton, or her husband.

As I hastened down the avenue, the thought struck me that this was club night. Should I go to the meeting? Why not? It was only fair to my rivals that they should learn of my engagement from my own lips. I looked at my watch, retraced my steps, and soon reached Dr. Chapman's residence, the place of the meeting.

As I entered the room in which my brethren were gathered, I was surprised to find an air of cheerfulness radiating from the assemblage. Fernshaw was not present, but Chapman looked jolly, Barnes was laughing and talking in a light-hearted way, while the President appeared younger and handsomer than I had ever seen him.

I did not have the cruelty to dash their merriment by the announcement of my success. Of course they would feel hurt to learn that I had been accepted, while they had all been cast into outer darkness. I could not explain their apparent happiness, however. Perhaps the relief caused by the destruction of their hopes had brought them peace of mind. At all events, instead of finding a dismal crowd, as I had expected to, I joined as jovial a set as the city that night held. Champagne, cigars, good stories and a song now and then reminded us of what the club had been a few weeks before, ere the blighting influence of Agnes Upton had fallen upon our organization.

Reluctantly, the President called us to order about 11 o'clock, and the work of the meeting was begun. I felt that I was in an unpleasant position. "The Fernshaw Case," as the affair was called, was certain to come up, and I realized that it was my duty to make a full confession regarding my success with Agnes.

I noticed that the high spirits of Chapman, Barnes and the President had deserted them, and that they seemed nervous and uneasy.

At length, after delaying the matter by various parliamentary devices, the President, turning very red, announced:

"The Fernshaw case."

At that instant Fernshaw burst into the room. His face was ghastly white, his dress disordered, and his heavy breathing indicated a long run in the night air. He tried to speak, gasped painfully, seized a glass of champagne, drained it eagerly, and then sank upon a chair.

"What's the matter, Fernshaw?" we cried.

"O, Agnes! Agnes!" he answered wildly.

My conscience troubled me. I felt that Fernshaw would accuse me of treachery, and I prepared for a scene. Chapman, Barnes and the President all looked alarmed.

"You mean Miss Upton," said the latter, rising hurriedly. "Well, what about her?"

"She's eloped," cried Fernshaw, bursting into tears. "Eloped with an Italian count."

"It can't be," I returned.

"It's false, Fernshaw," said the President angrily. "She's engaged to me. She gave me her promise yesterday."

"Absurd," cried Dr. Chapman, waving a letter in the air. "I got this from her this morning. She has promised to be my wife."

"You are all wrong," exclaimed Barnes. "She accepted me this afternoon."

"And me this evening," I put in.

Fernshaw, recovering somewhat, stood up:

"She a false-hearted woman. She told me she love—love—loved me two weeks ago to-night—after the meeting." Again his sobs came over him.

"But how do you know she has eloped?" asked one of the lucky outsiders.

"I just came from there," explained Fernshaw. "Her father is nearly frantic. She left a note for him, saying she wanted to be a countess and liked the romance of a runaway match. O, it's horrible."

Barnes, who was the coolest man in the room, had been quietly filling the wine glasses.

"I have a toast to propose, brethren," he said. "Let us drink to the welfare of our club, and may the brethren long remain bachelors."

We pledged the sentiment with a shout of acclaim, and not one who drank that toast has again disturbed the peace of our club by a confession of love.

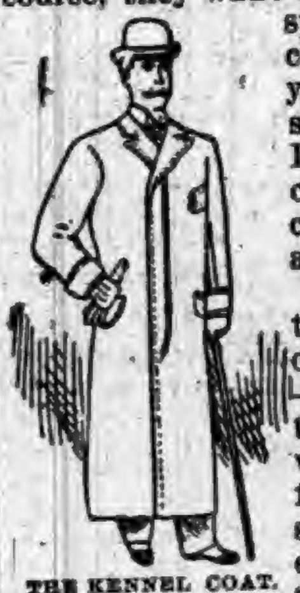
NEW STYLES FOR MEN.

LONG FROCK COATS AND CLOSE FITTING CUTAWAYS.

Three Buttons Decreed by Fashions for All Kinds of Coats—Sober Shades Preferred in Sack Suitings—Small Stripes for Trousers Will Supersede Checks.

Modes for Men.

Do men care about their clothes? Yes, as much as women. Then, of course, they want to know about the spring styles. The changes from last year are not marked, says the New York Recorder, still, of course, there are changes, and here are some of them:



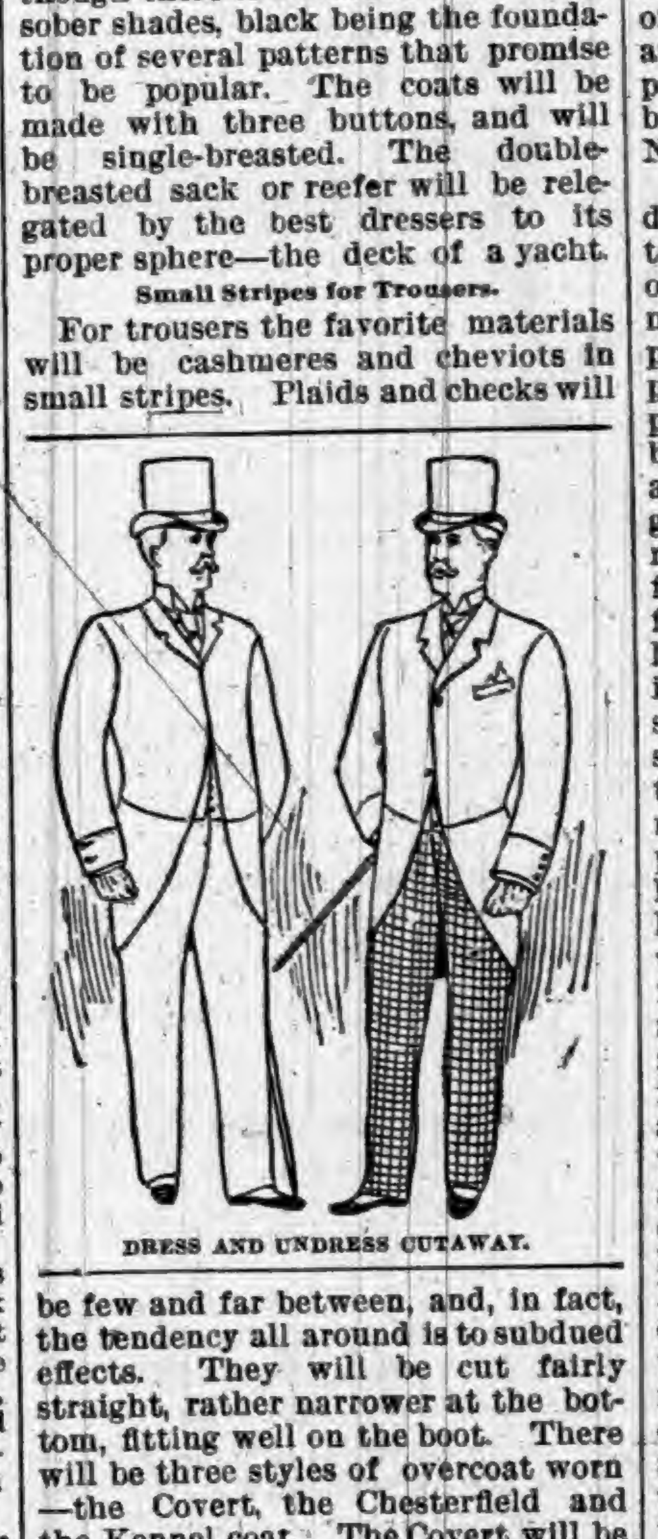
THE KENNEL COAT.

The frock coat—the garment of all others for dress wear—will be worn with three buttons and with big lapels faced with silk or satin often to the edge. Its skirts will be full and long, reaching well below the knee, but the best dressers will not lend their countenance to the extremes that have been noticed in this direction. A gentleman's frock coat should not appear desirous of emulating the street-sweeping style of women's gowns. The favorite materials will be the rough makes of black cheviots or shetlands, black or gray vicunas, uncut worsteds and rough faced coatings in Oxford and Cambridge mixtures. The cutaway coat has undergone some changes. Like the frock-coat it will have three buttons, but it will be worn much longer than heretofore, the skirts fitting very closely and the front well cut away, tapering to a narrowness behind almost equaling that of an evening dresscoat. The materials will be the same as for the frock.

Vests will be mostly double-breasted and usually of the same material as the coat, though as the season advances many fancy and white vests will be worn. There is no lack of variety in patterns for fancy vests. One new design will be sure to attract notice, whether or not it finds favor, especially among visitors to the World's Fair. It shows on colored ground a little group representing the landing of Columbus. Sack suitings will vary according to taste, though there is a decided tendency to sober shades, black being the foundation of several patterns that promise to be popular. The coats will be made with three buttons, and will be single-breasted. The double-breasted sack or reefer will be relegated by the best dressers to its proper sphere—the deck of a yacht.

Small Stripes for Trousers.

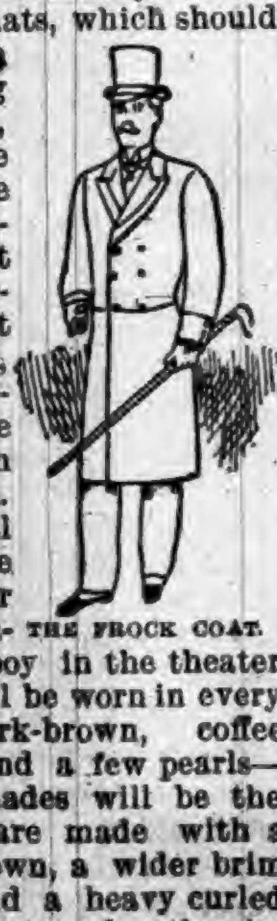
For trousers the favorite materials will be cashmeres and cheviots in small stripes. Plaids and checks will be few and far between, and, in fact, the tendency all around is to subdued effects. They will be cut fairly straight, rather narrower at the bottom, fitting well on the boot. There will be three styles of overcoat worn—the Covert, the Chesterfield and the Kennel coat. The Covert will be made in the darker shades chiefly, and the Chesterfield will be worn considerably longer, and will be made mostly in rough finished goods, and in the Oxford and Cambridge mixtures. The Kennel coat is a novelty. It is an overcoat, of course, but it will sometimes be worn without an undercoat. It is very long, reaching almost to the ankle, and is cut single-breasted with a fly front and wide lapels at the back. It fits fairly to the shape, and the skirts fall from two crow's feet worked in silk so that no buttons show anywhere. It has three flap pockets, which are cut crescent-shaped, and the sleeves are finished with a false cuff. It is made chiefly in the Covert coat materials, and is especially adapted for coaching or race-course purposes, though some in dark materials have been seen on the street. The proper overcoat to wear with evening dress is the Inverness.



DRESS AND UNDRESS CUTAWAY.

Hats that Are the Proper Caper.

The spring styles in hats show that there is a decided tendency to the bell crown in silk hats, which should always be worn with the frock and long cutaway coats, when, of course, the Derby and Alpine hats are inadmissible. The correct silk hat has a perceptible, but not very pronounced, bell, the brim is inclined to be wide and well-rolled, with a rather heavy curl. White tall hats will no longer court the rays of the summer sun or the adjurations of the small boy in the theater gallery. Derbys will be worn in every shade—black, dark-brown, coffee color, cinnamon, and a few pearls—but the brown shades will be the favorites. They are made with a tapered round crown, a wider brim than at present, and a heavy curled roll like the silk hat, and rather inclined to be pointed front and back. The Alpine hat retains its place as a prime favorite. It is properly adapted only for wear with a lounging suit, but it is so comfortable that no doubt many will find their way on the streets. The Alpine is worn with both narrow and wide brims, but the choice is toward the latter.



THE FROCK COAT.

Negligee and Dress Shirts.

For lounging shirts for warm weather the colored shirts with laundered collar (turned down) and cuffs and soft bosom will be correct. White shirts are made quite plain, opening in front, and marked by a complete absence of embroidery for evening wear. All shirts will be made with two buttons. The proper thing is the tall, straight collar, with edges meeting in front, and just turned or bent at the points by the wearer. Cuffs are all made with square edges, and are fastened with links. There is a "poke" cuff made to match the collar with slightly bent points. In scarfs the "agony" is for the new "Prince" scarf. This is a flowing-end four-in-hand, made very narrow all around except for seven or eight inches at each end, where it flares out to five or six inches without any tapering to speak of. It is tied in a very small knot and spreads out on each side of the knot. A single pearl pin about two inches below the knot gathers the folds into a graceful puff. It is made in soft materials and divers patterns, but all of the "inaudible" description and always in silk. As the weather gets really warm small self-made ties in foulard and soft silks of various colors, both figured and plain, will be much worn.

FOOTBINDING IN CHINA.

Several Traditions as to the Origin of the Oriental Deformity.

Proof that the Chinese woman is not a labor-burdened slave is found in the custom of footbinding. This heathenish attempt to improve on God's best work of creation is said by one tradition to have begun with P'an Fei, a concubine of the Ch'i dynasty, 501 A. D., and by another to have begun with Yas Niang, a beautiful concubine of the last Emperor of the Southern T'ang dynasty, 957 A. D., whose feet were "cramped in the semblance of a new moon." Tradition also says that it originated with a beautiful princess who had club feet, and by resorting to this method completely concealed her deformity. Still another tradition says it was resorted to by a crusty husband to keep his wife from "going-a-gadding," and as it worked so well it was resorted to by others, until, becoming a fashion, it was adopted by all. Wherever the custom may have originated, Harper's Bazar regards it as but little worse than the custom of ladies lacing in civilized countries, and adds as little in beauty to the person on whom it is practiced. The best evidence attributes it to Yas Niang.

The evils of footbinding—as, indeed, the evils of anything that interferes with the natural development of what God pronounced good—could not perhaps be exaggerated, but the pain connected with it might be, and perhaps has been. There is pain, great pain, when the feet are first bound; but if we judge from what we see about us every day—namely, little girls at play and little beggar girls running after us on the street begging for cash—for the beggars bind their feet—we are compelled to say that it looks as if the pain connected with it is not severe. It is perhaps somewhat similar to that connected with the straightening of a club foot, and, as the bandages are not taken off at night, there is perhaps not much more pain suffered from it during a whole lifetime than that suffered by our ladies who wear tight shoes. While we would not exaggerate the pain of footbinding, it is only just to say that nothing can be said in its favor. It no doubt adds to the woman's beauty in the eyes of the Chinese, for it is an all but universal custom, but it takes away all her grace of movement and much of her usefulness. She is compelled to walk on her heels, her knees being entirely stiff. It impairs her usefulness, especially among the country people; but, as a mother, which is her principal business, it matters little whether she can walk or not. Indeed, wealthy ladies usually have a woman on each side of them to support them, though this is the result of fashion as much as of weakness.

A BRAZILIAN ADVENTURE.

A Planter's Encounter with an Aquatic Boa in Pernambuco.

While living in the interior of Pernambuco, Brazil, says a retired rancher, I once had an encounter with the sucuruyuba, or aquatic boa. One day one of my cattle strayed away, and I sought it at a pool where the animals used to go for water. While I was waiting the bullock approached and, when in the act of drinking, suddenly began trembling like an aspen, being apparently unable to move. Then, for the first time, I perceived a fearful sucuruyuba, or water boa, which, with its tail coiled around a tree in the pool, had planted its grip on the bullock. As the animal attempted to escape, the snake drew out till it was but the thickness of a cable; giving it play, but then swelling up, it drew the creature in toward the tree. This it repeated till the bullock was exhausted; then suddenly it loosed its tail from the tree and began to wind around the body of its victim. When it had got to a considerable tension, I sprang from my lurking place and drove my knife between two of the vertebræ of the boa. The keen blade pierced through, and soon the reptile was unable to do any injury. In a few moments I had dispatched it and drove my bullock home loaded with the booty.

MR. EDITOR:—California is a lovely country, the sick get well, the poor get rich, cyclones and frosts are practically unknown. A hundred to three hundred dollars per acre is made each year on fruits with irrigation. The California Land and Water Exchange, of Dayton, O., control large quantities of land in California, which they plant, cultivate, pay taxes for ten years, paying you $40 per year as your part of the profit, they keeping the balance for the care and cultivation. They give an acre of land away with each 4 certificates. All they ask you to do is to pay for the irrigation, which can be done in small payments each month. They will send you the names of 90 persons who last year received from $25 to $500 on one year's investment. President Harrison says, "half of the good things of California have not been told." The Hon. Jeremiah Rusk says, "Truly California is a poor man's paradise." To five acre holders the California Land and Water Exchange of Dayton, O., give a free return ticket to view the property. Why should any one be poor when such a chance remains open and you do not have to do any labor or work to get the profits and do not have to leave home. Dr. Townsend & Brothers Coming.

As seen by advertisement, these eminent Doctors will be at the Swineford House, Auburn.

SATURDAY, JUNE 10th.

Among many testimonials we find these: I had spinal curvature that doctors told me was incurable and I am now well. Another said: I was given up by fourteen doctors, who told me I had Bright's disease of the kidneys, but thanks to Drs. Townsend I am a well man. Another: I was bedriden for over ten years with a complication of female diseases. Some of the most eminent specialists, including three professors in medical colleges, and they all told me I could not get well. Four years ago I placed my case in the hands of the Drs. Townsend, and in 5 months and 4 days from the time I commenced treatment I dressed myself and walked across the room, and in another month I felt as well as I ever did in my life and have remained in excellent health ever since. Another says: I had epilepsy for fifteen years and was cured. Another: My whole nervous system was broken down and I was practically an old man at 31. I could not sleep, my hands trembled, I would get dizzy and forgetful and became so bad that I had to give up business. I consulted many doctors, the best I thought, in the country, and finally went to Europe, and spent over $9,000 and three years' time and was no better, but gradually got worse. I returned home to die and closed up all my business affairs. At last a friend, who had been cured, advised me to go to the Drs. Townsend. Without any faith, but to please him, I went, and to my great surprise they told me they could cure me, and they made good their word, for from the first dose of medicine I commence to improve, and in twelve months I was completely cured. A lady says: My case was pronounced to be tubercular consumption by seven of our best physicians, and under whose treatment I got worse all the time. The Drs. Townsend cured me in just four months. One says: I had catarrh that affected my head so I was almost crazy. It went into my ears, and oh! such a roaring, I was almost wild; it had gone down also upon my lungs and the doctor said it was the bronchitis. Thanks to the Drs. Townsend I am entirely well. Another says: I was cured of a bad cancer. A lady of great refinement, who had received serious injuries during a confinement, was cured after other specialists utterly failed. Thousands of cases similar to the above might be cited.

Examination by letter or in person free and sacredly confidential. If unable to see the doctors write full particulars. Thousands treated by correspondence. Address, with stamp:

A SMALL steamer arrived in Chicago Saturday direct from Norway, proving that Chicago will some day be a regular seaport.

THE latest addition to the growing list of daily newspaper's, is the Record at Indianapolis. It is not attached to any party, and is a lively all-around newspaper.

CLEVELAND and Carlisle have been studying the plan of an income tax, and are both said to favor it. Judge McClellan ought to be in congress now, and perhaps he could get a better hearing for his plan.

THE Lagrange Standard and other republican papers that are claiming as private banks the Chemical and Columbian at Chicago, will be pained to learn that they are national banks. So also was the Capital Bank at Indianapolis. All of these failed, as even national banks will do if mismanaged.

REPUBLICAN papers might as well stop finding fault with Minister Blount at Honolulu for ordering the American flag hauled down, for the then minister, Stevens, who had ordered it hoisted, concurred with Blount in ordering it pulled down. Stevens is a republican, but could give no reason why the American flag should float over a country over which we had no control.

THE New York World and the Atlanta Constitution are both publishing editorials favoring a graded income tax. This is precisely Judge McClellan's plan, the one embodied in his bill, that was up in Congress while he was a member. It will probably have to be accepted sooner or later, as the national treasury, thanks to an incompetent and extravagant republican administration, is so near out of funds, that some plan must be devised to replenish it. The people do not want any more tariff tax than they can get along without—in fact, there is a demand for a reduction. It is a reasonable income tax that we must look to for relief.

Obituary.

Edna Alnora, daughter of Jefferson and Ellen Seery, was born Sep. 11, 1881, departed this life May 19, 1893, aged 11 years, 8 months and 10 days. She was a faithful member of the Baptist Sabbath school up until about a year ago, when she was detained at home on account of ill health. She was loved by all her associates. She had a kind disposition and an affectionate heart. She was an earnest student and looked with joy to the time when she would be promoted, but death intervened and blasted fondly cherished hopes. Her death was caused by stepping on a nail producing lockjaw and causing death in two days. She leaves a father, mother, three brothers and two sisters, besides a host of friends to mourn her departure. Her gentle spirit has gone in the joys of another world. A chair is left vacant which cannot be filled: a tie is broken which cannot be bound together in this world, but in the one to come. The funeral services were conducted from the Lutheran church May 21, at 11 a. m., Rev. J. D. Brosy officiating. Interment took place in Woodlawn cemetery.

How Does it Suit Auburn?

Our exchanges have queer remarks about the "Auburn Postoffice." As an example: The Ligonier Banner say "There were a number of candidates and the appointment was only made after a spirited contest." Not quite right Bro. McDonald. There were a number of candidates at first, but there was no "spirited contest," for they all soon discovered, for it was pointedly given out by the few who claimed the appointing power that Brandon was to have the place. They even went so far as to name the one who "must" be the assistant. Then when these parties wanted it made public, McNagny was sent for to "see how the people felt." He came, and met only these office dispensers, found out "how the people felt" and at once left town. As soon as he was gone, the managers gave out who it was to be, though McNagny's letter did not reach here till the next day, afternoon. When a thing is cut and dried, and everyone knows it for four months, there is not much of a contest to record.

Then comes the Ft. Wayne Journal, and copies from the Garrett Clipper a statement that "the appointment of Brandon is satisfactory" over there. This is so "satisfactory" to the Journal that it keeps the article standing in two or three issues. It appears then that Garrett, Ft. Wayne, Logansport, Spencerville and Columbia City are "satisfied" with Auburn's appointment. Now we would like to hear from Auburn, if the powers that be, will graciously permit.

Mrs. Nancy Houlton.

Nancy Lewis was born April 19, 1817, in Richland county, O., and moved with her parents to Williams county, O., in the spring of 1834. She was married to John Houlton Nov. 21, 1839, in DeKalb county, Ind. His death preceded hers in 1875.

Nancy Houlton died May 10, 1893, aged 76 years, 21 days. Besides rearing three step children, one son and two daughters, all of whom are dead, she was also the mother of nine children, six sons and three daughters, all of whom survive her except one son and two daughters. She was the grandmother of 34 children and the great-grandmother of 11 children. She was immersed in the St. Joe river at Clarksville, O., May 2, 1841, by Elder James Dirrim and was united with the Disciple church at Wanamaker's Corners and has always remained a member of that church.

[Mrs. Houlton will be remembered as the widow of John Houlton, who built the first cabin in DeKalb county in September, 1833. The old cabin was torn down several years ago, but the comfortable frame dwelling reared near it sheltered the aged couple in their later years. Mr. Houlton was married to his first wife, Sarah Fee, Feb. 5, 1833, the subject of this sketch being his second wife. She was a woman of many sterling qualities. An incident related in the DeKalb county history will give one a glimpse of some of the traits of her character.

"At one time, when about 18 years of age, her father and brothers were away from home, and a man came to their house and asked if any one could take him across the St. Joe river, then swollen even with the banks. She told him him she would take him over if he would obey her orders. He wanted to place the horse above her canoe, but that was not her way, and she refused to take him over. He finally came to her terms. She then placed the horse below the canoe and told him to hold the bridle bit while she rowed the canoe across the river. The man was forced to admit the soundness of her judgment, saying he never saw a girl of so much courage and good sense."

The editor of this paper, who was acquainted with both for many years and has often shared their hearty hospitality, cannot but feel a sadness as he recalls the many sterling qualities of this pioneer couple. May their rest be peaceful.]

Obituary.

Nelson Griffith was born January 24, 1812, in the state of Pennsylvania; died at his home near Corunna, Ind., May 17, 1893, aged 81 years, 3 months and 23 days. He moved with his parents to the state of Ohio in 1817, where he was married to Sarah A Cobler in 1837. In 1839 he moved with his family to DeKalb county, Ind., where he resided until his death. He became a member of the Church of Christ when he was a young man and for 63 years has been a faithful student of the Bible and an earnest advocate of the principles of christianity, always ready to defend the truth of God's word which he ever esteemed with the greatest reverence. He was always a great lover of song and when a young man was quite an efficient teacher of vocal music. As a neighbor he was just and true and despised anything that savored of trickery or deceit. As a father he was impartial, always seeking the welfare of his children and endeavoring to lead them to a higher life. As a husband he was true and faithful, and in all the walks of life he sought the consolation and advice of his companion, ever esteeming her as an equal. He leaves a wife and eight children to mourn their loss.

The funeral was on Friday, May 19, at 11 a. m., and he was laid to rest in the Corunna cemetery. The funeral services were conducted by Rev. J. O. Rose of the Disciple church at Metz. Mr. Griffith was elected county commissioner of DeKalb county at the state election Oct. 8, 1872, and served his three years with credit to himself and his people. He had before that time served his township as assessor. He and the aged partner that survives him had been married over fifty six years, they having celebrated their golden wedding March 19, 1887. For the past eleven years he had been afflicted with a cancer in his right ear, which gradually spread, eating away the surrounding part. This and a complication of kidney and liver disease, ended his life.

WHO Cares to pay for name or fame in this the Nineteenth Century? When we buy goods we buy them on their merits

WHEN We are asked as we often are "Why do you sell goods so much lower than other houses?" we usually answer, "We DO because we CAN." One reason

WHAT We say we have — the Goods, the Amount, the Quality and the Price. Another reason is that we know exactly

WHERE Cash can buy them the cheapest, and all we ask is for every sensible person to do likewise and you will surely come to the Boston Clothing Store. A most reasonable reason—

WHY We can leave others behind in the race and sell first class goods for 15 to 25 per cent less than others can, particularly when it comes to advertising certain goods, is because our patrons know that when we advertise goods at a certain price we have just

HOW when and where to buy goods, so that we can undersell all others. Now, if you are wise and desire to save money on a fine class of goods, this is your greatest of opportunities. Please call and examine these goods, remembering that always and in all cases WE DO AS WE ADVERTISE.

Resolutions of Respect and Condolence.

Resolutions passed by Spencerville W. C. T. U. on the death of Mrs. S. S. Shutt.

Our Heavenly Father in His all wise providence has seen fit to remove from our number our beloved sister, Mrs. S.S. Shutt. She was a member of our Union from its organization, and its faithful secretary until, a few months ago, failing health caused her to resign the office. While we deeply mourn her loss and fondly cherish her memory, we bow in submission to the divine will, knowing that what is our loss is her eternal gain. To the bereaved husband and large circle of friends we wish to extend our deepest sympathy. We can only commend them to the Savior in whom she trusted and pray God's choicest blessing be upon them.

Mr. and Mrs. Healy bade farewell to the friends in Auburn last week, and went to their new field of labor and new home at Decatur, Mich. They will be missed here, in all good works, and it is with sorrow that we see them go.

Harry Stafford has been taken to Ashley to enter the telegraph department there, as we notice by last week's Ashley times. The same paper gives an account of Ashley's first show, that of the Houlton Brothers, sons of DeKalb's first settler.

We were a little mistaken in a recent issue, when we stated that Mrs. Fox and Will Madden had bought the Baker property, east of Seventh street bridge. The facts are Mr. Madden alone was the purchaser, and he owns the whole of it. We had been misinformed.

Nicholas Wierman, of Corunna, reports grand success in saving his plums and other fruit. He burns a coal oil torch under them each evening from the time the blossoms fall till the fruit is partly grown. The insects seem to dislike the fumes of the kerosene.

Deputy-sheriff Blum has been stepping high lately, and lawbreakers who come into his hands are nearly paralyzed to be met with a smile. All this has been going on pretty steadily since last Wednesday, when a nine-pound boy called out at him something that sounded like "papa."

Joseph Edwin Showalter, M. D., and Carrie Olive Morr were united in marriage at the residence of the bride's mother Wednesday, 10 a. m. by Rev. A. S. Wooton. A splendid dinner was served. A number of friends were present. The young people were handsomely remembered with gifts. They went at once to Cleveland, O., where the Doctor is completing his studies in medicine.

The Lutheran church was filled to overflowing, Sunday evening to hear the baccalaureate sermon by Mr. Brosy. Standing room was at a premium, and a great many gathered about the building on the outside and listened at the open windows, for the evening was warm. The sermon was an able effort, well delivered and with an enthusiasm and earnestness that carried conviction with it.

Miss Marie Kniblce, who gave a musical and elocutionary entertainment at the Lutheran church last Tuesday evening, had a good and appreciative audience. She is a good musician and her singing was much above the ordinary. As an elocutionist she greatly pleased her audience, and rendered some very fine pieces in a delightful way. She is also a fine whistler, which seems to be a peculiar talent—something that few ladies can do. We did not learn the amount of the receipts, but judge it must have been fairly satisfactory.

R. H. Cobb was out on the streets on his wheel last Saturday with one of the canopy tops he is selling for use on bicycles. It presented quite a novel appearance and must be a very desirable addition to the outfit.

Miss Larimore of Ft. Wayne, has been visiting J. R. Moody and wife, and their daughter, Mrs. Tena Zent. Miss Larimore is a daughter of Dr. Larimore, well known here years ago, and a sister of Mrs. O. S. Moody, of Butler township.

Mr. Merica reports one of the best commencement exercises be ever attended, to be that at Spencerville last week. There was an excellent program and everything passed off well. He is particularly pleased with the address of Prof. Fairfield.

Jotham Woolsey goes home this week, to Straubville, Dakota, after a winter spent pleasantly with the old friends and neighbors in DeKalb. The COURIER wishes him and his continued prosperity in the grand new state they have adopted for their home.

Mrs. Shutt, wife of Hon. S. S. Shutt died at Ft. Wayne last Friday. She had been there for a time to have a difficult surgical operation performed, but only lived a few days after it. She had been ill for sometime. Her remains were brought back Saturday, and the interment took place Monday at Spencerville.

Artistic house furnishing is made a specialty by the Foster Furniture and Carpet Co., of Ft. Wayne, LaFayette, Terre Haute, Indiana, and Jackson, Michigan. They always lead the furniture trade in newness of designs, in excellence of manufacture, and in the very low prices at which they sell the best goods.

Mart Sheets, our "farmer" friend, and he is a farmer, don't so much object to having men and boys catch the fish in Cedar Creek along and through his fields, but when they throw clubs at the sheep, he kicks, or would kick if he could get at the chaps that did it. One of his sheep is laid up with a broken leg on account of this barbarous practice

Lewis E. Griffith, son of the late Nelson Griffith, was in town last Saturday with his mother, Mrs. Sarah Griffith, to see about some business matters that needed looking after, as for some years Mr. Griffith could not attend to matters himself. Mr. Griffith resides in Millbrook, Isabella county, Mich. Another brother, Clark, who resides in Richland township, will be administrator of Mr. Griffith's estate, Ashley Times: Eighteen regular trains stop at Ashley every day and change crews. * * * The pay car made its first visit to Ashley Tuesday morning and the boys were all happy. We like to see the men make good money, for their work is hard and hazardous and money at best a small remuneration. * * * The new operators have been put in at the station. Messrs Bures of North Manchester, and Stafford, of Auburn. Passenger trains take their orders at the station instead of the dispatcher's office.

We have received a copy of the Beatrice, Neb, Daily Express, of May 13, in which is an account of the recent visit to Wilber, of the Beatrice Commandery of Knights-templars. Wilber is the town where Mr. Dieffenbach, late in charge of the Lutheran church at Butler, is now located, and he was selected to make the principal address. This is published in full in the Express, with very flattering comments. We often notice that as soon as any community learns it has a DeKalb county man in its midst it at once puts him on its program in a prominent place.

The Auburn creamery was sold at public sale last Saturday, to satisfy a claim. that A. Lewis held against it. Why would it not be a good thing to get Mr. Lodovick, Mr. Lewis' brother-in-law, interested in this creamery? He is in the dairy business to a certain extent, and is said to have a good deal of experience in that line. We believe it could be made to pay, and there is too much good money tied up in it to be going to waste.

Fleming at the green house has some of the prettiest pets we know of. They are the quails he has had a year or two. They are quite tame, and spend most of the time in the greenhouse under and among the flowers and plants. Once a day he lets them out, but they are always on hand at night. They know his voice, and it is easy for him, by imitating their call, to get them to cry "Bob White," which they do in such a cute way. He has also a pair of perfectly white rats, that are a curiosity.

As an instance of what we have so often mentioned, that DeKalb county people take prominent places, we call our readers' attention to the full page picture among the first pages of Vick's Floral Guide for 1891, if they are so fortunate as to have this grand number. This picture represents the great Vick display of vegetables at Peoria, Ill., Sep. 29, 1890, and placards are photographed so plainly one can read the names. And the placard at the end nearest to you —the very foremost one, plainly reads, "MRS. JACKSON, DEKALB, IND." We believe we have mentioned Mrs. Jackson's displays of vegetables before, especially in tomatoes. She is Mrs. Levi Jackson of Butler township, a sister to Mrs. Dr. Chamberlain of Waterloo, and of Mrs. Geo. DeLong, Newville, and has numeros relatives and friends all over this county. It might not be amiss to add that like other prosperous and successful people, they read the COURIER.

Charles Carroll's Pick and Shovel.

The B. & O. railway has sent to the World's Fair the pick and shovel used by Charles Carroll, the last survivor of the signers of the declaration of independence when he turned the first sods in the ceremony of beginning work on the B. & O. This was July 4, 1838, and was witnessed by the late S. D. Long, father of Mrs. Judge McClellan, he having as a young man gone a long distance to see the ceremony. We have heard him tell this incinent, and he had a vivid recollection of the venerable Carroll, as he used the shovel and pick to start what then was almost an experiment, the building of railways. How little could those then present even dream of the vast network of steel and iron that has since spread like a net over our land.

New Meat Market.

A splendid new meat market will go into the Tarney room on Main Street June 1. The firm name will be A. H. Gillis & Co., the partners being C. D. Knisely and A. H. Gillis. Both gentlemen are from Edgerton, O., and have had abundant experience. Mr. Knisely has been a stockraiser for many years and will furnish the meat market with choice animals fatted on the farm, having about 100 ready for market now. He is a DeKalb man, being the son of D. D. Knisely, who resides northeast of Butler, and he still has an extensive acquaintance over the county. Mr. Gillis is a practical butcher of many years' experience and will be in charge of the meat market in person. They have closed the deal with Mr. Tarney and only need a few days to put the rooms in repair and get everything in neat and tidy shape. Auburn people can rest assured the new firm will conduct business on honorable terms and will handle none but first-class meats, all home fatted. Remember the place and that they open June 1, next Thursday.

It is no wonder that North Carolina is poor and education defective."

THE elephant gives, perhaps, the best instance of disciplined courage to be seen in the animal world. They will submit day after day to have painful wounds dressed in obedience to their keeper, and meet any danger in obedience to orders, though their intelligence is sufficient to understand the peril, and far too great for a man to trick them into a belief that it is non-existent. No animal will face danger more readily at man's bidding.

A LOWELL (Mass.) man gave a surgeon now practicing at Great Falls, N. H., a deed some years ago, disposing of his body for anatomical purposes, at his death for $10 cash in hand. He has since been in South America, has made a great deal of money, and is now anxious to have a decent funeral and interment when he dies, but counsel, whom he has consulted, advises him that the deed holds good unless he buys it from the holder. This he has tried to do, but the doctor has refused large offers.

HOW OFTEN do we try, and persevere in trying, to make a sort of neat show of outer good qualities, without anything within to correspond, just like children who plant blossoms without any roots in the ground to make a pretty show for the hour! THE Indian Government has concluded to depose the Khan of Kelat, who has, during his reign, killed 3,000 of his subjects. It is for exercising such inalienable rights as these that the Khan is to be deprived of his crown Things are coming to a pretty pass indeed for royalty when the ruler of a little province in Beloochistan must suffer dictation with regard to his amusements.

THE reckless prodigality with which, in ancient Egypt, the upper classes squandered away the labor and lives of the people is perfectly startling. In this respect, as the monuments yet remaining abundantly prove, they stand alone and without a rival. We may form some idea of the almost incredible waste when we hear that 2,000 men were occupied for three years in carrying a single stone from Elephantine to Sais; that the canal of the Red Sea alone cost the lives of 120,000 Egyptians; and that to build one of the pyramids required the labor of 260,000 men for twenty years.

THE Japanese deserve the compliment of being dubbed the Yankees of the Orient. Their latest surprise to the world of modern progress is the sinking of oil wells in the waters of the Japan Sea. Certain surface indications led to the belief that oil basins existed under the sea, and the shrewd Japanese lost no time in securing expert well drillers from Pennsylvania to make the tests. The result now appears in the statement that oil similar to the familiar product of the Pennsylvania wells has been discovered beneath the sea near the northwestern coast and several refineries are in course of erection.

THE Dahomey amazons in Midway Plaisance do not look like the terrible fighters they have been depicted. Set down in the center of the world's civilization, they lose their courage, and cower and tremble like children. And yet they are specimens of the very people who are trained to charge barefooted in sham battle over thorns and about whose desperate courage the world has been reading for years. The French Government will send them back to Dahomey as missionaries, to tell their people how useless it is to struggle against the power and resources of civilization. The idea is a humane one, and is cheaper than killing the savages. To make the exhibit complete, old King Behanzin himself should have been sent along. He wasn't sent, for the simple reason that the French can't catch him.

A Queer Proposition.

How could two persons be born at the same time and die at the same time at the end of fifty years, and yet one of them live one hundred days more than the other?

The answer turns upon the familiar fact that a person who goes around the world toward the west loses a day, while the person who travels in the opposite direction gains a day.

We will suppose, then, that the two men in question were born at the same instant in Dublin, from whence a trip around the world may easily be made once a year. One of them goes always toward the west, the other toward the east. One loses a day every year, the other gains a day every year. When the men die at fifty years of age one has seen one hundred days more than the other.

'TIS A ROTTEN COMBINE.

THE CORDAGE TRUST AN INVETERATE CRIMINAL.

A Luminous Example of the Evils of Fostering Industries Is Here Given—How McKinleyism Resurrected an Almost Lifeless Monopoly.

Robs the Farmer.

Wall street's recent experience with the cordage trust is, to those who have eyes to see, a luminous example of the evils of fostering industries with tariffs. It is largely due to McKinleyism that the cordage trust has, in a few years, become an inveterate criminal—robbing farmers who use binding twine, rope, etc.; squeezing the heathen Chinee who raises hemp, jute, and flax in the Philippines; making tramps of the workmen locked out of the mills closed to restrict production; robbing its benefactors—the American people—by selling cordage much cheaper to foreigners; and wrecking the fortunes of Wall street's innocent lambs that invested in stocks watered almost beyond belief.

The cordage trust was leading an almost lifeless existence when McKinley, in September, 1890, held out over $1,500,000 to it, by removing the duties on its raw materials, and offered it several millions more if it would hold together and take full advantage of the duties of about 2 cents per pound which he left on cordage, cables, twine, etc. The trust saw its opportunity. In October, 1890, it secured a charter, placing its capital at $15,000,000, about four times the real value. In 1891 it owned thirty-four and controlled four more of the forty-nine factories in the United States, besides having full control of the eleven factories in Canada. It cornered the manila market, and toyed with the prices of both raw materials and the finished product. In 1891 it made a profit of $1,406,313, and promised over $2,000,000 during 1892. Besides closing over half of its factories, it paid John Goode $200,000 a year to hold his plant idle. Its common stock, which sold, in 1891, from 73¾ to 104, reached 138 in 1892. In December, 1892, the trust voted to increase its capital from $15,000,000 to $25,000,000 to make its stock a better subject for speculation in Wall street. The additional water was not, however, poured into the pool at once; the cordage manipulators began to hatch a scheme bigger than all others. They began systematically to soak the lambs in Wall street. Quietly the big holders let it become known that they intended to bull the stock until common was worth 150, when the $10,000,000 would be added. They never got it beyond 147; and common stock sold at only 70 in February, after the water was added. Since then there has been a decline, but it was still selling above 60 when the insiders began to unload in heaps. In a few days it had declined to less than 20, and Wall street was on the verge of a panic.

That the cordage industry needed no protection has become evident to all since the trust has put its product on the English market at prices far below its home figures. On May 4, the very day the break began, the Iron Age said: "The National Cordage Company are moving energetically in the direction of European trade, and it is even intimated that manila rope has been offered abroad at prices which almost permit its being reimported from Great Britain to greater advantage than it could be bought in New York."

In leaving duties on articles made by trusts we are inviting fraud, depredation, and ruin. If we sow to the wind we must expect to reap to the whirlwind.—Byron W. Holt.

Those Tell-Tale Hat Trimmings.

Who pays the tariff tax? Protectionists seem to believe, and McKinley preaches, that the foreigner pays it. They claim that the foreigners pay it for the privilege of entering our markets. In regard to the tariff on hat trimmings the customs officers interpreted the law as placing a duty on hat trimmings more than double what the importers claimed that it actually did, but paid what they claimed was excessive, though under protest. John Wanamaker was one of these. John is a prominent advocate of high tariff and preaches the doctrine that the foreigner pays the tax, yet he sued the Government for the excess. The court decided in his favor and it was refunded. Now, if the foreigner, as he says, pays the tax, it must have been the foreigner who paid the excess. Then what right had John Wanamaker to sue for it, or what right had the court to decide that the money must be refunded to him? If, as John says, the foreigner pays the tax, then he must have paid the excess, and he only had the right to sue, and to him only should the money have been refunded. But Brother Wanamaker knows that he himself paid the tax, and that when he sold the goods he added the tax and that the consumer refunded him. The consumer then paid the tax, and he is the only one who has the right to sue, he only has the right to receive the money refunded.

Under the decision several millions of dollars have been refunded to importing merchants. In every case when they sold goods they added the tax, and the consumer refunded them. And now the court has decided that the Government shall also refund them. The Government has collected more than $12,000,000 in such excess of duty, and there are cases still pending which, without a doubt, the court will decide the same as it did the first. The Government will give certain importing merchants $12,000,000, for what? Nothing; it will give it to them because the law compels it. The merchants will get $12,000,000 for nothing, but the consumers who actually paid the tax, will get nothing. Now, this instance proves several things. It proves conclusively that the foreigner does not pay the tax, though anybody who knows anything about the tariff knows that he does not. Those great advocates of protection, McKinley and Wanamaker, who say that he does, know that in saying it they utter a falsehood. It proves that the tariff gives opportunity to some to get possession of that which is not theirs, which they did not create and to which they can have no moral right, and which it is dishonorable and dishonest on their part to receive and retain. It proves also that even the pious, saintly, devout Christians cannot withstand the temptation to enrich themselves even though they must descend to unrighteous and dishonorable means.—Herkimer County Free Press.

Cutting and Slashing.

The Reform Club's proposed tariff bill has started discussion anew on the tariff question in all of the protected factories, villages and cities in this country. The interviews with protected manufacturers upon the proposed bill printed in the American Economist have called forth replies by Democratic papers acquainted with the facts in regard to each industry. As a sample of these replies we quote the following from the Middletown Argus, printed not very far from Walden, N. Y.:

"Col. Tom Bradley, of the New York Knife Works, Walden, has written to the American Economist that a revision of the tariff on the lines proposed by the Reform Club would cause the prosperity of the United States to be affected with dry rot; would paralyze the pocket cutlery business, electrocute the wages of those employed in cutlery works, and strike with apoplexy the purchasing power of the people. Stripped of the fanciful form of expression in which Col. Bradley indulges his prediction is that everything will go to eternal smash unless the prohibitory tariff imposed on pocket cutlery by the McKinley tariff is continued, and every man and boy who buys a jackknife is compelled to pay twice its value for the benefit of himself and other American manufacturers. It's the old shriek of the calamity howlers, shriekier than ever before and with more agony in it. But Col. Bradley's shrieks frighten no one hereabouts. We all remember the prospectus of the knife trust, which it was proposed to form last year, and in which the profits of knife-making were declared to be so great that it would be possible to pay enormous dividends on a capitalization that took in the knife works at about twice their actual value. No one proposes to ruin Col. Bradley's business, but when the tariff is revised he and other knife manufacturers will have to get along like farmers, merchants, and the rest of the world on a fair and reasonable profit. The Democratic scheme of tariff reform does not propose taxing every man who buys a knife that the New York Knife Works may enrich their owners in a single year."

Stabbing the Democratic Party.

Several well-meaning Democratic papers continue to advocate the reimposition of duties on sugar, coffee and tea. While it may be true that such duties would be as just and fall as lightly on the people as is possible under any tariff, or indirect tax, yet the masses of the people do not want these articles taxed. They have learned but the primer lessons in taxation and their first great object lesson was that a duty on sugar is a tax. They, therefore, are strongly opposed to duties on sugar and other articles not produced in this country, to any considerable extent. Do these papers think that the Democratic or any other party can ride rough-shod over the wishes of the people? It is less and fewer taxes on the necessaries of life that will please the people and ingratiate into their hearts the party that grants these boons.

The masses are now studying their First Reader on taxation. When they have finished it they may understand that protective duties on woolens, cottons, glass, and other articles made largely in this country are the worst of all tariff duties, because more than four-fifths of all such taxes lodge in the pockets of the protected manufacturers, and only a small fraction filters through into Uncle Sam's pockets. But it is not at all likely that the masses will be any more reconciled to sugar and coffee duties, for by the time they are ready to begin their Second Reader they will be sick and tired of all tariff and other indirect taxes which always abstract money from the masses to give bounties and subsidies to the classes.

Newspapers that understand the wishes and needs of the people will not advocate duties on sugar, tea, and coffee, unless they think that some other party can better serve the interests of all and want to kill the Democratic party. The people will tolerate neither a sugar duty nor the party that forces them to pay it.

What Judge Lawrence Is Doing.

We have received a welcome letter from Hon. William Lawrence, of Ohio, in which he states that Columbus Delano and himself are arranging to import a few Scotch black-face sheep—"the best mutton sheep in the world."

If they can introduce them into Michigan and the best regions west, and in sections like Maine, Minnesota, etc., with the proper crosses on the sheep of this country, they argue that they can produce all the carpet wool needed, and give cheap mutton to all our cities—that is to say, they argue that they can do this "if the New England manufacturers will aid them in securing what the Republican platform of 1888 promised—full and adequate protection for the wool industry." Without this, they argue that the wool manufacturing industry will be imperiled, its growth retarded, and existing enterprises destroyed.

Judge Lawrence adds that these Scotch sheep are the proper sheep for the Reporter's Maine farm.

It is understood that on Sept. 28 and 29 there will be a national mass meeting of wool growers at Assembly Hall, Exposition grounds, Chicago, and, on Oct. 5, in the same place, the National Wool Growers' Association will meet, and it is asserted that they propose "to tear up the ground" and bury free wool theories very deep.

Judge Lawrence advises us to come into the protection fold before the earthquake overtakes us.

The genial Judge's letters are always as welcome as the flowers that bloom in the spring, but, in struggling against the rising tide of public sentiment in favor of free raw materials, our genial Ohio friend will make as little headway as did Dame Partington in sweeping away the Atlantic Ocean with a mop.—Wool and Cotton Reporter.

THE McBeth lamp chimney works, in Elwood, the largest concern of the kind in the world, has begun operations with a force of between 800 and 900 men. The old factory was destroyed by fire last February, but a new and fire-proof structure now stands in its place. The pay-roll amounts to $48,000 a month.

AN accident occurred at Roann that resulted in the death of William Pence, aged nearly 85 years, and one of the wealthiest citizens in that community. Mr. Pence attempted to "block" a log that was being loaded on a car in Thomas' saw-mill yard. The chain broke, and the log crushed Mr. Pence to death. He was a pioneer of Wabash County. A widow and several children survive him.

HON. JOHN W. CLAYTON, President of the Farmers' and Citizens' Bank at Farmland, was visited at his home near that place by two men who wanted to buy some land. A trade was made and as they were going to town to get a deed one of the strangers proposed to Clayton that they play three-card monte. Upon his refusal the man tried to rob him. Clayton threw him out of the buggy and succeeded in escaping.

AS A freight train on the Ohio and Mississippi Railway was going east through Oakdale, four miles east of North Vernon, the coupling broke, causing the train to part and [illegible] come together again. Several cars were thrown from the track. Morton Barth, a brakeman, was thrown from the top of a box car to the ground and, striking on his head, was killed. A tramp, who was stealing a ride on the train, was also injured.

AUDITOR OF STATE HENDERSON has called attention to the fact that very few of the building and loan associations of the State had filed reports with the Secretary of State, as was provided in the the Gifford bill, enacted by the last Legislature. The law was faulty in that it provided that the law should go into effect April 1, whereas the Constitution defines only two ways in which acts can be made of effect, by declaration of emergency and upon the proclamation of the Governor. With this knowledge, most of the companies have paid no attention to the provision requiring a report. But the law is now in force by proclamation, and it is the purpose to enforce it to the letter. Reports, the Auditor says, must be made at once. A failure to report subjects the delinquent company to a revocation of charter.

THE heirs of Henry Boles and Rev. H. M. Lampert, at South Bend, have entered suit against the Lake Shore & Michigan Southern for $10,000 damages. These two men were killed last spring near Osceola while walking on the track.

AT Terre Haute a jury gave Mrs. Gleanor Denny a verdict for $4,500 damages against the Chicago & Easteen Illinois railroad for injuries received in October, 1891. She was a passenger on one of the company's trains, being on a car platform, and had not time to enter the car when the train moved, wrenching her, and causing injuries to her head, neck and spine.

Check the First Approach

Of rheumatism, and further attacks may be escaped, if proper precautions against exposure are taken, and there be no hereditary predisposition. Unfortunately, people who ultimately become chronic sufferers, too often neglect the trifling twinges and premonitory stiffness which herald the advent of this agonizing malady. Among the diseases for which Hostetter's Stomach Bitters has been found efficacious this is one, and the medicine being perfectly safe, it is certainly to be preferred to drugs used for its cure, which are frequently useless, and nothing more nor less than poisonous. The substitution of this pleasant and pure blood depurent for medicines inimical to life in a slight overdose, is a measure which may fitly be urged upon persons who desire to obtain relief safely, or who have failed to obtain it from the numerous pseudo-remedies for this disease in the market.

Too Much for the Parson.

A Scotch clergyman, much addicted to snuff, resolved to abandon the habit and preached a sermon against it. Some little time afterward, during the course of a sermon on another subject, one of the elders, sitting immediately under the pulpit and within reach of the preacher, took a comfortable pinch, which so sorely tried the minister's self denial that he stretched out his hand and, seizing the box, thus addressed the astonished elder: "After the sermon that I so lately preached against the vice of snuffing how can you venture, sir, to do this (tapping on the lid,) and this (opening the box,) and this (taking a copious pinch,)" and then handed back the box to its owner.

WHERE HEROES SLEEP.

TOMBS OF FAMOUS SOLDIERS WHO HAVE FALLEN.

Grant Lies at Riverside in New York—Tecumseh Sherman Rests in St. Louis—Sheridan Sleeps in Arlington Cemetery—Other Noted Fighters.

They Rest in Peace.

THERE is always an especial demonstration Memorial Day at the graves of famous heroes of the war. The transient services of their occupants have been recorded on the tablets of America's memory in letters more lasting than those that mark their names on their tombs of marble and of granite. In the pictures that accompany this article some of the monuments that mark the last resting places of the leaders in the war are shown. The pictures describe the monuments better than words could. Brief reference to the lives of the men whose mortal remains lie beneath them is fitting at this time.

Grant, Soldier and President.

The splendid tomb of Grant at Riverside, N. Y., itself a tribute of the country's love, is the Mecca of many loving marchers. Ulysses S. Grant was born at Point Pleasant, Clermont County, Ohio, April 27, 1822. He was graduated from West Point in 1843 and was assigned to second lieutenant's duty at Jefferson Barracks, near St. Louis. He served in the Mexican war and during it was promoted to be a first lieutenant. In 1853 he was made a captain. In 1854 he resigned his commission and settled on a farm near St. Louis. At the outbreak of the war he organized a company of volunteers in Illinois. On June 17, 1861, he was chosen Colonel of the Twenty-first Illinois Infantry. He went to the front and was made a brigadier general of volunteers Aug. 7. In February, 1862, he captured Forts Henry and Donelson and took 15,000 prisoners. Soon afterward he was made a major general of volunteers. Oct. 25 he was assigned to command the Department of the Tennessee. July 4, 1863, he captured Vicksburg. He was then made a major general of the regular army. To recapitulate his other martial victories is useless. They are known to every patriotic American. March 2, 1864, the Senate confirmed him as Lieutenant General of the army. April 9, 1865, General Lee surrendered to him, and the war was ended. At Chicago, May 20, 1868, he was nominated by the Republican party for the Presidency and was elected in the fall. June 5, 1872, he was renominated by the convention at Philadelphia, and was again elected. In 1880 he was almost nominated for a third term. He died at Mount MacGregor, near Saratoga, Thursday, July 23, 1885, at 8 o'clock in the morning.

Our Greatest Naval Hero.

As Grant was our greatest military leader, so Farragut was our greatest naval hero. He has been called by many the ablest naval leader the world ever saw. His body lies in Woodlawn Cemetery. His full name was David Glasgow Farragut, and he was born at Campbell's Station, near Knoxville, Tenn., July 5, 1801. He was appointed a midshipman Dec. 17, 1810. During the war of 1812 he was made prize master of a captured frigate, the "captain to navigate." That officer refused to obey one of the 12-year-old prize master's orders, whereupon the boy assumed complete command and took the ship to port. In 1819 he was made an acting lieutenant. In 1823 he commanded his first ship. In 1825 he was regularly commissioned a lieutenant. His first active participation in the war of the rebellion came February 2, 1862, when he assumed command of the Hartford. April 18 he commenced his attack on New Orleans in conjunction with General B. F. Butler's land forces. He had a large but poorly equipped fleet. April 28 the forts surrendered to him and May 1 he turned the city over to General Butler. He had captured it, destroyed the Confederate fleet and silenced the forts with a loss of 37 killed and 147 wounded. He died in Portsmouth, N. H., on August 14, 1870.

Grand Old General Sherman.

General William Tecumseh Sherman's grave is in St. Louis. He was born in Lancaster, Ohio, Feb. 8, 1820. He was graduated from West Point in 1840. He served during the Mexican war. In 1853 he resigned his captain's commission and entered civil life. May 13, 1861, he was put in command of a brigade in Tyler's division. His first serious battle was Bull Run. August 3, 1861, he was made a brigadier general of volunteers. Sept. 17 he was in command in Kentucky. He played an important part in the battle of Shiloh, April 6 and 7, 1862, and was wounded, but did not leave the field. July 4, 1863, after many gallant victories, he was appointed a brigadier general in the regular army. March 12, 1864, he was placed in command of the entire Southwestern region. His greatest effort was the march to and capture of Atlanta, which occurred Sept. 1, 1864. Then began his famous march through Georgia to the sea, one of the most glorious undertakings of the conflict. He covered 300 miles in twenty-four days, and gave Savannah to the President as a Christmas gift. He took leave of his army May 30, 1865, going after the war to the command of the military division of the Mississippi. Feb. 14, 1891, he died at his home in New York.

Little Phil's Achievements.

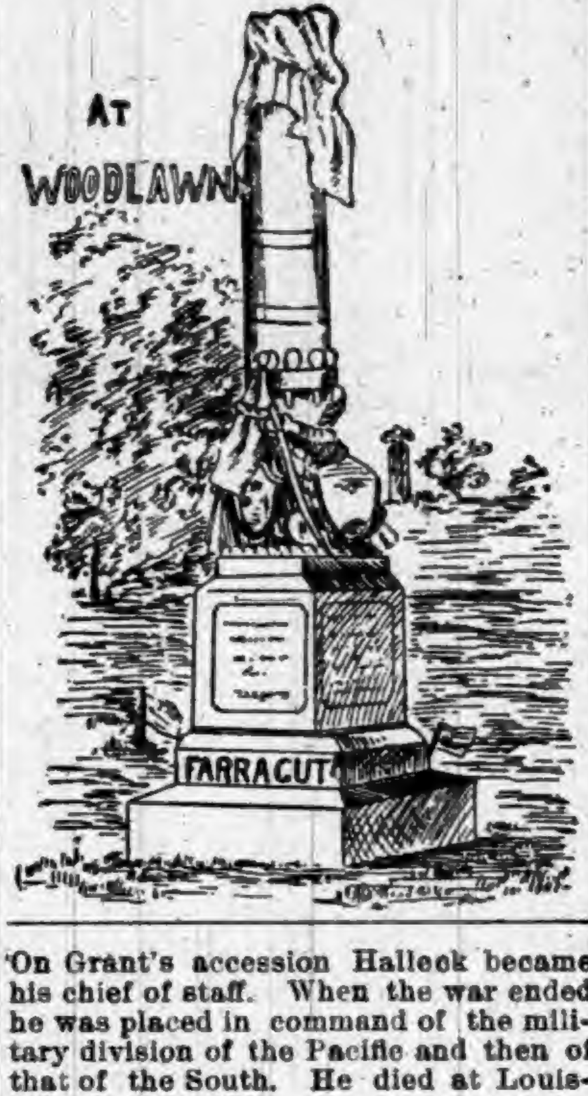
When, a few years ago, Gen. Philip Henry Sheridan surrendered to his first conqueror, Death, a pall of sorrow was hung over the whole land. He was born in Albany, March 6, 1831. He graduated from West Point in 1853. He was made a Captain of Infantry May 14, 1861, and in July of the following year was appointed Brigadier General of volunteers and commander of the Eleventh Ohio Division. Soon afterward he became commander of a division of the Army of the Cumberland. After Murfreesboro he became Major General of volunteers, Dec. 31, 1862. He saved the day at both Chickamauga and Chattanooga. April, 1864, he was made commander of all the cavalry of the Army of the Potomac. He took part in the battles of the Wilderness, Todd's Tavern, Spottsylvania Court House, Beaver Dam, and Richmond. Early in August, 1864, he was made commander of the Army of the Shenandoah. At Winchester he attacked Early and captured 5,000 prisoners. He was made a Brigadier General of the regular army Sept. 10, 1864. Oct. 19 the Federal army was attacked by Early and Longstreet. Sheridan was at Winchester, twenty miles away. The Union forces were routed and were retreating, when he completed his famous ride on his black horse and made them conquerors instead of vanquished. He was made Major General of the regular army Nov. 8, 1864. May 5, 1888, he died at Nonquitt, Mass.

Admiral David D. Porter.

Next to Farragut, the greatest naval honors of the civil war rest on David D. Porter, whose grave, unmarked by monument, is in Arlington Cemetery, Washington, D. C. He was born in Chester, Pa., June 8, 1813. He was the son of Commodore Porter, and was brought up, so to speak, on a man-of-war. He served during the entire Mexican war, and was ordered to the command of the Powhatan at the outbreak of the rebellion. July 4, 1863, he was made a Rear Admiral in recognition of valiant service. During the war he received four votes of thanks from Congress. July 5, 1866, he was made Vice Admiral, and Aug. 15, 1870, he was made Admiral of the navy. He died in Washington, Feb. 13, 1891.

Gen. Halleck.

In Greenwood Cemetery at New York lies all that is mortal of Gen. Henry Wager Halleck. His executive achievements were greater than his services on the field of battle, but well he earned a generous place among the country's heroes. He was born in Westernville, Oneida County, New York, Jan. 16, 1815. He was graduated from West Point in 1839. He served in the Mexican war and was instrumental in the admittance of California to the Union. In 1854 he left the army. At the beginning of the civil war he was at once made a major general. His services along the Mississippi and in the Valley of the Cumberland were invaluable. The principal battle in which he directed the Union forces was that of Corinth, but his guiding and wise hand had a part in almost every important movement made. July 23, 1862, he arrived at Washington and assumed the duties of general in chief of all the armies of the United States. His judgment and executive ability had much to do with the final victory of the Union cause and the salvation of the country



On Grant's accession Halleck became his chief of staff. When the war ended he was placed in command of the military division of the Pacific and then of that of the South. He died at Louisville Jan. 9, 1872.

They Called This Man "Fighting Joe."

No list of the great heroes of the war would be complete without the name of "Fighting Joe" Hooker. He was born in Hadley, Mass., Nov. 13, 1814. He graduated from West Point in 1837. He served in the Florida war as a Second Lieutenant, and rose to a Captaincy during the Mexican war. May 17, 1861, after the outbreak of the civil war, he was made a Brigadier General of volunteers. He fought out the Peninsular campaign as commander of the Second Division, Third Corps, of the Army of the Potomac. He distinguished himself at the siege of Yorktown and was made a Major General on the day after it ended. In the battle of Williamsburg his single division held the whole Confederate army in check. At Manassas he was nicknamed "Fighting Joe" by his soldiers. At Antietam he was wounded. Then he was made a Brigadier General in the regular army. Jan. 25, 1863, he succeeded Burnside at the head of the Army of the Potomac. After the war he was placed in charge of the Department of the East, with headquarters in New York. Paralysis caused his retirement from the service, which was with the full rank of Major General. He died at Garden City, L. I., Oct. 31, 1879, and is buried there.

Heroic Meade.

Another grave that hides a hero's clay is that of General George Gordon Meade, in Laurel Hill Cemetery, Philadelphia. He was born in Cadiz, Spain, December 31, 1815. He was graduated from West Point in 1835. He served during the Seminole and Mexican wars, and soon after the outbreak of the civil struggle he was appointed brigadier general of volunteers and given a command in the Army of the Potomac. He was severely wounded at New Market Cross Roads, but recovered soon enough to be in the battle of Bull Run. November 29, 1862, he was promoted to the rank of major general. The principal battles in which he played important parts were Chancellorsville, Gettysburg and Rappahannock station. During two years he was practically in command of the Army of the Potomac. At the close of the war he was a major general. He died in Philadelphia November 6, 1872.

Custer, the Redskins' Victim.

The name of Custer brings up the memory of one of the most horrible incidents in the whole country's history. Around his face in the minds of many shines a halo of personal bravery such as is given to no other American soldier. George Armstrong Custer was born at New Rumley, Ohio, Dec. 5, 1839. He was graduated from West Point in 1861. He at once joined the army and participated in the battle of Bull Run. In 1862 he was made a captain. In June, 1863, for gallant bravery he was made Brigadier General of Volunteers. At Gettysburg he did good service, and was awarded by a major's commission in the regular army. At Culpeper he was wounded. Throughout the remainder of the war he constantly showed himself to be a brave and able officer. At its close he was appointed Major General of Volunteers. In 1870 he began service on the plains as an Indian fighter, where he sustained his reputation for valor. June 25, 1876, he and his whole command were massacred by the redskins near Little Big Horn. He lies buried at West Point.

Where the Father of the G. A. R. Is Buried.

In the little cemetery at Rock Hill, Ill., is another grave that should be highly honored on Memorial Day. It is unmarked by any monument; but its silent occupant is Major B. F. Stephenson, the man who conceived the plan of the Grand Army of the Republic and put it into execution.

Be on your Guard.

If some grocers urge another baking powder upon you in place of the "Royal," it is because of the greater profit upon it. This of itself is evidence of the superiority of the "Royal." To give greater profit the other must be a lower cost powder, and to cost less it must be made with cheaper and inferior materials, and thus, though selling for the same, give less value to the consumer.

To insure the finest cake, the most wholesome food, be sure that no substitute for Royal Baking Powder is accepted by you.

Nothing can be substituted for the Royal Baking Powder and give as good results.

Prof. Garner's Monkey Business.

Word comes that Prof. Garner, who went to Africa a good while ago, armed with a phonograph and other apparatus, in order to pick up the language of monkeys, has arrived on the coast, and that he has been entirely successful in picking up monkey lingo. He has succeeded in recording over 200 monkey words, which he estimates is fully two-thirds of the whole vocabulary. In addition to this he has got several monkeys with him that are learning to talk in other languages, one of which can swear a little in German. Prof. Garner's monkey business is likely to bring him fame, but it probably won't do very much good to the monkeys or to mankind. If they can utter as much as 200 words, however, they might be trained sufficiently to become members of New York's 400. An intelligent monkey could go through the evolutions of that organization well enough, and those who are now engaged in it could be utilized in other occupations.—Reading Herald.

Wants Their Necks Wrung.

An Ohio genius has just applied for a pantent on a device which he is confident will soon supersede the electric chair, the gallows, and all other machinery for the execution of criminals. His invention is a chair in which the criminal to be executed is securely fastened. It has a kind of helmet attachment, which just as securely holds the head. When everything is ready a trigger releases a strong spring, which causes the helmet to rotate and wrings the victim's neck, much as one would wring the neck of a chicken. The inventor thinks that the death caused by his device would be certain, instantanous, and as painless as any that could be devised. But what's the matter with the gullotine? One would as soon have his head chopped off as wrung off, and it could hardly hurt so much.

Balance Wheel in a Watch.

The little balance wheel of a watch vibrates five times per second. Imagine that this wheel, instead of swinging back and forth like a pendulum, should roll on continuously over a given surface. Its circumference in a gentleman's watch of ordinary size is two and one-quarter inches, and it makes a sweep in each direction of about three-fourths of its circumference. In other words, it would traverse in one second a distance measuring about eight and a half inches. According to this computation the balance wheel of a watch would travel in a year over a distance of 3,677 miles in round numbers, and it would take the little wheel just six years and eight months to circumvolve the globe by way of the equator.

An Electric Loom.

The Thomson Electric Welding Company, Lynn, Mass., has, it is stated, just secured control of an electric loom which will revolutionize the present manner of weaving all kinds of textile fabrics and the cost for labor will be much cheaper by the new method. The loom will be run by electricity and will weave fabrics from the coarsest carpet to the finest linen. There is no noise perceptible when the machine is in operation, as each shuttle and moving parts work independently. The present power looms operate at the rate of 140 to 180 picks a minute, while the electric loom picks 250 to 300 a minute.

Directible Balloons.

A large dirigible balloon, intended to make headway against air currents of 28 miles an hour, is being made in France. It will be similar in form to the La France of 1884-85, but larger—230 feet in length and 43 feet in its greatest diameter. It will weigh 66 pounds per horse power, and will be propelled by a screw in front with a rudder behind.

An Odd Clock.

A Warsaw (Poland) mechanic has constructed a wonderful clock. It is a miniature railway station, where the customary activity of whistling engines, departing and arriving trains and the rush of passengers form an interesting scene at the striking of the hour.

An Appropriate Title.

Mdlle. Blase (of the corps de ballet)—I intend writing a book—my professional recollections, Mr. Galliquill. Won't you suggest an appropriate title for it?

Galliquill (the critic)—Sure! "Fifty Years a Ballet Girl."—Browning, King & Co.'s Monthly.

SOMETHING UNUSUAL, as a medicine, is Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery. And, because of that, there's something unusual in the way of selling it. Where every other medicine of its kind only promises, this is guaranteed. If it ever fails to benefit or cure, you have your money back.

It's the only guaranteed remedy for every disease caused by a disordered liver or impure blood. Dyspepsia, Biliousness, the most stubborn Skin, Scalp and Scrofulous affections, even Consumption (or Lung-scrofula) in its earlier stages, all are cured by it.

It purifies and enriches the blood, rouses every organ into healthful action, and restores strength and vigor. In building up both flesh and strength of pale, puny, Scrofulous children, or to invigorate and brace up the system after "Grippe," pneumonia, fevers, and other prostrating acute diseases, nothing can equal the "Discovery."

You pay only for the good you get.

A Cat Story.

A member of the Zoological Society says: "I once had a cat which always sat up to the dinner table with me, and had his napkin round his neck and his plate and some fish. He was his paw, of course, but he was very particular and behaved with extraordinary decorum. When he had finished his fish I sometimes gave him a piece of mine. One day he was not to be found when the dinner-bell rang, so we began without him. Just as the plates were put around puss came rushing up stairs and sprang into his chair, with two mice in his mouth. Before he could be stopped he dropped a mouse on his own plate and then one on mine. He had divided his dinner with me, as I had often divided mine with him."—London Answer.

St. Patrick.

Almost as many countries arrogate the honor of having been the natal soil of St. Patrick as made a similar claim with respect to Homer. Ireland, Scotland, France, and Wales each furnishes its pretensions; but whatever doubts may obscure his birth place, all agree in stating that, as his name implies, he was of a patrician family. He was born about 372, although the exact year of his birth is unknown.

DR. ISAAC THOMPSON'S CELEBRATED EYE-WATER.
This article is a carefully prepared physician's prescription, and has been in constant use for nearly a century. There are few diseases to which mankind are subject more distressing than sore eyes, and none, perhaps, for which more remedies have been tried without success. For all external inflammation of the eyes it is an infallible remedy. If the directions are followed it will never fail. We particularly invite the attention of physicians to its merits. Obituary.

Mrs. Tarring Swartz, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Massom Metcalf, was born in DeKalb county, Ind., July 12, 1868. She was united in marriage to Tarring Swartz May 26, 1892, and died at her residence south of Waterloo, May 15, 1893, aged 24 years, 10 months and 3 days.

The deceased was a kind lady, beloved by all who knew her. She leaves a kind husband, infant son, mother, two sisters three brothers and a large circle of relatives and friends to mourn their loss. Mrs. Swartz united with the M. E. church about five years ago. Her last words on earth to her husband were, "Tell ma and all the rest I am going home." May the great Head of the church bless all the surviving ones.

For when the morn came dim and sad,
And chill with early showers,
Her quiet eyelids closed. She had Another morn than ours.

The funeral was held in the U. B. church, May 17, Rev. S. P. Klotz officiating, assisted by Rev. McCloe. The remains were laid away to rest in the cemetery at Waterloo. May the husband meet his companion in that home not made with hands in heaven.

A Milion Friends.

A friend in need is a friend indeed, and not less than one million people have found just such a friend in Dr. King's New Discovery for consumption, coughs and colds.—If you never used this great cough medicine, one trial will convince you that it has wonderful curative powers in all diseases of throat, chest and lungs. Each bottle is guaranteed to do all that is claimed or money will be refunded. Trial bottles free at Robbins & McCord's drug store. Large bottles 50c. and $1. 1

During a thunder storm always put your milk in a smaller refrigerator, so that it will have no room to turn.

Deserving Praise.

We desire to say to our citizens, that for years we have been selling Dr. King's New Discovery for consumption, Dr. King's New Life Pills, Bucklen's Arnica Salve and Electric Bitters, and have never handled remedies that sell as well, or that have given such universal satisfaction. We do not hesitate to guarantee them every time, and we stand ready to refund the purchase price, if satisfactory results do not follow their use. These remedies have won their great popularity purely on their merits. Robbins & McCords druggists. 1

"Papa," said Willie, as they took their seats at the circus, "which is the Tammany ring? I want to see the tiger."

Cured Cholera Morbus.

While Mr. T. J. Richey, of Altona, Mo., was traveling in Kansas he was taken violently with cholera morbus. He called at a drugstore to get some medicine and the druggist recommended Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhea Remedy so highly he concluded to try it. The result was immediate relief, and a few doses cured him completely. It is made for bowel camplaint and nothing else. It never fails. For sale by Robbins & McCord.

Fosdick—How are you to-day?

Keedick—I can't complain. How are you?

Fosdick—I can complain but I won't.

For Cough and Croup.

The promptness and certainty of its cures have made Chamberlain's Cough Remedy famous. It is intended especiall for coughs, colds, croup and whoopingcoughs, and is the most effectual remedy known for these diseases. Mr. C. B. Main, of Union City, Pa., says: "I have a great sale on Chamberlain's Cough Remedy. I warrant every bottle and have never heard of one failing to give entire satisfaction." 50 centbottles for sale by Robbins & McCord.

"Your trousers just now remind me of Miss Lordly's nose."

"How so?"

"They're both turned up at the end."

Relief in Six Hours.

Distressing Kidney and Bladder diseases relieved in six hours by the New Great South American Kidney Cure. This new remedy is a great Surprise and delight to physicians on account of its exceeding promptness in relieving pain in the bladder, kidneys, back and every part of the urinary passages in male or female. It relieves retention of water and pain in passing it almost immediately. If you want quick relief and cure this is your remedy. Sold by Robbins & McCord, Druggists, Auburn, Ind.

Fred, of Leo. By choice she was a member of the Disciple church. Her work was done in the brief period of 43 years, 9 months and 10 days. She leaves a husband, two sisters, a brother and numerous friends to mourn her departure.

BUTLER.

Your correspondent, intent on visiting the great Fair, failed to remember the COURIER last week and to make amends will indite this letter. We reached Chicago on the eve of the 16th of May and found no difficulty in obtaining good room and board at $1 50 per day. Wednesday we spent in visiting points of interest in the city and making business calls Thursday we started early and reached the fair gates an hour too early. The delay seemed tedious, but it terminated, and we entered the enchanted place, and if not a building was open, one would be greatly benefited to see only the outside of the largest and most showy buildings to be seen in a group any where in the world. Our day was spent mainly in fixing bearings, studying the geography of the city and learning to distinguish one monster building from another, and after spending much time and indulging much thought, the enchantment of the place would frequently entangle us and we would be compelled to ask the aid of one of the two thousand gentlemanly guards for Information. We started to visit the state buildings and commenced with Indiana, and, while she is bringing up the scattered, demoralized rear, yet, she has a very pretty building, neat without and within, still incomplete, but enough done to make a show of what it will be. One feature of the building is admirable—wide stairways of easy ascent and a long, wide portico that will shelter thousands of poor hot, tired Hoosiers in the near future. The fair would be a grand affair if one could change his weary legs and blistered feet for new ones about four times a day. This difficulty may be slightly modified at $7 50 per day by getting one of the 2,000 roller chairs and a stout wheelman to push it. Yet this is only an aggravation as somebody is always between you and what you want to see and moves only after you are tired waiting and have lost interest in something more distant that you will perhaps get no further view of. So the only really satisfactory way is to tramp, tramp, until you are completely done for and then sit down and rest. The Nebraska state building is an ornament to that great state, and its exhibit is worth a trip to Chicago. Washington comes in for a large share of praise for a unique building. One nowhere else of a similar form is found. It is built of huge pine and walnut logs about four feet in diameter and fifty feet long, surmounted by a frame structure of difficult description. Her exhibits are wonderful and perfect. The Dakotas have somewhat similar buildings and many rare exhibits Idaho has a wonderfully old fashioned round log building large enough to entertain a half dozen corn husking bees. Pennsylvania comes in with an old fashioned frame house. Wide doors and windows with small lights of glass. Liberty bell is carefully enshrined within and thousands view it with wonder and awe. New York is outdoing herself and creating a palace of magnificence nowhere else equaled. Her Public Hall is said to be unequaled anywhere for magnificence. No exhibit in the building to speak of. Florida has an odd shaped building in the form of a fort and is filled with the products of that sunny slope. The fish, turtle and sea products are so real that we smell fish for an hour after leaving her building. West Virginia, the Carolinas and some other states have small, unpretentious buildings, Kentucky being partially an exception. Well, my letter is outgrowing my intentions and I must draw it to a close and possibly resume the subject in the near future. The only trouble is, we can't tell it as it is, and the only way to realize the magnitude and grandeur of the Fair is to visit it.

Total Number of Prizes for this County, 226.

CAUTION.—No Tags will be received before January 1st, 1894, nor after February 1st, 1894. Each package containing tags must be marked plainly with Name of Sender, Town, County, State, and Number of Tags in each package. All charges on packages must be prepaid.

READ.—SPEAR HEAD possesses more qualities of intrinsic value than any other plug tobacco produced. It is the sweetest, the toughest, the richest. SPEAR HEAD is absolutely, positively and distinctively different in flavor from any other plug tobacco. A trial will convince the most skeptical of this fact. It is the largest seller of any similar shape and style on earth, which proves that it has caught the popular taste and pleases the people. Try it, and participate in the contest for prizes. See that a TIN TAG is on every 10 cent piece of SPEAR HEAD you buy. Send in the tags, no matter how small the quantity.

Very sincerely,
THE P. J. SORG COMPANY, MIDDLETOWN, OHIO.

A list of the people obtaining these prizes in this county will be published in this paper immediately after February 1st, 1894.

REMARKABLE CURES OF AUBURN AND VICINITY

For the past four years the afflicted have been flocking in great numbers to see him, and they always return filled with the greatest enthusiasm, and the stories they tell of his remarkable diagnose and wonderful cures border on that of the miraculous. One says, "I went there on crutches and came away without them." Others say they had been sick and suffered for years, and they were cured. To see him and to be treated by him means health.

He asks no questions but gives a full history of each case as soon as he sees the patient, telling better how a person feels than they can tell it themselves. His knowledge seems perfect and his medicines are specific. They never fail. The work he accomplishes is truly astonishing.

There is no need to live in constant misery. It cost nothing to see him. The fullest examinations are free. A cure can be had for the mere cost of the medicine. He is the sick man's friend and no one is turned away unaided.

Among the others cured in this vicinity are Mrs. David Hough of Auburn Junction, who has for many years suffered from a complication of diseases. Also Mrs. F. E. Rhodes of Spencerville cured of catarrh, throat and lung trouble. Now says she feels as well as ever. She will advise others to go to the Doctor and be cured.

Miss Irene Williams cured of chronic cough and lung disease.

Miss McMillien cured of blood and skin disease of 14 years standing.

Miss L. M. cured of female weakness after exhausting all medical aid.

A tape worm removed from a prominent lady on Main street after doctoring several months for stomach trouble.

MORE CASES REPORTED CURED.

Bright's Disease of the Kidneys, 2; Heart Disease, 2; Rheumatism, 4; Catarrh and Bronchitis, 7; Consumption, 2; Skin Diseases, Sore Limbs and Ulcers, 9; Female diseases, 11; Dropsy of the Heart and Blood diseases, 3; Mrs. W. R. Crow cured of a sore limb of long standing; Samuel Kitchen cured of a skin disease of 18 years standing, after being doctored by several of the eminent physicians; Mrs. S. A. Dangler cured of heart disease and dropsy, given up to die; Samuel Young cured of total deafness: Mrs. Jane Armstrong cured of total blindness; Miss Katie Hague cured of cancer of the stomach; Miss Ella Smith cured of spinal disease. Mr. Samuel Clark cured of deafness in both ears of 20 years standing after taking three months' treatment. He says he can actually hear a watch tick in both ears. He is an old and respected citizen of Leipsic, Ohio. Over 50 cases reported cured in the last month. Dr. Townsend will not treat a patient under treatment by any other physician, and will not take a case only as given up by other doctors. His specialty is in chronic diseases of all kinds only. Consultation free. He will not treat any except there is a possibility of a cure, and he will so inform you. Those failing to see the Doctor can address him care Box 1408, Cincinnati, Ohio.

Mrs. W. R. Leedom says after years of suffering with cancer, she is perfectly well.

Mr. W. J. Boney says he is permanently cured of heart disease.

Mrs. W. H. Thompkins says she is permanently cured of cancer, after being a great sufferer, and having a sister die with one.

A bad case of catarrh cured for Mr. W. S. Wilcox, where he had lost his sense of smell and become partially deaf.

Jonas Walstrum cured of skin and blood diseases, after being pronounced incurable.

Frank Leslie's Popular Monthly for June.

"Even more important than Columbus's discovery is the fact that the General Government has just discovered woman," says Mrs. Potter Palmer, President of the Board of Lady Managers of the World's Fair, whose portrait adorns the front page of Frank Leslie's Popular Monthly for June. The beautifully illustrated article on "Woman's Work at the World's Fair," by Isabella McDougall, which follows, is a revelation in this regard, of which every American has a right to be proud. Another timely feature, of extraordinary pictorial interest, is J. S. Stuart-Glennie's descriptive paper on "The Ionian Islands," including earthquake stricken Zante. Other illustrated articles are: "Ellerslie and its Guernseys," a description of ex-Vice President Morton's model dairy farm on the Hudson, by Charles H. Crandall; "In the Metropolitan Museums of Art," by Mary Titcomb; "How the Big Tree Was Sent to Chicago," by Sara D. Price; "Bird Babyland," by Nellie Hart Woodworth; and "Rays from the Search Light," together with a half dozen short stories of real merit, and the full complement of literary miscellany.

Dr. M J. Davis is a prominent physician of Lewis, Cass county, Iowa, and has been actively engaged in the practice of medicine at that place for the past thirty-five years. On the 26th of May, while in Des Moines en route for Chicago, he was suddenly taken with an attack of diarrhoea. Having sold Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy for the past seventeen years, and knowing its reliability, he procured a 25 cent bottle, two doses of which completely cured him. The excitement and change of water and diet incident to traveling often produce a diarrhoea. Everyone should procure a bottle of this Remedy before leaving home. For sale by Robbins & McCord.

The constable and justice have been annoyed by some scrapper tormenting them, for no other reason that we can see, except that these officers have put a stop to their quarreling.

There are some of the citizens here who use vulgar and profane language in their quarrels. It should be stopped as it is painful for ladies to hear such cursing and swearing. Their equals cannot be found in the state.

Communicated.

In the matter of litigation in the U. B. church in the case heard by Judge Taft of Cincinnati on demurrer, a very erroneous impression has gained circulation as to its effect. So far nothing is settled and the case now goes to trial on its merits, the same as did the Richmond case. Shorn of legal verbiage the averments of the Radicals were under three heads, the first two being points of law, and the third a matter of fact.

No 1. Averred that no change could be made in the constitution without two thirds of the whole society (not two-thirds of those voting)

No. 2. Declared that the appointing of the commission was illegal, hence all its acts were null and void.

No. 3. Declared that a conspiracy by the majority existed, by which they attempted to change the constitution, and do away the confession of faith by an election of the membership, of which no notice or time was set for said election, and that in consequence, a very small vote was polled.

On the first count the judge ruled that the general conference had the right to construe the meaning of the two-thirds clause. On the second he said the conference had the right to appoint the commission. But on the third he said that if no notice of election was given, that the election would be null and void and that on the averment of the paper he overruled the demurrer. It will be observed that the first two clauses are in favor of the liberals and the third in favor of the Radicals, but when it comes to trial it will be an easy matter to show that the fullest notice was given of the election and that the largest percentage of the vote of the whole society ever given in this church, was polled at this election. The attorneys for the Liberals are now preparing their answer and are confident that when evidence is given that the third clause also will be in favor of the majority.

Frank Leslie's Popular Monthly for June.

"Even more important than Columbus's discovery is the fact that the General Government has just discovered woman," says Mrs. Potter Palmer, President of the Board of Lady Managers of the World's Fair, whose portrait adorns the front page of Frank Leslie's Popular Monthly for June. The beautifully illustrated article on "Woman's Work at the World's Fair," by Isabella McDougall, which follows, is a revelation in this regard, of which every American has a right to be proud. Another timely feature, of extraordinary pictorial interest, is J. S. Stuart-Glennie's descriptive paper on "The Ionian Islands," including earthquake stricken Zante. Other illustrated articles are: "Ellerslie and its Guerneeys," a description of ex-Vice President Morton's model dairy farm on the Hudson, by Charles H. Crandall; "In the Metropolitan Museums of Art," by Mary Titcomb; "How the Big Tree Was Sent to Chicago," by Sara D. Price; "Bird Babyland," by Nellie Hart Woodworth; and "Rays from the Search Light," together with a half dozen short stories of real merit, and the full complement of literary miscellany.

Covered Her Face with Magnetic Mineral Mud.

"What for?" smilingly queried the lady, of the reporter who was questioning her. "What for, indeed!" why it makes my skin soft, pure and beautiful; it takes the wrinkles out, and the action of the Magnetic Mineral Water baths, make me young again. I have found and so many of my friends, in the wonderful magnetic mineral mud and water baths of the Indiana Mineral Springs, "the Fountain of perpetual Youth,"

This great resort for health, pleasure and beauty, is on the main line of the Wabash railroad. Send to F. Chandler, Gen. Pass. Agt., Wabash R. Dr. Miles Medical Co., Elkhart, Ind.

You will remember the condition I was in five years ago, when I was afflicted with a combination of diseases, and thought there was NO HELP FOR ME. I tried all kinds of medicines, and scores of eminent physicians. My nerves were prostrated, producing dizziness, heart trouble and all the ills that make life miserable. I commenced to take and in three months I WAS PERFECTLY CURED. In my travels each year, when I see the thousands of physical wrecks, suffering from nervous prostration, taking prescriptions from local physicians who have no knowledge of their case, and whose death is certain, I feel like going to them and saying, "GET DR. MILES' NERVINE AND BE CURED." In my profession, where there are so many sufferers from overwork, mental prostration and nervous exhaustion, brought on by the character of the business engaged in, I would recommend "MILES' NERVINE" as a sure cure for all suffering from these causes.

Both Sides Surprised.

There was a sort of mutual surprise party at the old Jacob Maurer place in Jackson township May 2, it now being the home of Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Hartman. It was Mrs. Hartman's birthday, and her brothers and sisters set out to surprise her. All got there but Cyrus Maurer, a brother, who lives north of Waterloo, and the surprise was completely in their favor till old Mrs. Maurer, the mother, now in her 80th year, turned the tables and surprised the visiting sons and daughters by presenting each an elaborately pieced quilt. These she had been making at times for three years, having just completed the 11th quilt. Each son and daughter or representative of a son or daughter not present received one. This would include Samuel, Simeon, Cyrus, Clyde, Miranda and Rachel Maurer, Mrs. Ben. Moffit, Mrs, Vincent Dilley, Mrs. Cyrus Wyland, Mrs. Joseph Hartman, keeping one quilt for herself. The above, with their wives or husbands, were all present but the one named. There were several other friends, among them Mrs. Jacob Baltz, of Spencerville, and all had a pleasant meeting.

A Fearful Race for Life.

The Cincinnati Enquirer relates an exciting race of a bicycle that was chased by a horse:

Horace Moteram, of the First National Bank in Newport, had an exciting experience, and one that he is not likely to forget in a hurry. He was out on his bicycle and was coming into Newport on the Covert Run pike, when he passed a horse quietly nibbling grass on the roadside. The animal glanced at the wheel and suddenly seemed to become enraged. The horse then took after the bicycle rider, snapping and biting at almost every step. Moteram was going at full speed and was putting in his best licks, with the horse gaining on him every moment. Passers-by soon noticed the novel and exciting race, and presently crowds lined either sidewalk, cheering the rider of the wheel to further effort, not knowing that he was riding for his life, and that he was almost frightened to death. When he reached an alley between Monroe and Overton streets, in Newport, he shot into it, and was being followed by the infuriated beast. Then it was that a number of spectators saw the real condition of affairs. They frightened the horse away, and Monteram fell exhausted off his wheel. He soon revived, however, but would not again mount the wheel. He said, however, if the streets were in good condition the horse would never have caught him.

A Sad Death.

Can you describe anything worse than a young person dying by inches with consumption, cut off in the bloom of youth, when bright prospects of happiness and prosperity are before them, a very sad death indeed. Is it not a fact that most cases of this kind are brought on by a cough, only slight at first, then more violent, followed by night sweats and a general breaking down of the entire system. These are cases in which people are to blame. Why not check this slight cough. Dr. Marshall's Lung Syrup is guaranteed to cure, it will prevent consumption. Use it before it is too late. By Druggists, 25, 50 and $1.

A conductor on an Ohio railroad took in a ticket 37 years old the other day. It was bought by a man who missed the train in 1856, and hadn't had occasion to go over the same road again.

The Top Shelf.

Dr. Marshall's Lung Syrup has reached the top shelf. There is nothing that equals this medicine for coughs, colds, asthma, bronchitis or any affection of the throat or lungs. It has been thoroughly tested for this class of diseases, and stands in the front rank at the head. This medicine is guaranteed to give satisfaction, who could ask for more. Give Dr. Marshall's Lung Syrup a trial; it has cured others and will cure you. Do not fail to use this in time. Price 25, 50 and $1, by all druggists.

He—Is it a tragedy?

She—Yes, don't you see how the hero drags his feet.

Insure Against Sickness.

Are you insured? If not, now is the time to provide yourself and family with a bottle of Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhœa Remedy as an insurance against any serious results from an attack of bowel complaint during the summer months. It is almost certain to be needed and should be procured at once. No other remedy can take its place or do its work. 25 and 50 cent bottles for sale by Robbins & McCord.

Rebecca Wilkinson, of Brownsvalley, Ind., says: "I have been in a distressed condition for three years from nervousness, weakness of the stomach, dyspepsia and indigestion until my health was gone, I had been doctoring constantly with no relief. I bought one bottle of South American Nervine, which did me more good good any $50 worth of doctoring I ever did in my life. I would advise every weakly person to use this valuable and lovely remedy: a few bottles of it has cured me completely. I consider it the grandest medicine in the world." Warranted the most wonderful stomach and nerve cure ever known. Trial bottle 15 cents. Sold by Robbins & McCord.

Dr. M J. Davis is a prominent physician of Lewis. Cass county, Iowa, and has been actively engaged in the practice of medicine at that place for the past thirty-five years. On the 26th of May, while in Des Moines en route for Chicago, he was suddenly taken with an attack of diarrhœa. Having sold Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhœa Remedy for the past seventeen years, and knowing its reliability, he procured a 25 cent bottle, two doses of which completely cured him. The excitement and change of water and diet incident to traveling often produce a diarrhœa. Everyone should procure a bottle of this Remedy before leaving home. For sale by Robbins & McCord.

The M. E. church was handsomely decorated with growing plants, flowers, and flags in readiness for the memorial services and sermon Sunday morning. The house was full on that occasion.

The commencement exercises at the M. E. church Friday evening were well attended and very interesting. An abundance of floral and other gifts were bestowed upon the graduates, as usual.

Rev. Mr. Butler has improved his residence by putting in a large and handsome square window in front, and a bay window on the south side, together with other changes. The building presents a very different aspect now, from that when it came into the possession of its present owner.

BUTLER.

The Lake Shore flyer passed through here Sunday eve at a very moderate rate of speed, but was a thing of beauty.

Butler was favored last week with a big show and as usual was badly swindled. If our town would utterly refuse admission to these demoralizing schools of vice, a good purpose would be served.

The writer has driven over a large section of the surrounding country in the past ten days and has been agreeably surprised at the almost marvelous improvement in the growing wheat. Many fields that one month ago did not seem to have enough wheat on the ground to be worth keeping for what was growing upon them, now bid fair for 75 per cent of an average yield, and many others have an appearance of a full crop.

Butler is beginning to settle back into its normal condition since its small army of railroad people have largely departed. It would be idle to say we do not miss them as there were among them many good and noble people. As the act of removal was not a voluntary act on their part, and one most severely regretted by them, we can the more heartily sympathize with them in being compelled to leave good and comfortable homes, endeared by ties of tender associations, for indifferent quarters in strange places, and in being compelled to again take up the thread of life, and attempt to rear new homes amid strange surroundings, with the bitter fact gnawing at their vitals that after all may be, but a short space of time may elapse, ere the same thing may have to be repeated.

We escaped the clutches of Chicago's imaginary pickpockets and thieves and reached our homes in safety on the 23rd, tired, but highly gratified with our week spent in the wicked city, and among the temples of its white sister, and while filled to repletion with sights, sounds and wonders, still are only half satisfied. There is something almost intoxicating to wander down Midway Plaisance on a bright spring morning and see the quaint sights presented on this wide area filled with things and people so foreign and different from our own. The quaint foreign villages with their languages so unintelligible to us, and their clothing so different from what we see on our streets that we are lost in wonder and almost forget that we are simply on our way to the palaces of wonder and are loth to leave their enticing splendors for what we know will be attractive beyond comparison. Several days could be spent in this part of the fair with pleasure and profit, and if the great fair was not spread out at our feet with glistening towers and rows of colonnades, we might well cross the continent to see the stray things in this outside part of the fair. Our Sabbath in Chicago was a very quiet one. We traversed some of its principal streets and were surprised at the orderly quiet that everywhere prevailed. Monday we again repaired to the fair and while we had seen many things the previous three days, we just began to realize that we had seen but little. We visited the Esquimaux in their summer quarters, and found the youngest among them had learned to say "five cents" in fair English. Their huts have some attraction on their outsides, but smell strongly of rancid oil on the inside. They seem to possess average intelligence, and are quick to pick up American ideas. Their women are squatty, but not bad looking. The men are below the average height, but alert and active.

ST. JOHN.

There will be some fruit.

The corn is all planted in these parts.

Decoration day at Cedar Chapel the first Sunday in June.

Mrs. Clara Culver and husband gave her grandparents a call last week.

There is some talk of another store coming to St. Johns, if so some citizens must move.

The new married ones, Mr. and Mrs. Hines are doing well. Mr. H. gave the boys the smoke.

Road work is the order of the day now with Charles Baber at the head of the band. Charles is a good leader, he puts the boys to the front.

W. H. Fair has his material on the ground for his new dwelling and will commence work in a few days, it will add one more to our city.

The constable and justice have been annoyed by some scrapper tormenting them, for no other reason that we can see, except that these officers have put a stop to their quarreling.

There are some of the citizens here who use vulgar and profane language in their quarrels. It should be stopped as it is painful for ladies to hear such cursing and swearing. Their equals cannot be found in the state.

Communicated.

In the matter of litigation in the U. B. church in the case heard by Judge Taft of Cincinnati on demurrer, a very erroneous impression has gained circulation as to its effect. So far nothing is settled and the case now goes to trial on its merits, the same as did the Richmond case. Shorn of legal verbiage the averments of the Radicals were under three heads, the first two being points of law, and the third a matter of fact.

No 1. Averred that no change could be made in the constitution without two thirds of the whole society (not two-thirds of those voting)

No. 2. Declared that the appointing of the commission was illegal, hence all its acts were null and void.

No. 3. Declared that a conspiracy by the majority existed, by which they attempted to change the constitution, and do away the confession of faith by an election of the membership, of which no notice or time was set for said election, and that in consequence, a very small vote was polled.

On the first count the judge ruled that the general conference had the right to construe the meaning of the two-thirds clause. On the second he said the conference had the right to appoint the commission. But on the third he said that if no notice of election was given, that the election would be null and void and that on the averment of the paper he overruled the demurrer. It will be observed that the first two clauses are in favor of the liberals and the third in favor of the Radicals, but when it comes to trial it will be an easy matter to show that the fullest notice was given of the election and that the largest percentage of the vote of the whole society ever given in this church, was polled at this election. The attorneys for the Liberals are now preparing their answer and are confident that when evidence is given that the third clause also will be in favor of the majority,

EVENTS OF INTEREST

THAT OCCURRED DURING THE PAST WEEK.

A Circus Train Meets With Disaster in Pennsylvania—Capital Bank to Resume—Gladstone's Assailant Indicted—A Lumberman Fails—Firebugs in Cleveland.

KILLED BY A WRECK.

Mains' Circus Train Meets with Disaster.

Tyrone (Pa.) special: Mains' circus train was wrecked at Vail Station. It is reported that nine persons and a number of animals were killed. The scene of the wreck presented many horrifying features. Passenger coaches, property cars, and cars containing the animals of the show were piled up together in a huge mass. The cries of panic-stricken beasts made the morning hours hideous. As soon as the confusion had been dissipated by the management the work of removing the dead and injured was commenced. The residents of Vail turned out in force and lent their kind aid.

The killed are:

William Henry, brakeman, of Tyrone.

Frank Brain of Indianapolis.

William Mutterby of East Liberty, Pa.

John Staver of Houtsdale, Pa.

Unknown man called "Barney."

The injured were brought to the hospital in this city. They are:

John Chambers, colored, Chambersburg, Pa., bitten severely by a lion.

Willis O. Brannon, Chambersburg, wound of scalp.

Arthur Richards, Peachville, Pa. wounded about the face.

George Corlin, Hollidaysburg, Pa., contusion of chest.

Frank Barrett, Tarantum, Pa., contusion of left arm.

David Jones, Harrisburg, sprained leg.

Frank Morse, Rochester, N. Y., wounded about the head.

William Evans, Williamstown, right ankle injured.

James Haney, Albert, Pa., badly injured about the body.

Firebugs in Cleveland.

Cleveland, Ohio, is at the mercy of a band of determined and reckless firebugs. The other morning near Doan street, two unoccupied buildings were fired and several lives imperiled. An attempt was made to draw the fire apparatus away from the central portion of the city and in order to cripple its work many hydrants in the East end were opened and left pouring water into the streets. Chief Dickinson said: "Five alarms were sent in for a fire on Lindus street, the first by a policeman and the rest by miscreants who smashed the fire alarm box to pieces. Half a dozen engines were sent out needlessly. It was a deliberate attempt to start a big conflagration. I think the majority of incendiary fires are started by tough boys."

In Arms of Flame.

The farm house of Samuel Skiles, two miles west of Canonsburg, Penn., was destroyed by fire and three small children were burned to death. The fire originated in the kitchen from an unknown cause, and when the parents were awakened by it they attempted to subdue the flames. While thus engaged the fire made such rapid progress that it was impossible to reach the children, who were sleeping in an upstairs room. One of the children was a babe a few months old, and the others were aged respectively 4 and 6 years.

Two Murderers to be Electrocuted.

Governor Flower of New York who had the case of Martello and Osmond, the murderers, under consideration for some time has decided to let the law take its course. They will both be killed by electricity. Martello is now in the Dannemora prison and will be killed some time during the first week in June, and Osmond is in Sing Sing prison and will be electrocuted the second week in June.

Lumber Fire at Milwaukee.

Milwaukee special: The entire lumber district was threatened the other night by a fire which broke out in the planing mill of G. A. Beck & Co., in the Menominee valley. The loss of Beck & Co., is $75,000, with $50,000 insurance. The Milwaukee Lumber Company's loss is $10,000, covered by insurance. The cause of the blaze is unknown.

Killed by Cars.

James Dickson, aged about 70 years, was struck and instantly killed at the Orange street crossing, Mansfield, Ohio., by a west bound Pennsylvania Railroad train. Mr. Dickson was one of Mansfield's wealthiest citizens, his wealth being estimated at from $300,000 to $400,000.

Gladstone's Assailant Indicted.

At London the grand jury has found a true bill against Wm. Townsend, the individual arrested recently on suspicion of intending to kill Mr. Gladstone.

Gladstone Not to Retire.

Mr. Gladstone declares that Lord Randolph Churchill's statement that he will not again contest Midlothian is mere unfounded gossip.

Capital Bank to Resume.

Indianapolis special: The Capital National bank will resume. The report of Bank Examiner Young was received by Controller Eckels, and it was of such a favorable character that the controller at once gave to Cashier Doherty, who has been in Washington for several days, permission for the bank to resume business. The details of the report have not been given out, but the bank is reported solvent without the amount involved in the Chemical bank's failure.

Jeff's Bones.

Arrangements for the removal of the remains of Jefferson Davis, Ex-President of the Southern Confederacy, from their grave in Metairie cemetery, New Orleans, and their reinterment in Hollywood cemetery, Richmond, Va., were completed in New York, recently, at the Marlborough Hotel, where J. Taylor Ellyson, Mayor of Richmond, Va., held a long conference with Mrs. Jefferson Davis and her daughter, Miss Winnie Davis. After the conference, at which Mrs. Davis approved the elaborate plans for the removal, Mayor Ellyson, accompanied by Miss Winnie Davis boarded a train in Jersey City and started for New Orleans. Miss Davis will represent the family at the ceremonies, which will take place along the route from New Orleans to Richmond, where Mrs. Davis will meet the remains and be present at the final interment.

CHARLIE FOSTER FAILS.

Once a Millionaire, He Cannot Now Pay His Debts.

Fostoria (Ohio) special: Ex-Secretary of the Treasury Charles Foster has failed and has made an assignment.

About ten years ago he lost heavily in Lake Superior copper mines, in natural gas, and street railway speculations. At Findlay during its temporary boom he invested largely. When the bubble burst, he, with many others, was caught for many thousands of dollars. He also lost by endorsing notes for business and political friends. Since then he has attempted to recoup his losses, but only became deeply involved. The crash was temporarily averted by his appointment as Secretary of the Treasury. It is thought he will at best not be able to more than pay his debts.

The extent of the failure is so great that its significance can scarcely be realized. A half dozen of the prominent industries will go to the wall and hundreds of the people be thrown out of employment. The loss to business men who were depositors in Foster & Co.'s bank is one of the deplorable features of the crash, but it is confidently believed that none of them will suffer to an extent that will cause them to assign.

The loss to Fostoria will be a great one and one that will take considerable time to recover from, but great as it is, the regret on this account in no way lessens the regret and sympathy expressed for the Secretary. It is generally conceded that his unstinted generosity and phenomenal public spirit have been the indirect causes of his financial downfall, as he was ever ready to lend a helping hand to the poor and worthy.

WELL-DESERVED PRAISE

Bestowed Upon Admiral Gherardi by the Secretary of the Navy.

Admiral Gherardi, who has been relieved from sea duty, has received a communication from Secretary Herbert congratulating him on the successful conduct of the naval review. The communication is in these words:

"Upon issuing the order detaching you from the command afloat the department desires to express its high appreciation of your efficient and valuable services while exercising the command from which you are now relieved. Since the creation of the rank you so honorably enjoy no officer of the United States Navy has ever held command of a fleet for so long a period as that which will be terminated by the departments' order of this date.

"You have had the singular felicity of closing your career afloat by organizing and successfully conducting an international review and land parade at once unique and in many respects unprecedented. The department congratulates you upon the manner in which you have discharged the difficult and delicate duties imposed upon you by this novel undertaking."

ALL ARE DEAD!

Terrible Crime of an Indianapolis Servant Girl.

Indianapolis special: Anna Wagner, a servant at the home of Charles G. Koesters, is under arrest for poisoning five members of his family. The girl was in love with Koesters and to make her way clear used rough on rats to remove the household. Mrs. Koesters mother of Charles G. Koesters, died May 22. This was the fifth death in the family since the 15th of October, 1892. At least one of these prior deaths had aroused suspicion. The coroner has now become convinced that a wholesale murdering has been going on and that somebody has been systematically attempting to destroy the family. The result is the arrest of the housemaid and there is no question about her guilt.

The members of the Koesters family that have died are his wife Mary, 31 years old, died October 15, 1892; the baby, 3 months old, who was found dead in bed January 6, 1893; Frank L., father, 74 years old, January 29, 1892; Mary M. A., daughter, 8 years, February 27, 1892; Clara, the mother, 73 years old, May 22, 1893.

Convicts Have a Desperate Battle in the Penitentiary.

Pittsburgh special: A desperate fight with knives took place in the broom department of the western penitentiary. One of the convicts threw his adversary to the floor and was about to plunge his knife into his heart when another convict rushed in and in trying to separate them the combatant was stabbed in the left breast. In the struggle the convict who tried to stop the battle was stabbed four times. One cut in the left breast, it is said, is two inches long and about two inches deep. The other two received some ugly cuts about their breasts and shoulders, but none of them are considered dangerous. Warden Wright declines to say anything about the affair except that a serious matter has been reported to the prison board.

Detectives Attacked By Bandits.

Visalia (Cal.) special: Two detectives named Black and Burns, who have been hunting for train robbers Sontag and Evans, have met the fate of other detectives who have been hunting for these notorious bandits. The detectives were occupying a cabin near this city, and the band learning this fact through friends, sought out the detectives and shot at them as they were returning to the cabin the other night. The shots wounded Black in the arm and thigh Burns escaped, and, thinking his companion dead, came here for help. Black crawled into the cabin and fired several shots at the retreating bandits, and is thought to have wounded one of them. Black was brought here next morning in a wagon. His wounds are fatal.

Costly Freight Wreck.

A wreck occurred on the Big Four Railroad at Mechanicsburg, Ohio. A loss of life and great damage to property was narrowly averted. While a local freight was standing on the main track an extra through freight, which had become unmanageable, dashed into the rear end, demolishing a coach and several box cars. The engineer and fireman seeing the danger jumped from their engine, receiving slight injuries. The engine on the through freight was totally disabled, causing a loss of several thousand dollars to the company.

The Sunday Opening Question.

Washington special: Attorney General Olney talked very freely with regard to the Government's position in the matter of opening the World's Fair on Sunday. He said: "I hardly think it is proper that I should give you in detail the instruction to District Attorney Milchrist of Chicago, who was here Wednesday. We had a long conference on the subject. If the fair managers undertake to do what we believe to be a violation of the law—that is, to open the exposition on Sunday—we will appeal to the courts."

Horribly Crushed.

A horrible elevator accident occurred at the wholesale liquor store of Dennis Kelly, at Front and Maple streets, Columbus, Ohio. Charles Holtzig, a shipping clerk, while engaged in bringing some barrels down on an elevator from an upper story to the second floor, was caught in a doorway. His scalp was torn off, his jaw was broken in two places, one arm was fractured and his chest was crushed. His injuries are regarded as fatal.

Ground to Pieces.

Michael M. Joab, a retired lawyer, was literally ground in an unrecognizable mass under a Vandalia freight at Terre Haute, Ind. He attempted to cross under a train just as it started in the yards. Ten cars passed over him, tearing his body into many pieces. There are some doubts whether death was accidental or premeditated. Joab has had quite a history, having attempted suicide only a few years ago on account of family troubles.

Death Sentence Commuted.

The President has commuted to imprisonment for life the death sentence of Edward Pickens, a full-blooded Chickasaw Indian, who was convicted of murdering in the district of Kansas. The ground for commutation is that Pickens is of a very low order of intelligence, whose surroundings have not been favorable to the development of moral sense, and there was some provocation. The court officers all recommended clemency.

Eyes Burned Shut.

A Welshman named Ben Williams, aged 22, and employed at the tin-plate works at Elwood, Ind., met with a horrible accident. He is employed in the pickling room, and while dipping some plates in palm oil and acid the fluid was thrown on his face. His eyes were burned shut and his face and head baked to a cake. His recovery is doubtful. He lately came from Wales.

Hungry Burglars.

Burglars broke into the restaurant of Wm. Foulz at Bourbon, Ind. They effected an entrance through the skylight, bursted the safe open and took about $60, leaving $17. After taking the money they lit the gasoline stove and cooked themselves a meal of ham and eggs. They then filled their pockets with cigars and skipped. No clue.

Where Were His Friends?

John McNealus, aged 25 years, a brakeman on the Little Miami railroad, was drowned in the Little Miami River at Trebein's Station, Ohio, while out fishing with a party of young men. He fell off of a bank about seven feet high into only four feet of water and never rose. He was probably knocked senseless by the fall.

Two Children Burned to Death.

Two children of Mr. and Mrs. Manaige of St. Clair, Minn., were burned to death by the explosion of a gasoline can. An attempt was made to fill a gasoline tank while the stove was burning. A third child, a baby, was saved by being thrown out of the window. The house was entirely destroyed.

Horses Cremated.

Five hundred feet of stable sheds at Garfield Park, Chicago, together with three camels and seven blooded Arabian horses were destroyed by fire. The park is being used by a band of Arabs in giving performances similar to those of the Wild West show. The origin of the fire is unknown. Loss, $15,000.

Several Asphyxiated.

While Samuel Fitzsimmons, A. E. Milheiser, Dennis McCaully, and Pat Hardin were at work in an eleven-foot trench at the Union Depot Viaduct, Columbus, Ohio, a pipe burst, filling the excavation with gas. All were partly asphyxicated, and Fitzsimmons will die.

Davis Disbarred.

The Supreme Court of Tennessee has affirmed the decision of Judge Estees of the lower court, disbarring from legal practice for unprofessional conduct ex-Speaker Ralph Davis. It is believed Mr. Davis will remove from Tennessee and will settle in Chicago, where he will engage in law practice.

Robbed the Fair.

Evidence has been secured by World's Fair officials that an enormous number of souvenir tickets have been stolen by the ticket takers and that to dispose of them several ticket sellers were in the conspiracy. It is estimated that the number of tickets stolen will range from 5,000 to 10,000 a day.

Dr. Briggs Beaten.

The tenth General Assembly of the Presbyterian churches of the United States has voted to entertain the appeal in the Briggs case from the New York Synod, by a vote of 409 to 145. This virtually defeats Dr. Briggs.

Sawed in Two.

J. P. Hambrick, of Mason County, West Virgina, was working at his sawmill and while riding his log-carriage fell against the saw and was cut in two. He leaves a wife and two children.

Emin Pasha Reported Killed.

A dispatch from Zanzibar says that Tippo Tib has received a letter to the effect that Emin Pasha had been killed during an engagement with slave hunters.

Killed on the Pan-Handle.

Patrick Dowling, watchman for the Pan-handle at the Broad street crossing, Dennison, Ohio, was struck by a car and killed.

CHICAGO AND THE FAIR

THINGS EVERY VISITOR SHOULD KNOW.

Some of the Schemes of Pickpockets and Thieves—The Different Routes to the Fair Grounds—How to Utilize Time and Money.

Beware of Strangers.

Chicago correspondence:

Chicago will be a crowded city during the World's Fair, and among the crowds will be many who make a livelihood by fraud and theft. The confidence man, who knows all your friends and relatives intimately and wants a small advance on a bogus check after banking hours; the "flim-flam" man, who cheats you before your very eyes by doubling over banknotes and giving you the wrong change; the man with the "gold" ring he has found and wants to sell for one-half its value; the pickpocket who has his confederate hustle you about in the crowded street-car while he deftly lifts your watch from its chain; the sneak-thief who picks up what valuables you carelessly leave in your unlocked room, and the highway robber who infests dark alleys and unfrequented by-ways—all these will be lying in wait for the inexperienced and unwary stranger in Chicago. The average citizen is scarcely a match for these gentry, much less the unsophisticated countryman or the denizen of orderly inland towns, and the first thing the stranger settling down in the World's Fair city for a brief sojourn should do is to determine to keep out a sharp eye and few valuables about him. There are numerous ways of disposing of surplus wealth, such as the safety deposit vaults and the banks, but whether the visitor avails himself of these or not, he should make it a rule to leave nothing of value in his room, and carry just what is necessary in a crowd or after dark, and this safely stowed away. It will be well to avoid remote thoroughfares and late hours, to give the plausible stranger a wide berth, apply to the nearest policeman in cases of doubt and distress, and have a card in a convenient pocket containing name and address for identification in case of accident.

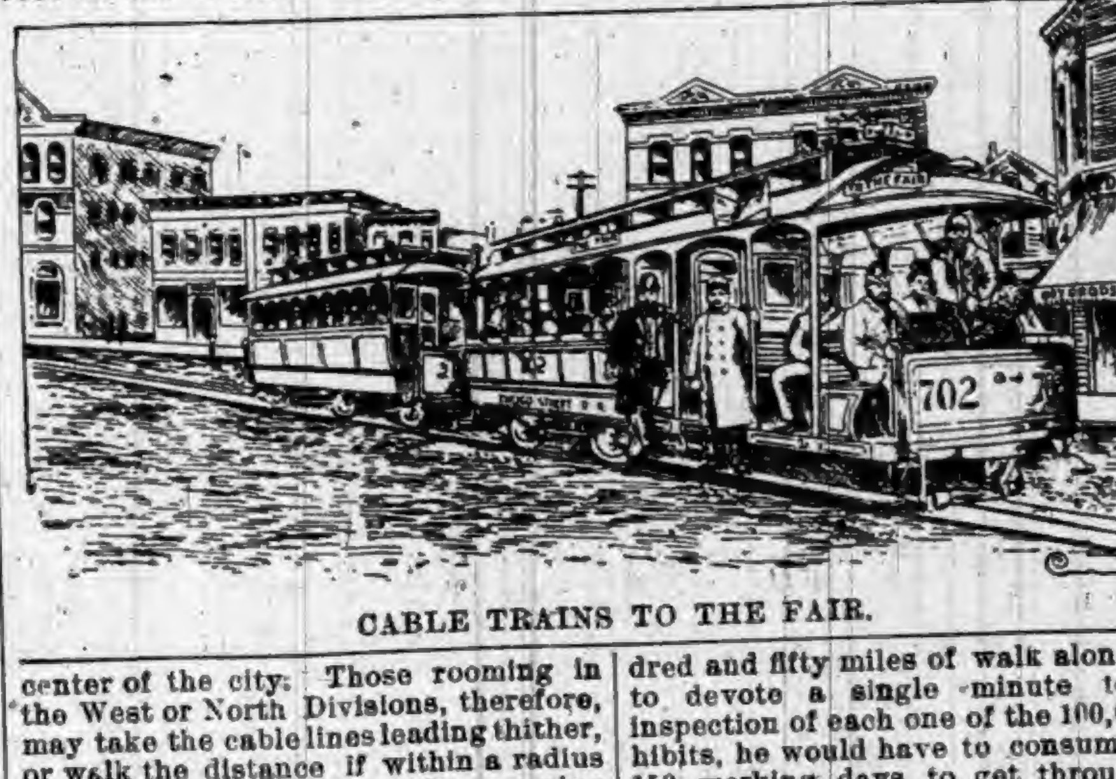
SIGNS ALONG THE ROUTE.

Routes to the Fair Grounds.

There are several routes leading direct to the World's Fair, all from the center of the city. Those rooming in the West or North Divisions, therefore, may take the cable lines leading thither, or walk the distance if within a radius of a mile. The cable trains, running direct to the grounds and charging a 5-cent fare, may be taken anywhere on State street or Wabash avenue. This route is the slowest, but nowise unpleasant, as it passes through a representative business and residence district of the city, and the forty-five minutes' ride is enlivened by a constantly changing scene. To the uninitiated it enables a study of the best surface road system in use in Chicago, and gives a good idea of the plans of the streets and the extent of the city.



CABLE TRAINS TO THE FAIR.

The elevated railroad will probably be the favorite avenue of travel during the Exposition. The down-town terminal station is on Congress, just east of State street, although trains stop for passengers every three or four squares along the entire route. The fare is 5 cents, the method of locomotion smooth and rapid, the seven miles being covered in some twenty-five minutes. Frequent trains run, the seats are roomy and comfortable, and the view from the car windows is a very interesting one. This line lands its patrons directly inside the grounds.

THE TALLY-HO COACH.

The steam railroads are a third means of travel, and quite a number of lines will run excursion trains to the Fair. The Illinois Central Railroad, with its depot on the lake front, will probably monopolize the bulk of traffic in this direction, however, being especially equipped for the service, and having arranged to operate through trains without stop every few minutes. The fare will be 10 cents, but the journey is quicker than by the elevated, and the route affords a view of the fine southern avenues of the city and the lake. Its cars are so arranged that every passenger must occupy a seat.

The visitor exhausting these means of locomotion, and not having ninety dollars to pay for a tally-ho coach, or ten dollars a day for a carriage, but desirous of approaching the Exposition by some new route, can felicitate the senses with an imitation sea voyage. Steamers of every kind will ply frequently between the grounds and the pier on the lake front, just over the Van Buren street viaduct. The fare is twenty-five cents, the trip delightful. What with the fresh water breeze, the ocean swell on a small scale, and a panoramic view of the city stretching like a crescent moon before the vision, this route on a pleasant day is a most enjoyable one. The leisurely visitor should vary his routes to the Fair as much as possible for the experience afforded, and, by getting started early and leaving the grounds at a reasonable hour, all crowds, danger, and confusion may be avoided. The manner in which these lines handled the crowds on opening day proves their ability to make it comfortable and pleasant for all patrons at all times.

Inside the Grounds.

Once inside the grounds, the sensible visitor will devote some thought and calculation to the manner in which he will endeavor to get as much good as possible out of his money. Fifty cents pays for an inspection of the main features of the Exposition, and there is lots to see. These should be exhausted first. The side-shows of the Midway Plaisance can be an after-consideration, and a preparatory stroll there will not only give a fine surface glimpse of its variety and merits, but will enable later a more critical selection for a survey of inside features. A map or guide of the Fair may be purchased cheaply. Let the visitor study it, and devote his first day to a view of the buildings as a whole, to get acquainted, so to speak, with "the lay of the land." He may then calculate as to the territory to be covered in a day, and decide how to utilize his time profitably.

Comparatively few people will see all the exhibits of the Exposition, and each one should plan to see what suits his individual preferences. It would take a man three days to cover the one hundred and fifty miles of walk alone, and to devote a single minute to the inspection of each one of the 100,000 exhibits, he would have to consume over 150 working days to get through the list. The main aisles of the Manufactures Building are six miles in length, the art gallery has 150,000 square feet of wall space covered with paintings which, if placed in a continuous line, would extend a little more than two leagues, and the remainder of the buildings are in proportion.

The visitor can readily realize, therefore, that he has got to get down to decided business and a system to take in even the important features of "the biggest show the world has ever seen."

WORK OF OMAHA GHOULS.

Wholesale Robbery of Graves—Twenty-five Corpses Found.

Omaha people are terribly excited over developments which show that a gang of ghouls have been operating extensively among the leading local cemeteries. Twenty-five bodies have been found in one medical college and many others are believed to have been secreted. The other morning James T. Craig, the Superintendent of Forest Lawn, passed the grave where Mrs. Huss, a prominent Omaha woman, had been buried, and noticed that loose earth had been thrown upon another grave near by. He investigated and found that the body had been taken from the grave. Search warrants were at once issued and local medical colleges visited. At the Omaha Medical College the officers found a regular charnel house of corpses and portions of corpses. The officers estimate that they found the remains of at least twenty-five persons about the institution. The faces of the bodies had been mutilated and could not be identified. Fears are entertained that many other graves supposed to contain bodies are now empty.

THE reservoir and Clearwater dams on Clearwater River, Minn., have been carried away.

JOHN WALKINSHAW was caught by falling slate in the American Beauty Brazil Block Coal Company mine and fatally mangled. His face and shoulders are lacerated, and when taken from the mass of slate he was unconscious. He cannot recover.

A SAD death occurred at Dyer's Station, near Valparaiso. Mrs. W. Rinkenberger had been suffering from an ulcerated tooth for several weeks. The other morning she was found dead in bed by her husband. A post mortem examination revealed that the ulcer broke during the night and choked her to death.

AT Indianapolis, Nora Walters, 12 years old, stepped on an iron grating heavily charged with electricity, the result of a break in an electric light wire. Instantly her shoes were burned off and the soles of her feet scorched to the bone. The girl fell on the grating, and her arms were frightfully burned. One or more persons were badly shocked in rescuing her.

CHARLES TONEY, aged 16 years, was instantly killed at the American Straw Board Mills, Kokomo, by being drawn through the hot paper rollers. He was arranging a broken sheet, when his fingers became caught between the huge rollers, and his body was crushed to a shapeless mass before the machine could be stopped. He had only been working in the mills three days.

M. M. JOAB, a well-known retired lawyer, was crushed to death by a freight train, in the Vandalia yards at Terre Haute, and there is some reason to believe it was a case of suicide. He attempted to take his life some years ago, and lately has been wandering about the streets in a fit of despondency. The first seen of him at the time of the accident was after several cars of the train had passed over his body.

THE Indiana Grand Lodge of Freemasons held its annual meeting at Indianapolis, with 500 delegates in attendance. Wilson, Indianapolis, gas-making apparatus designs; Orville D. Rogers, Shoals, box.

INFORMATION was received at Fort Wayne recently, that Dr. Henry Moeller, Chancellor of the Diocese of Cincinnati and Secretary to Archbishop Elder, would most likely be chosen Bishop of Fort Wayne Diocese, to succeed Bishop Dwenger. It is known that the following three names were forwarded to Rome early in April, and after going to the Committee of Cardinals were then brought to the Holy Father: Worthy Very Rev. E. P. Walters of Lafayette; More Worthy Dr. John Schoenhoft, D. D., Cincinnati; Most Worthy Dr. Henry Moeller. It is almost settled that the latter will be selected. He is 43 years old and was born in Cincinnati. He is a theologian of high order.

WHILE repaires were being made on the plant of the gas light and coke company at Goshen, there was an explosion seriously injuring and burning the secretary, Louis M. Latta, and Arthur Sherry. Their faces are frightfully burned.

WILBER LEWIS, a resident of Centerville, was fatally burned while experimenting with chemicals to produce what is commonly known as white fire. He had a tube in his mouth blowing through it, when the overheated chemicals exploded. A flame shot down his throat, burning the lining entirely out and seriously burning his lungs.

AT the mining village of Nicksville, Parke County, Lewis Puett, John Thomas, and a man named Hennis, who were engaged in cutting railroad ties, all lodged in the same house. The other night Puett was in the house, seated by a stove, when Thomas came in, and a quarrel led to a struggle, which awoke Hennis, who had retired in another room. He got up and found Thomas lying on the floor with his head cut open and Puett gone. Thomas died in two hours. The ax used in the tragedy was found beside Thomas. Puett walked five miles to Rockville and surrendered himself to the Sheriff. He had a slight scalp wound on the front of the head. Thomas had a family and Puett had a wife.

LOVE AND HIS SHADOW.

BY ROSE HAWTHORNE LATHROP.

CHAPTER I.

Some one was singing near an upper window in the old house called by the neighboring farmers, "Flitter's Lodge," because so many people hired it and flitted away again; being at first attracted by its quaint prettiness, and then reduced to despair by its rambling, unpractical structure. The place, therefore, had now been hired for a song; and a happy young voice was singing it, not caring a sou for the shadows and queer cupboard-ways of the house, except to think them pleasant stimulants to courage. A quick step came along an echoing hall, and a sweet, joyous man's voice exclaimed:

"You dear little thing, that is the loveliest picture in the world that you"—here a young fellow reached the room in which the singer sat, sewing—"you have hung in my study. How could you have painted it without my knowing it?" The words were finished close to the shoulder of a very pretty creature, who received many caresses.

"A dozen times you nearly discovered the canvas upon my easel," laughed the young woman; and added: "I paid $5 for that bunch of white grapes, and you can eat the reality any time you wish, for they are as perfect as ever."

"Just the thing for my birthday dessert," he cried, boyishly. "You never painted anything so well; you are unmistakably a little artist."

The young woman knew that she was more than a "little artist;" but, as she was the wife of the youth who spoke, she smiled as if wholly satisfied by this unawed commendation of her remarkable skill. Nothing was of any consequence to her but the love of their companionship.

As they spoke, a wailing sound arrested their attention; faint, but so out of accord with everything else—the songs of birds and the fluttering of merry leaves in the breeze—that they looked questioningly into each other's eyes.

"That's a new sound, isn't it?" observed the young husband, with an air of saucy indifference; upon which his wife shrugged her shoulders and answered that she fancied she had heard it before.

"It is spasmodic and harsh; unlike the owl's note," said he, still listening.

However, these young folks had happy spirits enough to make cheerful the ins and outs of their gray old home, which lay along by the roadside in the style of an ancient hostelry, low and irregular and many-windowed. The husband pirouetted, with his hands in his pockets.

"Hullo, there, Thomas Prescott and wife!" called somebody from the road.

They glanced out and saw a couple of persons sitting in a yellow pony cart. These were neighbors from a villa three miles off, and were wearisomely prosaic and buxom and long married.

"Oh, are you there?" Tom Prescott asked, resting his hands upon the windowsill, while his wife leaned gracefully on her elbow. "Come in, won't you?"

"Yes, do come in," his wife repeated, with polished cordiality, and left her chair to hasten down-stairs to the door, which was standing open and had admitted a gathering of yellow elm leaves that stretched along from it on either side of the wide hall, as if the floor were a wood path.

The visitors came in, bustling and interested, amused to observe these young pigeons.

"We're off in a few days from these hills," announced Mr. Minsing Bentley, flapping his driving glove on his left hand. "We couldn't stand another rain like the last one, in company with our non-communicative trees. If trees could only do something besides nod and sigh!"

"Now, do confess that you two are beginning to waver about making a much longer stay," laughed Mrs. Minsing Bentley, gazing eagerly at Mrs. Tom. "Won't you come away with us? You don't know how nice New York is going to be this winter, or you never would resist our advice."

"Lor', yes," cried Bentley. "You'll die in the first snow. Why, it's suicidal to stay in such a ramshackle dear old hole as the Lodge for more than a summer!"

"We don't happen to think so," responded Tom Prescott. "And isn't the autumn enough to satisfy one's soul in this beautiful scene?"

"And as for the first snow," cried the young wife, "I am longing for it. I do hope there will be those magical snow birds, that come so unheralded, just when you would expect birds to disappear!"

Tom helped his guests to some fine old wine, although the table on which he set the bottle was unpainted deal.

"How crazy young things always are!" Bentley vociferated, putting the glass of liquid gold to his lips. "By jove, you're wise enough about your wine, though, Tom," he added, draining the last drop. "Cora insists upon poor wine for our cellar up here. But it is crazy of you to dare to winter in unassisted Massachusetts. I mean suburban Massachusetts."

"Oh, on the contrary, we enjoy feeling isolated, and even morose now and then," Mrs. Tom laughed, bravely.

"Hear them!" exclaimed Mrs. Minsing Bentley, with a glance of worldly intelligence toward her husband, who theatrically held up both hands.

In a moment they all adjourned to the study to look at the picture of grapes; and Bentley bought a sketch of azalias, which he declared was a perfect work of art.

"What else would you suppose," cried his wife, "of a girl who had plenty of encouragement from Bashkirseff's 'Tony?' Don't you ever mean to go back to Paris, Nina?"

"What a question to ask!" sniffed Bentley, looking hard at Nina, as if the truth was, the question was entertaining. "It's all as good as over, of course. Artistic propensities and married life do not go together, for wives, very long!"

"Yet somehow the life one leads is delicious," Nina gayly answered. She stepped past a window, and looked out for a hesitating moment at the beautiful hills, as if to drive away a thought less bright than the red leaves and the blue, white-draped sky. But when she turned to the others again her face was pale; the thought had been too somber, whatever it was, to be dispelled by a landscape.

The guests abandoned the effort to get the young couple to return with them forthwith to New York. And, with much derisive laughter and assurances that the pair would fight unmercifully and be generally wretched in their retirement, and admonitions to Nina from Mrs. Bentley to run right off to her if her heart failed her or Tom was horrid, these prosaic, fat, and inquisitive friends bobbed down the high road in their yellow cart.

CHAPTER II.

It was winter, snowy Massachusetts winter, with a roaring fire on the deep parlor hearth of Flitter's Lodge. The chestnut and hickory sticks were piled on stones, and Tom Prescott adjusted them with a hard oaken staff instead of brass headed tongs. But the scene within doors was as pretty as you could wish to see, and the fire lit up as though with a personal pleasure. How can I tell why the effect was pretty, except to say that Nina had made the most of the few pieces of old mahogany furniture, bits of color, and unframed etchings and photographs which were available? The lamps were glowing, and the low-celled room, with its six little windows draped with white cashmere, and its big beam down the middle, like a whale's spine in a museum gallery, danced with such light as shimmers on a sunny sea.

Nina was reading Thackeray; and soon Tom came in, looking all about with satisfaction. And his wife looked up with satisfaction—how else could she look up, while holding Thackeray's "Esmond"?

"Well, this is comfort!" murmured Tom.

"Isn't it?" murmured back his wife.

"And to think that we imagined there might be some hardship in economizing to this extent!"

"And we should be bothered at every turn in New York," Tom proceeded, sauntering around. "We should feel our poverty, and yet lay up nothing at the rate they send back my manuscripts! But, Nina, what a change this all is from the life you used to lead!"

"As yet I have not had a single regret," she answered. "Yes, we are getting our nice bank account by just being comfortable, although it may seem a paradox."

"And by turning up our noses at the idea of luxury," put in Tom, "when we would rather like to throw some money away, or rush to the theater twenty miles off!"

A quavering sound was audible in the distance of the rambling house. It would have made any one's flesh creep who heard it without any knowledge of its real nature. But it was only Tom's black man-of-all-work twanging on his throat at plantation melodies, while his wife cooked by the stove and flapped about in her broad slippers, or occasionally joined on to the strain with a birdlike whoop in the remote tone of negro voices.

Miffin, as she was named, cheered up a midnight face with a rainbow handkerchief, two of whose corners made large petals over her rolling eyes. Her mouth looked a good deal like dark, hilly country, with a moonlit picket fence across the middle. When the two negroes were in the same room they talked most of the time. But it was talk like that of a brook and a heap of pebbles, except when a thought really occurred to them, upon which their hemmings and chucklings became intelligible to the outside world.

"Massa's in the cole, cole groun'," whimpered Plump.

"No, he ain't," chattered Miffin. "Ef he ain't in hebbin he got more fire'n wot we have dis minit."

"'Top your jawin'. I doan unnerstan' dis 'ere son of massa, Miffin. We's gwine perish ob absent niggers dis winter, and dose young folk ob absent white folk. But fuss I'm gwine die ob cole 'fore I die ob lonesomeness. I wish I was made all ob wool—shu' 'nuff!" Plump got his chin down to his chest in a mock shiver.

"Go 'long. You got too much wool dis minnit, you. I hab decency an fix up my wool wid sumpin hansom, let 'lone askin' for mo'.

As she spoke Miffin spread out the picket fence of her teeth broadly and tweaked one of the handkerchief tips over her forehead.

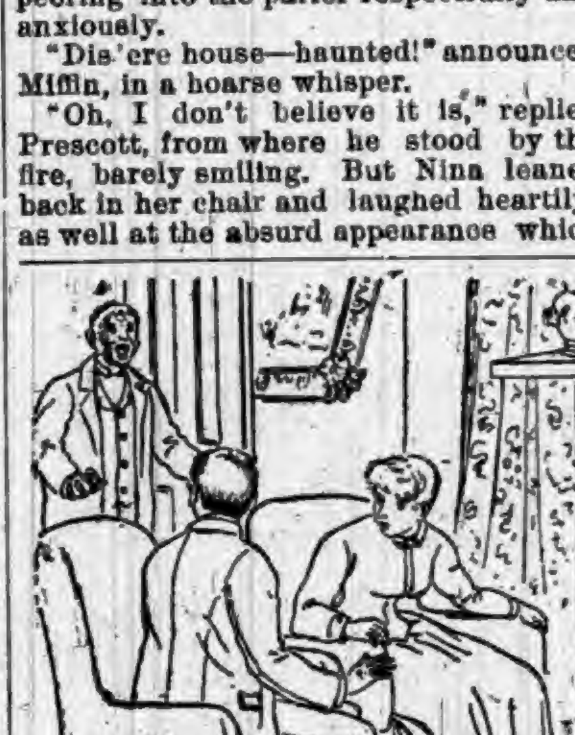
"Gimme dose golden shoes!" suddenly demanded Plump of the atmosphere, with satisfaction that his request would be perennially unanswered; for he would have wept in despair if he might have no longer voiced this bit of dazzling imagery.

In the dead stillness of the evening something much like a pistol-shot gave a sharp, brief bang, no one could tell where or why.

The two negroes remained motionless for a few moments; and then Miffin beckoned to her white-headed husband. She led the way in silence to the door, which conducted to the best part of the house, and together the old couple appeared before Prescott and his wife, peering into the parlor respectfully and anxiously.

"Dis 'ere house—haunted!" announced Miffin, in a hoarse whisper.

"Oh, I don't believe it is," replied Prescott, from where he stood by the fire, barely smiling. But Nina leaned back in her chair and laughed heartily, as well at the absurd appearance which the alarmed servants made, with their black skins and queer outlines distinctly relieved by the light walls and uncarpeted floor, as at their ridiculous declaration.



"DIS 'ERE HOUSE HAUNTED!"

A rather long conversation ensued over the many sounds that were to be heard in Flitter's Lodge, for all of which Tom Prescott brought forward some explanation, either in the grating of branches of the elm, which touched the roof tree, or in loose window-shutters and squirrels. Plump and his wife shook their heads, coolly unconvinced; and when they had withdrawn the two young people looked at each other soberly.

"Well, I've always wished to see a ghost," Prescott remarked.

"They're not half so dangerous as live people," responded Nina, her eyes shadowing.

There was an uncanny pause of dissatisfaction on both sides; and then she went to the piano and played a waltz—up to the middle of its enraptured swing; thereafter abruptly stopping, and resuming "Esmond."

"The wind is rising," said her husband. He stretched himself out on a lounge, near the beaming lamp, and took up a magazine. If there was a sound as of the roaring of lions close beside them, it was easy to perceive that it was the wind and the chimney communing together like wild animals. Most unexpectedly the knocker on the front door was banged twice, for the first time in a month.

"How strange!" cried Nina, starting forward in her chair.

"Only one of the farmers, come to call at the 'eleventh hour,'" Tom shortly laughed. "I am sure I have expected such demonstrations for a good while." He went to the door and opened it.

A square-browed, dark-and-white face appeared, and seemed to be floating, beheaded, upon the night air, so wholly did its strong expression arrest Prescott's sight. Then he saw the whole man—a young man of his own age—and the new-comer demanded information, thus:

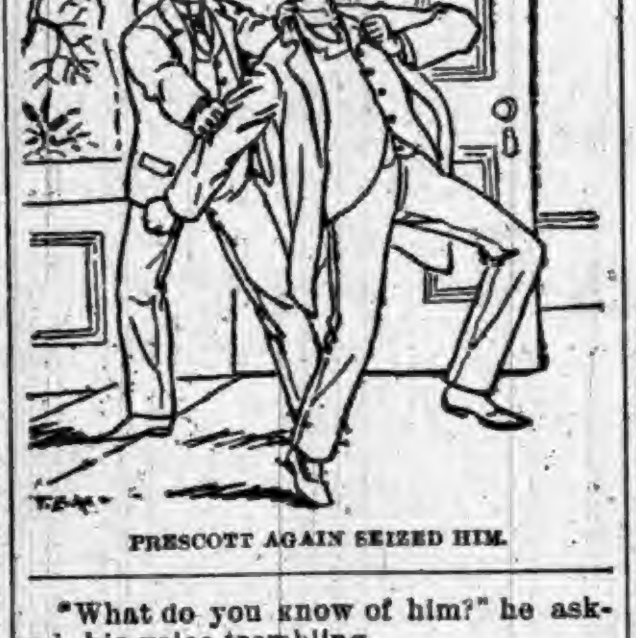
"Does Nina West live here?"

Tom Prescott stared in amazement. How could the man be ignorant that Nina was married? In aspect he was a gentleman, but his discourteous manner and defiant dropping of Nina's married name were undoubtedly insults. And, above all, how did precisely this sort of person get to such an out-of-the-way place as the Lodge with precisely such a question?

The young man put his foot on the doorsill to enter.

Prescott struck him upon the forehead so that he sank back a moment. But he was strong and determined, and rushed at Prescott's breast with both hands, shoving him from the doorway and springing into the house. Upon this Prescott again seized him and flung him reeling from the threshold, shut the door and bolted it, and walked into the parlor, giving a long, level glance at his wife, who was standing up, as still as a statue.

"It is Fleet Grenfell," she said.



PRESCOTT AGAIN SEIZED HIM.

"What do you know of him?" he asked, his voice trembling.

She sighed, giving a little melancholy motion of the head, and looking away, and then back at him.

"He loved me—as he called it," she said.

"It is as it always is, Tom," she said in a tone of deep delight. "You are true; you are beloved! When you wish it, I can tell you about my acquaintance with this Grenfell."

"At present he seems to be insane!" Prescott answered, glancing at the windows, to be certain that the curtains were well drawn. "If I am ever to hear further about him, here is the best time. I hope I shall not have to shoot him, in the end!"

"And I hope this fierce wind will carry him away," she replied, preoccupied and careless of her words. She sank into chair, in a half-expectant way. "I will explain with as few digressions as possible. Before my father's death, and when it was supposed that I was quite an heiress, Grenfell was one of my satellites. Why, have you not heard of Grenfell, the young sculptor, who had made such a stir with his 'Artemis' that his name became an embellishment, no longer requiring any title?"

"Certainly; I was writing verses to Venus, in England. His 'Artemis' sent him to Greece, they said."

"Yes; he disappeared into that region. Do you hear a sound as if some one were mowing deep grass?"

"I hear the wind blow the dead leaves over the door-stone," replied Prescott, smiling to reassure her.

"He was poor; a young sculptor of genius; in short, intoxicated, as you know strong artists so often are, with the mixed wine of life and inspiration. Although he made love to me like a bacchant, he said he should wait till he had won a name and a fortune before he formally asked me to marry him. But he threw out many threats of what he would do if I did not wait, also, until he reached his goal; that is, if I became engaged to any one else. He used to picture the Nemesis he would be to me and to the man I had dared to choose. I laughed at these imaginings then; but since then I have remembered them. You offered yourself to me, Tom, when I had become a poor orphan, with just a few friends. You loved me. Now, at the time you and I met I had not heard from Grenfell for several months. He had been writing to me from Greece and Rome, but without answers on my part. Still I did not return his letters. I made up my mind that he had found another girl to love, who was perhaps less discouraging; or that he had heard of my father's death and the collapse of our fortunes, and had dropped my precious friendship as so many people did. Yet the fear of this man has grown upon me. Ever since our marriage I have dreaded the vengeance he used to flash before my eyes, as an outlaw playfully lifts the livid tusk of his dagger from its sheath."

"You liked him much better than you did other young men who were in love with you, did you not?" Prescott dryly asked.

"Yes. He was charming enough, and I was much impressed by his manly attitude about my money. There were Frenchmen and Italians bothering my father over what he would give me as a dot. And all the veteran artists were talking about Grenfell's work in a way to turn a beginner's head; yet he never seemed to lose his head, except when telling me how we would travel across the earth like two freed spirits still in the flesh the Greeks loved so comprehensively. Something in him always repelled me; but at that time I supposed it was his legitimate masterfulness. I realize that it was the brutality of self-love, because you have proved to me that a man can be strong and yet perfectly refined."

"I half think I killed him when I knocked him down," suggested Prescott. "That door-stone is broad and rough. I must look out, and see where the fellow is."

"Oh, no!" Nina exclaimed, frightened into dark-eyed scowling.

"Yes, I say. Although I don't imagine he could have had the face to summon me again, still, this silence and acquiescence on the part of such a tyrant is ominous of I know not what." He proceeded to the door, as he proposed, and stood upon the quiet threshold-stone. The wind tore about, but there was no other disturbance. Yes! A faint, musical strain echoed among the branches of the elm, which touched the roof of the lodge. It was a fitful but entrancing sound, hardly a melody, yet melodious.

Grenfell was not lying on the ground; no one attacked or otherwise accosted Prescott. Once more he shut the door, and sauntered back to Nina.

"What if I have seen a ghost, at last!" he laughed, half in earnest. "That was a queer apparition. Perhaps you will hear that Grenfell died in full view of some old classic ruin, just a quarter of an hour ago!" Then he related to his wife that he had heard music among the elm-boughs, and that the gusts of wind had seemed to increase instead of drowning it.

A COLUMN OF PARTICULAR INTEREST TO THEM.

What Children Have Done, What They Are Doing, and What They Should Do to Pass Their Childhood Days.

Daddy-Long-Legs.

Daddy-Long-Legs, aren't you queer?
Who are your relations?
Tell me, tell me, Daddy dear,
How you spend your vacation.
Once I saw you take a drink
From clear clover dew;
How you managed it, I think,
No mortal ever knew.

That is, ere I found it out;
But I will not tell;
For the children all would shout,
Add say it was a "sell!"
Daddy-Long-Legs, where's your wife?
Is she some great lady,
With the object of her life
To keep her dear self shady?

Does she tend the children small,
In some still retreat?
Are they like yourself at all—
'Most all legs and feet?
You would make a phonograph,
If one could but read you!
Oh, it makes me laugh and laugh
To see your legs precede you!

Daddy-Long-Legs, don't you fear;
Soon I'll let you go;
Tell me where the cows are, dear,
For I'd like to know!
Country child would have no sign
Where the cattle roam,
If you did not point your fine
Slim legs the way they've gone!

Poor old Daddy-Long-Legs, dear,
Now I'll let you go.
It is mean of me, I fear,
To keep you waiting so!
Tell your wife, if she should scold,
A giant made you stay;
If she doubts what you have told,
Just send her out this way.

A Child's Appreciation of Tennyson.

There is a keen remembrance, lingering ineradicably with the writer, of a little girl coming to school once upon recitation day, with a "piece" of her own selection safely stored away in her childish memory. It was a new poem to the school, and when her turn came to recite, her soul was full of the gleam and glory of Camelot. She felt as if she were unlocking a treasure-house, and it was with unspeakable pleasure to herself that she gave, verse after verse, the entire poem of "The Lady of Shalott." Doubtless the child's voice drifted away into singsong, as her whole little self seemed to drift away into the land of faery, and doubtless, also, the busy teacher, who was more familiar with Jane Taylor and Cowper, was sadly puzzled. When the child at length sat down, scarcely knowing where she was in her sudden descent from the land of marvel, she heard the teacher say, to her amazement and encouragement, after an ominous pause, "I wonder if any young lady can tell me what this poem means?" There was no reply. "Can you tell me?" was the next question, pointed at the poor little girl who had just dropped out of cloudland. "I thought it explained itself," was the plaintive reply. With a slight air of depreciation, in another moment the next recitation was called for, and the dull clouds of routine shut down over the sudden glory. "Shades of the prison-house" then and there began to close over the growing child. One joy had for the present faded from her life, that of sure sympathy and understanding. Not even her teacher could see what she saw, nor could feel what lay deep down in her own glowing heart. Nevertheless Tennyson was henceforth a seer and a prophet to this child and to the growing world; but for some, who could never learn his language, he was born too late.—Anna Fields, in Harper's Magazine.

A Dangerous Pet.

The author of "A Ride Through Wonderland" says that he was invited, when in Colorado, to visit a hunter's store and see a mountain lion; the only one, as its owner asserted, which had ever been tamed. It was in a little back room, chained to an iron staple in the floor, round which it was pacing, uttering low growls. It appeared very much like a small panther, and seemed anything but tame, snarling at us as if it would like to spring. It was in awe of his master, however, and cowed down every time he cracked his whip. "Come and kiss Miss Pussy," said the man, and the dog went up to it, laid a paw upon its neck, and licked its face.

The master then put a piece of meat on its nose, and told the dog to fetch it away. "He doesn't care for this part," was his comment. "She has had him by the throat once or twice. Just look at her iron paws! One blow would lay you dead as mutton. What, you brute, you would, would you!" Miss Pussy had tried to gnaw his boot, and needed to be lashed off. "Do you ever take her out?" "Oh, yes, she goes walking with me in the mountains, sometimes. I take her chain off when we're out of the town, but I'm precious careful to follow her, and never let her step behind me!"

Tiny House Gardens.

Almost anything that grows and has healthy foliage is attractive in winter, and those who cannot indulge in several yards of glass covered flowering plants may enjoy the pleasures of a sponge garden, which can be easily managed by any plant loving child. A large round piece of coarse sponge is the first requisite, and it should be neatly trimmed of all jagged ends. Then soak it in warm water until it is thoroughly expanded, when it should be squeezed nearly dry and the openings filled with rice and barley, seeds of red clover, oats, grass, etc.

The next thing is to suspend it in a window that has the sun for some hours during the day, and it should be thoroughly sprinkled with lukewarm water every morning. In a week or so tiny green shoots will appear, and these, if the sponge is kept moist, will grow as if by magic into a velvety ball of living green. In due time the clover blossoms will appear and look far prettier than when blooming in the field. Tiny ferns and partridge vine are lovely growing in this way, as the sponge supplies the constant moisture in which they delight, and many more than one would imagine will take kindly to the wet sponge.—Harper's Young People.

They Gave the Empress a Bouquet.

When the little German princess was born last summer, the German empress, in accordance with a national custom, gave twenty complete outfits of beautifully made little baby clothes to twenty poor women. And on the same day the emperor pardoned a number of woman convicts. The children of Germany, who dearly love the empress for her kindness to them on all occasions, were busy planning a superb bouquet to be given to their royal mistress. When completed the bouquet was nearly a yard across the top. It was dome-shaped and was composed of ten thousand violets surrounded by three hundred big roses. From the top of the dome to the outside of the bouquet there extended field flowers which gave the gay effect of ribbons among the violets. The entire bouquet was the work of peasant children, who took this way of showing their gratitude to their empress. —New York Ledger.

Blind Rats.

Stories are often told of the kindness of animals to those of their companions that are blind. Dogs and cats and horses and cows will lead their comrades away to their food or bring it to them, and the smaller animals also seem able to understand that the helpless are to be cared for. Not long ago an English watchman in a warehouse saw two rats moving slowly along close to the basement wall. The other rats had quickly scampered away at a slight noise that he made, but these were side by side, and hurried along in a clumsy manner. He turned the bullseye of his lantern full upon them, and saw that each rat held one end of a straw in his mouth. The movements of one showed that it was blind.—Our Animal Friends.

Childish Chatter.

"I WISH baby could walk," sighed Sammy, "and then they wouldn't think that all the muddy tracks in the house were mine."

"WILLIE told his teacher twice two was five, to-day," said Tommy. "Well, it was a pretty good guess, now," retorted Willie. "I come within one or two of it."

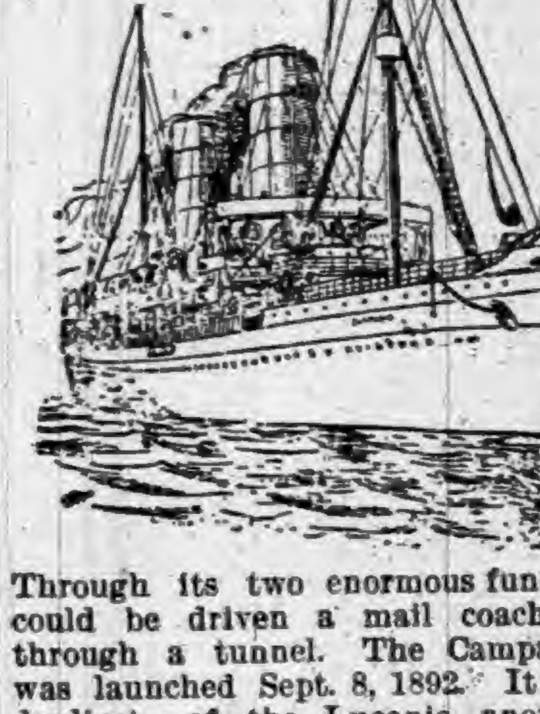
POLICEMAN—Well, my little dear, if you can't tell me your mother's name, or where she lives, how are we to find her? Little Girl (lost while out shopping)—Jes' put me in a store window, an' mamma'll be sure to see me.

FIRST LITTLE GIRL—Oh, I've got just the loveliest doll you ever saw, an' I'm so happy with it I don't know what to do. Second Little Girl—Is it big? First Little Girl—Big? It's so big it mos' breaks my back to carry it.—Good News.

QUEEN OF THE OCEAN.

The Steamer Campania Is Next to the Largest Vessel Ever Built.

The mammoth new Cunard Steamer Campania, which recently arrived in New York, is, next to the Great Eastern, the largest ship ever built. The trip to New York from Queenstown was made in six days, eight hours, and four minutes, breaking the maiden record. The passengers carried on the first trip were 180 saloon, 157 second cabin, and 588 steerage. The Campania is a giant among the liners. It is 620 feet long by 65 feet 3 inches broad and 43 feet deep.



Through its two enormous funnels could be driven a mail coach as through a tunnel. The Campania was launched Sept. 8, 1892. It is a duplicate of the Lucania, another Cunard flyer, which was launched Feb. 2 last, and which has yet to make its maiden trip. The following figures show the relative sizes of some of these big ships:

	Campania.	Paris.	Teutonic.	Great Eastern
Length……	620	527	565	69
Beam………	65	63	57.6	8
Draught……	32	29	26	3
Horse power.	30,000	20,100	17,000	7,65
Tonnage……	17,000	10,500	9,686	20,00

Death from Fright.

"I have interested myself somewhat in looking up unusual causes of death," said Dr. Elder, "and have met several well authenticated instances where fright was the cause. The English Surgeon General Francis tells of a drummer in India across whose legs a harmless lizard crawled while he was half asleep. He was sure that a cobra had bitten him, and it was too much for his nerves and he died.

"Frederick I. of Prussia was killed by fear. His wife was insane, and one day she escaped from her keeper, and, dabbling her clothes in blood, rushed upon her husband while he was dozing in his chair. King Frederick imagined her to be the white lady whose ghost was believed to invariably appear whenever the death of a member of the royal family was to occur, and he was thrown into a fever and died in six weeks.

"But perhaps the most remarkable death from fear was that of the Dutch painter, Pentman, who lived in the seventeenth century. One day he went into a room full of anatomical subjects to sketch some death's heads and skeletons for a picture he intended to paint. The weather was very sultry, and while sketching he fell asleep. He was aroused by bones dancing around him and skeletons suspended from the ceiling clashing together.

"In a fit of terror he threw himself out the window, and, though he sustained no serious injury and was informed that a slight earthquake had caused the commotion among his ghostly surroundings, he died in a few days in nervous tremor. I could cite many other cases were the shock to the nervous system which we know as fright has produced death."—Washington Post.

THAT unites Pigments and pure Linseed Oil, by a chemical process, to form Paints for Houses, Cars, Bridges, Roofs, Carriages, etc., that are perfectly
FIRE AND WATER-PROOF!
They will not separate or get hard in packages. Wood on which it is applied will not ignite when exposed to fire. They are manufactured in Paste and Liquid form in Twenty Popular Tints for general use.
Why use ordinary paints when Fire and Water-proof Paints cost no more. They give the same results and a protection from both fire and water. Superior to any other paint on the market for roofs.
Our BLACK LACQUERS exceed any paint for smoke-stack work; will not burn or wash off; prevents rust, thereby saving you expense and time.

After an absence of 15 years will again visit Waterloo every Saturday at Lock's Hotel, Waterloo.

His success in the treatment of piles can be amply attested by hundreds whom he cured during his former visits. I can cure any case of piles, no matter of how long standing, or how hopeless the case may be. The patient suffers no pain or inconvenience. In most cases one treatment is sufficient, which takes only a few minutes, and the time required for a cure is about two weeks, during which time the patient is not inconvenienced from business. 20tf

$40 Found.

MR. EDITOR:—California is a lovely country, the sick get well, the poor get rich, cyclones and frosts are practically unknown. A hundred to three hundred dollars per acre is made each year on fruits with irrigation. The California Land and Water Exchange, of Dayton, O., control large quantities of land in California, which they plant, cultivate, pay taxes for ten years, paying you $40 per year as your part of the profit, they keeping the balance for the care and cultivation. They give an acre of land away with each 4 certificates. All they ask you to do is to pay for the irrigation, which can be done in small payments each month. They will send you the names of 90 persons who last year received from $25 to $500 on one year's investment. President Harrison says, "half of the good things of California have not been told." The Hon. Jeremiah Rusk says, "Truly California is a poor man's paradise." To five-acre holders the California Land and Water Exchange of Dayton, O., give a free return ticket to view the property. Why should any one be poor when such a chance remains open and you do not have to do any labor or work to get the profits and do not have to leave home. Write them today and get full particulars. 21-22

Dr. Townsend & Brothers Coming.

As seen by advertisement, these eminent Doctors will be at the Swineford House, Auburn.

SATURDAY, JUNE 10th.

Among many testimonials we find these: I had spinal curvature that doctors told me was incurable and I am now well. Another said: I was given up by fourteen doctors, who told me I had Bright's disease of the kidneys, but thanks to Drs. Townsend I am a well man. Another: I was bedriden for over ten years with a complication of female diseases. Some of the most eminent specialists, including three professors in medical colleges, and they all told me I could not get well. Four years ago I placed my case in the hands of the Drs. Townsend, and in 5 months and 4 days from the time I commenced treatment I dressed myself and walked across the room, and in another month I felt as well as I ever did in my life and have remained in excellent health ever since. Another says: I had epilepsy for fifteen years and was cured. Another: My whole nervous system was broken down and I was practically an old man at 31. I could not sleep, my hands trembled, I would get dizzy and forgetful and became so bad that I had to give up business. I consulted many doctors, the best I thought, in the country, and finally went to Europe, and spent over $9,000 and three years' time and was no better, but gradually got worse. I returned home to die and closed up all my business affairs. At last a friend, who had been cured, advised me to go to the Drs. Townsend. Without any faith, but to please him, I went, and to my great surprise they told me they could cure me, and they made good their word, for from the first dose of medicine I commence to improve, and in twelve months I was completely cured. A lady says: My case was pronounced to be tubercular consumption by seven of our best physicians, and under whose treatment I got worse all the time. The Drs. Townsend cured me in just four months. One says: I had catarrh that affected my head so I was almost crazy. It went into my ears, and oh! such a roaring, I was almost wild; it had gone down also upon my lungs and the doctor said it was the bronchitis. Thanks to the Drs. Townsend I am entirely well. Another says: I was cured of a bad cancer. A lady of great refinement, who had received serious injuries during a confinement, was cured after other specialists utterly failed. Thousands of cases similar to the above might be cited.

Examination by letter or in person free and sacredly confidential. If unable to see the doctors write full particulars. Thousands treated by correspondence. Address, with stamp:

THE AUBURN COURIER

OFFICIAL PAPER OF DeKALB COUNTY.

JAMES A. BARNS, Editor.

Registered at the Auburn, Indiana, post-office as second-class matter.

THURSDAY............JUNE 1, 1893.

SNOW last week five inches deep in Upper Michigan.

VALPARAISO law school graduated twenty-five students yesterday.

AGAIN there are reports of gold being found in Brown county, this state. Many men are digging for it.

MEXICO says we must ship them no more dressed pork. It must be alive, so they will know how the hog died.

MONTANA produced more copper last year, than all the rest of the United States together, over 164 million pounds.

THE Chemical bank at Chicago will resume business with increased capital. This was the bank that started the others into failure.

SIXTEEN squatters were shot by a sheriff and his men in old Mexico Tuesday. They had murdered the man who owned the land they were on because he wanted them to pay rent.

F. H. MILBURN, son of the famous blind chaplain of the house of representatives, W. H. Milburn, committed suicide in a Chicago hotel Sunday. He was out of money and discouraged.

MONTANA'S silver statue was unveiled Tuesday. It is nine feet high and is the largest silver statue in the world. It contains 1,500 pounds of silver. The base is of gold, the amount being $23,000. In all the statue cost $300,000.

EX-SECRETARY CHARLES FOSTER of Ohio, has failed in business. He was once very wealthy, but lately has been unfortunate in various ways—had neglected business for politics and had lost by the failure of other banks.

WORLD'S fair was open on Sunday last for the first time. All the main exhibits and about half the state buildings were open, but the U. S. exhibit had to be closed, the act of congress making it plain. Large crowds attended.

CHICAGO is building twenty-two new school houses. And yet so loyal to its interests are its newspapers, that not one of them complains about the expense. And they do not advertise to the world that Chicago is about to be ruined by its liberality to schools. In this respect they resemble the COURIER, the paper that stands up and fights for Auburn, Ind.

RHODE ISLAND is having trouble in her general assembly. They have had as high as three elections in some districts, because no candidate had received a majority over all. The assembly must choose state officers, because no state officer had a clear majority. Several of the New England states are in the same boat nearly every year. The people are asking for a law such as western states have, where a mere plurality only, is necessary. It will come to that soon.

Free to Home Seekers.

The Northwestern Home Seeker is the name of a newspaper just issued, giving valuable information regarding the agricultural, mineral and other resources of South Dakota.

This new state is enjoying a wonderful prosperity and any person looking for a desirable location, or interested in obtaining information concerning the diversified resources of South Dakota, will be mailed a copy of this paper free of charge by sending their address to W. A. Thrall, General Passenger Agent North Western Line, Chicago. 20-22

A Surprise Social.

A very enjoyable social gathering assembled at the large and commodious farm residence of C. C. Buss, on Monday evening, May 22. Important business matters had called Mr. Buss to Auburn in the afternoon and his wife accompanied him to do some trading. Upon their return Mrs. Buss was completely surprised to find her house taken possession of by 125 friends and neighbors who were busy preparing supper. Mrs. Park, Mrs. B's mother, had spoken of the affair to some of the neighbors and had requested no presents, but as supper was ready Mr. Ash presented Mrs. Buss a fine set of dishes and $1.22 in money, thus making the surprise as complete to Mrs. Park as to Mrs. B. The speech was very appropriate; he said that all gatherings were for some object, and the object of this gathering was to remind her that she had reached her 46th birthday. A royal supper was served and the evening was spent in song, music and children's plays. At a late hour the party dispersed, each one feeling well pleased that they were able to contribute this mite in so pleasant an entertainment. Mrs. Buss feels very thankful to all who were present, in thus showing the high esteem in which she is held by her friends.

Court.

We made a funny mistake in these items last week. In speaking of the divorce case of Deema Meeks vs John Meeks by omitting the word "he" before the word "pays" it made it read that the lady paid the alimony and costs, whereas John has to pay it. A little word is very important sometimes. The jury is now at work, the case being Nelson vs Crain, but there was no court Tuesday, it being decoration day. The case vs Wm. Lawrence, assault and battery, cost him $5 and costs. The bastardy case against the late Fred Ketel, was settled only a day or two before his tragic death. John Yard vs Scranton to quiet title, his title was made good at his cost. Likens vs L. S. Ry., goes to Noble county, on change of venue. Noble county bank vs Charles Kirkpatrick got judgment for $67.88. Munn vs Curry, note, judgment for plaintiff for $66.67. Divorces were granted to Mary and Gottfried Hemple; Barbara and William Stroh; Mary and John H. Mohr; Lydia and Joseph Beam. The Garrett neighborhood quarrel between Rosa Cannon and Sarah Hamner appealed from 'Squire Walborn's court, was dismissed. A great many motions have been argued, and other preparatory work done. M. Franks was appointed executor of the late Nelson Griffith.

List of Patents.

A BOYCOTT OF WESTERN INTERESTS!

Have you heard the latest—how the New York Goldbugs propose to boycott Western interests?

A leading New York paper comes boldly forth in a double-headed editorial and announces that at the next session of Congress the President will hurl into it a message devoted to one theme—the abolition of the Sherman law. So that

There shall not be another ounce of Silver bought or coined.

Will the hardy, intelligent citizen of the West feel the fangs of the goldbug octopus?

While awaiting an answer to this question, we desire to call your attention to what Silver will buy at the Boston Popular Outfitting Establishment. $10 buys a business suit worth $12 to $14, either single or double breasted, of good material, which lasts well and gives you a dressy appearance during business hours.

We don't know what it is to sell common clothing, and these suits have a genuine air of upper-ten-dom to them.

Examine carefully our bargain offerings. Criticise them accurately. Intelligent criticism is our best salesman.

Picker & Bumpus began the brick work on Ed. Baker's addition Monday.

Buy Thomas Rakes and Tedders of Brown, Culbertson & Boland.

No failure to make Beuret's gasolene stoves work. A child can manage them safely.

Henry A. Winslow reports the corn doing well and the outlook for crops improving.

Corn planting about all done, and in better time and better condition than last year.

For a nice, cool, spring and summer smoke, Young America has no equal.

Sheriff Ralston took George Loose to the Logansport asylum last Thursday. He resided in Garrett.

Mrs. Thomas and her daughter-in-law, Mrs. W. A. Thomas, have returned from their visit with friends in Ohio.

Judge Morris of Ft. Wayne will deliver the address to the old settlers here June 15. All will want to hear him.

Dr. Johnston, dentist, has the new method of filling teeth without pain, as well as painless extraction of teeth.

Full line of Harrison's town and country paints in all colors and shades, at Beuret's, Best and handiest to use. Call on him.

Geo. Mochamer east of town attempted suicide Saturday by cutting his throat. Dr. Nusbaum thinks he will pull through.

Mr. and Mrs. Frank Kennedy, of Waterloo, were here yesterday. Frank's old friends will be sorry to learn that his health is no better.

Sam Morr reports good business selling the Esterly binder, and repairs for it, he being the only agent for these machines in the county.

MARRIED: At the Lutheran parsonage May 31, by J. D. Brosy, Peter E. Ensley of Auburn, and Clara Bock of Pleasant Lake, Ind.

Dr. Fisher, of Elkhart, and Dr. Buchtel, of this place, performed another operation on Mrs. McMichael last week. We understand she is doing well.

A little ill, then a little pill. The ill is gone the pill has won. DeWitt's Little Early Risers the little pills that cure great ills. Robbins & McCord.

A. Cyphers was in town over Sunday, enjoying a visit with the old cronies. He has been working at his trade in Orland in Steuben county, for about four months.

Fred Gfeller of Smithfield has been chosen on the U. S. trial jury that meets in Ft. Wayne, June 13. He hopes uncle Sam will let him off soon, as farm work is pressing.

Our friend, Geo. A. Kraus at Chicago, gives notice this week of rooms to rent during the World's Fair. The DeKalb boy gathers up hay while the sun shines. Give him a call.

The members of of the Auburn graduating class went up to Waterloo last Friday evening to attend the commencement there. They report a pleasant and interesting occasion.

D. E. Dilgard, who holds a good position on the new Wabash at Ashley, helped out the printer last week. He knew where he could do the most good, at this dull season.

Mr. Coe and family go to Chicago this week, and will remain as long as they can, being obliged to shorten their stay on account of the normal school that begins at Waterloo July 10.

W. A. Thomas and wife spent over a week at Chicago, taking in the big fair. All agree it is wonderful. He brought back a real Japanese knife in lacquer work, which may be seen in his show window.

A big fleece of wool was picked up by Joseph Link on the road north of town one day last week as he came in from the north. He had just met Joel Thompson with a load of wool, and thinks it belongs to him. The owner can have the fleece by paying for this notice.

Judge McClellan informs us that one of the cases between VanAuken and Hook was affirmed by the supreme court and the other was reversed. As there is little or no difference in the principles involved in each, it is difficult to understand how the court could do so.

The man who went into the big boiler at the Kiblinger electric light works last Saturday, to fix something about it had a hard job to get out again. Don't know whether he had eaten after getting in, or not, but the trouble caused a delay and it was between 8 and 9 before the lights could start up.

Mr. Harrison went to Chicago Friday and will continue there during the vacation. Mrs. Harrison had already been there for some time. They will of course be in charge of their two cottages, where they will entertain guests. Those who have not secured rooms can, we presume, get them by writing him.

Kendallville Standard: Mrs. W. Myers returned home from Eureka Springs, Ark., Monday. She is looking quite well, though we do not understand that she has succeeded in securing a positive or permanent cure, though she is better than she has been for sometime. Mr. Myers met her at Chicago Sunday and returned here with her. We hope we may be permitted to record a permanent restoration to health in the near future.

Judge McClellan has been assisting a man to get an increase of pension, and as part of the evidence in the case, the man had sent him the bullet that had struck him. It was an ounce ball, and entered his head. This was in 1863, and it could not be extracted. Of course it caused trouble and suffering, and finally in 1881 it worked its way till it dropped into the man's mouth. Such a man ought to have a good pension.

The Ashley Times: Frank Latson, the leading barber of Butler, visited Ashley, Sunday. * * * George Henderson, court reporter; F. Dills, deputy auditor; A. E. Tanberg, abstracter and G. M. Ralston, of Auburn, attended the ball given by the Wabash shop men Friday evening. * * * When such men as Gonser and Clark go after anything, they get it. They got the mill in three days. * * * Mrs. Cy. Hood, of Garrett, Ind., is visiting her parents, Daniel Gonser and wife, this week. * * * We counted eighteen bicyclists on our streets Sunday last, all strangers, some from Kendallville, Angola and Auburn. * * * Aurthur Steele, James Eldridge, and Edward Rainier came up from Auburn, Sunday, on their safety bicycles, and took dinner at Hotel Wyrick. The boys had a pleasant ride and enjoyed themselves immensely while in Ashley.

The least possible amount of heat in using the steel or cast ranges that Beuret has. Nice for hot weather. Burn wood or coal.

Charles McBride of Bryan, a brother to Mrs. Grund and Mrs. Frank Rush, is visiting the relatives here. He is in poor health.

Supt. Merica and wife drove over to Ashley Sunday, returning by way of Waterloo to hear the baccalaureate sermon that evening.

Mr. Merica says that the baccalaureate sermon by Dr. Burroughs at Waterloo Sunday evening, was one of the very best he ever heard.

A. H. Gillis of the new meat market has moved to town. Until he can get a better house, he will move into the rooms over the meat market.

E J. Rommes who came here in the winter to help in the Lake Shore office has learned telegraphy so well that he is now able to do a large part of that work.

Roy Balliet, of this place, a fireman on the Pan Handle road, was killed by the cars last week, and his remains brought home for burial. He was a son of George Balliet.

Before purchasing call and see Mrs. Lane's line of millinery. Her goods are finer than ever, flowers beautiful, everything just lovely. Call and see her, south side Public square.

Among the friends of the COURIER who attended the commencement here last week, were Mrs. R. H. Murch and son Clarence, and Miss Flora Jones of Butler; and Miss Rose Blair of Waterloo.

Buy the Rock Island Hay Loader of Brown, Culbertson & Boland, Auburn; M. F. Long & Co., Butler, or E. Case & Co., St. Joe. It beats them all.

J. B. Bryant of Troy, is another of our subscribers to remember that summer is hard times for the newspaper man, and sent in a check for the COURIER another year. Here is a hint to our friends at a distance.

We are under obligations Tuesday to Elza Housel and Percy Cornell for favors. The young men say they are as good as brothers, as their fathers, J. F. Housel and W. H. H. Cornell served in the same company in the war.

John Rohrsbaugh, at Fairbury, Neb., remembers that a newspaper man needs all the money he can get during the dull season of the summer months, and sends in his annual dues to the old reliable COURIER in good shape. Thanks.

As will be seen by a notice this week Mr. Coe will assist in a normal school at Waterloo this summer. He could not hold one in Auburn this year, as the school building will be undergoing changes necessary to put in new heaters and vaults.

Mr. Cavins moved to Churubusco, Monday, having traded the farm he got of Mr. Gandy for another on the banks of Blue Lake. He will keep a hotel for that now popular resort, and will no doubt see many of his old Auburn friends during the summer.

Jeff Boyle of Butler called this week. He is still pushing the real estate business. He and his wife were here visiting her mother, Mrs. Silver, and also the two uncles from the west. One of them, Wm. Silver of Kansas, brother of the late Capt. Silver, also came up to renew our former pleasant acquaintance.

That the Evergreen Cemetery has become a desirable resort for visitors will not be disputed, as on last Sunday there was, by a fair estimate, between five and eight hundred persons in the cemetery during the day; fifty-six being counted in the cemetery at one time. The neatness of the grounds is a credit to Mr. Sawyer and the managers.

People at the cemetery Tuesday complained of the offensive odors, which they supposed came from a dead horse carelessly buried in the bottom near by. Dead horses should be "laid to rest" at a greater distance from town. Wednesday Mr. Sawyer had to bury the carcass deeper. The board of health should see that such things are not allowed.

Hon. Nich. Ensley came up from Indianapolis Saturday, and reports the family well, except Ollie, who has another attack of inflammatory rheumatism similar to the one he had several years ago. Mr. Ensley is still in favor of the electric railway mentioned in the COURIER a short time ago. He says there is plenty of capital ready to build it if our people will get the right of way, and do the preliminary work.

An alarm of fire called our people from their slumbers at near midnight, Monday night. Some straw and rubbish in the basement of the Glazier Hotel had by some means caught fire, and dense volumes of smoke poured out for a short time. A brisk fight, however, got it under control before much damage was done. The fire department and citizens worked nobly, and by the time the frightened guests and employes could hurry on their clothing and get down, it was about over. Several were badly scared, however.

We had last week a talk with J. W. Baxter and S. D. Hanna in regard to their recent purchase of the Auburn Foundry and Machine Works, they having now the full possession and control of the plant and stock. Mr. Baxter is president, Mr. Bennigan of Ft Wayne, being vice-president. The management and general supervision will be with Mr. Hanna, whose long experience will make him valuable and insure satisfaction to their patrons. They have two good agents on the road, one being Henry Snyder, so long a traveling man for the foundry. They propose to push the business of the Machine Works, and will add brass work and boiler making to the lines they already have. Miles Baxter goes in as secretary and the big mill starts up into new life generally.

Brown, Culbertson & Boland have a large stock of cultivators, shovel plows, hay rakes, hay tedders, hay loaders and hay tools at very reasonable prices. See them before you buy.

The Ministerial Institute of North Ohio Conference will be held in the U. B. church of Waterloo, June 7 and 8. There will be a lecture each night at 7:30 by the Smith Brothers, on the "Authenticity of the Bible." No one can afford to miss these lectures.

Enos Casebeer who has been very sick is improving, so Dr. Casebeer reports. He also reports that Mrs. C. C. Shaffer, now under his care, is gaining very plainly. We are glad to hear this. Mrs. John Jones of Gas Addition, the doctor says, is also on the road to recovery.

Economy in house decoration interests all house-keepers. Some little advice on this subject, together with instructions how to paper, can be had by sending your address to ALFRED PEATS, Department B. 136 138, W. Madison St., Chicago, or 30 32 W. 13th St., N. Y. He will also send you samples of wall paper at a lower price than you have ever seen before. They are all first quality and arranged with wide borders and ceiling decorations according to the latest style.

A very enjoyable surprise party was held at the residence of Mr. and Mrs. G. W. Campbell, 179 East Washington street, Ft. Wayne, on Saturday night, it being the 17th birthday anniversary of Miss Bessie and Mr. Jesse Campbell. Those present were Misses Anna Blackburn, Lizzie and Hattie Sproats, Ida Weaver, Lydia Kniffin, Emma Hoover, Abbie Dunlop, Mary Bertand, Mrs. Eva McDowell, of Van Wert, O., Meda Frederick and little Fern McDowell of Auburn, Messrs. John Juch, Julian and Eugene Berrand, Will Conderit, John Sproats, Charley Petsinger, Charley and Lawrence Campbell. Games and music both vocal and instrumental, enlivened the hours until midnight.

Oratorical Contest.

By a class of eight Indiana lassies who wear a Demorest silver and gold medal, and who will compete for the next higher, a grand gold medal. These contests are world wide, and are given full houses recognized as the best educator known to the temperance reform. At the Presbyterian church Wednesday, June 7, at 8 p. m. Admission, adults 15 cents; children 10 cents. Under the management of the state superintendent.

Decoration Day.

Once more, we can record a fine day, and even the brisk shower of the evening before, made the weather all the more pleasant. There was a large turnout, for work with the farmers was so nearly done, that they could spare a few hours to observe the day. The grounds at the court house had been arranged for seating, and the stand was tastefully decorated. The program published in the COURIER last week was fully carried out and after music by the choir, and reading the death roll of those who had passed away, Mr. Penfield's speech followed, and was listened to with attention more than usual in an out door audience. The procession made a fine display, with the G. A. R., the W R. C., the S. of V., the Rifles, the tastily dressed little boys and girls, the Drum Corps and the Junior band—all made an imposing appearance. At the cemetery the usual ceremonies were had, and at the close the Rifles fired the usual salutes and the great procession moved back up town. We have had no more pleasant Decoration Day exercises for many a year. Many buildings and homes were decorated, the "Fair" being the prettiest while thn COURIER as usual showed the best selection of flags, but there was a liberal display over town.

Fatal Accident.

Friday last, word came here that F. W. Ketel had been killed by the cars, and that his body would be here next day. The later reports show that he was on his way from St. Louis, and at Chenoa, Ill., he tried to board an Alton train for Chicago in order to work his way back here, and in doing so, slipped and fell under the cars. He was horribly mangled, both arms, one leg and his head being cut off, and he was otherwise mutilated. The remains reached here Sunday, and at Shaffer's undertaking establishment, were attended to, and he was interred at the Tamarac cemetery north of town. It will be remembered that last week's COURIER told of the runaway in which his father was hurt on Wednesday. About that time also, Fred himself had caused his bastardy case here to be settled, turning over his forty acres of land to the woman. The remains reached here Sunday morning at 10 o'clock. The funeral was at Norris Chapel.

THE sword that glistened in the arena of the Circus Maximus show a disinclination to go back into peaceful sheaths. Their chances of being beaten into pruning hooks are so slight that judicious prune farmers are said to be looking in other directions for their tools.

ACCORDING to the Eastern idea of the woolly wildness of the West, a Chinese should now be decorating with his suspended person every lamp-post on the Slope. The assurance that the lamp-posts are still unadorned is given in the hope that its truthfulness will be accepted.

ANOTHER man who never discovered how very crazy he was until he had carved his wife to death is now a candidate for sympathy or the rope. Without desire to prejudice his case, it may be said that no solution of the lunacy question other than by means of an autopsy will ever be wholly satisfactory.

THE Duponts of powder-making fame have retained to a remarkable degree after many generations of residence in this country the physical characteristics of their French ancestors. Several of the family would infallibly be taken for native Frenchmen in Paris, and are singularly foreign looking in this country.

A MINNESOTA court has awarded the first wife of Alfred Johnson of Chicago $35,000 alimony because the wily Alfred divorced her and married again without her being officially notified. Mr. Johnson now has cause to reflect upon the wisdom of the adage about being "off with the old love before one is on with the new."

QUEEN VICTORIA and Queen Marguerite do not speak as they pass by. Their dignity has been mutually offended. Yet for the sake of example, at a time when universal peace is a fad, it would seem that they might forget their grievances long enough to say, "Hello, there!" or something equally high-toned and non-committal.

TWO MISSOURI judges who were sent to jail by a third Missouri judge got out under the poor debtors' act, but are likely to be sent up again for contempt of court. Ermine doesn't seem to carry much weight in Missouri, and the wool-sack, of a truth, is hedged with no more dignity than the worm-fence seat of the humble agriculturist.

AT Stockton, Cal., the other day an old German physician named Thiesen brought suit to recover his fee for performing an operation for tonsilitis. On the trial it developed that the doctor tore the tonsils out with his fingers and that the patient subsequently bled nearly to death. But the jury awarded the doctor $50 for his "surgical" operation just the same.—Ex.

THE reclamation of the land covered by the Zuyder Zee in Holland has been commenced. The dam, or sea wall, necessary to accomplish this object will be eighteen miles long. It will be built through the water from 13 to 20 feet deep. The estimated cost of the undertaking is $95,000,000; which, it is expected, will be more than repaid by the 1,000,000 acres of land which will be recovered.

A MINNESOTA man named Fish has sued Ignatius Donnelly, the cryptogramic detractor of Shakspeare, for $25,000 for alleged defamation of character. We don't know what Donnelly said about Fish, but if he treated him half as roughly as he did the late divine William of Avon it will take a shrewd lawyer to save Ignatius' bacon before any intelligent jury.

ONE of the nephews of the King of Italy went to Monte Carlo and blew in all his ready money and 750,000 francs that he had deposited at Rome. The King of Italy has in consequence issued an order forbidding any other member of his family to go to Monte Carlo on pain of being sent to military duty in Africa. The warning was timely. It would not require many such expenditures as that made by this nephew before the hangers on of Humbert's family would find it necessary to look for work.

COMMERCE may be a cold-blooded occupation, as devoid of sentiment as a fish, but sometimes things happen that have a wonderful appropriate flavor even in trade. We note in this connection the arrival of three steamships in Montreal in a single day, the first loaded with gin, the second with lemons, and the third with sugar. Montreal has no kick coming, and if she can keep this sort of thing up we don't see why the United States should object to being annexed to the dominion.

WE may pass, before the end of the century, from the iron age to the age of aluminium. Such wonderful strides have been made in cheapening the production of this wonderful white, bright, light metal that it will come more and more into use in every-day life, and a few more steps in invention may bring it into structural work. There are some difficulties in the way yet of this wholesale production of the metal, although comparing the nearly 300 tons of it made last year with the few pounds of it made annually twenty years ago, the progress is something remarkable. It is time, therefore, to shorten its name. No polysyllabic word like aluminium can last. Call it alum for short.

WHAT Cuba wants with an attempted revolution just now is not very clear. The whole island is prospering greatly. More and more of the virgin lands are being taken up for sugar cane cultivation; the little towns through the island are growing fast. The system of centralizing the sugar-making which obtains in the central and southern portions by allowing the farmers to raise and cut the cane, is creating a new middle class of well-to-do people. A guerilla warfare—the only war possible for the revolutionists—would simply stop all this, return large regions to the wilderness, and re-impoverish the whole people. The path to betterment of governmental conditions for Cuba lies wholly in the field of intelligent agitation.

THE well-known missionary, J. S. Baldwin, a conceded authority on all Chinese matters, says that if the provisions of the exclusion act be enforced the Chinese Government will retaliate by deporting Americans from that country. Such a course would work great hardship to the many American merchants and business men residing in the celestial empire and would destroy at one blow the fabric, at best insubstantial, which the Christian missionaries have been rearing for so many years. But such retaliation, if unaccompanied by the violence of which an example has so often been set in this country, would raise China in the respect of the nations of the earth. It is a poor rule that will not work both ways.

SO FAR as the use of dynamite has been carried beyond its ordinary industrial purposes, it has hitherto been chiefly in the commission of crime rather than in its punishment. But the tables seem to have been turned, and the monopoly which burglars and anarchists have enjoyed seriously infringed, by an enterprising California detective. Two distinguished train-robbers, Evans and Sontag by name, are now in temporary retirement in that State and are thought to have immured themselves in a cave somewhere among the hills of Fresno County. The detective who is in pursuit of them has provided himself with a quantity of dynamite, with the avowed intention of blowing them out of their hiding-place. The scheme is a novel one, and the traveling public, especially in trans-Mississippi regions, will join with great unanimity in wishing it abundant su[illegible]

Only Twenty Inches High.

There has arrived in Soochow a microscopic podigy twenty inches in height, aged 51 years, and sporting a flowing gray beard almost as long as himself. The small man has a "cockey" sort of way about him which is all his own, and is dressed in English fashion—coat, hat, boots, and all. He tells the gaping crowd of bumpkins who unceremoniously jostle the city swells in their eagerness to hear him speak that he hails from the dwarf kingdom of the Western Ocean and he emphasizes his information by a flourish of a bamboo tobacco pipe which is much taller than himself. But when desired to give a specimen of the language of the country of his nativity he regales his audience with a choice collection of English phrases, squeaked out in an uncertain tone of voice.—Celestial Empire.

THE fact that there is a lot of comfort for the bereaved in a big life insurance, is what keeps some from buying a policy.

A MAN wastes lots of time in sighing over the time he fooled away when a boy.

AN OBJECT LESSON.

"GIVE-AWAY" PRICES ON TAGS AT THE FAIR.

Clothing Shown to Be 50 Per Cent Cheaper in Europe than It Is Here—Stop the Tariff Robbery, and Stop It Quick.

Treacherous Trusts Exposed.

We are missing one of the great lessons that the World's Fair could teach us. Last year the Fair Commissioners decided that foreign exhibitors would be permitted to place tags on their exhibits showing the foreign prices of different articles. We should not only permit, but should request the use of these tags. Suppose all articles on exhibition were tagged with the prices at which each sold in different countries. What a "give away" those tags would be not only for McKinley protectionists but also for many of our trusts that are selling at protection and trust prices here, but are taking what they can get in other countries. Just to see how they would look, suppose we place tags on a few articles:

A set of crockery as above costing $5.10 in England costs $8.71 in the United States, the United States price being $3.61 higher. The duties on the ware alone amount to $2.81. Duty at the rate of 55 per cent. is also levied on the packages in which the ware is packed, and the other expenses of purchase, which, added to $2.81, makes the whole duty equal to the difference between the English and the American price.

In nearly every case the American price can be found approximately by adding to the foreign price the duty and the cost of transportation. These are a great object lesson to our "protected workingmen." Would McKinley dare stand up in the presence of these tags and tell the throngs of voters present that "the foreigner pays the tax?"

But we have not yet noticed the worst "give away." Just step into the domestic department of the great Manufactures building and see the tags on some of the articles exhibited by our protected trusts:

CIRCULAR SAWS.

20 inches, per doz	17.95	13.50
24 inches, per doz	21.28	16.00
28 inches, per doz	25.27	19.00

We will not take time to quote the prices on more tags, but will only observe that those on hundreds of other articles show that foreigners can often get our manufactures at prices from 20 to 50 per cent. less than we can obtain. This is true of scales, rules, levels, planes, screwdrivers, shears, indurated fiber ware, britannia and plated ware, clothes wringers and dryers, meat choppers, axes, hammers, braces, wrenches, drills, bolts, augers and bits, nails and tacks, screws and rivets, gaskets, cartridges, type-writers, sewing-machines, bicycles, shovels, plows, cultivators, and most kinds of implements.

It will be remembered that when E. W. Stout, a farmer, from near Trenton, N. J., returned from a visit to his father in England last fall, he brought with him a number of plows, rakes, cultivators, etc. He found that he could, after paying all charges, save from 10 to 25 per cent. by purchasing these implements—all American made—in England. The cordage trust, which is now in such ill-repute the world over, never did a meaner thing than when it began, a few months ago, to sell cordage in London much lower than it sold it to the people who taxed themselves to support this industry. The tags on the coils of rope and the bundles of twine indicate that the cordage is one of the most villainous and treacherous of our many wicked trusts.—Byron W. Holt.

Mexico Abolishing Corn Laws.

For the second time in less than nine months, the government of President Diaz has broken down its tariff wall. From March 15 corn will be admitted into the republic free of import duty, whether as grain or flour.

On the 1st of July last a similar order prevailed until Sept. 30, and its announcement was received with acclamation and joy by the poor people. The crop failures of two seasons had not alone rendered corn dear, but actually scarce, and the duties imposed under the tariff law reduced the poorer classes to a condition of suffering and extreme distress. True, the great producers and handlers of corn were fattening while destitute people pleaded for relief; they resisted the proposal to import free the food which the people required, because, forsooth, their particular interests, their exclusive industry, would suffer. Nero, who is reported to have fiddled while imperial Rome was burning, was no unique monstrosity. The same spirit of indifference enables men to-day to witness the miseries of thousands untouched, nay, reaping out of their miseries princely wealth. Maj. McKinley says the principle of protection cannot die; so said the slave owners who had their principle handed down from the earliest days; yet the hour came when, in indignation and shame, the nation cast away the degrading system of slavery. And this is precisely the war of to-day between Republicans and Democrats, commercial and industrial slavery, or their freedom.

It is a great drawback to the development of Mexico that so much of the land is in the hands of few owners, hence the great extent of uncultivated estate. If this land were fairly taxed it would be thrown open to cultivation, whereas it is now held for speculation, and the owners cannot develop it. In the present instance, however, the liberal and intelligent policy of President Diaz's administration has proved superior to the protective instincts which are responsible for the fiscal policy of Mexico. The right course is often stumbled upon by accident, or forced into adoption by the dire distress of a people. Several reductions in impost duties will take effect on April 15, including those on wool, ivory, mother-of-pearl, cotton, hemp, flax, and other fibers, jute, zinc, etc., while on some manufactured articles, notably tobacco goods, there are increases, thus indicating a desire to free manufacturing industries from the burden of imposts on raw materials, and while giving the same an impetus relieving in a material way, the contumers from the unnecessary cost of added duties.

There is in Mexico a strong party, with several journals in line, notably the Mexican Trader, whose mission is the removal of all vexatious restrictions on trade.

Men are traders instinctively, and may be relied upon to make advantageous barter, and to work out the problem of "the survival of the fittest" in industrial undertakings, and any system which seeks by protective duties and enervating bounties to permanently maintain any industry, insults human intelligence, destroys self-reliance and enterprise, and is a dead weight upon individual energy, in fine, is in opposition to and subversive of the laws of nature.—American Industries.

Stop the Robbery and Stop It Quick.

The last National Democratic platform declares that protection "is a robbery of a great majority of the American people." That declaration is the plain truth.

It is also true that a just government never has very much business that is more important than preventing robbery.

It is also true that "protection" robbers should not be permitted to keep on robbing for fear that stopping them will reduce the national revenue a little.

It is also true that the National Government is now in the hands of men who call themselves Democrats.

It is also true that men who will not stop a robbery of the people—and stop it quick—when it is in their power to do so, are no Democrats at all.

It is also true that it is about time for the men who now control matters to begin to prove their Democracy by their works instead of their words.

It is also true (what good Democrat doubts it) that our President will do all in his power to stop this robbery and stop it promptly.

It is also true (what good Democrat doubts it) that every man that Grover Cleveland has associated with himself in his present administration will, without an exception, perhaps, zealously assist him in this good work.

It is also true that in the next Congress a large majority of those called Democrats will do just about as little as they possibly can do to stop this robbery.

It is also true that politicians seldom do any more for the people than the people make them do.

It is also true that Democratic citizens are in no mood to quietly wait a whole year for Congress to fool over a new tariff law. We care little about a new law; we want laws repealed rather than laws enacted, and it doesn't take a long time to do that. We want the robbery taken out of the present law, and we want it done quick; this, rest assured, Grover Cleveland will give Congress a good chance to do at the earliest practicable time.

It is also true that if Congress will not, when given the opportunity, make prompt and short work with protection robbery, there will speedily come to our politicians such a day of reckoning as for righteous judgment and swift execution has never yet been experienced by menials of plutocracy upon American soil.—New Crusade

PECULIAR PEOPLE.

Those of Honduras Will Not Mix With Other Races.

"The Caribs of British Honduras," said Frank Fisher, manager of the British Honduras syndicate, to the Washington Star representative, "are a peculiar people, and, unlike other natives of the tropic, do not mingle with the whites, holding aloof, for that matter, from the other natives.

"Originally from Africa, they still maintain their tribal relations and singular customs. Physically they are a fine race, being coal black and very muscular. Their language is harsh and guttural, its vocabulary consisting of only about 700 words. They can count up to three in their own tongue and above that number count in French. It is almost impossible to learn their language. They are nomadic and go from place to place along the coast. Some families have half a dozen homes in as many villages. Some of the young women are comparatively good-looking and all have a most graceful and erect carriage. They carry water pitchers on their heads very skillfully.

"The women do all the work and carry burdens on their backs that would crack the vertebræ of a strong white man. The men are idlers. The women have no standing in the family relations and the wife does not eat with her husband nor do any of the females with the men. They are as much at home in the water as on land, and the women paddle the dugout canoes. The babies learn to swim almost before they can walk. As a race they are wonderfully cleanly, bathing several times a day, and when the morning's work is over they are very neat in their scant attire.

"They are very filial, however, and when one goes fishing the first fish caught is for the grandfather, the next for the father, and so on down the list until the fisherman comes to himself. They will not sell their fish to the whites or other natives until their own families are supplied. In brief, they are one of the few races in the world who have refused to intermingle with other people.

"British Honduras is a crown colony, and of its 30,000 population there are about 300 whites, mainly English. There is an American colony of about twenty people at Toledo, engaged in sugar growing and rum making. They are mainly from Kentucky, and it is a prosperous colony. The country is healthful for a tropical country, and there has not been a case of yellow fever in several years. The principal product is mahogany, and it will be years before the forests are exhausted. Great quantities of logwood are also shipped to Europe. We ship only bananas and plantains to the United States, shipping last year 728,000 bunches of bananas to New Orleans. The great problem with us is labor, and we import natives from the West Indies. We need immigration, and Sir Alfred Maloney, the Governor, is a progressive man, and is doing much to bring us to the notice of the world. We have no railroads beyond a tramway drawn by mules, penetrating the plantations for about six miles. There is not a telegraph instrument or line in the province, and only a short line between government buildings. We have no money of our own, but use the silver of surrounding republics, which is so depreciated that $5 in American money is equal to $8.60 of the money in use."

CURIOUS FUNERAL CUSTOMS.

Coffins with Movable Bottoms in Use Among Poor Russians.

The foreigners who work in Eastern Connecticut mills have some curious burial customs, especially the Russian Jews, 600 of whom dwell in Norwalk. Not long ago a Russian Jew family had a funeral, and before the ceremony took place the head of the house visited a local undertaker, saying, "Have you a coffin with a movable bottom?" He spoke in a singular patois, and the undertaker had great difficulty to comprehend his intention. He wanted a "show coffin," in which the body was to be taken to the cemetery and lowered into the grave; then the coffin must be drawn out of the grave, leaving its bottom lid with the body in the ground.

The coffin was to be returned to the undertaker and the man pay him for the use of it. Poor Russians, it appears, are in the habit of burying their dead in that way, and undertakers in that country have a supply of show or "removable" coffins to let. They are handsome and costly ones—too expensive to be purchased outright by the poor—with elegant lining and heavy silver trimmings. The bottom is fastened to the body of the coffin with springs that may be tripped, and then it is released, together with the body. The body is left in a plain, cheap box.

The Norwich undertakers had no such contrivance, so the poor Russian consulted with his friends, who united with him in having a show coffin constructed and paying for it. It is to be used by them henceforth as a "community" coffin.

A curious incident in connection with a French-Canadian funeral took place recently at Putnam, a large manufacturing village north of Norwich. The funeral was that of a beautiful little child. The train, a very large one, with many carriages, had gone a little way down the main street of Putnam, when it came to a halt in front of Benoit's photograph gallery. The mourners alighted from their vehicles and gathered about the hearse, and the pallbearers then removed therefrom the tiny white coffin and carried it up-stairs into the gallery, the mourners followed them. The coffin was set upright on a table in the middle of the room, and Mr. Benoit took a photograph of the dead child's face in its diamond-shaped coffin frame. Then the coffin was returned to the hearse and the train went on to the cemetery.

Oregon Progression.

Some Oregon farmers are going to experiment with semi-tropical crops during the coming season. They will try cotton, tobacco, broomcorn and sorghum.

Natural Ices.

In 1468 the army of Flanders used wine that was regularly cut from the gudgeons with hatchets and distributed in the shape of ice.

CAUTION.—No Tags will be received before January 1st, 1894, nor after February 1st, 1894. Each package containing tags must be marked plainly with Name of Sender, Town, County, State, and Number of Tags in each package. All charges on packages must be prepaid.

READ.—SPEAR HEAD possesses more qualities of intrinsic value than any other plug tobacco produced. It is the sweetest, the toughest, the richest. SPEAR HEAD is absolutely, positively and distinctively different in flavor from any other plug tobacco. A trial will convince the most skeptical of this fact. It is the largest seller of any similar shape and style on earth, which proves that it has caught the popular taste and pleases the people. Try it, and participate in the contest for prizes. See that a TIN TAG is on every 10 cent piece of SPEAR HEAD you buy. Send in the tags, no matter how small the quantity.

Very sincerely,
THE P. J. SORG COMPANY, MIDDLETOWN, OHIO.

A list of the people obtaining these prizes in this county will be published in this paper immediately after February 1st, 1894.

Cures in Two Weeks. I send this prescription Free of charge, and there is no humbug or advertising catch about it. Any good druggist or physician can put it up for you, as everything is plain and simple. All I ask in return is that you will buy a small quantity of the remedy from me direct, or advise your friends to do so after you receive the recipe and see that there is no humbug or deception. But you can do as you please about this. Correspondence strictly confidential, and all letters sent in plain sealed envelope. Enclose stamp if convenient. Address J. D. HOUSE, Box 842, Albion, Mich.

Encouragement for the Feeble.

So long as the failing embers of vitality are capable of being rekindled into a warm and genial glow, just so long there is hope for the weak and emaciated invalid. Let him not, therefore, despond, but derive encouragement from this, and from the further fact that there is a restorative most potent in renewing the dilapidated powers of a broken down system. Yes, thanks to the unexampled tonic virtues, Hostetter's Stomach Bitters is daily reviving strength in the bodies and hope in the minds of the feeble and nervous. Appetite, refreshing sleep, the acquisition of flesh and color, are blessings attendant upon the reparative processes which this priceless invigorant speedily initiates and carries to a successful conclusion. Digestion is restored, the blood fertilized, and sustenance afforded to each life sustaining organ by the Bitters, which is inoffensive even to the feminine palate, vegetable in composition, and thoroughly safe. Use it and regain vigor!

The Horse.

If a horse does not thoroughly masticate his oats put a handful of shelled corn with the oats and the difficulty will be overcome. Give the colts a feed of wheat bran every day. This makes bone. Never strike a colt with a whip unless it is positively necessary and he knows why he is struck.

Suited Him.

"There is one thing I like about the religion that this here Sam Jones dishes up," said the man with red clay on his boots and hayseed in his beard. "It don't interfere with the language a feller uses when he is a-driving mules."—Indianapolis Journal.

One Small Bile Bean every night for a week arouse Torpid Livers. 25c per bottle.

THE commandment is foolish which demands that a man give good for evil.

THE WAY SHE LOOKS troubles the woman who is delicate, run-down, or overworked. She's hollow-cheeked, dull-eyed, thin, and pale, and it worries her.

Now, the way to look well is to be well. And the way to be well, if you're any such woman, is to faithfully use Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription. That is the only medicine that's guaranteed to build up woman's strength and to cure woman's ailments. In every "female complaint," irregularity, or weakness, and in every exhausted condition of the female system—if it ever fails to benefit or cure, you have your money back.

There is only one medicine for Catarrh worthy the name. Dozens are advertised, but only the proprietors of Dr. Sage's Catarrh Remedy say this: "If we can't cure you, we'll pay you—$500 in cash!"

KNOWLEDGE

Brings comfort and improvement and tends to personal enjoyment when rightly used. The many, who live better than others and enjoy life more, with less expenditure, by more promptly adapting the world's best products to the needs of physical being, will attest the value to health of the pure liquid laxative principles embraced in the remedy, Syrup of Figs.

Its excellence is due to its presenting in the form most acceptable and pleasant to the taste, the refreshing and truly beneficial properties of a perfect laxative; effectually cleansing the system, dispelling colds, headaches and fevers and permanently curing constipation. It has given satisfaction to millions and met with the approval of the medical profession, because it acts on the Kidneys, Liver and Bowels without weakening them and it is perfectly free from every objectionable substance.

Syrup of Figs is for sale by all druggists in 50c and $1 bottles, but it is manufactured by the California Fig Syrup Co. only, whose name is printed on every package, also the name, Syrup of Figs, and being well informed, you will not accept any substitute if offered.

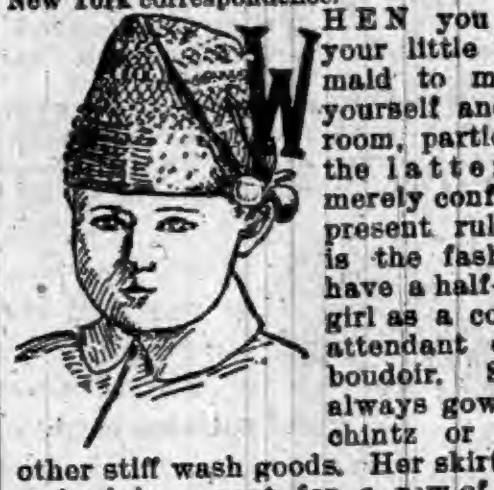
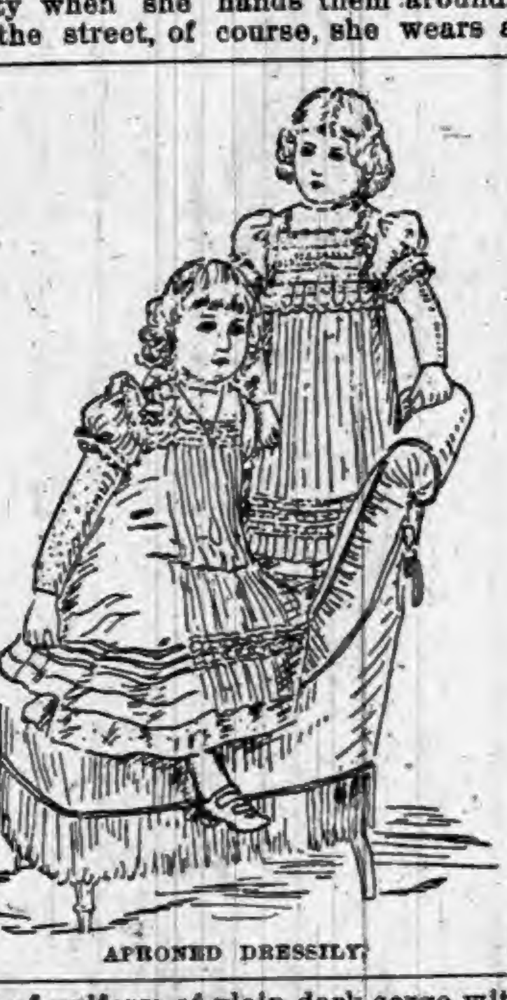
Housemaids Should Be Dressed to Match the Mistress and Her Room—Handsome Suits for Little Boys and Girls—Mothers' Promenade Costume.

Modes for the Month.

New York correspondence:



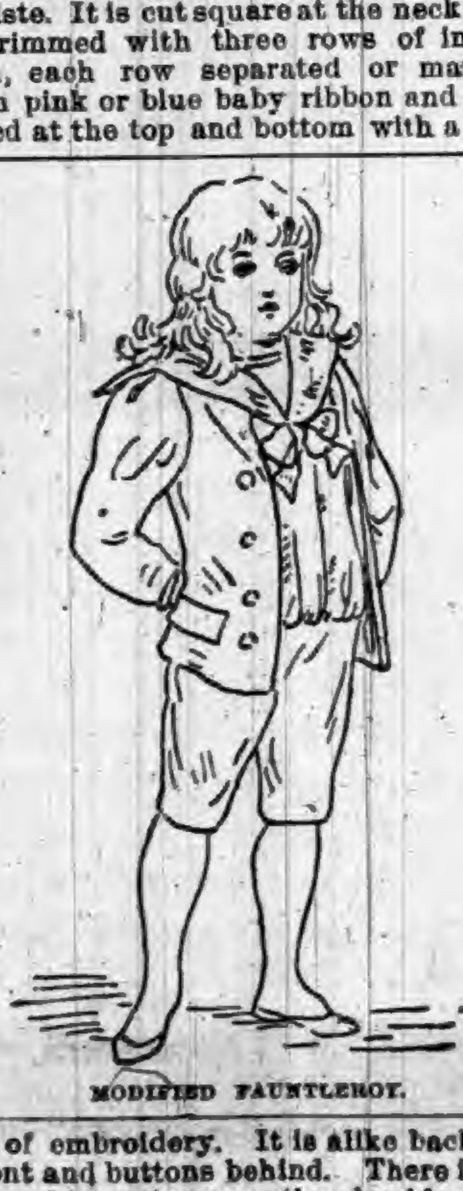
WHEN you dress your little housemaid to match yourself and your room, particularly the latter, you merely conform to present rules. It is the fashion to have a half-grown girl as a constant attendant on the boudoir. She is always gowned in chintz or some other stiff wash goods. Her skirt is full and plain, except for a row of tucks, and reaches only just below the tops of her shoes. The bodice is plain and cut out about the neck and short at the sleeves to show a chemisette of spotless white, and undersleeves of the same. She also wears a little lace cap, with a bow to match the dress, and an apron of very fine white stuff, run through with ribbons. The girl must be of the quietest manners, and nothing in her carriage or expression must emphasize the soubrette effect of her dressing. If you are a blonde your little maid will dress in blue. If you are a brunette she will wear pink and scarlet, or buff. It makes no difference at all what she is. Of course, your room is furnished according to a color scheme that matches you, and the little maid becomes part of this. Such a maid is a pretty accessory to an afternoon tea. Dress her to match the cups. The effect is very pretty when she hands them around. For the street, of course, she wears a sort of uniform of plain dark serge with a long cloak, the dress a little longer than that worn in the house.



APRONED DRESSILY.

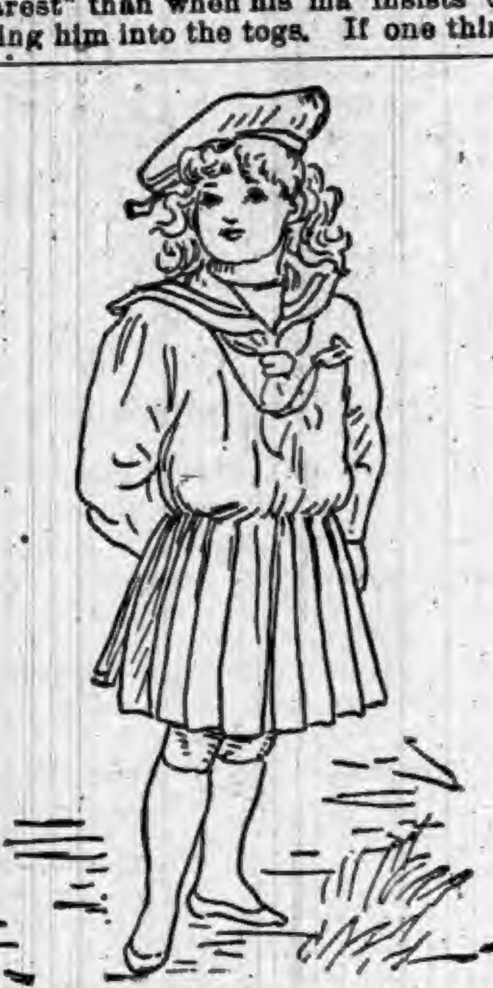
The same idea is carried out for the nurse maid. Have a young girl, if possible, dressed as always best becomes the child, and always in stiffly laundried goods for the house, and in dark serge for the street. On the street the girl should wear a special cap and a stiff long white apron. In the house her apron will be larger and stiffer than the other maid wears. An apron then is part of a maid's dress at all times, and it is, too, an important feature of the wardrobe of the little ones she attends. Two dainty models are shown in the first picture. That worn by the little one who is seated shows her taste in dress to be more correct than her ideas of comfort, for she has made herself, in her estimation, much more comfortable by sitting on her foot. The material of her apron is white batiste, and it is cut square at the neck. It is shirred several times and then hangs to the bottom of the dress, where it has a deep hem and above the latter are six tucks in pairs. It fastens behind with three buttons. The tiny sleeves have a drawstring of white ribbon and a shoulder strap edged with embroidery, laid in a double box-pleat in the center and trimmed with ribbons put on lengthwise and finished at each end with rosettes of baby ribbon.

The other is made in Empire form of batiste. It is cut square at the neck and is trimmed with three rows of insertion, each row separated or marked with pink or blue baby ribbon and finished at the top and bottom with a ruffle of embroidery. It is alike back and front and buttons behind. There is one row of insertion over the shoulders and then the ruffle. The small puffed sleeves are finished with insertion and ruffle of embroidery. The apron is pleated to the square neckband in the manner indicated in the illustration, and the bottom has a deep hem and seven tucks.



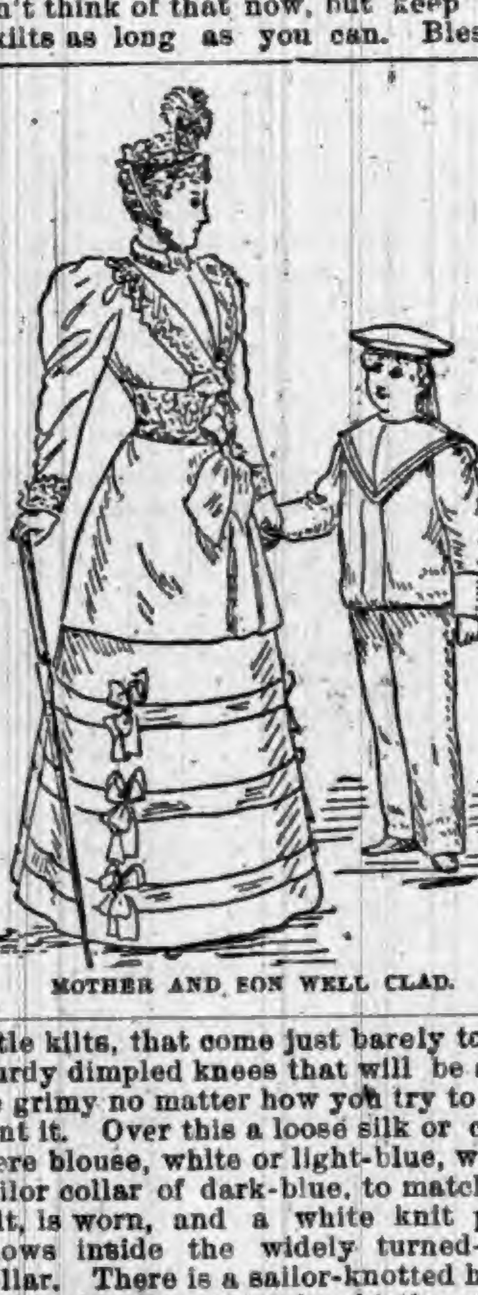
MODIFIED FAUNTLEROY.

This sturdy little fellow wears what is as near to the Lord Fauntleroy costumes of several years ago as fashion now permits. These Fauntleroy clothes are still dear to almost every mother's heart who has a boy the age of the little lord, no matter how unlike him the boy may be in other ways. The average small boy, however, has a deadly hatred for the Fauntleroy get-up, and is never further from doing the appropriate "dearest" than when his ma insists on getting him into the togs. If one thing about the suit is more odious than another it is the sash. If you dispense with that you may be able to fool the boy into a velvet jacket and knee trousers, especially if you will add a sailor suit. This has the wide sailor collar turning away to show a supposed "guernsey" beneath which comes about the throat loosely. The more this under piece looks like an undershirt, the better the boy likes it and the less the mother approves. Let it be of fine flannel, or knit, like the bigger boys' "sweaters," and either white or yellowish, and the small boy will allow it to be embroidered about the edge with colored silk and permit the sailor shirt to be worn over it to be of fine silk, either white or light-blue. With the wide collar of this coming over the shoulders of the velvet jacket and with the blessed short trousers fitting over a sturdy pair of legs, the mother is a happy one, especially if she has saved the long curls from the barber. If you can keep the boy's mind on the sailor shirt, you may prevent him from assuming the ferocious expression of undying hate and rage that has come to be associated with the sturdy face of the American Fauntleroy when, as he says, he is "rigged out" like a girl with a sash.



HIGHLAND SAILOR LADDIE.

Never will your boy be quite so satisfactory to dress as he is when about 5 years old. In just a little while everything will be changed and your baby will be a big, ugly fellow who wants his clothes made by his father's tailor. Don't think of that now, but keep him in kilts as long as you can. Blessed little kilts, that come just barely to the sturdy dimpled knees that will be a little grimy no matter how you try to prevent it. Over this a loose silk or cashmere blouse, white or light-blue, with a sailor collar of dark-blue, to match the kilt, is worn, and a white knit piece shows inside the widely turned-over collar. There is a sailor-knotted handkerchief and a bo's'n's whistle at the end of a white cord. To be sure, it is rather a mix up of mountain and sea, the Highland bare knees and the sailor shirt and loose cap, but, oh, the dear he is in it! Sturdy, stocky, and handsome, with his hair blowing about his brown cheeks, and with a way of standing that makes one's heart go right out to him! To think that he is getting so proud that he objects to being gathered up into hungry arms, becoming so ambitious that the first thing you know he is taking advantage of you by actually taking off the kilt and trotting around with bare knees and in trousers which are, of course, of the same stuff as the kilt and meant to be hidden by it. That is what many a mother has caught her boy at before he was out of the kindergarten. Time flies! Get your boy into kilts as soon as possible, that his ambition may not cut short the year when he looks so well in them. Once he is into trousers the "little boy" is gone.



MOTHER AND SON WELL CLAD.

A sailor suit for a boy from 8 to 11 years of age is shown in the last picture. The blouse has an elastic in the bottom and closes beneath a box-pleat in front. The wide collar is pointed in front but square in the back, and is made of pale-blue cloth. Around the edge is a gilt braid. Blouse and trousers are of dark-blue cheviot.

An Empress' Whims.

The Empress Josephine had 600,000 francs for her personal expenses, but this sum was not sufficient, and her debts increased to an appalling degree. Notwithstanding the position of her husband, she could never submit to either order or etiquette in her private life. She rose at 9 o'clock. Her toilet consumed much time, and she lavished unwearied efforts on the preservation and embellishment of her person. She changed her linen three times a day, and never wore any stockings that were not new. Huge baskets were brought to her containing different dresses, shawls and hats. From these she selected her costume for the day. She possessed between 300 and 400 shawls, and always wore one in the morning, which she draped about her shoulders with unequaled grace. She purchased all that were brought to her, no matter at what price. The evening toilet was as careful as that of the morning; then she appeared with flowers, pearls or precious stones in her hair. The smallest assembly was always an occasion for her to order a new costume, in spite of the hoards of dresses in the various palaces. Bonaparte was irritated by these expenditures; he would fly into a passion, and his wife would weep and promise to be more prudent, after which she would go on in the same way. It is almost incredible that this passion for dress should never have exhausted itself. After the divorce she arrayed herself with the same care, even when she saw no one. She died covered with ribbons and pale rose-colored satin.

Hog Against Rattlesnake.

A friend tells us of a fight he witnessed, last week, between a rattle snake and a hog. To use his own language: "I had just started up the steep hill beyond Toms creek, going to Roans creek, when my attention was attracted to a hog near the road, champing and walking around with bristles erect, with two smaller hogs some few feet away looking on. Reining to a better view I saw a good-sized rattlesnake coiled, head erect, and his rattles sounding the note of anger. The sow, with head down and bristles erect, was slowly walking around the snake, champing her teeth together and the foam running from her mouth. Presently the snake struck at her but missed his aim, the sow springing to one side at the moment the snake struck. Instantly the snake was again coiled and his rattle ringing. The sow renewed her circling, the snake following, with his head always facing the hog. Soon he struck again and fastened his fangs on her jaw below the ear. She raised her head and the snake was fastened to her. Instantly she caught the snake in her mouth, put her feet on his tail and stripped the skin up. Renewing her foot-hold on the body of the snake, she took another pull and tore the snake in two, and then, tearing off a part of the quivering snake, she complacently set to eating it up. The other two hogs now advanced, but the old sow took up the pieces of the snake and walked off a few steps, and set to finishing the feast. I had seen enough and rode on."—Linden (Tenn.) Times.

The Sunflower's Fidelity to the Sun.

That the sunflower follows the sun in its westward journey is well known, but when does it turn its face back again to the east to greet the morning sun? Mr. C. A. White, of Washington, in a letter to Nature, relates an incident which throws some light upon the subject. One evening, he says, during a short stay at a village in Colorado, in the summer of 1881, I took a walk along the banks of a long irrigating ditch just as the sun was setting. The wild variety of Helianthus annus grew abundantly there, and I observed that the broad faces of all the flowers were, as usual in the clear sunset, turned to the west. Returning by the same path less than an hour afterward, and immediately after the daylight was gone, I found to my surprise that much the greater part of those flowers had already turned their faces full to the east in anticipation, as it were, of the sun's rising. They had in that short time retraced the semicircle, in the traversing of which, with the sun, they had spent the whole day. Both the day and night were cloudless, and apparently no unusual conditions existed that might have exceptionally affected the movements of the flowers.

Ice-Bergs.

The following apparatus indicates automatically the presence of blocks of ice or icebergs about ships. A case is suspended from the side of the ship enclosing a bimetallic thermometer with a small rod attached to the helix, which moves right or left according as the temperature of the latter rises or falls. When the temperature falls the rod comes against a small metallic knob and thus closes a circuit ringing a bell placed near the officer on watch.

Result of a Woman's Pluck.

One of the most striking instances of what a woman can do in this era of woman's emancipation is the energetic and brainy action of Mrs. H. W. R. Strong, a pampas grower near the town of Whittier, Cal. Mrs. Strong has a ranch of 330 acres on the southern slope of the Puente hills. At one time a treeless mesa, it is now a lovely semi-tropical estate covered with orange, walnut, fig, olive, and other fruit trees, its cottage embowered in foliage and surrounded by choice flowers. Four years ago Mrs. Strong decided to plant pampas grass between her rows of young walnut trees and procured choice stock from Mr. Stewart of Los Angeles. In 1890 she marketed 134,000 plumes in Philadelphia, at from $30 to $65 a thousand. Last year her crop amounted to nearly 300,000 plumes.—Californian.

Balloon Signals.

A method of signalling from balloons has been devised by an Englishman, which consists in connecting a number of electric lamps in a balloon to the earth by means of a special form of flexible cable. Current can then be supplied the lamps from the ground through the cable and they can be lighted or extinguished by a switch located on the ground. The advantage of this system over the older forms of war signalling balloons is that a small and readily portable balloon can be used, as it carries no car and all it is called upon to raise is simply the weight of the lamps and the attached cable.

Into the Trap.

Most of the people at the table were men, says Drake's Magazine, and they were making merry over the subject of feminine vanity.

At last one of the few women present felt moved to say a word.

"Of course women are vain," she remarked, "and equally, of course, men are not vain. Why," she added, with a glance around the table, "at this very moment the necktie of the handsomest man in the room is up the back of his collar."

Then she smiled, for every man present had put his hand behind his neck.

Japanese Names.

Many of the pretty and suggestive little words that serve as names for Japanese girls are as charming in English as in Japanese. It is not uncommon for a Jap. girl to bear the name of a flower. On the other hand, however, many girls in Japan bear the names of some domestic utensil, as frying pan or dust brush. Doubtless this results from the custom among some peoples of naming a child for the first object that strikes the eye after the little one has come into the world.

A Charitable View.

In the case of the feminine doctor of West Virginia accused of alienating the affections of Mrs. Brewer's husband, it appears that the husband visited the doctor, not the doctor the husband. Possibly his object was to lighten the bills by going to the doctor's for treatment.—St. Louis Post-Dispatch.

An Art Patron.

"That man is one of the greatest art patrons I know of." "In what way?" "He buys cigars on the strength of the labels on the boxes."—Washington Star.

Toughened Glass.

From the results of a large number of experiments it is found that the elasticity of toughened glass is more than double that of ordinary glass, and that toughened sheets bend much more readily than ordinary sheets. Single toughened glass has a resistance 2.5 times, and demi-double toughened glass a resistance 3.1 times that of ordinary double glass. Polished toughened sheets, of thickness varying from 0.006 meter to 0.013 meter, have a resistance 3.67 times as great as that of ordinary sheets of the same thickness, and the resistance of rough toughened sheets is 5.33 times that of ordinary rough sheets.

Gutta-Percha as Cement.

Gutta-percha is made to adhere and act as cement by means of heat. One of the most convenient ways of using it is to place a thin sheet between the surfaces to be joined, and then apply heat by means of a hot pressing-iron, applied on the back of the leather until the heat strikes through and melts the gutta. This is the mode used by tailors in cementing leather and cloth to cloth. Thin sheet gutta is on the market for this purpose.

Old Customs.

Eighty years ago in Edinburgh it was the custom for a man to walk through the town every day at noon bearing a large shin-bone of beef. His cry was, "Three stirs and a wallop for a bawbee." All the housewives had their vegetables stewing for the family soup, and gladly paid their bawbees for the privilege of three stirs with the bone, which was supposed to flavor the stew.

"August Flower"

"For two years I suffered terribly with stomach trouble, and was for all that time under treatment by a physician. He finally, after trying everything, said my stomach was worn out, and that I would have to cease eating solid food. On the recommendation of a friend I procured a bottle of August Flower. Stricken Down with Heart Disease.

Dr. Miles Medical Co., Elkhart, Ind.

GENTLEMEN: I feel it my duty, as well as a pleasure, to publish, unsolicited, to the world the benefit received from DR. MILES' RESTORATIVE REMEDIES. I was stricken down with Heart Disease and its complications, a rapid pulse varying from 90 to 140 beats per minute, a choking or burning sensation in the wind pipe, oppression in the chest, THOUSANDS much pain in the region of the heart and below lower rib, pain in the arms, shortness of breath, sleeplessness, weakness and general debility. The arteries in my neck would throb violently, the throbbing of my heart could be heard across a large room and would shake my whole body. I was so nervous that I could not hold my hand steady. I have been under the treatment of eminent physicians, and have taken gallons of Patent Medicine without the least benefit. A friend recommended your remedies. She was cured by Dr. Miles' remedies. I have taken three bottles of your New Heart Cure and two bottles CURED Nervine. My pulse is normal, I have no more violent throbbing of the heart. I AM A WELL MAN. I sincerely recommend every one with symptoms of Heart Disease to take Dr. Miles' Restorative Remedies and be cured.

THE CLASS OF '93.

They Complete a Successful and Brilliant Course and Graduate with Great Credit to Themselves and their Teachers.

Last Wednesday evening will be remembered many years by the fortunate eleven composing the class of '93 of the Auburn High School. It is the largest class ever graduated here and has the reputation of being one of the most thorough in its work. The exercises were at the beautiful M. E church, which was early filled with the friends of the class and the friends and patrons of our excellent schools. The hour having come, the graduates took their places in the area usually occupied by the choir, the rear row comprising the lady members, while the gentlemen occupied the first. The girls were: Wildred Kline, Alice Shull, Carrie Shull, Carrie Beuret, Eliza Fretz, Saloma Thomas and Nellie Barns. The boys were: Willard Swarts, Ira Thrush, Chas. Clark and Claude Benedict. All were neatly dressed, the girls especially, looking lovely in their tasty graduating dresses. They were the center of all interest but, both boys and girls stood the trying ordeal with becoming modesty and dignity. Mr Harrison, Mr. Coe as well as President Mills were seated in front of the choir railing, and the Borst orchestra, that was to furnish music, occupied seats just to the east. Overhead stretching gracefully from side to side, hung the class motto, a liberal translation of which would be "A wise man speaks little." There was a fine overture by the orchestra, and a suitable, sensible prayer by Mr. Wooton, followed by a vocal solo by Miss Marie Young. She sang sweetly, as she always does, and was very natural and graceful in manner and attitude. There were only two exercises by the class proper as there were so many that there would not be time for all. There was a salutatory and a valedictory. The salutatory address was by Nellie Barns, the subject "What then?" She had her work well in hand, well committed and delivered it with a good share of ease and grace. Mrs. Garwood and Dr. Buchtel gave next a selection of music, she playing the piano, and he the violin. Their music is always of the highest order and our people appreciate it to the utmost. Then came the regular address of the evening, that by President J. J. Mills of Earlham College. His lecture was, "Sources of Power," and was at every point replete with brilliant ideas, well expressed. His lecture was probably somewhat shortened, on account of the great length of the program, but it was given in substance. Beginning with some graceful allusions to thoughts already given by the first speaker, he drew from these some very useful lessons, and then going on into his own experience, and following his own thoughts he held his vast audience in pleased interest till his last word. He is a master in the field of higher education and advanced thought. Miss Marie Young with a fine piano selection came next and following this was the valedictory, given by Claude Benedict. It was in verse, and very correctly delivered for composition so difficult as poetry always must be to the young and unpracticed. He made a fine impression. "Lead Kindly Light," was a sweet trio, sung by Mrs. Cuppy, Mrs. Sadie Yesbera and Mabel Hartman, and of course it was well sung. Unfortunately as the sweet strains of the song grew sweeter and more fascinating, the "kindly lights" of the church grew dim and nearly went out. The singers, however, went on bravely, never even faltering, and before the song had died away, Mr. Zimmerman had given the lights a new turn, and all was well. The diplomas were presented by Mr. Coe his remarks being full of good thoughts and words that will long be treasured by the bright young minds and hearts in the row of faces and forms before him—faces and forms made familiar to him and to Mr. Harrison during the several years now gone, by as well as to Miss Hoffman who also had charge of their earlier work for several years. The orchestra rendered another selection, Rev. J. D. Brosy pronounced a fitting benediction, and the class of '93 had ended its work in school. Friends gathered about to congratulate them as well as to look at the varied and lovely gifts that had been so generously showered on them by their friends here and elsewhere. The editor of this paper, being one of the interested parties and speaking for the other parents, thanks the friends not only here, but at a distance, for many kind words and appropriate gifts, that came so opportunely to add to the brightness of the glad occasion. We should not forget to say that the prize for highest grade in languages, was awarded to Wildred Kline, and all the other honors to Charles Clark. In both instances, the class and everyone interested are fully agreed that the awards were properly given. In regard to the two orations, it may not be amiss, for even the writer of this to say they avoided most successfully many of the shoals and quicksands that so often beset the graduating orator. We have reason to believe they were not only fully original, but they showed good taste in avoiding all the old common, commonplaces about Washington's hatchet, the martyred Garfield, the railsplitter, Lincoln, the gawky Ben Franklin and all the other old worthies that are usually flayed alive, roasted at the stake or boiled in oil on commencement evening. These were all worthy men, but let us give them a well earned rest. As to the merits of the orations, we give them in full, and hope they will be read by those who could not be present to hear them. With a lasting interest in the class of '93, a respect and affection for all its members, and a high hope for the future of each, the COURIER bids them Godspeed on the journey of life.

SALUTATORY—"WHAT THEN?"

BY NELLIE L. BARNS.

It has been said by someone that the aged live in the past, the middle aged in the present and the young in the future. But it seems to me that we all live for the future, and

> "That hope springs eternal in the human breast, > Man never is, but always to be blest."

The youth when starting out into life looks forward to the time when he shall be a man, and, WHAT THEN? He is to achieve wonders; then he is to win fame; then he will acquire wealth. The middle aged looks forward just a few years when he will have his business firmly established, and then? He will cease to work so hard he will take more time with his family. He will take his wife out on some pleasure "exertion" as Samantha Allen would say. Then he will be more liberal with his money and contribute more to the benevolences of his church. The aged, while they have fewer years to live, go on planning as if they had many. When they have laid up so much money, then they are going to rest; then they are going to have more comforts WHAT THEN? They do not answer that question, but go on hoping for better things to the end. Among the class of '93, I know there is not one on this commencement day, but that is ambitious to live for the future, not in the mere animal state of existence, but to live in the broadest sense of the term, and that means to make the most of life both for ourselves and for others.

Each has his goal set far ahead of him and expects to do his best to win it. Twelve years ago at the starting, or what we might call our first commencement, we learned our A B C's; then on to the readers, first, second, third, etc., adding each year some new study, difficult and hard to learn at first, but which only prepared us for the higher and harder ones. AND THEN? On through the common branches to the sciences and languages, until to-night we are to start once more at the foot.

The second commencement in our education in life, we must begin at our A B C's, go gradually up from one grade to another always encountering some new obstacle to overcome and after years of toil graduate from the world's great school to the unknown.

It may be one has chosen for himself the medical profession. First beginning the study in his father's office and under his direction and then to college to graduate with honors and a diploma, and then, to launch his bark out upon the sea of medical practice, and then, after many years of toil to retire on a well earned competence for the remainder of his life.

Another may choose for himself a place among the legal fraternity. He knows there are long months of hard study before him, and WHAT THEN? The reward, a name among men, a judge, and then there opens before him a long vista of years filled with usefulness and honor.

And still another may seek a place in literature, and sees at the end, fame and wealth. Another would fill a niche in the scientific world.

Some of the girls of the class will probably shine as guiding star in some bright, cheerful home. Some may fill a college professor's chair and who knows but some of the girls of the class may in the future have a place on our school board and have a voice in the selection of teachers, the course of study, etc. WHAT THEN? City and county superintendents of course.

Some of the class may be congressmen, senators, or even president. However, this is not likely to happen unless women secure the right to occupy the president's chair, for the boys of the class are in the wrong party to win now.

There are changes going on constantly about us, each new thing being more wonderful than its predecessor. New ideas, advanced education, and wonderful inventions claim our admiration and attention until we find ourselves asking the question, WHAT NEXT? If we may believe the newspapers, more wonderful things are yet to come. In a recent number of a newspaper the fact is stated that in all probability the next most wonderful invention will be a method of storing energy so that it can be applied wherever wanted. In that case, Niagara Falls may supply power to run manufactories in Texas, and every farmer may plow his fields and heat his dwelling with a storage battery no larger than a common brick. Then, there are to be improvements in the social world. I read the other day that the old order of things was to be changed and that the girls are to do the proposing. I feel a great pity for the boys for they are very modest and retiring. I hope the girls who contemplate adopting this new code of social laws will be very gentle with them. I hope the manner of proposing will change too, for it seems to me it would be the least bit awkward to place a small arm around a 45-inch waist and say, "Dearest, will you be mine?" and rave in poetry about kneelling in admiration at your feet, when you feel you are wrinkling and spoiling your best new gown.

But let all these inventions and improvements come. We must live our lives, and whether our ambitions are ever realized or not, let us so live in the present that we may be prepared by our strength of character for whatever the future may bring us.

Once, two gentlemen were seated in a pleasant room talking. One was a judge, an elderly christian gentleman; the other, a young ambitious man, began to tell his friend what he expected to accomplish. Said he: "I shall choose a profession, go through college and graduate with honors." "WHAT THEN?" asked his friend. "Then I shall by hard work and application make myself famous in my chosen profession." "AND WHAT THEN?" again asked his friend "Why, then I shall choose me a charming wife and settle down in my home." "AND THEN?" "Oh, then I suppose I shall retire after awhile and grow old." "WHAT THEN?" "Well—well—I suppose I shall die." "AND THEN?"

Dear classmates, with all your ambitions, which are noble, let your youth be temperate and industrious; your middle age busy and useful; your old age patient and cheerful. And through all these periods, be earnest, conscientious christians, and when this last and most important question will be asked you, you may be able to say, "An eternity spent with our Heavenly Father."

VALEDICTORY

"LIFE AND ITS EDUCATION."

BY CLAUDE A. BENEDICT.

How beautiful is infancy, the morn of life,
When an immortal soul springs into action
That must strive and contend with earth's frowning faction.
What great responsibilities there will be to bear,
What misfortunes to stand and expressions of joy or sorrow to wear!
But the child does not note the passing hour.
It is content with the sunshine and pretty flower.
It's only aim is pleasure and fun,
From morn till night, from sun to sun.
And finally the little one is sent to school,
Not only to learn his lessons, but right from wrong, discipline and rule.
He toils against each besetting trial and care from year to year,
Through each respective room, until in the Senior grade he doth appear;
There he casts aside his simple games and childish mirth,
And prepares himself to face this broad and beauteous earth,
And oft with a sigh does he think of the fast fading year,
And with regret there comes to his eyes a tear
As he bids farewell to his school boy days,
No more to enjoy their frolics and plays;
Farewell to our books and teachers kind!
Farewell to all school belongings left behind!

Now let us turn back and reach out from the youthful mind
And see what further of aim one can find.
A true man: Has he not an aim
Somewhere in the road of fortune, or in the path of fame?
Everyone should have something in view,
And each day by toil add something new.
For no man should discouraged be,
Though his way he cannot clearly see.
High should the aim of life be set,
Though many a struggle will be met.
For if one can grasp the taunting limb,
Is it not worthy of him?
Of what avail to travel the earth around
And turn with empty pockets homeward bound
Then unravel your weary tales of abuse,
That you are down trodden by misuse.
Life is drudgery and pain to some,
While to others 'tis art, and pleasures come
From honest work and daily toil,
Whether it be in study or tilling soil,
For life is what we make it.

We were not made to fret and sigh.
Let's find the summer side of men
Or be believers in it.
There is a light in every soul
If we have a mind to see it.
Oh, there's a slumbering good in all,
And we perchance may wake it.
Our hands contain the magic wand
To fan into conscious being the heavenly spirit.
This life is what we make it.
Life, though but a day in fleetness,
May be the richer in all strength and sweetness.
Time is lost on pleasing fancies spent
When it should on steady work be bent.

The life secret of a man
Is to meet his opportunity when he can.
And now, what of true education to one?
A father's ambition of his daughter or son.
Superior insight discovers much of good
Where only lurking evil stood,
And much of convincing truth
Where only error kept its birth.
More than this, it permits us to look
At the pages of an otherwise sealed book.
It opens the mind and heart of another
In such a way that we discover
His ideas, guage his temptations and measure
His strength, his way of looking at study and pleasure.
Education is development; it is not simply facts and rules
Communicated by teachers of our colleges and schools,
But it is discipline, a development of latent powers,
A growth of mind by minutes and hours.
It should have reference to the whole man, in part
His body, his mind and his heart.
To his frame it should give vigor and beauty,
To his heart virtue and duty.

The youth who thinks it impossible an education to attain
Is deficient in courage, energy, might and main.
Many have imbibed the idea that to obtain
An education and win the first round in the ladder of fame,
That his boyhood and youth must be spent
Within the wall of some classical convent.
That he may go forth in the land
Under the banner of his diploma in hand,
A refined education is desirable; all will admit it,
But classical lore is not necessary to adorn it.
Let the boy and girl be taught the necessaries required
To prepare him for the common duties of life desired.

Life for all is but a college,
Free to drink at its fountain of knowledge.
Learn thoroughly what you learn,
Be it ever so little to earn.
Money and riches you may choose.
But money you will lose.
Then how wise to secure
A prize of which you are sure.
This life is too short. It is not
To waste one moment in bewailing our lot.
Be patient, work hard, hope for the best,
And if you do not succeed in your test,
At death you will be conscious of your aimed desire,
Which is the truest success to which man can aspire.

Some Reminiscences of its Early Days and Pioneer Citizens.

1871—Continued.

In the spring of 1871, a deep interest pervaded the people living in the southern part of the county in regard to a proposed Baltimore & Ohio railroad extension to Chicago which was expected to run near the south part of Auburn. As advantages for the line as ultimately established, it was claimed that the course was more direct than others, that grades were low and easy, and that it traversed a fine, fertile country abounding in excellent farms and valuable timber.

A preliminary survey was made in June to which the apportionment of cost to DeKalb county was about $500, which was promptly raised and donated. The line as staked crossed the St. Joseph river about one mile south of Newville, and the surveying party reached Auburn by the middle of the month. The engineers were under the superintendence of Geo. Crocker, who was assisted by C. G. Darrick, R. J. McCoffery, R. G. Potter and others with Dr. Rakestraw for commissariat and their arrival was heartily welcomed by our citizens.

This important road connecting Chicago with the sea-board was destined to give the great west another channel of transportation for its products and to create new and flourishing town within our county limits; but with this road in operation surmise and conjecture were busy and we of to day know the answer to a question then propounded "What will Auburn with three railroads be a few years hence, compared to what it is now?"

Early in 1871, following the lines of railroad, beating their way, the class later familiarly known as "tramps" made their appearance in our community. Emerging from her seclusion, Auburn attracted not only the desirable class of strangers, but there came, also, of the baser sort in quest of adventure, impostures upon generous people. To this time from pioneer days when hospitality was a sacred right, a spirit of charity had led all to regard with pity and compassion the poor and the unfortunate who rarely asked food at our doors, but now a regular business of tramping was begun and many vagabonds, some vicious with ever-varied tales of ill fortune or disaster, principally in gangs, rarely alone, canvassed the town from house to house for provisions and clothing.

The movement was wide spread and lasting. It was based upon indolence and became so much of an imposition that harsh measures were necessitated and not unlikely unfortunates really deserving and needy were refused food and suffered from hunger.

Among the rougher sort attracted by the notoriety given the town by the railroad, was a desperado known as "Michigan Bill" arrested and imprisoned in our county jail for stealing a horse near Spencerville. Some months passed quietly and the fellow dissembling, showed great interest in the newspapers and he so far disarmed suspicion that Jeremiah Plum, the sheriff, allowed him the freedom of the jail.

On a Sunday evening in July, he asked a drink of water and the sheriff having opened his cell door to supply him, was fiercely assaulted by the prisoner armed with a billet of wood. The sheriff despite a brave resistance was thrust aside, the door was gained, the fence scaled and the fugitive making for the woods, made good his escape. No trace was ever gained of him.

Doctors Cowan and Casebeer cared for the sheriff and dressed his wounds. He soon recovered and hale and hearty in his good old age has been until recently a familiar figure at sessions of court as bailiff of grand or petit jury.

Satisfied that outside interest in Auburn's resources had been stimulated by the publicity originating with the railroad and desirous of confirming favorable impressions, the population united upon measures calculated to add material wealth to the town, and many solid improvements were projected and carried into effect.

Building material was accumulated in various quarters preparatory to erecting a large number of houses during the coming season. A general movement to improve and to beautify the place was begun and continued, increasing with time as the unwonted stimulus of examples and confidence brought others forward. The citizens seemed to vie with each other in enterprises that were expected to redound to the credit of the whole community. What was denominated the old fogy spirit was assailed by push and energy, the spell of apathy seemed broken and a new life had sprung into being. It was taken for granted that to build a town upon a solid foundation was not only a labor of years and a work of strong and liberal minds, but a sequence of united and persistent effort.

Store rooms were refitted and modified to meet the demands of business, brick blocks were contemplated to be built and many set about making improvements to their property. Messrs. Smith & Hare began in March the erection of a business house on Main street. It was of brick, in dimensions twenty by sixty feet and two stories high.

Preparations were soon going forward for the construction of the Odd Fellows Block northeast of the court house. It was to be three storied and was expected to be by far the largest and most costly building in the town.

James W. Case began the erection of a combined business block and residence, carrying the former two-stories upon and above the well known and often mentioned little old brick building, earlier known as the Rhodes block, dwarfing its proportions and constructing a fine and convenient building. The ground story was intended for store room, the second story for offices and the third has long been occupied by the Masonic fraternity.

(To be continued next week.)

KILLED BY A TRAIN.

Roy Balliet, a Former DeKalb Man Deliberately Lets a Train Run Over Him.

We had a brief note of this terrible accident last week, and now give the full account as furnished by the Wheeling West Va., Register of May 28.

"An accident which savors somewhat a deliberate intention to be killed on the part of the victim, occurred on the Cleveland and Pittsburg railroad, about opposite Bloch's tobacco factory, a little after three o'clock yesterday.

The south bound train, with Engineer Miller Able in the engine cab, was bowling along, and in rounding the curve just south of Whisky run a man was seen walking on the track, going in the same direction the train was running, or towards Bellaire. The engine whistled for the crossing, the engineer supposing that as a matter of course, the man would step from between the rails. He turned around as the whistle blew and looked at the train, and then continued his walk. As the train approached closer to him, the engineer whistled again and again, the noise attracting attention even on the West Virginia side of the river, and at the same time the brakes were put on. The man kept serenely on his way, however, and just as the train was close upon him he again turned around and looked at the engine which was rushing towards him, but made no effort to leave the track. He was struck by the engine and hurled from the track, falling beside the rails at some little distance. As soon as possible the train was stopped and backed to where the body lay, passengers crowding out of the cars, while other people ran from houses in the vicinity, and most of the employes of the Bloch tobacco factory on this side of the river, who had heard the shrill screaming of the whistle, watched what was going on.

When the man was picked up he was found to have one leg broken and had a bad cut on the back of the head. The body and clothing were covered with mud. He was carried to Bellaire and laid in the railway station, where he was viewed by hundreds, but no one seemed to know him, although it was said that he was from the neighborhood of Jacobsburg.

A physician was summoned, but little could be done for the sufferer, and he died about seven o'clock last evening. Coroner Lohman, of Bellaire, viewed the remains, and after an inquiry returned a verdict in accordance with the above facts. A letter in the man's pocket was addressed to R. R. Balliet, of Benzonia, Mich., and under the impression that this was the dead man's name a telegram was sent to Benzonia, but no answer had been received up to a late hour last night. The unfortunate man seemed to be about thirty-five years of age, dark complexion, of heavy build, and was fairly dressed, wearing a large emblem ring."

WEEKLY NEWS BUDGET.

DEATH OF EDWIN BOOTH, THE GREAT TRAGEDIAN.

Ex-Governor Chase Indicted—The Revolutionists in Central America Restless—Magazine Publishers Compelled to Make an Assignment—Thrown Into a Fire.

ALL INDICTED.

Bank Officials, Including Ex-Governor Chase, Must Answer.

Kokomo (Ind.) special: The grand jury on the bank wreck at Greentown has returned its findings. Ex-Governor Ira J. Chase and John W. Paris, directors of the bank, and Lewis S. Walden, cashier, were indicted for fraud. Governor Chase on embezzlement direct and indirect and false pretense in representing himself financially interested, whereas he now claims to be simply a nominal stockholder and paid employe; Paris on embezzlement and false pretenses; Walden for false pretence and receiving money knowing the bank would be insolvent. Warrents were issued for their arrest. It was in evidence that the organizers put no capital in the concern, even the safe and office fixtures being paid for with funds of the depositors. A short time previous to the smash Gov. Chase was out among the farmers soliciting deposits and purchase of stock in the bank.

Surviving Members of the Army of the Cumberland.

The officers of the Society of the Cumberland have been engaged for six months, with great success, upon a work of much interest to the veterans. It has undertaken to obtain names, postoffice addresses, and occupations of the survivers of that army. The object is to print a roll of honor. Historian Col. G. G. Kniffen has already secured the addresses of 112,000. When the work was planned it was not believed that the number would exceed 80,000. It will probably reach 120,000.

Dr. M'Glynn En Route to Rome.

Rt. Rev. John Moore of St. Augustine, Catholic Bishop of Florida, in an interview, says there is no truth in the rumor that Dr. McGlynn had not really sailed for Rome in the apocryphal ship, but was in a trappist monastery in Kentucky, doing penance. He says that Dr. McGlynn is really on his way to Rome, in obedience to the suggestions of his friends and will see the Pope and ask his blessing. Rev. McGlynn, the Bishop says, was restored to his priestly functions absolutely without conditions and was not required to do penance.

Continued Revolt.

San Jose, Costa Rica, special: The enemies of the Government, emboldened by the success of the revolutionists in Nicaragua, are continuing preparations for a revolt. It is reported that the church party has loaned the Government $1,000,000 to sustain its position. State affairs here are critical. Money was never scarcer and the crop outlook is poor. Some American colonists who arrived here a short time ago are beginning to go home, it is said, being in a destitute condition.

Edwin Booth Dead.

Edwin Booth, the tragedian, quietly passed away at his apartments in the Players' Club, New York City. At his bedside at the time were Mr. and Mrs. Grossman, his son-in-law and daughter, his physician, Dr. St. Clair Smith: Superintendent McGonigle, William Bispham, an intimate friend and Chas. Farrall. The death of the renowned actor was very peaceful, being scarcely noticeable to the anxious watchers at his bedside.

Publishers Fail.

Potter & Potter, publishers of the New England Magazine, the Yankee Blade, the Woman's Home Journal, the American Vehicle, and the Amesbury Daily, have assigned to W. A. Clark, jr. of Boston. Isaac K. Potter said the New England Magazine had broken the firm, and that the other publications were in good condition. The liabilities are between $75,000 and $100,000. It is hoped that the firm may go on.

The Catholic Knights.

Chattanooga special: The suit of the Catholic Knights of America against the Fidelity and Casualty Company of New York, for $50,000, the amount of defaulting Treasurer O'Brien's bond, resulted in a verdict for $15,702.90 for the Knights. This was the amount, with interest, stolen between the last examination by the Knights of O'Brien's books and the discovery of his shortage.

Died of Excessive Joy.

Mrs. Frederick Spath died at Huntington, Ind. Her death was peculiar. She was 87 years old. Her son Frederick, who was always her favorite among the children, arrived home from Illinois, where he had been for several years. His unexpected arrival so overjoyed the old lady that she was prostrated and died soon after.

Dr. Briggs Appeals.

The New York Evangelist publishes a letter in which Dr. Briggs appeals to a majority of the Presbyterian Church to reverse the unconstitutional acts of the minority of the church, as represented in general assembly.

Thrown Into a Fire.

Charles Suist, a 14-year-old boy, living at Cannon Falls, near Northfield, Minn., was thrown by a tramp into a burning brush pile and received fatal injuries.

Published a Lottery Item.

Cleveland special: The Plain Dealer and the World are apparently in the toils of the federal anti-lottery law. Some days ago they published an item stating that a colored man had drawn a $7,500 prize in a western lottery. An interview with Attorney General Tyner, of the Postoffice, Department, quotes him as saying that he is assured both papers have unmistakably laid themselves open to prosecution and is giving the cases his personal attention. If convicted the publishers are liable to a fine of not less than $500 or imprisonment, or both, and the papers lose the privileges of the mails. E. Holden, a wealthy silver mine owner, controls the Plain Dealer and Secretary F. B. Squire, of the Standard Oil Company, the World.

CLEVELAND'S FINANCIAL POLICY.

He is Strongly Opposed to the Silver Purchase Act.

The President said in reply to a question by a representative of the United Press, that he intended to call an extra session of Congress, not earlier than the first nor later than the fifteenth of September, unless unexpected contingencies should necessitate an earlier meeting.

The President further said: "While there has been no mystery or secrecy in regard to my intentions in this matter, I think it not amiss that our people should be informed authoritatively that the time is at hand when their representatives in Congress will be called upon to deal with a financial condition which is the only menace to the country's welfare and prosperity. It is well for the people to take up the subject for themselves and arrive at their own conclusions as to the merits of a financial policy which obliges us to purchase idle silver bullion with gold taken from our reserve. One does not need the eye of a financier to see that this gold thus subtracted from the Government's stock is eagerly seized by other nations for the purpose of strengthening their credit at our expense.

"It does not need the art of statesmanship to detect the danger that awaits upon the continuance of this operation. Already the timidity of capital is painfully apparent, and none of us can fail to see that fear and apprehension in monetary circles will ultimately bring suffering to every humble home in our land.

"I think that between now and the meeting of congress much depends upon the action of those engaged in financial operations and business enterprises. Our vast national resources and credit are abundantly sufficient to justify them in the utmost faith and confidence. If instead of being frightened they are conservative, and if instead of gloomily anticipating immediate disaster they contribute their share of hopes and steadiness they will perform a patriotic duty and at the same time protect their own interests. The things just now needed are coolness and calmness in financial circles and study and reflection among our people."

CRUSHED TO A PULP.

Four Firemen Meet Terrible Deaths in an Omaha Horror.

Omaha special: This city received a dual visitation from the elements the other evening. All day rain had fallen intermittently, the storm blowing from the southeast. Shortly before 7 o'clock in the evening the wind chopped about to the north, and in a few moments one of the most severe storms ever experienced here was coming down.

Rain was accompanied by heavy electrical display and high winds, and in the midst of the flood came a fire that entailed a loss of nearly a quarter of a million, with the additional horror of four deaths and many persons injured.

The dead now known are: George Coulter, B. J. Morris, Capt. Cox, and Pipeman Morrissey, all firemen. When the storm was at its height flames burst from the fifth floor of the building occupied by the Shiverick Furniture Company on Farnum street. In response to the general alarm all the companies of the City Fire Department responded, but the fire was beyond control. It entailed a loss of fully $200,000. West of the Shiverick building was a structure occupied by Ed Maurer's saloon and restaurant. On top of this building six firemen had gathered that they might better fight the flames. While they were there the west wall of the Shiverick block fell outward. The firemen heard the cry of horror from the crowd and leaped from the building, only to be buried by bricks on the sidewalk. They were quickly rescued from their perilous predicament. The falling walls crushed the two-story building like an eggshell, and the firemen on the roof were carried down to an awful death.

STREET CAR RUN DOWN,

And One of Its Occupants, a Woman, Ground to a Shapeless Mass.

A horse car of the Chicago City Railway line, at Sixty-ninth street, Chicago, was struck by a Rock Island passenger train. One occupant of the street car was instantly killed and three seriously hurt.

The accident is said to have been due to the negligence of the gate keeper at the crossing, W. D. DeNormady, who failed to lower the gates on the approach of the train. The car contained but six passengers. While the car was crossing the track he saw the approaching train and whipped up his horses in his efforts to get away. The passengers on the train saw the danger and rushed for the rear end to make their escape. Before they could do this the engine struck the rear end of the car hurling it to the sidewalk and against the fence thirty feet away. The sudden jolt threw a lady passenger directly in front of the engine which in an instant was upon her and was ground into a shapeless mass beneath the wheels. Assistance was soon at hand and the unfortunate passengers were rescued from the wreck and taken to a barn close by where their wounds were dressed.

ASSASSINS

Coolly Murder Three People—Robbery Followed By an Awful Crime.

Montreal special: Three American "crooks" crossed over from Vermont to the hamlet of Beach Ridge, in Missiquoi County, in this province, and entered the farm-house of Mr. Edy, a wealthy farmer and leading man in the locality. They first demanded and obtained all the money and valuables he possessed, and then shot and killed, Edy, cut the throats of his wife and daughter, and then set fire to the house. The flames were seen by the neighbors, who at once rushed to the spot and were horrified at the sight of the three dead bodies in a room on the lower flat of the house. The assassins had fled after completing their horrible work, and the traces they left showed they went directly south to the border line, three miles distant. Detectives have left Montreal for the scene of the tragedy, accompanied by Mr. H. O. Edy, a son of the murdered man, a prominent manufacturer's agent here. Miss Emma Edy, the murdered daughter, was a beautiful young lady of 20 years, and was soon to be married to a prominent Montreal journalist.

'TWAS TERRIBLE.

Eldorado, Ark., Swept By a Cyclone, Twenty-five Persons Killed.

Little Rock (Ark.) special: The town of Eldorado, Union County, Arkansas, was swept by one of the most destructive cyclones that has passed over this section of the Southwest for years past. Eldorado has a population of 1,100 and the death and destruction to people and property in the town was frightful. A dispatch received here while the storm was raging says from fifteen to twenty-five persons were killed and injured in Eldorado, while the destruction of property and loss of life in the vicinity was terrible. Almost every house in the town was unroofed or blown down, while three saw mills, a short distance out, were entirely blown away. The roof of the Baptist Church was carried away and the sexton who was in the building, was instantly killed. The cyclone struck the town from a southwesterly direction and its coming was heard for fifteen minutes before it struck Eldorado.

THE PLANKINTON BANK

Succumbs to the Inevitable and Closes Its Doors.

Milwaukee special: The expected has come to pass. The following notice was posted on the doors of the Plankinton Bank the other morning: "Owing to the failure of all efforts to reoganize the bank and the continued withdrawal of deposits, we have thought it best for the interests of all depositors and stockholders to close the bank. The Plankinton Bank." The failure for such it is, caused no surprise in business circles. It was a foregone conclusion. The moment the fact was made public that it was involved to the extent of $274,000 in the Lappan case, just that moment it was certain that the bank must cease to do business or face the alternative of reorganizing, and with new officers to try to live down its bad reputation.

Met on the Trestle!

Poplar Bluff (Mo.) special: Freight train No. 75, south bound and fast stock train No. 76 north bound, collided on a trestle at Red Cut, one mile north of here. The trouble was caused by the train dispatcher giving both trains orders to run on the same time between Piedmont and this city. The trains met on the trestle while running about twenty-five miles an hour. The engines, five cars of stock and a dozen cars of merchandise were piled in a heap. About 100 head of cattle were killed. The loss will reach over $50,000. The crews of the different trains saw the opposite train in time to jump, thereby escaping with slight injuries.

An Express Robbery.

The United States and Pacific Express Companies' depot office at Peru, Ind., was robbed of nearly $800. The circumstances surrounding the case are peculiar. The two men on duty had gone to lunch. Upon returning they found that the heavy outer door had been pried open, and the large safe door was also wide open, with the money and valuables and the money order book missing. It is supposed that the safe was opened by experts who understood the combination or the tumbler principle. There is no clew. The company detectives are working on the case.

Locked in a Furnace.

John Willis, an employe of the Buffalo, New York, Furnace Company, had a terrible experience which may result in his death. Willis entered a furnace to clean it out and the door, which fastened with a snap, closed behind him. All effort to attract the attention of his fellow workmen were unavailing and fumes of carbonic acid gas gradually overcame him until he sank unconscious. He was not discovered for several hours and when taken out was barely alive. Physicians worked over him for hours at the hospital and they say there is a bare chance of his recovery.

Bank Robbery.

A dispatch from Rogers, Ark., says the People's Bank, at Bentonville, six miles west of here, was robbed by six men, while the President and Assistant Cashier were in the bank. The robbers secured $15,000. Before the robbers escaped with their booty which was carried away in a meal sack, two were wounded. The Assistant Cashier was also wounded as was also one citizen, and the President of the bank and one citizen was killed. A posse is scouring the country for the robbers who made for the Indian Territory.

Disastrous Conflagration at New Orleans.

The Home brewery, on Jena street, in the lower part of New Orleans, which was recently built, was burned to the ground, together with Louis Fitz Kopz cistern factory and half a dozen residences. The loss will reach $150,000. Thirty horses were also burned to death. The insurance is small.

While this fire was in progress the Hope rice mill on Girod and Commerce streets, in the center of the city, caught fire and was also destroyed. Loss, $100,000; partially covered by insurance.

A Cool Murder.

Indianapolis special: An unknown thief shot and killed John Tarpey in the doorway of John Shaw's saloon, in Houghtsville. The burglar then calmly walked out into the night and disappeared. A posse was quickly organized and started out in pursuit of the murderer. During the search a man named Wagner was arrested. Wagner is not believed to be the murderer, but it is supposed that his tramp partner is the one. Feeling is high and if the murderer is caught he will probably be lynched.

Instant Death.

While repairing a water wheel at Goshen, Ind., George Patterson met instant death. Patterson was in straightened circumstances and leaves a wife and ten children.

Fire at Lima, Ohio.

Fire destroyed the large mills of the American Straw Board Association main plant at Lima, Ohio. Loss, $300,000; fully insured in Chicago agencies.

Eighteen Persons Drowned.

Vienna special: Great damage has been done by extensive floods in eastern Galicia, and eighteen persons have been drowned.

EXPENSES AT THE FAIR.

WHAT IT WILL COST TO SEE THE BIG SHOW.

Visitors May Spend as Much Money as They Choose—The Man Who Wishes to Economize Will See the Exposition at a Small Price.

One Day for 90 Cents.

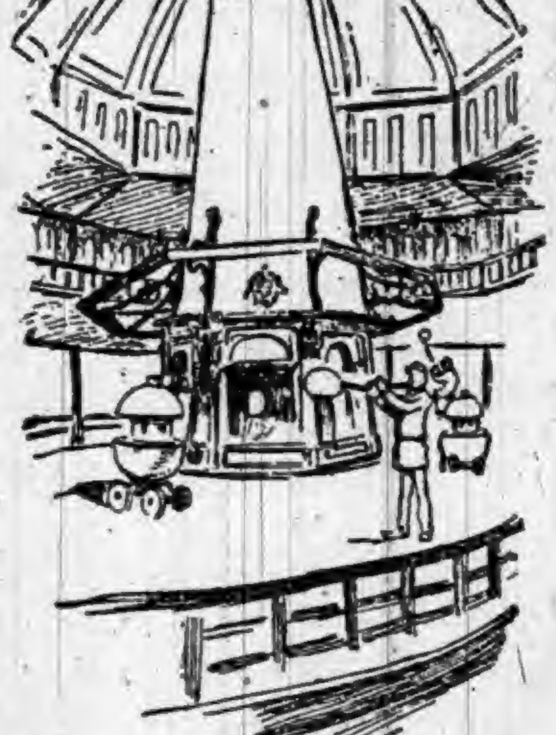
World's Fair correspondence:

If a man is fond of: Pink catalogues, with pages full of italic type, cactus sprouts and hyacinth bulbs, liberty bells made out of glass, imported asparagus at 10 cents a stalk, cigars costing 20 cents each and wearing gold labels, sedan chairs carried by Turks at $1 an hour, Japanese vases, with yellow catfish chasing red butterflies over a pink landscape, effervescent drink at $2.75 a pint, and other luxuries, he can manage to spend quite a roll of money in one brief day at the Fair. It is impossible to say just what is the expense of seeing the Exposition unless you know your man.

In spite of all that has been printed and circulated about extortion, extras and sideshows, the visitor who keeps books and trims his expenses down to necessities can get along without wasting any more money than he would at a ball game or a circus. On the other hand, the person who feels that he has silver coin to feed to the fishes can find what is commonly known as "action." Between these two there is the happy medium—the man who is willing to see what is worth seeing, and expend a reasonable sum where it will do the most good. A paper recently made an editorial announcement that in order to get any satisfaction out of a day at the Fair the visitor would have to part with $36. It would keep a man busy to spend that much. He would be compelled to eat numerous meals and pick out the most expensive articles on the bill of fare. He would have to chase from one end of the plaisance to the other, patronizing every show and scattering tips among the Egyptians. His pockets would be loaded down with souvenirs. Specially chartered palanquins and rolling chairs would be at his service. At eventide the ambulance would carry him to the emergency hospital free of charge, and no one would pity him.

On a Minimum Basis.

Let it be supposed that the visitor starts from down-town to put in the entire day at the grounds and return in the evening. This will make three items of expense absolutely necessary—transportation, admission to the park and some kind of luncheon at the noon hour. The round trip to the grounds will cost at least 10 cents, the cheapest routes being the cable and the "L" roads. By the boats it is 15 cents one way, or 25 cents for the round trip. The yellow trains on the Illinois Central charge 10 cents a single trip. A lunch of sandwiches and fruit may be procured at any down-town counter for 15 or 20 cents. On the grounds a sandwich and cup of coffee costs 20 cents and no more. Provided the frugal visitor puts up with this "snack," his actual expenses for the day will be:



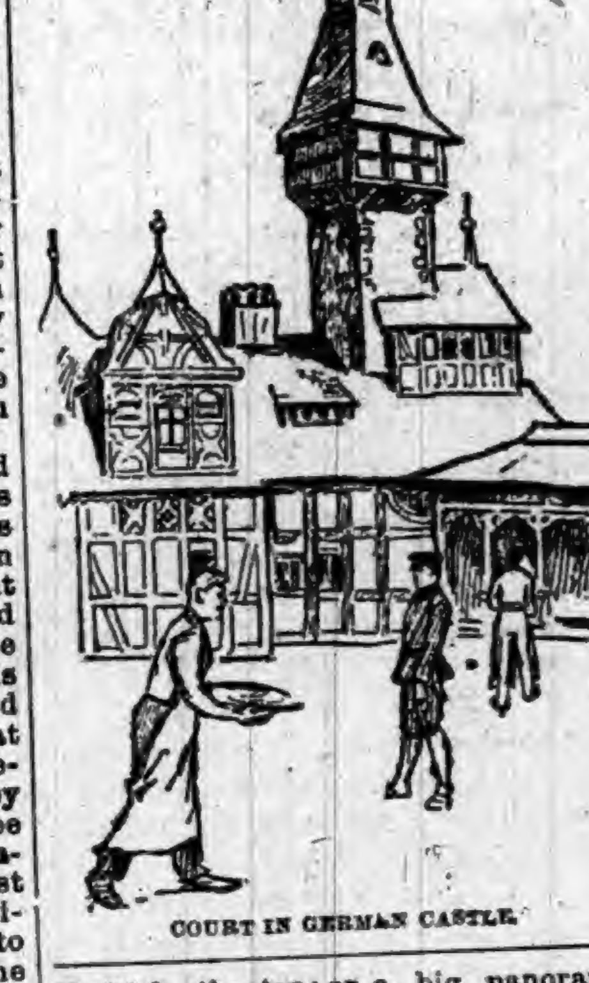
GLASS BLOWERS IN THE MIDWAY PLAISANCE.

Car fare (Illinois Central)	$ .20
Admission	.50
Lunch	.20
Total	$ .90

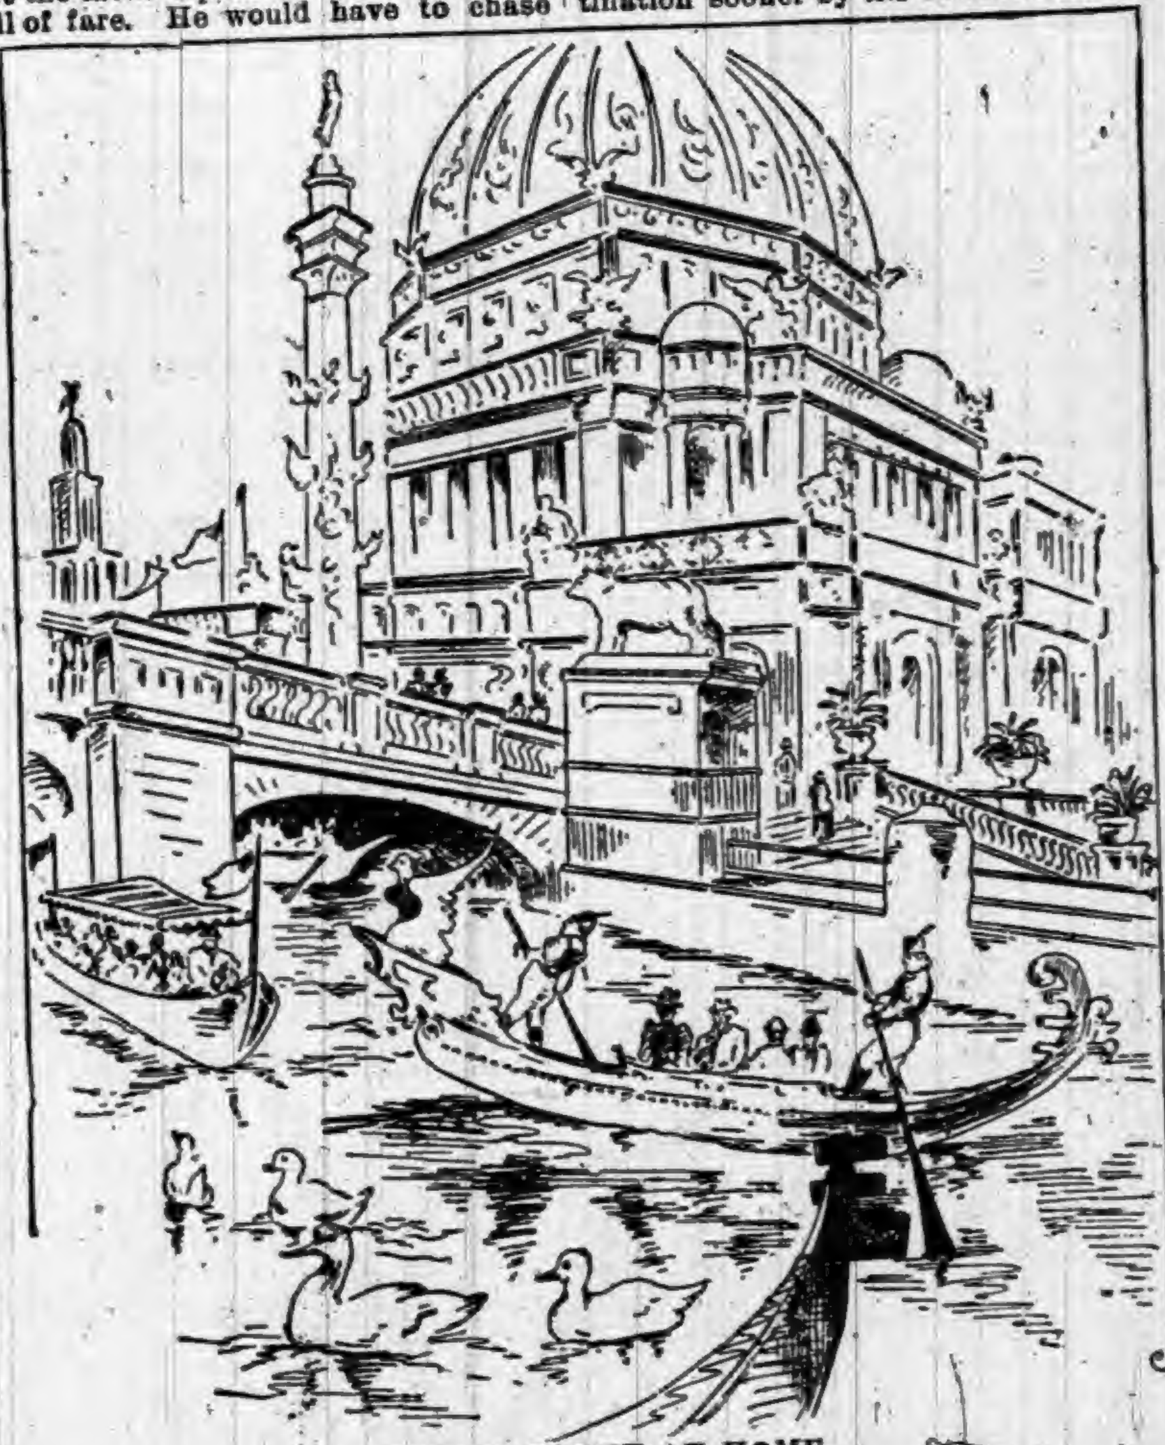
This is a bedrock programme, but hundreds of people who have visited the Fair have spent no more. The extras which afford the most satisfaction are cheap. For 10 cents the intramural road will carry a passenger the entire length of the ground and give him an elevated view of the buildings. One of the steam or electric launches will carry him around the lagoon system and bring him back to the starting place for 25 cents. Then it is a good thing to have a guide book. Outside the fence are sold some fairly good books at 10 cents each. The official guide is 25 cents. These three extras come on the first day at the Fair and assist the visitor in getting the lay of the ground and locating buildings. Added to the above table they would make:

Necessary expenses	$ .90
Elevated road	.10
Launch ride	.25
Guide book	.25
Total	$1.50

After these staples, so to speak, the visitor may plunge into luxuries to his heart's content. The lunch may be elaborated to a meat order with dessert and something to drink. This would cost 50 cents to 75 cents. In one day of ordinary sight-seeing, it is impossible to take in more than one or two of the smaller shows, such as the Esquimaux village, Hagenbeck's animals, Turkish theater or a big panorama. These cost 25 cents to 50 cents each. Any one who has some definite part of the grounds in view and does not care to ramble aimlessly can reach his destination sooner by the elevated road or a launch than with a rolling-chair and a boy.



COURT IN GERMAN CASTLE.



VENICE RIGHT AT HOME.

Taking a Liberal View.

The following would be the estimate of expenses of one who spends his money freely but without extravagance:

Car fare	$ .20
Admission	.50
Guide book	.25
Launch ride	.25
Lunch	.50
Side shows	.75
Total	$2.45

These expenses would naturally be reduced after the fifth or sixth day on the grounds, as the visitor would by that time be supplied with the necessary guide-books to the different buildings and would have seen all that he cared to see in the pay-shows along the plaisance. Instead of finding the Exposition a drain upon his finances he would be compelled to use some diligence to get rid of $2 a day, for his time and attention would be directed to the art galleries and other displays which are offered without money and without price.

Here is an exact copy of what one man spent in six days at the Fair, counting from the time he left his hotel until he returned in the evening.

Car fare	$1.10
Admissions	3.00
Launches and electric road	.70
Lunches	3.00
Admission to small shows	2.75
Guide-books	1.35
Small sundries	2.00
Total	$14.00

No Regard for Expenses.

It is pretty hard to make any estimate for the people who wish to purchase everything that suits their fancy and see the sights from beginning to end, regardless of the outlay. They would go in for rolling chairs, symphony concerts, and a luncheon of several courses. They would find opportunities to tip the attendants, buy flowers in the horticultural building, and gather knick-knacks at the foreign bazaars. In going to the Exposition they might prefer to swing down Michigan boulevard on a tally-ho beside a man in a plush hat, who toots a long horn. These visitors will keep no expense account. If they did the daily entries might be about as follows:

Tally-ho, round trip	$2.00
Rolling chair, all day	3.50
Luncheon	1.25
Plaisance shows	1.00
Gondola ride	.50
Tips and sundries	2.00
Total	$10.25

The great beauty about the big show at Jackson Park is that the man who spends 50 cents is bound to see as many sights and get as much out of his day as the pampered millionaire who spends $10.25. The concessioner has no hold on the landscapes and domes. The humble sandwich and nut-brown sinker stand ready to welcome the poor man who flees from fricandeau of veal at 85 cents. If a traveler came into Chicago, engaged the bridal chamber at the hotel and had a box at the theater every night he could figure out that living was high in this city. It's the same way at Jackson Park. People who crave luxuries are the only ones who will spend any large sums. The plain and unassuming folk from Peotone, Chebanse, and Indian Mound will carry a few bites of lunch in a paper box and drink water freely from the blue tanks, and see the Fair proper just as thoroughly as the spendthrift who will let go of a small fortune during his visit.

The above proves very conclusively the statement made in a previous letter that the weekly expenses of the visitor to the Columbian Exposition need not exceed $25.

THE United States have 43,000,000 sheep.

DR. BRIGGS A HERETIC.

SUCH IS THE VERDICT OF THE GENERAL ASSEMBLY.

After a Long and Exciting Session the Finding of the New York Presbytery Is Overruled—All Crops Reported Very Backward.

A Decisive Majority.

Despite his masterly defense and the heroic efforts of his friends, the enemies of Dr. Charles A. Briggs triumphed in the General Assembly of the Presbyterian Church at Washington, and the appeal from the verdict of the New York Presbytery acquitting him of the charge of heresy was sustained by a vote of 383 to 116. The Clerk announced that 499 men responded to their names on the final roll-call. Of these 116 voted not to sustain the appeal, 85 to sustain in part (which is equivalent, however, in the summing up to sustain), and 298 voted to sustain wholly, making the vote 383 to 116. Dr. Briggs was not present when the voting was taking place, as he had been excused by the Moderator, at his own request, from the morning session, giving as his reason the fact that he had become very weary from the long sessions.

Dr. Brown sat at the table and recorded the vote for his own purpose, while in the galleries, one of the most interested of the hundreds of people who crowded the church, sat Professor Smith, of Cincinnati, pencil and roll-call in hand. Thirty-four votes were taken, one for each specification, before the roll was called. All the specifications under the first, second, third and fifth grounds of the appeal were sustained. Two under the fourth ground were lost. These related to the charge that Dr. George Alexander, Rev. Mr. Arreghi, Dr. Henry M. Field of the Evangelist, President Hastings of Union Seminary and Dr. Henry Van Dyke made speeches at the Presbytery trial, taking the manifestations of prejudice. The other specification lost was that Professor Brown, Dr. Field, Dr. Hastings, Dr. Van Dyke and Dr. J. H. McIlvaine took part in the trial after manifestations of prejudice in the conduct of the case. Three or four of the specifications were sustained by apparently so close a vote that the commissioners were counted. The one relating to the directors, officers and professors of the seminary who had voted to acquit Dr. Briggs in the presbytery was sustained by a vote of 236 to 234.

The members of the New York synod voted almost solidly against sustaining the appeal, which was a vote for Dr. Briggs. One of the professor's able supporters, who did not wish to speak for publication, said that the present was only the beginning of the trouble.

UNITED PRESBYTERIANS.

Many of the Preachers May Not Attend the Fair.

The thirty-ninth general assembly of the United Presbyterian Church of North America, held at Monmouth, Ill., was dissolved Wednesday evening. Most of the delegates originally intended visiting the World's Fair before returning home, but the bar of the assembly deprived many. The special committee on young people's work reported 664 societies, 28,092 members, and contributions of $30,000. Xenia, Ohio, and Albany, Oregon, presented invitations for the next meeting of the general assembly. The latter place was chosen. The committee on missions will meet a week previous to the assembly at Portland, Oregon. A special committee was appointed to formulate plans of union with the Holland Christian Reform Church. The board of education committee reported having distributed aid to theological students aggregating $783. A resolution of the committee prevailed that in the future no aid be given beneficiaries unless they are absolute abstainers from tobacco. Appropriations aggregating $314,458 were voted for the various boards, including General Assembly expenses. The committee on reform submitted the following resolutions, which were adopted:

> We urge upon our people to break the bonds of partisanship and in the exercise of the elective franchise make the overthrow of the liquor traffic the foremost consideration; that a bureau of reform be established at Washington to influence national legislation; that Christians should patronize only such papers as are friendly to the Sabbath and Christian reform.

Statistics show eleven synods, sixty-two presbyteries, 805 ministers and 935 congregations; total contributions, $1,400,000.

ALL CROPS VERY BACKWARD.

Farm Work Has Proceeded as Well as Common in the Northwest.

Generally the week has been favorable to crops in the Atlantic coast and Gulf States, and the condition of cotton is reported to have been decidedly improved in the Carolinas, Georgia, Florida, and Texas. In the West and Northwest, however, while the weather has been favorable for the prosecution of farm work, it has been too cool for rapid advancement of vegetation and quick germination of seeds.

Special telegraphic reports show the following conditions:

Illinois—Rainfall excessive in southern and central portion, retarding planting; meadows and pastures good; wheat and rye heading; eight counties report cut worms and army worms in corn and meadows; much corn being replanted.

Indiana—Weather favorable to crops and farm work; plowing and corn planting nearly finished; in most counties wheat, oats, rye, and grass in good condition.

Michigan—Cool weather retarded crop growth considerably; grass making heavy growth; early potatoes, rye, and barley doing well; planting corn.

Wisconsin—All crops promise excellent yield except apples; corn and potato planting about finished; dairies and cheese factories in full operation.

Minnesota—Wheat and grass growing nicely; too cool for corn; corn planting progressing slowly; barley and flax seeding general.

Iowa—Weather favorable to grass and small grain, but too cool for quick germination; nominal growth of corn.

LOVE AND HIS SHADOW.

BY ROSE HAWTHORNE LATHROP.

CHAPTER III.

The next morning Prescott prepared to start for the village postoffice, as usual, to get his mail. He was just going to admonish Nina to keep within doors until he should have made a few inquiries which, it was to be hoped, might divulge that Grenfell had left the vicinity, when his wife peremptorily refused to have him drive over the lonely road without her.

"Good gracious, you don't expect me to stay at home, like a rabbit in a hole!" exclaimed Prescott.

"I only know that I consider it unsafe for you to go on so lonely a road, yet," she said.

"Well, I must snap my fingers at the fancy," replied Prescott. "Unless I sally forth, we can never know anything more about that extraordinary visitation of last evening. But I should like you to be a little cautious, yourself. Keep the lower doors and windows locked. If there is to be an interview between you and this mad young sculptor, I should prefer to be present."

"I hope I shall not have to meet him," she faltered.

"At all events we will not get frightened," Prescott cheerfully responded. "You remember we made up our minds that nothing should alarm us in this remote corner of loneliness, and we must not weaken in our resolution. There's the other pistol, on your entry table. An unpleasant thought, perhaps; but the Puritans who once lived around here went to church with their guns, which was a worse severity?" He gayly waved his hand, and drove off.

Nina complied with all he said, but her eyes and lips had grown, over night, very sad.

When Prescott came back from the village he brought a letter for his wife from Mrs. Minsing Bentley, who occasionally wrote city gossip, and sarcastic comments upon up-country vacuities.

By this mail she explained that she hoped her letter would reach Nina before Fleet Grenfell did so. She said that he was a cousin of hers, although she had never made anything of the relationship till of late, when he had leaped into world-wide fame with his "Joan of Arc." After arriving from abroad he had dropped in to see her; and he had caught sight of the large photograph of Nina (in the white opera cloak) looking so exactly like a statue. But this ecstacy was changed to evident agony upon his learning that Nina was married. It was all very queer to Mrs. Minsing Bentley that he should immediately express his intention of going to Flitter's Lodge. However, he had promised to try to persuade the Prescotts back to town for the holidays. Still, why on earth did Fleet "want to travel so far into the country side to see a girl (no matter how beautiful she might be) after she was dead—or rather, married—and gone?"

"So it was not a ghost!" muttered Prescott, stroking his chin, as his wife finished reading the letter to him. "But, on the other hand, no one has seen or heard anything, as far as I could make out by judicious inquiry, of a stranger in the village. I am tasting the difficulties," he added, laughing with an admiring glance, "of having espoused you, Marvel."

"When he comes again," she said, thoughtfully, "he will be more respectful; and I am sure we can persuade him into being rational; even friendly."

That evening a horse's canter was heard approaching from a long distance over the frost-hardened road. It ceased near the farmhouse; but no one asked admittance. A dark night, with fine snow just beginning to fall, was a barrier to Prescott's gaze as he looked out to see what he could see, and hoping to hear some retreating hoof-beats; though he was disappointed in this.

"He must be about here," the young husband confided to his wife, on withdrawing to the cheerful parlor.

"Perhaps it was only a peddler or some such wayfarer," she said. "If we did not hear the horse pass on, it may be that he went upon the turf."

"I give you my word, I can hardly think of anything else besides this man!" Prescott growled, in disgust.

Nina became pallid. But she brought out the chess-board, and their two young faces soon grew radiant over their eagerness to win, and yet not to let each other lose. They played until quite late, and before retiring stood over the sunset lights of their heart-fire, in the leisurely way of two creatures left well alone to love. A log fell apart with a faint crashing sound.

"Did you hear that?" suddenly exclaimed Nina.

"Yes; it was a distinct utterance, as the log broke to pieces, as if some one had cried, 'No!'"

"Beneath us?"

"Yes."

"Tom, we are growing horribly nervous!"

"I believe we are. It must have been imagination. Come, let us put it all aside, this instant and forever!"

Plump had crept into the cellar, while Miffin dozed with her back against the wall, having fallen accidentally asleep in the warm kitchen. There was a particular spot in the cellar, dark and unpromising as the place otherwise showed forth, which Plump loved. He had no fear of anything when he was on his way to this spot. His candle never flickered or trembled as he shaded it with one palm, while he penetrated the dark shadows of the cellar on those fortunate, unwitting nights when Miffin's eyes disappeared behind her black face drowsily. The old negro patted along, half smiling, picking his footsteps with eyes bent upon the ground. A fragrance smote his grotesque nostrils and he raised his glad gaze. Then he bent down in terror, as if he were burdened with a ton's weight upon his shoulders. Sitting upon a keg of wine was a young man who smiled, with raised eyebrows, and quaffed a deep draught from the contents of a bottle of old port, which he had taken off of an adjacent shelf, and held, empty, over his knee. He drank from a mug with Plump had supposed was undiscoverably hidden in a cranny of the cellar wall.

"Massa! massa!" mumbled Plump, "we got burglars, shu' 'nuff!"

"Don't call your 'massa,'" the apparition retorted, in a low, penetrating voice. "I'm only one of the devils. If you let me alone, I will not throttle you."

The negro began to retreat backward.

"Stop that," said the youth.

"Massa will as' you to come upstairs," Plump averred, with a nauseating excess of manner and sweetness, still making his escape in a surreptitious way. "I tell massa a nice young trabbler popped in—so very companionable——"

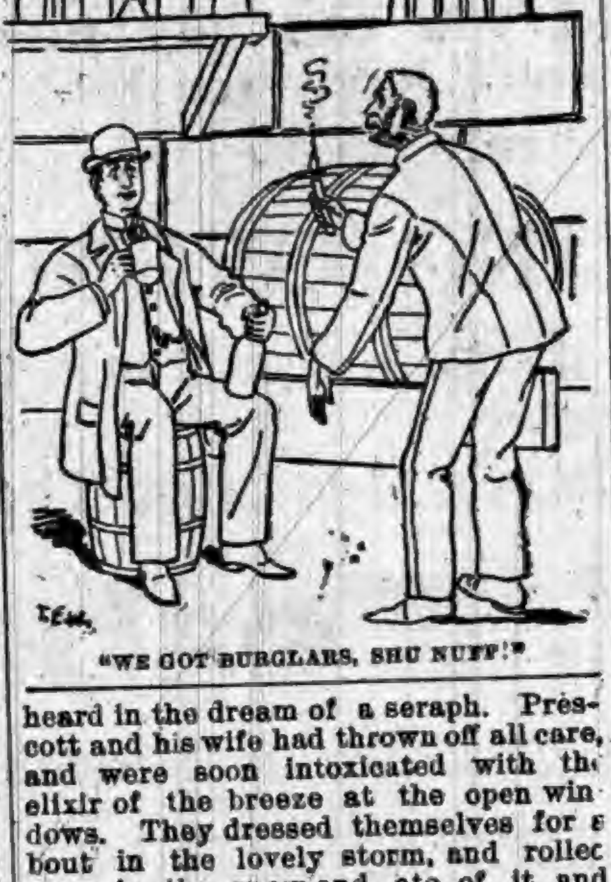
"No!" the other cried, slipping from the keg and springing upon Plump. "If you say a word," he went on, in a clear whisper, "I will kill every one of you! I should like nothing better, and am only sitting here for a quiet drink, out of the kindness of my heart."

"I won' say a word, young gemman; I won' tell, I won' tell!"

"Then go. I keep my promises, and you shall keep this one of yours, since it is made to me." The stranger fixed his eyes upon the negro's rolling orbs, and caught them with a fierce, scornful glance.

Plump gave up all volition to the young man who stood over him. He doted on the lordly fellow's power of will, although he believed his own life hung on a turn of the vise-like hand.

The next day was one of deepest snowing. The world was snow up to a mile overhead. All voices of men and sounds of all sorts—there happened to be more passing than was customary—seemed to ride in a closely walled room; but what a room! The atmosphere was as stimulating as youth itself, and as free from poison as the breath of angels. The rustling of the falling snow shivered like aspen leaves heard in the dream of a seraph. Prescott and his wife had thrown off all care, and were soon intoxicated with the elixir of the breeze at the open windows. They dressed themselves for a bout in the lovely storm, and rolled over in the snow and ate of it, and hugged it to their bosoms and finally sat enthroned in it while Prescott gave some experiences of his trip to Russia. It was as pure and beautiful to examine as our dearest illusions. The cheeks of the young lovers became rosy with the rose that shines in vapor, which is so clear and light. Any one, whoever it was, would have been nettled by the perfect bliss which this couple drank in so impetuously without a thought or a look for a third person.



"WE GOT BURGLARS, SHU NUFF!"

At evening the storm ceased. The stars flickered and gazed in the heavens. The moon came up nobly and far-seeing, like a saint's soul. The young people leaned on their window-sill and looked around and up.

Slowly a dark figure moved toward their old house, along a lane ending in the main-road before their door; stopping every moment or two, and then moving nearer, sadly, then stopping. What eloquence there was in the slow plunging over the uneven, snowy round of the broad shoulders, and in the slight upward tilt of the head, as if hopelessly looking.

"Who is it?" Prescott said, wondering, but carelessly. His wife's hand pressed his shoulder, and she murmured: "Hush-sh! The snow carries voices a long way!"

"I will go and speak to him" Prescott answered, quickly understanding that Nina thought it was Grenfell. He drew himself back into the room.

"Oh, no!"

"My dear," the young husband declared, "something must be done."

"Then I will go, too, and speak with him," Nina answered. "I will not let you go without me."

"It might be very well for you to go," admitted Prescott, "He will have seen you, for one thing, and nothing will be left for him to do."

In a few moments they ran out into the keen, fine air.

They walked up and down and about, but saw no one.

"Are you sure it was he?" asked Prescott.

"I know it was he," Nina replied, very sadly. That night she wept floods of tears.

CHAPTER IV.

At breakfast her husband grumbled at her pale cheeks, for he was greatly worried.

"We must leave this place at once," he concluded. "That wretched Grenfell is probably safe in New York again by this time. But we shall fancy he is in the vicinity for weeks, and guess him to be at the bottom of every footfall and shadow. Let us good-naturedly give up our hobby of getting rich by solitude and go away."

Nina held her head proudly, and her lips looked stern.

"I could not bear to be driven away or otherwise controlled by that man," she angrily cried.

"But I don't believe he is here. It is I who shall control you, believe me."

"Well, Tom, don't ask me to go away. We are happy here. We can forget Grenfell. But in town all my old acquaintances would tell me I could not live on our income, nor in humble quarters, nor expect them to invite us to grand dinner parties; and yet they would not let us hide in peace. It will be much better next year, and we shall tell fine things of a Massachusetts winter and our occupations in it."

"It is delicious, this leisurely quiet," sighed Prescott.

There was a step upon the piazza beside the breakfast-room; another, another, and a man looked in upon them. It was Grenfell.

He stood defiantly, with his hands in his pockets. He had assumed a picturesque position, with that vivid sense of the tragic and the romantic which makes up the life of some young persons of intense individuality, who are conscious every moment of their good looks, their exactions from life, but never of their conscience.

"Impertinent ass!" cried Prescott, starting to his feet.

Grenfell pulled off his soft felt hat and bowed to Nina, with ever so much reproach.

Nina essayed to rise, but fell back in a faint.

Prescott had at that instant raised the window, and Grenfell rapidly thrust himself over the sill and sprang to Nina's side, and lifted her up as she was falling to the floor. Her husband sprinkled water on her face. How white he was himself to see her so crushed by the presence of this man.

"She must not see you," he said to Grenfell, in a sad, cold voice.

"Do you think it would harm her?" the other answered, with deep, sweet tones.

Nina revived and looked into Grenfell's eyes as he knelt beside her chair with his hands on her arm supportingly. In a moment she was herself.

"It is the first time I ever fainted, and it was not much!" she said, with a smile and a pleasant posture of her head. "I hardly knew whether you were a vision or not, Mr. Grenfell. Oh, I am quite strong again, Tom, thank you, dearest," she added, with a loving glance as he held a glass of water for her to drink.

Grenfel stood up before the window and looked at her, seeming a dark portent. It was plain that Nina tried to steady her tones as she went on to say: "Mr. Grenfell, this is Mr. Prescott, my husband. Tom, Mr. Grenfell must be seated and break bread with us for good-fellowship.

The young man still stared at her, motionless. He was a specimen of flawless masculine beauty, with the individuality of face which gives satisfaction. But Nina only wondered that his aspect and personality had ever at all enthralled her. Her really penetrating study of faces as an artist of no small talent had taught her the types which have strength of soul, and those which have only strength of nature; and what had once struck her as vital merit now appeared to be the coarse husks enwrapping a divine vitality, which in many young people, as in Grenfell, is undeveloped. But how subtly this young genius veiled his ordinary characteristics by the graces of earnestness! How elaborate his pageantry of materiality was, so that you might have imagined a glance of his eye was worth a thousand years of spiritual death!

"I was to be your husband," said Grenfell.

"I never assured you of it; I always denied it," Nina quietly replied. "Yet I admit that I thought it possible. Come, Fleet Grenfell; sit down. I have something to say to you." She motioned him to a chair with dignity and unflinching gaze. "It is very true that I admired many things in you, and I liked you better than anyone else. But I had not then met my husband. If you knew him at all well, you would not wonder that I chose him in preference to you."

Grenfell's lips parted in suffering at this blow, and he glanced fiercely at Prescott, whose face was suddenly lighted by reassurance.

"You are false, of course," the young sculptor muttered, and proceeded in a louder but hoarser tone: "A beautiful girl who does not use her power fears to make herself a very commonplace woman. Do I not know, through you, how all that is?"

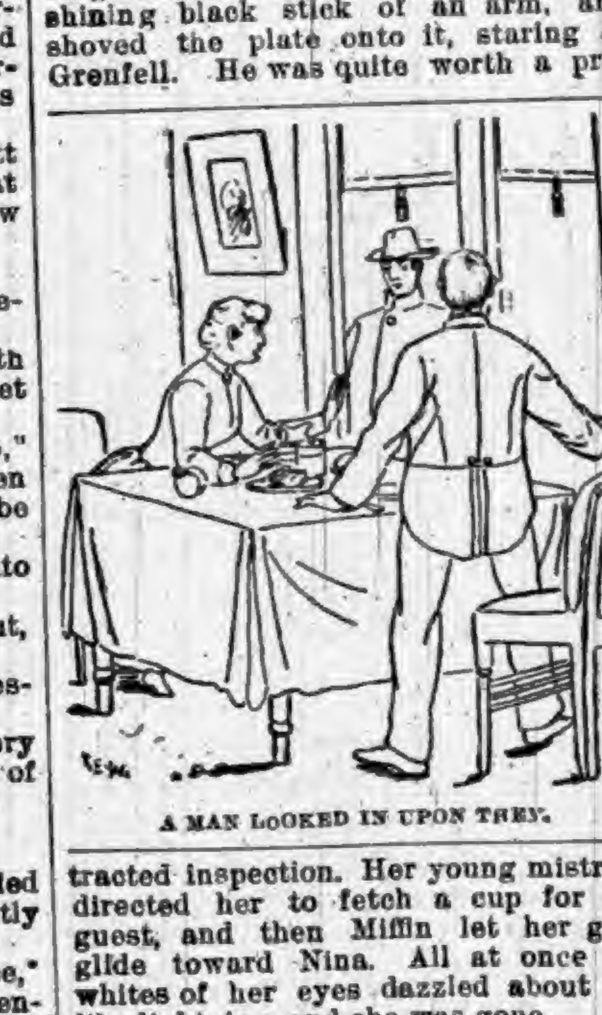
"Mr. Grenfell," interposed Prescott, "I am willing to have another madcap wrestle with you, but we had better leave my wife's presence for that, and you had better hold your tongue."

"I shall be the one to say the last word you will hear," Grenfell coolly replied.

"Oh, no, you won't," Nina said. She started up and took one of Grenfell's hands in both of hers, and commanded: "Be decent and kind."

If she had not been sincere herself she could have done nothing with him. His unleashed animal nature was held in check by her spiritual nature, so vastly superior. Grenfell was surprised that he did not clasp her in his arms, but he could not have done it. A woman knows how to disenchant a fervor she does not wish to excite. By her eyes he could see that she was not thinking wholly of him. He dreaded their calm, and he hated it, for it was not of to-day. He seated himself at the table.

The door opened, and Miffin came in, behind a plate of hoe-cake. She was evidently galvanized at the unexpected sight of the stranger, and went through various feats of motion without dropping any of the contents of the plate; and not a sound escaped her mammoth lips, it seemed as if her eyes would do the shouting. But she came of ancestors who had not murmured under the lash. She made a grotesque long reach for the table with her shining black stick of an arm, and shoved the plate onto it, staring at Grenfell. He was quite worth a protracted inspection. Her young mistress directed her to fetch a cup for the guest, and then Miffin let her gaze glide toward Nina. All at once the whites of her eyes dazzled about her like lightning and she was gone.



A MAN LOOKED IN UPON THEM.

"Miffin is one of our amusements," Nina said. "Tom is giving you some of our Southern dish of chicken. Tom is a Southerner, although we are living just now in a mimic Iceland."

"Yes, an Iceland," Grenfell echoed, leaning back in his chair as lightly as if he might spring to the window in the next breath.

Still, Nina's face wore the look of one who has become convinced of something higher and better and stronger than humanity. This look was detestable to his animal selfishness. If it would only melt into the enthralling, girlish subtlety again! It let the cold air of endless reaches of sacrifice in upon his tender desires. If he had kissed her hand, or even her lips, she would have been uninterested. But she looked profoundly content. He was so entirely outside her needs that she regarded his love as a disease of the soul! Above all, the girl whom he had adored he was beginning to venerate. He loathed the cold wave that was curling over him, the change that was being wrought in him. Let him stay, he silently begged of her spirit, in the warmer lights of a lower horizon, where the colors were the ruby of hope and the gold of gain.

He found that she was handing him a cup of fragrant coffee and smiling, both gently and commandingly, into his eyes. He roused himself, took the cup in an unsteady hand and set it down at random. Revolt touched a flaming spark to his brain and he was lost.

"It must seem unaccountable to you," he said, "that I am not able to find sufficient delight in my art to enable me to bear the loss of a woman of mere perishable flesh. I know how it usually is with a great artist; and I do love my art as I love myself, as I love this right hand of genius. And have I not that perfect marble portrait of you, which I made when you thought of me as a friend, Nina," he went on, smiling gently into her face, "which is a bit of art enough to take the love of any man. It is constantly before my eyes, but I am not satisfied." He drew a revolver from his pocket and held it on one knee. Nina sprang up, her husband rose calmly. Grenfell remained sitting, studying first one and then the other of these young people who were so good to the sight. "A dozen times in my wanderings I have spared the lives of thieves and cut-throats, at some risk of my own safety. Surely I may kill a man at my choice who has stolen all I cared for."

Nina looked at Prescott, wondering that he did not pull out his pistol, which he was in the habit of carrying about him. He answered the message of her eyes by directing his glance to the mantel shelf behind her, and she realized that he must have laid his pistol there by accident. If she handed it to him, if he stepped toward the mantel himself to take it, the delay would be too great, and would not Grenfell at once fire? Prescott's face was resigned. He saw the deadlock, and hoped for no rescue.

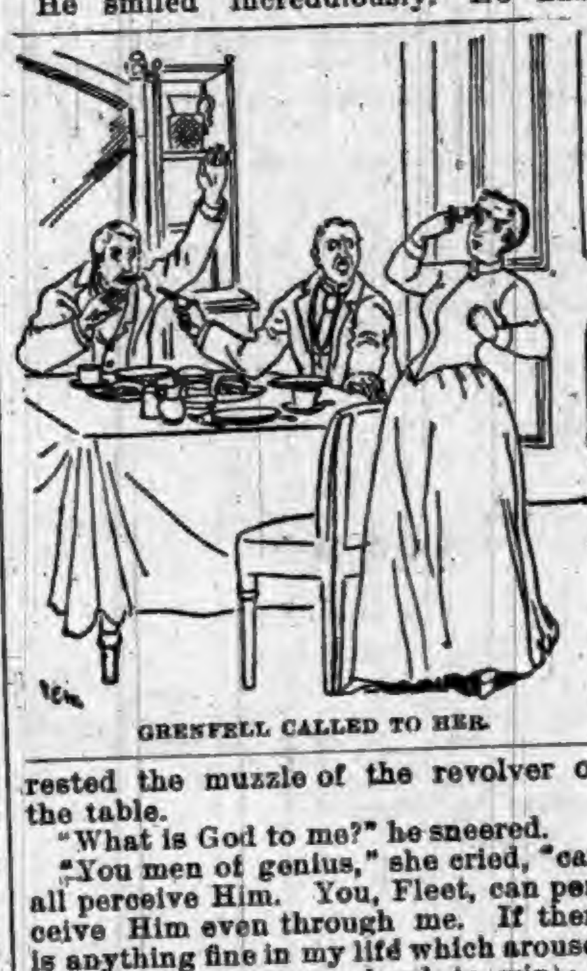
"I have kept myself very close while coming here and haunting your precincts," Glenfell proceeded. "No one will trace me. The Bentleys are the only persons who know I came, and they are not the people to tell that they have a Robin Hood in their family. Moreover, I am not afraid to kill." He rose and leveled the revolver at Prescott, who looked at him with noble courage.

Nina sprang to the mantel like a bird for swiftness, and caught up the pistol which lay there, and held it to her temple.

Grenfell called to her, aghast, in incoherent words of appeal and love, and her husband in a moment was at her side, to seize the weapon from her hand. But she had lowered it of her own accord, and stepped forward.

"My friend," she said to Grenfell, "the right hand of genius has never yet committed murder." He started, in spite of himself. She stepped still nearer to him. "For art is a way to God!"

He smiled incredulously. He had rested the muzzle of the revolver on the table.



GRENFELL CALLED TO HER.

"What is God to me?" he sneered.

"You men of genius," she cried, "can all perceive Him. You, Fleet, can perceive Him even through me. If there is anything fine in my life which arouses your admiration (so hard to win); if there is in my character anything blameless which has honestly touched your devotion, I owe it to God! Then is He not our friend?" She spoke tenderly, but with emphasis. "You, who are so keen to adore creative power,—are you insensible to a power which is creative genius? You have overlooked the one who chose you from millions of your countrymen to do art the highest honor. You have overlooked the Supreme Artist!"

A quieter light came into Grenfell's eyes, but he answered again:

"Oh, Nina, what is your God to me?"

"Your guardian," she said. She laid the pistol (Prescott stood near her to intercept any second attempt at suicide) upon the table before Grenfell. "You saw how easily I could have destroyed myself, and made the crime you contemplated a useless one. But that would have been beneath me, and my action was only intended to stop that of yours. What I really wished to do a moment ago, Fleet Grenfell, was to shoot you dead in my husband's defense. Each movement that I was eager to make was before me like a picture, and my aim would have been true. God forbade it."

"What? me! you would have killed me?" he cried, shuddering. Suddenly he flashed a look at her. "It was love, not the power of God——" he could not go on. He saw that she had disarmed herself; that she and Prescott had given up all thought of violent resistance. In whom did she trust?

He turned away from them both, as if to be alone in his agony. But the light which blesses had shone full upon him. He turned back, not looking up.

"Oh, man," he said to Prescott, "can she lead you to forgive a wretch like me?"

A hand, strong but kind, grasped his. In the stillness of the glance which the two men exchanged there came through the open window and the sunshine, from a long forgotten room shaded by the elm, a strain from an Æolian harp.

[THE END.]

Star Stones.

The asterias or star stones are among the most wonderful productions of the mineral kingdom. They are conundrums, the star sapphire being a grayish blue, the star ruby bright red, the star topaz a straw yellow. The star appearance in the stone is caused, according to some mineralogists, by a foreign substance in the gem; others say it is due to peculiarities of crystallization. Whatever it may be advantage is taken of it by the lapidary, who cuts the stone in the shape of a dome, beginning at the center of the star and making the points radiate in the circumference. The stone has six points, and as the light plays on the surface of the stone the bright lines of the star change with the position of the gem, and produce a singularly beautiful effect.

These stones are very valuable, the best specimens being, it is said, worth as much as diamonds of the same weight. Burton, the great Oriental traveler, had a star sapphire, which he always carried on his person; and in the heart of Arabia, or in the deserts of Africa, the sight of this wonderful gem always inspired a respect that was akin to reverence. The wild Arabs and negroes would gaze at the stone, then at its possessor, and, concluding he had a talisman of unexampled power, would render him all possible assistance for fear of incurring his vengeance.

Terrible Ammunition.

A strange war story comes from New Zealand. Some years ago Sir John Gorst lived in Waikato, and edited the Maori newspaper, Te Hakioi. The paper was printed and published near the scene of some of the hottest fighting of the war then raging.

During the struggle the Maoris ran short of ammunition, and having no ball for their fourteen-pound guns they loaded them with shop weights, confiscated from neighboring shopkeepers. This source of supply was soon exhausted.

Then a raid was made upon the Hakioi office, and their guns were charged with type and stereo blocks. This new ammunition, so the story goes, proved very effective.

One of the white invaders was injured by a patent medicine advertisement, another was invalided by a "church bazar announcement," a third lost a leg through a solid leader on the land bill, and Sir John, who had taken refuge with the British troops, had a narrow escape from being hit with one of his own poems.

MERCHANT—"This style of hat will make your husband's face look very wide." Wife—"That's why I am getting it; his face always looks so awfully long after Christmas."—Chicago Inter Ocean.

NEW HAVEN would have been without bread for some days past, owing to a strike of her bakers, had not men from other cities been obtained to supply her kneads.—Philadelphia Ledger.

AT THE THEATER.—Hicks—"What do you think of Strideabout's performance? He tells me he committed his part in half a day." Wicks—"H'm! Don't you think he ought to be committed himself?"

HE—"Jerusalem! What made you offer prizes? They'll cost a fortune." She—"Pshaw, we don't have to get any; they were to be given to the woman who didn't ask what's trumps."—Chicago Inter Ocean.

SOLICITOUS FRIEND—"If you are determined in your intention to go upon the stage, I hope it is at least with a high aim." Mrs. De Voors—"Don't worry about that. I can kick three feet over my head and not half try."

MISS FUZZIE—"I want to break my engagement with Mr. Sappie, but I don't know how to do it without driving the poor fellow to suicide." Little Brother—"Why don't you let him see you in curl-papers?"—Good News.

DOCTOR—"Well, my fine little fellow, you have got quite well again! I was sure that the pills I left for you would cure you. How did you take them, in water or in cake?" "Oh, I used them in my pop-gun."—Tit-Bits.

TEACHER—What is the golden text? Dick Hicks—Is the servant greater than his master? Teacher—How is the question answered? Dick Hicks—In our house it is never raised.—Browning, King & Co.'s Monthly.

"PRAY," inquired one minister of another, "seeing so many ladies attend your church, why do you invariably address your congregation as 'dear brethren?'" "Oh, the reason is easily given," he replied, "the brethren embrace the sisters."—Tit-Bits.

STOREKEEPER—You won't suit me if you're not married. Young man—Why do you prefer your clerks to be married? Storekeeper—Because I find the married ones are never in such a rush to close up at night and leave me as the single ones are.—Brooklyn Life.

LITTLE JOHNNY—Mrs. Talkemdown paid a big compliment to me to-day. Mother—Did she, really? Well, there's no denying that woman has sense. What did she say? Little Johnny—She said she didn't see how you came to have such a nice little boy as I am.—Good News.

THE printing-press on which Benjamin Franklin worked as a journeyman printer in 1725 was very little improved until 1817, when George Clymex, of Philadelphia, invented the "Columbian" press. It was the first important improvement. In 1829 Samuel Rust invented the "Washington" press, which superseded others for a while. With that machine a good workman could turn off 2,000 sheets a day. It was a good day's work when Franklin's old press gave 250 impressions.

REMARKABLE CURES OF AUBURN AND VICINITY

For the past four years the afflicted have been flocking in great numbers to see him, and they always return filled with the greatest enthusiasm, and the stories they tell of his remarkable diagnose and wonderful cures border on that of the miraculous. One says, "I went there on crutches and came away without them." Others say they had been sick and suffered for years, and they were cured. To see him and to be treated by him means health.

He asks no questions but gives a full history of each case as soon as he sees the patient, telling better how a person feels than they can tell it themselves. His knowledge seems perfect and his medicines are specific. They never fail. The work he accomplishes is truly astonishing.

There is no need to live in constant misery. It cost nothing to see him. The fullest examinations are free. A cure can be had for the mere cost of the medicine. He is the sick man's friend and no one is turned away unaided.

Among the others cured in this vicinity are Mrs. David Hough of Auburn Junction, who has for many years suffered from a complication of diseases. Also Mrs. F. E. Rhodes of Spencerville cured of catarrh, throat and lung trouble. Now says she feels as well as ever. She will advise others to go to the Doctor and be cured.

Miss Irene Williams cured of chronic cough and lung disease.

Miss McMillen cured of blood and skin disease of 14 years standing.

Miss L. M. cured of female weakness after exhausting all medical aid.

A tape worm removed from a prominent lady on Main street after doctoring several months for stomach trouble.

MORE CASES REPORTED CURED.

Bright's Disease of the Kidneys, 2; Heart Disease, 2; Rheumatism, 4; Catarrh and Bronchitis, 7; Consumption, 2; Skin Diseases, Sore Limbs and Ulcers, 9; Female diseases, 11; Dropsy of the Heart and Blood diseases, 3; Mrs. W. R. Crow cured of a sore limb of long standing; Samuel Kitchen cured of a skin disease of 18 years standing, after being doctored by several of the eminent physicians; Mrs. S. A. Dangler cured of heart disease and dropsy, given up to die; Samuel Young cured of total deafness; Mrs. Jane Armstrong cured of total blindness; Miss Katie Hague cured of cancer of the stomach; Miss Ella Smith cured of spinal disease. Mr. Samuel Clark cured of deafness in both ears of 20 years standing after taking three months' treatment. He says he can actually hear a watch tick in both ears. He is an old and respected citizen of Leipsic, Ohio. Over 50 cases reported cured in the last month. Dr. Townsend will not treat a patient under treatment by any other physician, and will not take a case only as given up by other doctors. His specialty is in chronic diseases of all kinds only. Consultation free. He will not treat any except there is a possibility of a cure, and he will so inform you. Those failing to see the Doctor can address him care Box 1408, Cincinnati, Ohio.

Mrs. W. R. Leedom says after years of suffering with cancer, she is perfectly well.

Mr. W. J. Roney says he is permanently cured of heart disease.

Mrs. W. H. Thompkins says she is permanently cured of cancer, after being a great sufferer, and having a sister die with one.

A bad case of catarrh cured for Mr. W. S. Wilcox, where he had lost his sense of smell and become partially deaf.

Jonas Walstrum cured of skin and blood diseases, after being pronounced incurable.

Keep out the Rain.

Wood's Iron Storm Threshold will do it and never fail. No matter how much your doors are exposed, or how hard the wind blows, the rain can't get in and ruin your carpet or rot your floor. It is a single piece of iron, and therefore there is nothing to get out of order or be affected by the weather. It will last a lifetime, in fact the time of several lives, for it won't even wear out. It is cheaper than any other kind, for it will outlast a dozen wooden ones, and does not cost much more. It pays its expense every year. Just the thing for stores, banks, public buildings and dwellings of all kinds. Get one for each outside door. W. L. Meese of Auburn, keeps them and will be glad to sell you one or more.

Board of Education.

The Board decided to have all the county schools begin Sept. 4, except those in Stafford where they have a shorter term than the others. They also have small schools, and so many of the pupils are small, that it was thought best to let the Stafford schools take their own time. The matter of purchasing school supples is left with a permanent committee. Then when a trustee needs any supplies, he lays the matter before the chairman of this committee, G. O. Denison of Grant, who corresponds with houses that furnish school supplies to see where best goods and best prices can be had. Then all the trustees who need supplies are called to meet the committee, when all purchases are made at one time, and thus, better prices and better satisfaction generally. Thus, the trustees are in duty bound to buy their supplies under this arrangement, and no doubt much money will be saved. It was also, the opinion of the trustees that teachers' wages should be graded according to some definite plan, say the grade of license, success in teaching and for such reasons, but no certain plan was adopted. It was decided to engage next year's teachers at once, so that all will likely be engaged before the time of the county institute which will be held in Auburn, Sept. 21. There was much other matter of interest, that came before the meeting, and the trustees go to their work with clearer plans and renewed interest.

SURVEYOR'S NOTICE.

Notice is hereby given that C. E. van Auken, county surveyor in and for DeKalb County, State of Indiana, or his legally constituted deputy, will proceed at my request to survey and establish the lines and corners in and adjoining the West half of the South west quarter, Section twenty-three (23) Township thirty-four (34) north, Range fourteen (14) east, DeKalb County and State of Indiana, and that he will meet all parties interested in said survey at the northwest corner of said west half on the 29th day of June, 1893, at 1 o'clock p. m.

NEW pension boards are to be solidly democratic, just as Harrison had them solidly republican. It is a case of tit for tat. Cleveland's first administration had each board made up of two democrats and one republican, but no one ever gave him any credit for this spirit of fair play.

SEVERAL young men danced 17½ hours without stopping one day last week. This was in Denver, Colo. Why not let the fools dance till they died and be rid of them?

JUDGE OLDS of the supreme bench has resigned, so he can go into a big law practice waiting for him at Chicago. The Governor will have to appoint a man in his place but may wait awhile to see where he can do best. Among the candidates prominently mentioned for the place, are Judge Lowry, T. E. Ellison and Judge Hench of Ft. Wayne; T. R. Marshall of Columbia City; G. A. Henry of Grant county; J. R. France of Jay county: besides several who are too modest to make their names public.

THE great city of New York, with a population equal to two-thirds of that of the great state of Indiana, is beginning to agitate the matter of sprinkling her streets so as to stop the dust that seems to annoy its people. They must have heard how the fine little town of Auburn Indiana, has been sprinkling her streets, with good results, for many years. Good examples are seldom wasted. Auburn sends greeting to New York, and words of encouragement. Go in, Father Knickerbocker, and may your dust clouds grow less.

Court.

The indictment brought against Revett of Butler, by the grand jury last week, resulted in his being put under bonds to appear at next term of court, which is in October. It will be remembered that he is the constable sent out to arrest Blackwell at the time the latter was killed. Of course, people take sides on the question as to whether Revett was justified in shooting Blackwell, some believing that he was and others that he was not. Whether a costly trial will make this any clearer, we cannot say.

There was an assault and battery case against Henry Sollenberger that resulted in a fine of $1. The foreclosure case of Sarah E. McEnterfer vs Jacob Zeigler was decided in her favor. The First National Bank was given a judgment of $62.50 against J. M. Owens. The Noble county Bank got judgment against C. J. and G. W. Kirkpatrick for $69.55. Smith & Madden vs John Rosenberry, note, judgment for $82.27. The case of Munn vs Munn came up this week. They had been divorced some time and she had been given custody of the children. He now came into court asking that the custody be transferred to him. This was refused, but changes in the original decree were made, as to his opportunities to visit the children, which will likely be more satisfactory to him. The case of Firestone vs Firestone was a very interesting one, and had its pathetic as well as its financial side of view. Old Mrs. Firestone, widow of the late George Firestone, of Franklin township, his second wife, had a life estate in the farm of 200 or 300 acres, and after Mr. Firestone's death, as noted in the COURIER a few years ago, she removed to Michigan. Before going, she deeded to S. K. Firestone, as she claims, a tenth of her interest in the farm. In her new home she soon came to need some means to live on. She became quite dependent and came near having to be cared for by the public. All this time she could get no help from home, though she wrote often. On making a visit back here at one time, it appears that S. K. Firestone had told her he had lost the deed she had given him and he wanted another. She readily signed a new deed, and this, it appears, was so worded as to convey to him her entire interest in the farm, instead of one-tenth as she supposed. The trial was to decide this matter, she claiming she still had her nine-tenths of her life estate in the farm, and he claiming that she had deeded all to him. The case went to the jury Tuesday and that evening they brought in a sealed verdict. Next morning, when court was called, the verdict was read, and it gave her property or nine-tenths of it back to her. She burst into tears, for it was in effect to bring her from the poor house to a comfortable competence. Later on, she sent a letter of thanks to Judge McClellan, her counsel, for the earnest work he had done for her in her time of need.

PLAIN TRUTHS, WELL PUT.

An Auburn Man Dusts the Coat of the Fellow who Claims to Press the Button for McNagny.

It has always appeared to us as not a little curious that those who are not possessed of surprisingly brilliant minds devote the principal portion of their valuable time in lauding their own genius and announcing to the world how overjoyed they are that God has not made them like other men.

In this category a candid minded person will not hesitate to place that splendid educator who is known to the world under the insignificant title of editor of the Garrett Clipper. Of course, no one will have the hardihood to assert, after having read that gentleman's exalted opinion of himself, that he should be denied admission into the sacred circle, within whose mystic bond, the benefactors of the human race assemble to hold their conclave. The only wonder that presents itself to the thoughtful and inquiring mind is, how mankind ever rose from barbarism without the assistance of the white light of his searching intellect. We have no doubt that if all the benefactors, martyrs, heroes and champions of human freedom and enlightened thought, whose names form bright beacons on the hilltops of the centuries, could arise from the honored tombs where their ashes repose, they would lament the sad fate which denied them the privilege of communing with that fountain of universal knowledge now known to the wondering world as the editor of the Garrett Clipper.

It is too bad to have a man possessed of such splendid abilities waste his time in telling an ordinary congressman the awful ruin that will sweep over the fair face of the new world if he fails to appoint a certain patriot in the person of one Brandon postmaster of the village of Auburn. He ought to go over to Europe and tell Gladstone how to pass the Home Rule bill, that is to give Ireland a parliament, or to Germany and negotiate a treaty of peace and amity between Emperor William and Prince Bismarck. If he would only do so, the next Reichstag might pass the Emperor's Army bill, and the old world would be rescued from a devastating and destructive war with all its attending horrors.

He might also do more for humanity if he would go to Honolulu and instruct minister Blount how to perform the delicate duties of that extremely difficult station and thereby win the undying gratitude of the people who inhabit the islands of the sunset seas. Or, he might go to New York and enlighten Ward McAllister as to the strict rules of court etiquette in Europe, so that the cultured gentleman who gave to mankind that great monument of genius, "Society as I have Found It," would know how to hold a fan when he meets the Spanish Princess Eulalie at the World's Fair during the coming summer.

But to fritter away the golden moments reserved to such stupendous minds as his, to dabble in a small political squabble to save an Indiana congressman from being turned down by a large portion of his party, is really inexplicable and can only be accounted for on the hypothesis that "there are more things in heaven and earth than McNagny's philosophy."

The Post is Wrong.

The Columbia City Post denies what we have said about McNagny's not having consulted the democrats of Auburn. We repeat the assertion however, and suggest, that as we are on the ground, and the Post is not, we probably know more clearly the facts. If we have done McNagny injustice, he can have space in the COURIER to publish the names of the Auburn democrats he met here on his last visit. Can anything be more fair? So we repeat that Auburn's postoffice was settled by outsiders. Not half a dozen men in Auburn were consulted. He brought Jim Robinson from Ft. Wayne to help him settle Auburn's postoffice; the foul mouthed Clipper gang now say they did the whole thing, so that we once more repeat, that if it suits Columbia City, Ft. Wayne, Garrett and other outside parties, Auburn may as well be quiet. She has had nothing to say in the selection of her postmaster.

Notice.

A BOYCOTT OF WESTERN INTERESTS!

Have you heard the latest—how the New York Goldbugs propose to boycott Western interests?

A leading New York paper comes boldly forth in a double-headed editorial and announces that at the next session of Congress the President will hurl into it a message devoted to one theme—the abolition of the Sherman law. So that

There shall not be another ounce of Silver bought or coined.

Will the hardy, intelligent citizen of the West feel the fangs of the goldbug octopus?

While awaiting an answer to this question, we desire to call your attention to what Silver will buy at the Boston Popular Outfitting Establishment. $10 buys a business suit worth $12 to $14, either single or double breasted, of good material, which lasts well and gives you a dressy appearance during business hours.

We don't know what it is to sell common clothing, and these suits have a genuine air of upper-ten-dom to them.

Examine carefully our bargain offerings. Criticise them accurately. Intelligent criticism is our best salesman.

His Sixth Election.

Our justly popular county superintendent of schools, C. M. Merica, received that office at the hands of the township trustees on Monday for the sixth consecutive time.

At 10 a. m. the meeting was called to order by deputy-auditor Frank Borst, who acted as president, Auditor Coffinberry also being present; J. A. Barns was made secretary. Mr. Borst announced the object of the meeting, to be the election of a county superintendent for two years. The secretary called the roll and the trustees responded, the names of trustees being as follows; Jackson, J. J. Walter; Stafford, Joseph Wilson; Concord, B. A. Woodcox; Butler, W. H. Fair; Richland, M. E. Reynolds; Keyser, Fred Schulthees; Fairfield, R. H. Sherlock; Franklin, Wm. Whetsel; Troy, W. J. Morgan; Smithfield, James O. Blake; Union, R. S. S. Reed; Wilmington, H. J. Crooks; Newville, Leslie Strong; Grant, did not respond, Mr. Dennison being absent, though he came soon after. H. J. Crooks, of Wilmington announced the name of C. M. Merica. There being no other name announced, Mr. Reynolds of Richland, moved that the election of Mr. Merica be made unanimous, which was carried without opposition. Mr. Merica was brought in, and thanked them in a few pleasant words and then invited them to take dinner with him at the Glazier House. Mr. Borst here adjourned the meeting as a board of election and after an informal talk of a few minutes, Mr. Merica called them to order, as a county board of education, and the regular work of the board was then taken up.

Ten years ago on Monday, he was elected to this honorable position, and entered at once on its active duties. At each recurring "first Monday in June" of the odd years since that date, he has been re-elected, generally by the unanimous vote of the trustees. It is a well deserved compliment to an efficient and industrious officer. He has served the people well, and his election, as should be the case in all elections, has been made on his merits, by those who knew best how his work had been done. He is the first man in the county to hold this office for a continuous twelve years, which he will do if he lives to serve out the term for which he has just been chosen.

Resolutions.

DeLong Post No. 67, at its last regular meeting unanimously adopted the following resolutions:

Resolved, that this Post feeling grateful to the Hon. W. L. Penfield, hereby return their heartiest thanks to him for the strong and masterly address delivered to them on memorial day, May 30, 1893, and are truly grateful to him for the cordial good will always shown to the Post, also,

Resolved, that the Post return many thanks to Co. K 3d Regt. the junior military band, choir, drum corps and to all who aided in the exercises of decorating the graves of our dead comrades.

E. L. Mason, Post Adjt.

Dr. A. A. Corkins.

After an absence of 15 years will again visit Waterloo every Saturday at Lock's Hotel, Waterloo.

His success in the treatment of piles can be amply attested by hundreds whom he cured during his former visits. I can cure any case of piles, no matter of how long standing, or how hopeless the case may be. The patient suffers no pain or inconvenience. In most cases one treatment is sufficient, which takes only a few minutes, and the time required for a cure is about two weeks, during which time the patient is not inconvenienced from business. 20tf

It has the genuine ring. Edman & Stout, leading druggists of Lima, Ohio, write, Apr. 12, 1893, "We can truthfully and honestly say that Dr. Wheeler's Nerve Vitalizer is the only remedy we ever sold that we never had a kick from. We only have about a dozen of the six dozen you sent us in January and hardly a day passes but what several people come in and call for it. It is the best preparation for Nervous Troubles we ever handled. Send us 6 doz, quick." Sold in Auburn by F. E. Davenport. 3

In journeying recently with a man friend, the conversation took such shape that he took a bottle from his grip, of Brant's Extr. Blackberry, saying: "I never travel without it. I am easily affected by change of water, Chicago water especially always troubles me, but a dose or two of Brant's Blackberry quickly cures the trouble." He had it right and if the thousands who travel and visit Chicago this summer are "Wise like the drummer" to have Brant's Blackberry with them they will find it a very useful article. 25 cent bottles of F. There is a great deal of advertising now for another cure for drunkenness. These side cures and cheap John establishments may do for babes and sucklings. But when it comes to an earnest and permanent cure, there is only one, and that is the Keeley cure. Experience has proved this. If a man has the liquor habit bad and of long standing—if he has got down real low and helpless, he must become a "Keeley Institute student." The only other chance to stop the habit on men way down in the drunk business, is to try "Cal. Husselman's treatment." It is severe but effectual.

As neat a paper as we have seen lately is the Reading Telephone, now in charge of Frank Kline. It is not only a good paper, but a large one, and well filled with good matter. We doubt if the old city of Hillsdale gets up a more presentable paper.

Ft. Wayne had a four days' strike of street car men last week. They asked to have their wages raised from 13½ cents an hour to 15 cents. After making a good deal of trouble they came back to work on a promise that they were to have 15 cents after June 15.

Judge McClellan informs us, that the United States Fish Commissioner has just had 30,000 lake trout fry, or young fish, put into Lake James, in Steuben county. It would seem as if this vast number would be certain to secure a good future supply of this valuable food fish.

Rev. Archibald Durrie will preach at the Presbyterian church both morning and evening next Sunday, June 11. All cordially invited to attend. Mr. Durrie was lately located at Superior, Wisc. but is now on his way home from Washington, D. C. where he was a delegate to the general assembly.

We were greatly pleased to greet again last Friday, Rev. T. C. Smith formerly pastor of the Baptist church here. He is now in charge of a church at Wolcottville, and was here to attend the meeting of the Christion Endeavor societies. His son, Jay C. Smith, is publishing a paper at Hope, Bartholomew county, this state, and we are pleased to learn is doing well.

Editor Lewis B. Fretz of the Syracuse Register, is to be married to a most worthy young lady of that place, Miss Anna E. Russell, June 14. Mr. Fretz is a rising young man, and was for some years connected with the COURIER, from which he "graduated with honors." The lady we have no personal acquaintance with, but have faith to believe that she is worthy. The entire COURIER force send their heartiest congratulations.

Maggie and Lillie Snyder entertained the following Sons and Daughters of Veterans from Ft. Wayne Sunday: Misses Sibyl and Lydia Neidhammer, Anna and Nettie Eldridge Messers. The C. E. meeting last week showed how convenient it would be to have an electric line of road between this and the big junction of three roads a mile below town. The B. & O. train on Wednesday, going west, was too late for the Lake Shore train, and so instead of riding up town on the L. S. train, many came up on foot and the committee waiting at the West Seventh street station missed them. Give us an electric line.

Supt. Merica reports the various township commencements so far held, to be very fine. May 31st, at the joint meeting of Franklin and Wilmington there were eight graduates: C. Fairfield was June 2, the graduates being, Cyrus Gardner, Manda Miller, Allen D. Martin, May Urey, Polly Sebert and Reuben Childs. June 3, the date for Grant and Richland at Corunna. The Richland graduates were: Mary Pairan, Fletcher Fried and John Oster. For Grant, were Maynard Hine and Helen Shaffer.

The Columbia City Post and the Albion Democrat are inviting criticism by copying the attacks the disreputable Garrett Clipper is making on Auburn and the COURIER. Both Auburn and COURIER can defend themselves against the attacks of this driveling idiot, but we would like to ask these papers if they remember that the COURIER ever copied a word that anyone, even a respectable person or paper ever said against either of their towns or their papers. In either case these papers could have published, if they enjoyed it, the silly slush intended to taffy up the judge and the community that must try that "lickin case," without also copying and spreading broadcast over Noble and Whitley counties, the accompanying attack on the COURIER and its town. We would like to to inform these two papers, and we hope they will inform their readers as fully, that all the cause the Clipper editor has to dislike Auburn, is because her citizens have arrested and fined him a number of times for drunkenness in public; and his hatred of the COURIER is because its present editor refused to employ the filthy cur any longer, because of his intemperance and general worthlessness. The records of our court, and our own books sustain this statement. Will the Clipper give any other reason in either care? It never has.

The Governor of New York writes nothing which is not a Flowery production.

It is wonderful what volumes of silence a man can utter when his own pet sin is under discussion.

There is hope for the public when the trusts put so much water in their stock that their profits evaporate.

Any financier or moralist who says that the whisky business will not hold water is not on to the tricks of the trade.

Some women were backward about favoring crinoline because they feared that in a duel to the death it gave certain advantages to the mouse.

A hundred-acre orange grove on the Wekiva River in Florida, known as the "Markham" grove, is reported to have yielded a net profit this season of $23,000.

The Austrian Archduchess Stephanie will not appear on state occasions with less than ten pages. What she could get in free America would be about ten lines in the society column.

A Texas school teacher went to Washington and said that he must have the English Ambassadorship or nothing. His way of putting the thing enabled the President to accommodate him.

The suicide of a 77-year-old Pennsylvania woman is reported. One would think that when a woman had endured this life for 77 years she would have grit enough to stick it out until the natural end.

A German biologist says that the two sides of the face are never alike. In two out of five the eyes are out of line. One eye is stronger than the other in seven persons out of ten, and the right ear is generally higher than the left.

Free shines are to be had in every large city in the United States today, but to get one, you must go to the shop where you bought your shoes. One concern gives to each customer a card with numbers to be punched out. The card is good for fifty shines.

With Atlantic transportation companies trying to import cholera, and Pacific companies trying to import coolies, it would appear not to be presumptuous for the Federal authorities to object. It might have no particular effect, but it would seem proper.

Utah's delegate to Congress has resigned because miffed about something. Other people have, under circumstances somewhat similar, done the same thing, and been grieved sorely upon pulling the string attached to the resignation to find how readily it broke.

In 1892 the immigration to the United States from all countries amounted to 623,084, which figure has not been previously exceeded except in 1881, when we received 669,431 foreigners, of whom 210,485 were Germans and 125,391 were from British North America.

The distressing computation is made that the human system contains 10,000,000 nerves. What is the use of letting the nervous man know that he is really about ten times worse off than he thought? There will be no living with him if he finds out the real gravity of his condition.

Mr. W. G. Stead writes to the Review of Reviews of a mighty African hunter who in four years shot 20 elephants, 12 rhinoceros, 5 hippopotami, 100 buffalo, 13 lions, and enough of lesser game, giraffes, zebras and the like to bring the total up to 548. Africa would be a good country for the dime novel youngster to emigrate to.

Palm Springs, Riverside County, claims the earliest fruits in California, though the output is as yet so small as to attract little attention in the market. It is claimed that oranges ripen there in November, grapes in June and figs in May. Hot? Yes, 350 days in the year; and the other fifteen days are not by any means chilly, says the Enterprise.

If any one sees anything of a whale careering about in the ocean along the Atlantic coast, with a bell buoy attached to his tail, it will prove the truth of the most extraordinary fish story of modern times. Said whale purports to have been in the vicinity of the sunken Vanderbilt yacht Alva when it was blown up with a ton of dynamite, and he was so alarmed that he fouled a buoy and towed it off, ringing the bell as he went.

A manufacturing concern in Birmingham, England, drives something of a trade in crowns. They are real ones, of solid gold, with cap of crimson velvet, incrustations of garnet, topaz, and other kinds of cheap but showy stones, and are supplied to the kings of Africa, of whom there are several hundred, at a highly satisfactory return of ivory and other merchandise. The time has gone by when an ancient plug hat, adorned with turkey feathers, sufficed to impart a halo of magnificence to Ethiopian royalty.

Rowell's American Newspaper Directory, the standard journalistic work of reference of the United States, contains some interesting statistics showing the marvelous growth of the press on this continent. For the first time the number of newspapers and periodicals in the United States exceeds 20,000. There are 20,006 in this country, 919 in Canada, and 9 in Newfoundland. Of those in the United States 1,855 are published daily, 31 tri-weekly, 237 semi-weekly, 14,017 weekly, 85 bi-weekly, 349 semi-monthly, 3,125 monthly, 78 bi-monthly and 229 quarterly.

It is said that an East Buffalo auctioneer, who lately broke the record by selling 375 horses in one day from one auction-block, receives $7,500 a year for two days' work in each week at East Buffalo. This is $150 a week, or $75 a day. The same man receives $5,000 a year for two days' work each week in Philadelphia, and because he can not stand any more travel, he has refused $8,000 a year to add to his labors one day in the week at Chicago. Thursdays he has for himself, and on that day he runs an auction of his own in Richmond, Va. He seems to be a type of the busy and successful man.

Legislatures, as is well known, are great foes to corporations, and especially to the railroads, which have a bad habit of insulting members by sending them passes. It occasionally happens, however, that the railroads get something through which benefits them and bears heavily on the public. This was the case a few days since in New York, where the Legislature passed a law outlawing all claims for damages against railroad companies unless suit is brought within two years. Watchful as Legislatures are to punish the railroads, this bill slipped through and the Governor had to veto it.

There is food for thought in the mortality statistics of the four or five great cities for the year 1892. The death rate per 1,000 of population was in New York, 27.26; Brooklyn, 27.07; Boston, 26.37; Philadelphia, 24.64; and Chicago, 18.23. Chicago had not always this honorable place, but within the last two years that city has constructed a new system of sewers, adopted a better method of street cleaning, and procured an abundant supply of pure water, and the direct result has been a great reduction of mortality, placing Chicago, in point of healthfulness, at the head of the list.

Swarthmore College, under the direction of the Society of Friends, was among the pioneer institutions of learning to admit the sexes to perfect equality. Its success has been phenomenal, and the honors of the institution are about equally divided. There is freedom of association and no complaint of any abuse. In every field except that of athletics the girls take an active part; and even the successful athletes are nerved to their best by the encouragement of the fair sex. Of the five speakers recently chosen from the junior class to compete for the Sproul prize in oratory two are girls. In the competitive oratorical contest between the sophomore and the freshman classes, of the five orators chosen from each class two of the sophomore and three of the freshman class are girls.

The mule is gaining quite an enviable place among those who do not think that the art of healing is monopolized by persons who take out diplomas and are licensed to practice. It is only a short time since a mule, that made no pretensions to the powers of an oculist, cured a cross-eyed man with one treatment, and now comes another evidence of his surgical skill. A Tennessee man had a carbuncle about the size of a cow pumpkin on the back of his neck, and was given up by friends and doctors to die. He went feebly forth to take what might be the last look at his farm and stock. He happened too near the knock-out end of the old family mule, which let fly with both feet and landed on the apex of the carbuncle. There was a loud report, the man had a dazed idea that a red-hot streak of lightning had gone through him, and from that time to this he has been gaining strength and health so fast that the doctors are half disposed to check the recuperation. Oculists and carbunclists should investigate.

Sensible Answer to a Burning Question.

At a woman's club the burning question was advanced: "Suppose you should find a letter in a woman's hand in your husband's pocket, what would you do?" The question was to be answered in writing, that the ladies might not influence each other, and you should have heard the pencils scratch and seen how desperate they all looked just to think of it. There were all sorts of answers. One woman was going to confront him with it, another would go home at once to mother, another would leave the brute, still another would not say a word but watch. One little woman decided to read it first, to make sure it was improper. But one little person wrote this: "I never look in my husband's pockets unless he tells me to. If he told me to, and I found such a letter, I should think it must be all right, and I should let it alone, though if I found it made me uncomfortable I would ask him about it, and I should believe whatever he told me." Now, there was a wise little woman. As she explained afterward, it doesn't do to monkey with your happiness, and if there is anything wrong you want to be awfully careful not to find it out.

HOW TO KILL COMBINES

FACTS FOR THE TRUST CONVENTION TO CONSIDER.

All the Different Kinds of Syndicates Are Dependent Upon Special Legislation and Special Privileges—How Monopolies Are Fostered—McKinley's Poor Excuse.

A Proper Move.

At the suggestion of the Hon. Knute Nelson, Governor of Minnesota, the Governors of twenty-six States have already decided to appoint ten delegates from each State to a convention to be held in Chicago to consider remedies for the evils of the coal and other combines and trusts.

There is great need of such a convention, and if the right men are appointed delegates the convention will come to conclusions which will open the eyes not only of such men as James G. Blaine, who regarded trusts as "private affairs;" Andrew Carnegie, who said, "the public may regard trusts or combinations with serene confidence;" and Senator Sherman, who thought to rid the country of these ugly monsters by a single law spread out on our statute books, but of all Republicans or Democrats who imagine that any laws or sets of laws which simply declare trusts or combines illegal; make the trustees or officers guilty of misdemeanor or crime and impose fines and penalties of any kind or extent, will abolish trusts. All such laws, like Sherman's anti-trust law (which has had no effect except to make it advisable for a few trusts to change their names), will have about the same effect upon trusts as pruning the "water sprouts" has upon a vigorous apple tree; or as a clod in the way has upon a growing potato vine.

The truth is, that so long as there exists a rich monopoly soil, irrigated by numerous acts of special legislation, we may expect the omnipresent seeds of selfishness and greed to take root and grow and spread into giant monopoly plants. It is a waste of time to cut off the branches or even to pull up individual plants by the roots. The conditions which give life to this plant must be changed, or the plant will be a source of constant annoyance and harm. What these conditions are and how they can be changed for the better can be easily discovered by the convention if it starts inquiry in the right direction. The things essential to trusts, the conditions that make it possible for producers to control production and fix prices so as to make enormous profits, must first be sought after.

To illustrate, suppose we select as samples a dozen of the worst law-breakers now preying upon consumers and laborers, and producing paupers, tramps and criminals by the thousand. The sugar, cordage, window glass, steel rail, borax, saw, ax, copper ingot, Standard oil, Reading coal, starch and rubber trusts are well known and generally hated. What are the conditions which foster these monopolies?

The sugar trust has a monopoly of the refining business in this country. The cost of refining sugar is about ½ cent per pound, and the price of refined sugar should not exceed the price of the raw sugar, from which it is made, by more than ½ or ⅝ of a cent. Yet the trust now pays 4 cents for raw and gets 5⅓ cents for refined sugar, and has maintained about this difference for the last three years. As we consume about seventy pounds of sugar per capita, this means that the trust is making a profit of $40,000,000, or would do so if it were doing a strictly legitimate business and was not paying unreasonable prices for opposition refineries, many of which it holds idle. As it is, the trust is making a net profit of about $25,000,000 a year from a nominal capital of $75,000,000 and an actual capital of perhaps $35,000,000.

It is not difficult to determine the condition that makes life desirable to this trust. It is the duty of ½ cent. per pound on refined sugar. Abolish this duty and the prices of raw and refined sugar must stay as close to each other as they do in England; otherwise we would use imported sugar. This move would wipe out over $20,000,000 of the trust's profits and would probably kill the monster, as the extra profits to be had from combination would not cover the interest on capital invested in idle or useless plants and the risk of attempting to manipulate markets and stocks. Competition would again be free and consumers would pay less for refined and producers get more for raw sugar.

Substantially the same argument holds in regard to the steel rail, the window-glass, the starch, the rubber, and scores of other trusts of which these are but samples. Special tariff legislation gives them life, health, and profits. Undo this legislation and this class of trusts will either cease to exist or be powerless to accomplish great evil.

Besides the class of trusts directly dependent upon import duties which prevent foreign trade there is another large class indirectly dependent upon or greatly aided by these duties. In fact, there are not half a dozen important trusts in this country that are not benefited by the McKinley tariff. Suppose we consider the saw trust. It might exist without a tariff because it is now selling circular, hand, and cross-cut saws in all parts of the world. To the careless observer the trust is therefore independent of foreign competition. But consider! These saws are sold for about 25 per cent. more in our "protected" than in foreign unprotected markets. Why? Because the import duties prevent outside competition in this, but not in foreign unprotected markets. With free trade we could at least get our saws as cheaply as foreigners, because, if necessary, we could buy them in the same market and reimport them. What is true of the saw is true of the ax, cordage, and dozens of other trusts engaged in this nefarious business of selling lower abroad than at home.

There is still another class of trusts like the Reading coal, the Borax and the Standard Oil Trusts which usually derive nourishment from tariffs, but which are mainly dependent upon other kinds of special privileges—the right to monopolize what may be called natural opportunity, such as the only available route on or between certain mines, deposits or cities, and the privilege of exclusive ownership of mines, deposits, waterways, and other of nature's bounties. So long as one corporation or individual is permitted to own and have the exclusive use and benefit of the only anthracite coal beds in this country, the price of "hard" coal will be as high as the trust can make it—of course limited to the extent that a too high price would freeze out customers and reduce profits. The duty of 75 cents per ton on bituminous coal helps the anthracite coal trust to sustain prices where there would be real competition from foreign coal, but the backbone of this trust—and it is still strong—will not be broken until the right to monopolize nature's bounties is abolished. It is probable that this could be most easily accomplished by taxing the owners of these natural opportunities as much as they could get if they should hire out or sell the use of such privileges. If the owners of the coal beds, the petroleum fields or the borax deposits had to pay in taxes all that these privileges yield them above their profits, these monopolies would at once kick up their heels and expire. The Reading Company could not then afford to pay millions of dollars a year interest on mortgages on coal lands which were bought and held idle simply to obtain a monopoly. Nor could F. N. Smith afford to buy up and hold idle all of the borax deposits in Nevada, Utah, and Oregon. The Standard oil trust would never have existed to make dozens of multi-millionaires.

It is special legislation which restricts trusts and competition and laws that give special privileges to those who, by fair or foul means, get control of nature's store-house that have made trusts possible. If the trust convention sifts these matters to the bottom it will recommend the abrogation of all such laws and privileges.—Byron H. Holt.

The French McKinley's Struggle.

The French McKinley, M. Meline, recently made a speech before the Association of French Industries, of which he is the president, and from it we learn that protection in France is withstood in the same wicked and irrational ways as in this country. A benevolent high tariff there cannot escape the efforts of bad men to repeal it any more than here, and there is the same need of appealing to the voters to "save the country" over again at each election. There is, too, the same complaint that the educated people of the country are mostly mere doctrinaires, caring more for foreigners than for their own fellow countrymen, and also that the influential newspapers are all against protection. It seemed a horrible thing to M. Meline that the Parisian press should be almost a unit against him, and he called upon the association to establish a powerful daily paper to "defend the interests of French producers." This suggestion was received with favor, and it was unanimously voted that "a great daily journal" should be founded. We call the attention of some of our own protectionist editors, temporarily out of office and out of work, to this opening. Finally, we find M. Meline in the stress of an electoral contest, discovering as sudden a love for foreign trade as McKinley did last summer, and, like his great American prototype, putting his hand on his heart and declaring that his tariff was the most unselfish and patriotic law ever enacted. With a flourish worthy of himself, M. Meline wound up by saying: "I assure you on my conscience that the duties in my tariff are not too high."—New York Evening Post.

A Poor Excuse.

Gov. McKinley is still saying that at the national election of last November his tariff was so young that the people had not had time to understand it and to see that it was a measure of the greatest beneficence and philanthropy. At the dinner of the Home Market Club in Boston Wednesday evening, he said: "When defeat has come it has usually followed some great public measure where sufficient time had not elapsed to demonstrate its wisdom and expediency. That has been true of all our defeats." That was the plea of the advocates of McKinleyism after the overwhelming defeat of 1890, the McKinley bill having become a law one month before the election. But when the election of 1892 took place the McKinley tariff was more than two years old. Had there not been time enough then for the American people to arrive at a sound conclusion as to the "wisdom and expediency" of the statute? The allowance of time was ample, but the "wisdom and expediency" were not seen by a great majority of voters, and never will be discovered by them. Among those who learned by sad experience that those were deceived who saw wisdom in the McKinley bill was the Ohio manufacturer whose ruin was hastened by the increased cost of tin plate, and by whose fall McKinley's own fortune was swept away.—New York Times.

Medical Education.

Dr. Bluepills—O, bother your politics! What's the tariff got to do with us, Bleeder?

Dr. Bleeder—Got to do with us! Well, it doesn't take much medical education to see that there won't be half the work for us doctors when they get the duty off from wools and woolens. Protection takes woolens off from people as effectually as sheep shears take wool off from sheep, and you know yourself that there is nothing like cotton and shoddy to put folks on their backs and make them send for a doctor.—New Crusade.

Tax the Tax-Dodgers.

"A tax on incomes of over $10,000," says the New York World, "will fall on those who receive most protection from the Government and are best able to bear its burdens." And it may be added, incidentally, on those who are least willing to bear them and have dodged them most successfully heretofore.—Charleston News.

The canyon of the Colorado is 300 miles long, and the cities on either side are from 5,000 to 6,000 feet above the water.

The most wonderful vegetable in the world is the truffle; it has neither roots, stem, leaves, flowers, nor seeds.

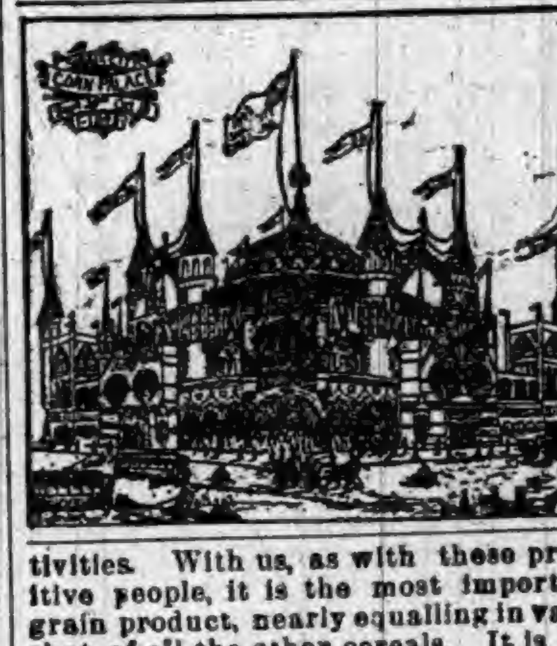
THE EIGHTH WONDER.

SIOUX CITY'S ANNUAL CORN PALACE.

Grand Preparations Are Being Made for the Annual Corn Palace at Sioux City, Iowa—Will Open September 20, and Close October 18, 1893.

A Harvest Celebration.

This is the great Columbian Year and it is peculiarly fit that in the commemoration of Columbus' great discovery we pause to pay due tribute to the great food product of the New World—the golden maize—of which there was never a kernel in the world until carried from these shores. In ages past it was the food of the wandering tribes of the North as well as of the Aztecs and Incas of the South and the object of their thanksgivings and festivities. With us, as with these primitive people, it is the most important grain product, nearly equalling in value that of all the other cereals. It is the foundation of the marvelous prosperity and growth of the West. Then it is so graceful and lends itself so effectively to decorative purposes. Its leaves, its tassels, its ears, with their varied tints, make it unrivalled for artistic use. And above all it is always and only American.



> "The rose may bloom for England,
> The lily for France unfold;
> Ireland may honor the shamrock,
> Scotland her thistle bold;
> But the shield of the Great Republic,
> The glory of the West,
> Shall bear a stalk of the tasselled corn,
> Of all our wealth the best.
> * * * * * *
> But the wide Republic's emblem
> Is the bounteous golden corn!"

The unique Corn Palace Festival originated by Sioux City in 1887, has yearly grown in interest and attractiveness until it may now be said to be a carnival of truly national interest. It is natural that it should be so, for the Corn Palace is symbolic of the wonderful evolution of the West and replete with the life and activity of a country which has had no superior at any time or any place. Here an all-wise Providence has stored in the bosom of the earth a golden reserve, to be revealed to man when the time has ripened, more precious than that which glistened and shimmered in Captain Suter's mill dam and changed the history of the Pacific Coast. For countless ages the prairie lay a vast monotone of sound and color. But at last, like the enchanted Princess in the fairy tale, at the kiss of the Prince, it awoke to magic life at the touch of the settlers' plow and the mellow soil yielded up its treasure of buried wealth in thousands upon thousands of rows of yellow corn.

In the early days when the Indian and the buffalo were still lords of the prairie, the country along the Jim, the Big Sioux and the Floyd Rivers was a semi-neutral ground, where, even then, the squaws raised the winter supply of corn, and carefully "cached" it in the fall to save it from the depredations of rival tribes.

The red man in his wanderings had fixed with unerring instinct upon the region most responsive to his primitive cultivation, and following in his footsteps the white settlers raised the native plant and after thirty years of culture offer the record of unfailing crops, year after year.

When the perennial bounty of the crops of this region had been thus satisfactorily demonstrated, the people naturally were eager to proclaim their good fortune to the world. A sort of harvest home on a grand scale was proposed and the thought finally materialized as the first Corn Palace.

The natural evolution of the idea, together with the growth of the surrounding country and the city have developed the Corn Palace from an experiment costing $25,000 to an annual carnival not to be thought of at an expenditure less than $100,000. Year after year the brains of the management have been taxed to devise new features; year after year the ladies of Sioux City have vied with each other in designing and executing as a labor of love, decorations, which if performed by paid labor, would have cost thousands of dollars.

The people are more enthusiastic than ever before this year, as they wish to attract the multitudes who will visit the World's Fair from all parts of this country and from foreign lands. The Corn Palace Festival will begin September 20, continuing until October 18, inclusive, and every nerve will be strained to make it the culmination of all previous seasons, as Sioux City people have a reputation to maintain as the originators of the most distinct National Carnival of the country, which they expect to triumphantly vindicate in this World's Fair Year. Those who have attended any of the Corn Palace Festivals of previous years do not need to be reminded what wonderful specimens of creative art they have been, and so far as they are concerned it is only necessary to add that the Palace of 1893 will eclipse its predecessors to the full extent that experience gained can add to the beauty of design and decorations, backed by the most generous outlay of money that has ever been made for the purpose.

It will amply repay people arranging to go to the World's Fair to time their visit and route their journeys so as to include that unique festival, the Sioux City Corn Palace. They should bear in mind the fact that Sioux City is in the center of the greatest corn producing territory in the world—that Iowa, Nebraska and South Dakota produce considerable more than one-fourth of the corn raised in the United States—that this change in the center of production from the middle West to the Missouri Valley has been almost entirely wrought during the past ten years; and then try to imagine the wonderful condition of commercial activity that has accompanied it. It is impossible to reach anything like a true conception of "the busy West" without visiting the Sioux City Corn Palace, because in no other way can a correct idea of the magnificent resources of this vast agricultural region and of the genius and enterprise which has so rapidly transformed it, be obtained.

The like of the Corn Palace can be seen nowhere else on the globe, and the experience of this most memorable year in the history of the continent will be incomplete without it.

The expense of attendance will be very slight, as there will be low rates from all points.

The Corn Palace is the artistic tribute of the West to the most distinctively American plant and product which we have, and the tourist who goes to the World's Fair needs to visit it to understand the Great West, as in the recreations as well as in the industries of a people are revealed their social and economic conditions.

Total Number of Prizes for this County, 226.

CAUTION.—No Tags will be received before January 1st, 1894, nor after February 1st, 1894. Each package containing tags must be marked plainly with Name of Sender, Town, County, State, and Number of Tags in each package. All charges on packages must be prepaid.

READ.—SPEAR HEAD possesses more qualities of intrinsic value than any other plug tobacco produced. It is the sweetest, the toughest, the richest. SPEAR HEAD is absolutely, positively and distinctively different in flavor from any other plug tobacco. A trial will convince the most skeptical of this fact. It is the largest seller of any similar shape and style on earth, which proves that it has caught the popular taste and pleases the people. Try it, and participate in the contest for prizes. See that a TIN TAG is on every 10 cent piece of SPEAR HEAD you buy. Send in the tags, no matter how small the quantity.
Very sincerely,
THE P. J. SORG COMPANY, Middletown, Ohio.

A list of the people obtaining these prizes in this county will be published in this paper immediately after February 1st, 1894.

Self-Preserving Traits of Birds.

The attitudes that some large birds place themselves in would protect them in comparatively open places. Unless one had seen it one would hardly give the raptores credit for this, but they practice it to perfection. The eagle, for one, places himself in a strange position, a mere bundled-up bunch of feathers to look at. A friend of mine who recently visited Achill island, the island of the eagle, was on the cliffs with his wife and some other friends when the lady saw in the cleft of the rocks close to her what she thought was a splendid tuft of feathers that had been blown there by the wind. On stooping to pick them up out from the cleft dashed a magnificent eagle, leaving behind him a tuft of feathers as a memento. Vigilant as the bird is, he is frequently walked over. After gorging he gets drowsy. Indeed, it is only under these circumstances that such a thing could take place.—Cornhill Magazine.

Caution to Customers.

Nothing of original or superior merit but has its imitations and counterfeits, even to imperiling the health of communities. For this reason the proprietors of Hostetter's Stomach Bitters caution their patrons to scrutinize every bottle offered (and it is sold ONLY in bottles) and verify its many marks of genuineness.

A sufficient warning to those meditating fraud can be found in the unbroken line of judicial decisions, exposing and severely punishing every one detected in counterfeiting the Bitters, and the redoubled efforts that are being made to protect the public from the deception of these unprincipled pirates.

Remember the Bitters is sold in bottles only, never by the gallon or in bulk.

He Could Be Funny.

At one of the New York music halls (says Vogue), a hard-faced variety actor came on near the end of the bill, the other night, and proceeded to tell stories and jokes that were meant to be side-splitting. The audience failed to see any point in them, and did not laugh once. As a matter of fact, the auditors yawned and a few left. The actor was plainly disturbed, but undaunted. He kept on. So did the audience—yawning. Finally he saw that everything was falling flat, and walking down to the footlights, he said, in a sympathetic tone: "Ladies and gentlemen, I hope I am not keeping you up."

Beware of Ointments for Catarrh that Contain Mercury,

As mercury will surely destroy the sense of smell and completely derange the whole system when entering it through the mucous surfaces. Such articles should never be used except on prescriptions from reputable physicians, as the damage they will do is tenfold to the good you can possibly derive from them. Hall's Catarrh Cure, manufactured by F. J. Cheney & Co., Toledo, O., contains no mercury, and is taken internally, and acts directly upon the blood and mucous surfaces of the system. In buying Hall's Catarrh Cure be sure you get the genuine. It is taken internally, and made in Toledo, Ohio, by F. J. Cheney & Co.

Left a Track of Corn.

The other day a burglar at Silvertown was tracked in a queer manner. Not content with valuable booty, he carried off a bag of corn. From a small hole in the bag some grains dropped at intervals, sufficient to make a trail, which a sharp detective followed right up to the thief's resort, and there arrested the criminal with the property in his possession.—London Answers.

The Frog's Song.

Early one bright morning a little frog hopped from the water, opened his music-book and sang this very strange song:

If I swallow you and you swallow me,
Who's going to swallow the bumble-bee?

He was about to sing another verse when a big pelican swooped down on him and froggy disappeared.

After a while he popped his head up again, looking angry this time, for he was fond of that song and wished to finish it. So he began once more, "If I swallow you and and you swal"——but he got no further, for swoop came the pelican, splash went the frog, and the pelican missed him again. "Oh, let him finish it," said a sly old water-rat, who was combing his hair with a porcupine quill. "I don't believe he knows the rest of it," piped a small, wee frog, who was jealous of the other frog because he had green legs and a better voice.

"I never did like that song," buzzed a fussy bumble-bee. "Swallow the bumble-bee, indeed! I'd stick something in him if he ever swallowed me!" Nobody blamed the bee in the least for talking so. They knew just how he must feel about it, and it is rather disagreeable to have any one swallow you, as everybody knows. After a while they all left but the crafty old rat, who, having finished his toilet, fastened his wicked little eyes on the place where the frog disappeared and waited. Pretty soon froggy came up, peered cautiously around, and, seeing no one, he opened his mouth wide and began to sing:

OPENED HIS MUSIC-BOOK AND SANG.

If I swallow you and you swallow me,
Who's going to swallow the bumble-bee?

"Excuse me," interrupted the rat, "did you ever swallow a bumble-bee?"

"Yes, sir," croaked the startled frog. "I have just swallowed one."

"Don't they hurt?" anxiously inquired the rat.

"Not when you're used to them," replied the unsuspecting frog.

"So glad to hear you say so, for I expect to swallow one myself very soon, but he will be seasoned with something nice, so I sha'n't mind." Then he looked at the frog and licked his lips.

"Now, will you please come a little closer," said he, "and sing all the verses of your charming song?" The frog, smiling from ear to ear with pleasure, and bowing low to the rat, sang:

If I swallow you and you swallow me,
Who's going to swallow——

but, sad to relate, he never finished his song, for when he sang, "Who's going to swallow"—— the rat cried, "I am!" and seizing poor froggy by the legs swallowed him, bumble-bee and all! Then he smiled a contented smile, and sat the rest of that day gazing dreamily in the water, laughing softly to himself, and singing, "Ha, ha, ha! He, he, he! who's swallowed froggy and his bumble-bee?" until he went sound asleep, for it was now bedtime, and in his dreams he sang froggy's song. Meanwhile the pelican had been sitting on a log near by watching, and as the rat sang:

If I swallow you and you swallow me,
Who's going to swallow the bumble-bee?

Said the pelican:

Why, it's plain to see,
For I can quite easily swallow all three.
And swooping down from the top of the log,
Without any effort that one could see,
He swallowed the rat that swallowed the frog
That heartlessly swallowed the bumble-bee.

—New York Recorder.

A Personal Compliment.

Singers in church and elsewhere are not always as careful as they ought to be to articulate their words distinctly. A little girl entered a meeting-house not long ago in New York just as the choir was singing the anthem.

"Hallelujah! Hallelujah!" said the singers; but the little girl, whose thoughts were somewhat preoccupied, did not catch the words correctly. After getting home she startled her aunt by saying:

"I never saw such a nice choir. They stopped right in the middle of the anthem and spoke to me."

"Why, my dear," said her auntie, "I didn't notice it."

"But they did. You know I wore my new cloak, and as soon as I came in the choir said, 'Hardly knew you!' two or three times."

Up to His Neck That Way.

"I fell into the pond to-day, and it was up to my neck," said Walter.

"Nonsense!" said Jack. "The water in the pond isn't more than a foot deep."

"Ah, but I went in head first," said Walter.

She Was Enough.

The small boy was sitting on the doorstep whistling when the policeman came up.

"Can I see your father?" inquired the officer.

"No, you can't," replied the boy promptly.

"Why can't I?"

"'Cause mam's seein' him, that's why."

The Bee's Market-Basket.

Every bee carries his market-basket around his hind legs. Any one examining the body of a bee through a microscope will observe that on the hind legs of the bee there is a fringe of stiff hairs on the surface, the hairs approaching each other at the tips, so as to form a sort of cage. This is the bee's basket.

The Hard Part of It.

"It wasn't hard learning how to write," said Bobbie one morning, when he was trying to write a letter to his father. "What bothers me is learning what to say when I write."

A New Guinea House.

In some parts of New Guinea whole towns are built "in the sea." The inhabitants live in constant fear of the bush tribes, and as a protection against them construct their houses just off the shore. A traveler describes a summer villa which he built after the native pattern at a cost of about $20.

Two chiefs undertook the work, and received a little more than half the money, and the laborers got the rest.

The traveler says: "I drew on the beach a rough ground-plan of the house, showing the length and breadth, the division of rooms and the two verandas. Peter, one of the chiefs, measured the plan with a piece of cane, marking the length and breadth, and then rolled up the cane and put it in his pocket, or rather in his bag, for of course natives are not provided with pockets.

"He went home to his island, and in a few days came back with several large canoes with all the necessary logs, timber, and other materials lashed to them, including the sago palm-leaves for the roofing, and the cane for splitting into laths; and when the house was finished there was very little material left.

"How he calculated so nicely I cannot say, but of course he had had considerable experience in building native houses. Not a nail was used in the building.

"On the sea side the house stood in about four feet of water at low tide, and on the shore side was connected with the beach by a gangway. The people had a curious way of driving piles. We gave them a rope, which they fixed round the head of the pile, leaving the two ends dangling.

"Several natives got hold of each end and pulled alternately, until the pile was worked down to the required depth. The piles are made of white mangrove, and in order to prevent the ravages of the cobra insect, it is best to tar the piles well—or, better still, though very expensive—to copper them all over.

"The flooring is of cane, the walls are made of the skin of the palm, and the roof of the leaves of the sago palm, which have to be put on separately, the leaves overlapping a little, and on the outside are placed some branches of the cocoanut palm.

"A house of this kind is quite rain-proof, and if well constructed will keep in good condition for at least two years."

A German Fiddler Who Was Determined to See the Great Napoleon.

Wonderful as are the parts which a modern reporter will play, in order that newspaper readers may gratify their curiosity, he never, according to Household, did anything bolder than the part a German violinist played to gratify his personal curiosity. In 1808 Napoleon held, at Erfurt, the congress of princes. In the evenings the emperor amused his guests with music and a drama played by a French troupe brought from Paris. Spohi, the violinist, was intensely curious to see this assemblage of royalties, and betook himself to Erfurt, thinking he might wriggle himself into some corner of the house. He discovered, however, that the public were excluded, blue blood alone being allowed to enter. The fact that the whole house was reserved for sovereigns and their suites would have discouraged a less determined man. But Spohi was persistent. Having a friend who was second horn player in the orchestra he persuaded him to feign illness and to ask the bandmaster to allow his friend, the violinist, to take his place.

The request was granted, and Spohi set himself to work to acquire his friend's part. On taking up the horn he discovered that he had set himself a difficult task. It took him a day and a half to produce the simple notes. On the evening of the performance the muscles of his face were strained and stiff, his lips swollen and back, and he could hardly get through his part, which fortunately was not very elaborate. One thought cheered Spohi as he took his seat in the orchestra, he would enjoy a fine view of the princes, and especially of Napoleon, who was to sit in the center stall of the first row. But to his dismay he learned that the emperor had issued a formal order directing the musicians to play with their backs to the audience, and under no circumstances to turn their heads. The violinist was equal to the emergency. Pulling out a pocket-mirror, he placed it before him in a proper position, and thus obtained an excellent view of the audience of sovereigns.

His English Betrayed Him.

The following story is told in England of the Rev. John Sheepshanks, who was recently made Bishop of Norwich: "One evening a young Cambridge man, afterward head master of a well-known grammar school, but tutor for the nonce to a Russian prince, was smoking a cigarette in his rooms in St. Petersburg when a servant announced that a moujik wanted to see him very urgently. The unknown visitor was shown up and appeared in the well-worn garb from which Brian O'Lynn derived his simple but practical sartorial notions. To his host's utter bewilderment this uncouth being addressed him in refined English, and presently explained that he was a brother Cantab desirous of securing his good offices. The man, in short, was the Rev. John Sheepshanks, who, having landed some six months before near the mouth of the Amoor River, had made his way alone and on foot through Tartary, Turkestan and Siberia to the banks of the Neva."

Civilization vs. Savagery.

It is popularly supposed that it is civilization that increases and aggravates nervous diseases, but Dr. Brinton says it diminishes them. Among the lowest African races, which might be supposed to be devoid of nerves, he found such diseases very common.

An Interesting Summary of the More Important Doings of Our Neighbors—Weddings and Deaths—Crimes, Casualties and General News Notes.

Minor Mention.

WAYNE COUNTY is overrun with counterfeit $2 bills.

CHARLES HAZELRIGG, a pioneer of Henry County, is dead.

L. E. MCDONALD's residence at Morristown was struck by lightning. Loss, $700.

FARMERS in the northern part of Wayne County have organized a stock company to bore for oil.

MRS. EMILY PRICHET, aged 83, Centerville, fell down a strairway and was probably fatally injured.

HENRY STEIN had his foot crushed at the cerealine mill in Columbus, and is threatened with lockjaw.

JOHN HANCOCK, a farmer, residing west of Muncie, lost two valuable horses, which were killed by lightning.

CHARLES MARVIN, brakeman on the Clover Leaf, was knocked from a side ladder on his train at Clark's Hill and, falling under the wheels, was decapitated. He leaves a wife and five little children.

BURR PYLE, one of the oldest residents of Wabash County, died at his home, two miles southeast of Wabash, aged 69. Mr. Pyle suffered a stroke of paralysis two days before and never rallied. He had resided in Wabash County nearly fifty years.

RALPH MCLAUGHLIN of South Bend, tried to jump on the platform of the north-bound express train on the Big Four as it was leaving Wabash. Missing his hold he fell between two ties, and a box on a passenger car crushed his head. McLaughlin is about 25 years old. His recovery is doubtful.

CLARA, the daughter of John Steele of Jackson County, has been subject to spasms since infancy, having them almost every day, and as high as fifteen in one week. Doctors could do nothing for her. Now it is claimed Rev. Merrill, the faith cure preacher, made a prayer about eight weeks ago, petitioning the Lord to remove this infirmity, and Miss Steele has not had a spasm since.

CARL BOWEN's team ran away at Vincennes, and in its flight dashed across a pond where the water was two feet deep. Some men caught the mules and then went back to look for the young man. His body was found lying in the pond, one hand sticking out of the water. Over one eye was a wound. It is thought that one of the mules kicked him and knocked him off the wagon into the water, and that, being unable to rise, he was drowned.

WHILE workmen were tearing down the Old Star Hotel at Center Point, they were surprised upon finding buried at a depth of over six feet a curious box. They carefully, but eagerly, opened it, expecting to find vast wealth tradition said was buried in that vicinity. They were horrified to find that it contained a human skeleton, that of a man. The find produced a decided sensation, and it is associated with the strange disappearance of a man from that city several years ago. It is a mystery, and is likely to remain so.

DR. C. N. METCALF, Secretary of the State Board of Health, was in Elwood, investigating the smallpox cases in that vicinity. He expressed himself perfectly satisfied with the precautions taken by the local Board of Health to prevent the spread of the disease and prepared a statement for the press, in which he declares the danger of an epidemic is decreasing and he anticipates no such result from the present situation. He commends the efficient manner in which the matter has been looked after and speaks reassuringly of the future.

C. L. GAUF, head brakeman on freight train No. 54, was killed at Greensburg. In attempting to step from a freight car to the track and was literally ground to pieces, the trunk of his body being found 100 yards from where his legs were picked up. Although he had been in the employ of the road for some time but little is known of him, he having come from North Carolina. Among his effects picked up at the scene of the accident is a meal ticket on Fred Cruse's Riverside Hotel and restaurant, showing that he boarded there.

MRS. AMOS THOMPSON, widow, residing with her son Cyrus, near Crawfordsville, was killed by a horse. She went to the barn to feed the animal, and entered the stall where the horse was tied. She had a shawl over her head, and it is supposed the horse became frightened at her appearance, and knocking her against the partition stunned her so that she fell down under the animal's feet. It then pawed her head and breast into a mass. A hired hand, on coming into the barn, noticed the horse pawing, and on examination found the remains of Mrs. Thompson. He attempted to enter the stall, and was kicked against the barn. Calling for Cyrus Thompson, he came, and after pacifying the beast carried out the body of his mother. The horse had always been a gentle animal.

AN accident occurred in Muncie which caused great pecuniary damage. The top on the large continuous tank at the Maring Hart Window-Glass Works caved in, tumbling down in the three feet of molten glass, which filled the tank. Just a short time before three men had been at work on top of the arch. The tank was built by the Dixon Wood Company, of Pittsburgh, at a cost of about $70,000, and was one of the largest in the country. When the large fire clay brick structure tumbled in, the natural-gas flame from the furnace burst out, and the large factory had a very close call from being destroyed. One of the men in the factory shut off the gas. Two hundred hands are thrown out of employment for at least three months, and are leaving the city. The cause of the accident is attributed to the use of poor material in the massive structure. Mr. Hart is one of the best-known glass manufacturers in the country.

AT Gas City a head-end collision occurred on the Panhandle Railroad within the city limits. A through freight was entering the yards from the east at a speed of fifteen or twenty miles an hour at the same time that a yard engine, attached to a string of cars, was moving at a moderate speed in the opposite direction. The engines met on a sharp curve and reared up from the force of the crash. The trainmen escaped by jumping, and were not seriously injured. Several cars were shattered and derailed, and the money loss is heavy. The track was blockaded for several hours.

THE action of the Citizens' Gas Company of Elwood in raising the price of gas 100 per cent. has caused a big kick on the part of the consumers and they will bore a new well unless the company comes down.

A TIN-PLATE worker named William Evans was instantly killed at the American Tin-plate Works, Elwood, in a novel manner. The buildings are lighted by electricity. Evans was standing on an iron floor with a pair of tongs in his hands when he attempted to push an electric light wire out of the way. The instant the tongs touched the wire Evans dropped to the floor dead. He was about 27 years of age, and was married only last week.

A Matter of Health

It costs more to make Royal Baking Powder than any other, because its ingredients are more highly refined and expensive. But the Royal is correspondingly purer and higher in leavening strength, and of greater money value to the consumer. The difference in cost of Royal over the best of the others does not equal the difference in leavening strength, nor make good the inferior work of the cheaper powders, nor remove the impurities which such powders leave in the food.

Where the finest food is required, the Royal Baking Powder only can be used.

Where the question of health is considered, no baking powder but Royal can be used with safety. All others are shown by official analyses to contain lime, ammonia or alum.

How We Grow Old.

The late Professor Faraday adopted the theory that the natural age of man is 100 years. The duration of life he believed to be measured by the time of growth. In the camel this takes eight, in the horse five, in the lion four, in the dog two, in the rabbit one year.

The natural termination is five removes from these several points. Man being 20 years in growing, lives five times 20 years—that is, 100; the camel is eight years in growing, and lives 40 years, and so with other animals.

The man who does not die of sickness lives anywhere from 80 to 100 years.

The Professor divided life into equal halves—growth and decline—and these into infancy, youth, virility, and age. Infancy extends to the 20th year; youth to the 50th, because it is in this period the tissues become firm; virility from 50 to 75, during which the organism remains complete, and at 72 years old age commences, to last as the diminution of reserved forces is hastened or retarded.

A Paper Match.

Not many improvements are recorded nowadays in the manufacture of matches, but it has lately been proposed to substitute for the ordinary article a novel kind of paper arrangement described as resembling in its general construction the coiled tape measure used by tailors. The coil thus employed is a roll of paraffined paper inclosed in a metallic case, one end of the paper projecting after the manner of the tape measure, and at regular intervals on the paper are small points covered with an igniting substance. In practice one has only to give the end of the paper a smart pull, bringing the igniting point in contact with a small steel plate, and a light is struck which burns slowly and evenly, and, on the roll being thus exhausted from use, a fresh one can be inserted in its place. Matches of this description can be manufactured with great rapidity and at very small cost.

Needles and Their Origin.

Originally, all the needles used in Europe must have come from the East; and it seems passing strange that no record has been kept of the time at which these useful little instruments were first manufactured there, but it must have been at a very early period. They were made in Nuremberg in great quantities in the fourteenth century. Their manufacture was introduced into England under Queen Elizabeth, and flourished to such an extent that the workmen soon constituted a guild, for we read that in 1597 the "Pinners and Needler's petitioned the Queen not to allow foreign pins and needles to be imported.

Just to Name It.

Bartlett dislikes churches and lets ministers severely alone. The other day, Bartlett took his 6-months-old baby to church to have it christened. Next day, old Mrs. Gadder met Bartlett on the street and spoke to him about it.

"Why, Mr. Bartlett, I'm so glad to welcome you to the church. Have you seen the errors of your ways?"

"No, ma'am," replied Bartlett.

"Then why did you take your baby to the church?"

Bartlett looked out of the corner of his eye at the sharp-nosed gossip, and answered: "Simply for the name of the thing."

A Nice Distinction.

Five-year-old Mary had fretted and made herself generally disagreeable, and at night her older sister put her to bed with a feeling of relief.

"There, child," she said, as she kissed her good-night. "I hope you won't be so cross to-morrow."

Mary had cuddled down under the blankets, but at this speech she sat upright again.

"Ah!" said she, "when it's me, you say 'cross;' when it's you, you say 'nervous.'"

Pleasure of Ocean Travel.

On the Ocean Steamer—Does the Captain say whether we shall break the record or not?"

"Yes, he says the record or the boiler must go."

"How lovely!"—Texas Siftings.

More Comfortable.

"You seem an honest fellow and I feel an interest in you. Could anything be done to make you more comfortable?" said a prison visitor. "You bet!" "What?" "Let me out!" — Waverley Magazine.

THE one thing that all hate the most, can never be helped; we all hate to grow old.

A FULL STOMACH ought to cause you no discomfort whatever. If it does, though—if there's any trouble after eating—take Dr. Pierce's Pleasant Pellets. They're a perfect and convenient vest-pocket remedy. One of these tiny, sugar-coated, anti-bilious granules at a dose regulates and corrects the entire system. Sick or Bilious Headaches, Constipation, Indigestion, Bilious Attacks, and all derangements of the liver, stomach, and bowels are prevented, relieved, and permanently cured.

They're the smallest, easiest to take, cheapest, and best. They're guaranteed to give satisfaction, or money is returned.

R is perfectly, permanently, positively cured by Doctor Sage's Catarrh Remedy. The proprietors of this medicine prove that by their offer. It's $500 cash for a case of Catarrh which they cannot cure. By all druggists, 50 cents.

Lost.

Among the puzzling questions put to young men and women in collegiate examinations is this: "What are the ten days in the world's history in which nothing was eaten, nothing drunk, and nothing spoken?" The answer is, of course, the period between October 5 and 15, in the year 1582, when Pope Gregory XIII. sliced ten days off the calender. That was the beginning of the Gregorian calendar. From 1582 to 1700 the difference between the old and new styles was ten days. In the eighteenth century it was eleven days. In the present century it is twelve days. From 1900 to 2100 it will be thirteen days.

THE LADIES.

The pleasant effect and perfect safety with which ladies may use the California liquid laxative, Syrup of Figs, under all conditions, makes it their favorite remedy. To get the true and genuine article, look for the name of the California Fig Syrup Co., printed near the bottom of the package.

An Indorsement.

Mrs. Bloobumper—I'm glad you indorsed what the minister said in his sermon.

Bloobumper (surprised)—Indorsed?

Mrs. Bloobumper—Certainly. Didn't I see you nodding all through it?

New Train Service.

The Chicago, Rock Island and Pacific Railway, on Sunday, May 7, added some important trains to their already excellent service, and travelers en route to Denver, Pueblo, Colorado Springs, or to Minneapolis, St. Paul, and Sioux Falls should note this fact.

The new train West is called the Rocky Mountain Limited, runs via Omaha and Lincoln, and leaves Chicago daily at 10:25 a. m., arriving at Denver next day at 6:40 p. m., Colorado Springs at 6:55 p. m., Pueblo at 8:35 p. m.

The new train to the Northwest is called the "Twin City," and leaves Chicago daily at 3:50 p. m., arriving at Minneapolis and St. Paul early the next morning. Both these trains are vestibuled, carry Pullman's superb service, as well as the ever popular Rock Island Dining Car Service. Take the Great Rock Island Route. The Twin City Express leaving Chicago daily at 3:50 p. m. carries through sleepers to Kansas City, arriving there at 8:30 a. m.

"German Syrup"

JUDGE J. B. HILL, of the Superior Court, Walker county, Georgia, thinks enough of German Syrup to send us voluntarily a strong letter endorsing it. When men of rank and education thus use and recommend an article, what they say is worth the attention of the public. It is above suspicion. "I have used your German Syrup," he says, "for my Coughs and Colds on the Throat and Lungs. I can recommend it for them as a first-class medicine."—Take no substitute.

The time is near at hand
When throughout the gladsome land,
The meadow lark will sweetly sing at morn,
And the bobolink so coy
Will laugh aloud for joy
While the farmer goes a-gunning for the crow that steals his corn.

A Sad Death.

Can you describe anything worse than a young person dying by inches with consumption, cut off in the bloom of youth, when bright prospects of happiness and prosperity are before them, a very sad death indeed. Is it not a fact that most cases of this kind are brought on by a cough, only slight at first, then more violent, followed by night sweats and a general breaking down of the entire system. These are cases in which people are to blame. Why not check this slight cough. Dr. Marshall's Lung Syrup is guaranteed to cure, it will prevent consumption. Use it before it is too late. By Druggists, 25, 50 and $1.

Cures Dyspepsia.

Rebecca Wilkinson, of Brownsvalley, Ind., says: "I have been in a distressed condition for three years from nervousness, weakness of the stomach, dyspepsia and indigestion until my health was gone, I had been doctoring constantly with no relief. I bought one bottle of South American Nervine, which did me more good good any $50 worth of doctoring I ever did in my life. I would advise every weakly person to use this valuable and lovely remedy: a few bottles of it has cured me completely. I consider it the grandest medicine in the world." Warranted the most wonderful stomach and nerve cure ever known. Trial bottle 15 cents. Sold by Robbins & McCord.

My hopes most cruelly thou dost cmar.
Wouldst crush me as a flea or gnat?"
She simply said; "Here is your ghat."

The Top Shelf.

Dr. Marshall's Lung Syrup has reached the top shelf. There is nothing that equals this medicine for coughs, colds, asthma, bronchitis or any affection of the throat or lungs. It has been thoroughly tested for this class of diseases, and stands in the front rank at the head. This medicine is guaranteed to give satisfaction, who could ask for more. Give Dr. Marshall's Lung Syrup a trial; it has cured others and will cure you. Do not fail to use this in time. Price 25, 50 and $1, by all druggists.

Don't Travel Without It.

Dr. M. J. Davis is a prominent physician of Lewis, Cass county, Iowa, and has been actively engaged in the practice of medicine at that place for the past thirty-five years. On the 26th of May, while in Des Moines en route for Chicago, he was suddenly taken with an attack of diarrhœa. Having sold Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhœa Remedy for the past seventeen years, and knowing its reliability, he procured a 25 cent bottle, two doses of which completely cured him. The excitement and change of water and diet incident to traveling often produce a diarrhœa. Everyone should procure a bottle of this Remedy before leaving home. For sale by Robbins & McCord.

Mrs. Samuel Moody has returned from Butler where she has been spending a few days with her sister Mrs. Dr. Fanning.

Gertrude Willis was married Tuesday evening at eight o'clock to John Harnerday, a reporter on the Indianapolis News.

Rev. Mr. McCloe, wife and daughter Alta, attended the U. B. Ministerial meeting at Pleasant Lake last Thursday and Friday.

A report comes Tuesday noon that J. W. Goodwin's saw mill at Pleasant Lake had just blown up and that some persons were killed,

J. N. Wilson and son has sold out his stock of boots and shoes to E. A. Brown of Auburn, who has moved his family here, and commenced business.

Editor Conlogue and wife of Kendallville and Q. A. Hossler of the Warsaw Indianian, attended the wedding of Trudie Willis and Mr. Harnerday, Tuesday evening.

S. J. Locke and his daughter Cora, Locke, went to Ft. Wayne Saturday to meet Mrs. Dell Locke, who came up that day from Decatur to visit the old home people at Waterloo.

The ministerial institute of north Ohio conference is in session in the U. B. church. The free lectures by the Smith Brothers Wednesday night and Thursday night will be of more than ordinary interest.

Blanche Jackman, Matie Till, Nettie Chamberlain, Ethel Waterman, and Verna Darby attended the Christian Endeavor convention at Auburn last week and report a pleasant as well as a profitable meeting.

Phil Plum and wife returned last week from Chicago. They report living reasonable. Mrs. Plum thinks the Indiana building not quite equal to some of the others as to furniture. Perhaps it will be by the 15th, when it will be dedicated.

Mrs. Bowers died quite suddenly Wednesday morning of last week. She seemed as well as usual Tuesday, and was out on that day visiting some of her neighbors. Mrs. Bowers was over seventy years of age, and had been residing for some years with her son, Elijah Hill.

We had the pleasure of attending an entertainment for the young people at the Showers' church on last Sunday night. The house was packed full and the exercises good. The rendering of one song, "the Echo" was a success. The meeting was under the management of Rolla Talbert and Henry Fretz.

It is said by many the cemetery was never before in as good order, on decoration day, or so beautifully decorated. Greenhouse, hardy and flowers native in this locality were all put to good use. Several set pieces, stars, crosses and wreaths composed of Mandrake or May-apple blossom with its waxy looking petals attracted much admiration. Among the floral tributes was a beautiful harp placed on the grave of Della Shoner.

Wednesday evening the W. C. T. U. met with Mrs Shoner. No doubt many ladies have refrained from becoming members of this organization, because they are already weighed down with duties they must not shirk, and cannot shift on to other shoulders. There are even more perhaps, who while every instinct of their being cries out against intemperance, vice and immorality that are the crying evil of our land, and who tremble for their husbands and sons, yet see so little accomplished, as result of prayers, labor and money spent, see perhaps when one saloon is closed two open in its place, it does indeed seem hopeless, but there is more to do. The W. C. T. U. are not confining their efforts, to putting down intemperance, They are working on very many lines, generally for the advancement, education and protection of women and children, for the uplifting of the down trodden and oppressed. Who can have read the reports of the Woman's Congress at Jackson Park, without being convinced, that a power is at work that will eventuate in great changes, and great good to the world. Of course there are those whose business is principally to advocate woman suffrage, but while this is well enough, the majority of those great hearted grand women, are on the right track, their arguments are good, and they are sound to the core. Their work and efforts are to do good, to educate to uplift and protect to save the fallen care for the waifs, give women and children a fair chance As sure as the sun shines, all this will put down intemperance and vice, and it will give women the ballot, and a reform in politics. Even now there are women advocating a restricted ballot, an educational restriction. It has been generally believed the fair now in progress in Chicago, would result in great financial good to this country, in adding to commercial prosperity and increasing our friendly relations with other nations, that it would be a great educator. All this is probably true, but it may also be true that it may prove an educator in directions not counted on, and that immense as the fair is, the consequences resulting from that opportunity, may be far more immense, as far as reaching as the earth, and possibly as Eternity.

BUTLER.

Proceedings of the Haswell-Mathews reunion in south Wilmington will appear next week.

David Knisely and wife are seeing the world's fair sights this week. A number of other Butler people are also there.

Many business changes have taken place since the exodus, and those best acquainted with our streets make an occasional blunder.

T. C. Fralich of Garrett has moved to Detroit where he has secured employment, and will perhaps make that city their future home.

The recent heavy rains have checked the working of corn and unless a change comes soon, farmers will face the well known conditions, namely, "everything to do at once" and not time to do it.

The Butler Manufacturing Co., are about to enter into the manufacture of bicycles The market for this product is almost unlimited and the profits very high. The bottom will soon fall out, and not a few manufactories and dealers will be in mourning.

The basket factory enterprise is pushing things with all diligence. They have secured the service of a practical basket maker for foreman and will be ready for operation in a few weeks. They should push things with all possible speed as the season for the sale of baskets is upon us now.

The indictment found against Thomas Revett by the grand jury last week for the killing of Warren Blackwell, calls forth much comment both for and against He had no difficulty in securing bail for his appearance at the circuit court for trial, some of our best citizens going on his bonds.

ECKHART CARRIAGE CO.

The Christian Endeavor Meeting.

The Y. P. S. C. E. convention which was in session here Wednesday and Thursday of last week was a very interesting and enthusiastic one. The territory comprises four counties: Steuben, Lagrange, Noble and DeKalb, and is called the 5th District

The first session was called at three o'clock, Wednesday afternoon Miss Flora Hoffman, of Auburn, gave the welcome address in clear tones and a pleasant manner. Miss Isbel, of Kendallville, made the response, which was in a bright and happy strain The devotional half hour was conducted by Miss Rose Beams, of Spencerville.

The first exercise on the evening program was a prayer meeting by the Junior Endeavors, which was led by Miss Pauline Wambaugh, a little miss of about ten years of age, whose courage and self possession was highly commended. The house was full, quite a number of ministers was present The address of the evening being given by Rev. H. S. Riggs, of Goshen, which was full of interest and instruction, at the close of the address an informal reception was held. Cake and lemonade were served by the young members of the three Auburn societies.

THURSDAY.

The sunrise prayer meeting was led by Miss Hattie Wiley, of Angola, and was well attended considering the rainy morning.

The morning session convened at 7 o'clock. The devotional exercises were led by Harry Hendershot, of Newville. This was followed by a paper on "Christian Combines" by J. F. Shuman, of Waterloo. It was full of good things. Another paper, "What the Columbian Year Suggests to Christian Endeavors," by Rev. Hugh Stackhouse, of Kendallville, was excellent and no doubt will be an inspiration to many Endeavors.

Then followed four ten-minute addresses on "Christian Endeavor as a Society of Work." "What can we do for Christ and the Church?" by Orra Collins, of Crooked Creek. For the "Sunday School," Miss Dora Delay, Lima; for "Our Pastor," Henry Hathaway, St. Joe; for "Our Associates," Mrs. Mattie Gardner, Fairfield Center. These were good, brief and to the point. The next was a paper on "Junior Work" by Miss Emily Kinney. This was followed by a general discussion. "The Consecration Meeting" by Mrs. Jennie Adams, was given careful consideration, and the speaker left many good impressions in the minds of her hearers. "Everyday Endeavoring" by Miss Bernie McKinney, of Cromwell, was a most interesting and practical paper. The discussion of the question of "What are we doing for Missions?" was conducted by Miss Anna Sniff, of Angola, in a dignified and excellent manner. Next came a narrative report of the different societies unner the title of "Glances over the Union," by Miss Nettie Chamberlain, who was secretary of the convention.

The reports of delegates were given and were especially interesting in one feature. All had progressed in the last year in numbers and in effective work.

The afternoon session opened at 1:30 o'clock by a praise service led by B. M. Hastings, Auburn, followed by a discussion on "Committee Work," by Miss Frank McCartney, of Kendallville. An excellent paper on "Daily Bible Study," by Miss Addie Widney, of St. Joe, was full of good suggestions that should be carried home by everyone present The Question Box was conducted by Rev. J. F. Cavins, D. D., Peru.

The evening session convened at 7 o'clock, and opened with devotional exercises, conducted by the president, J. C. Kimmel, of Ligonier. The convention sermon, "Christian Zeal," by Rev. J. F. Cavins, D. D., Peru, was listened to with excellent attention, and was instructive as well as entertaining. The consecration meeting, which followed the sermon, was in the judgment of many the best of all. All over the large audience could be heard the young voices, eager to renew their vows for the coming year, several rising at the same time. After the parting song, "God be with you till we meet again," the convention closed, the delegates all expressing themselves as having enjoyed a most pleasant and enjoyable time. One of the most noticeable features of the convention was the good singing which was conducted by B. M. Hastings. Ernest Williams led by means of the cornet and Miss Hoffman presided at the organ On the last evening, the convention was favored with music by a male quartet, George Kennedy, Chas. Reed, John Shuman, of Waterloo, and B. M. Hastings, of Auburn.

After a spirited contest between Waterloo and Kendallville, Waterloo succeeded in capturing the convention for next year.

They Wrestled.

The wrestling contest advertised for Wednesday evening of last week was largely attended. Armory hall commenced to fill early, as other matches were to be decided before the event of the evening was to take place.

The first of these matches was a catch-as-catch-can between Dan Yingling and "Peabody," an employe of the Palace barn Dan had the advantage of height and length of arm, and it took him just 7 minutes to win a fall. "Peabody" won the second fall in 19 minutes. After wrestling 12 minutes in the third round the match was declared a draw. This was a contest of time and awkwardness.

The second event was in the same style, and was spirited from start to finish. It was between Grindle and Garrett. Both were active, but Grindle's grub basket was much in the way and Garrett won the two falls in 11 minutes.

Then at 9 o'clock, amidst great applause, the big fellows, Comstock and West, entered the ring, the former confident of an easy victory, the latter with determination depicted in his countenance. West was in much better form than in his first encounter with Comstock and that there was good solid work to be done was manifest to all. The conditions barred the strangle, bites and gouges, Comstock to win five falls in one hour or forfeit $25. Following is the record of falls:

Falls	1	2	3	4	5
Time	12:40	12:33	1:55	14:00	—

In the fifth, Comstock resorted to the strangle, and was immediately and repeatedly commanded to break by Referee Thomas, but failing to comply, the match was decided in favor of West Comstock immediately challenged West to wrestle the following evening, he to throw West five times in 40 minutes under the same conditions. Following is the result, 5 minutes rest being allowed between falls and these rests leaving but 20 minutes for actual work:

Falls	1	2	3	4	5	Total
Time	6:00	1:50	7:06	8:50	7:12	25:58

West winning by nearly six minutes.

Dr. Miles Medical Co., Elkhart, Ind.

Gentlemen: I take pleasure in informing you of the very beneficial results which have followed the use of DR. MILES' RESTORATIVE NERVINE in the case of myself and wife. For a year I was subject to a distressing pain at the base of the brain and upper portion of the spinal cord. I lost flesh and was greatly troubled with sleeplessness. Your Nervine was highly recommended to me. My case had been so obstinate that I had no confidence in the efficacy of any medicine. Yet as a last resort I consented to give it a trial. Much to my surprise, I experienced marked benefit; my sleeplessness disappeared; my headache was removed; my spirits and general health greatly improved. I soon gained twenty pounds. ALL THIS OCCURRED AFTER EMINENT AND WELL KNOWN PHYSICIANS HAD FAILED. My wife is taking the Nervine with the best of results. LOUIS D. VANDERVERE.

Oh, What a Fool He Is,

The Garrett Clipper was filled to the gunwales last week with nauseating truck about Auburn and the COURIER. Everybody here knows him to be an unhung liar, and a man morally and socially a leper—one who had not been on the streets of his own town sober for many years till Cal Husselman thrashed the taste for cheap whisky out of him. Here, where he is known, it matters little what he says. But he seems to have broken loose in the wilds of Whitley county where such freaks are never seen except to be hunted up and sent to the asylum for the feeble minded. He now claims to own Congressman McNagny, body, soul and breeches. He even claims that he alone, the man Auburn has seen reel over her streets slobbering drunk a hundred times, that he alone has selected for Auburn citizens, Auburn's next postmaster. Hear him: "We met our congressman and argued with him as to his best interests. Later we wrote him that as far as we (in Garrett) are concerned, any good democrat will suit for postmaster at Auburn, barring J. A. Barns. The Clipper could have made Barns postmaster as easily as snapping our finger."

And then the fool adds:

> A prominent physician at Auburn told us this story and we are prepared for the battle. He said:
>
> I was talking with Congressman McNagny and he wanted to know what I thought the Clipper would say if he appointed Barns postmaster. Of course I knew, but I said, "Mac, what do you think it would say?" "Well," answered McNagny, "I think it would be printed in blood the following week."

From this sort of slush, one may see how he claims to own McNagny, and how "Mac" and the "Doctor," to let the Clipper tell it, were working together to do the Clipper's bidding. Who was this "Doctor?" It could have been no other in Auburn than Dr. Nusbaum. And to show that the Clipper is probably lying out of whole cloth, we need only allude to the fact that about the time he claims this precious dialogue took place that Dr. Nusbaum, May 15, called at the COURIER office and asked to see us. We were absent, but about an hour after, saw the doctor passing and asked if he wanted to see us. He said, "Yes." We stood at the COURIER steps and talked some five minutes, in which he voluntarily told us, as he had several times before, that he was taking no part in the postoffice matter, but at this time added that, "Mike Boland and Willis Brown had been helping Brandon all along." This might well surprise us, as Boland and Brown had told us when we went to consult them at the first, that they would take no part for or against anyone. We leave our readers to draw their own conclusions. If McNagny wishes to deny being in the unenviable position the Clipper places him in, or if Dr. Nusbaum wishes to deny that he is the "Doctor" mentioned in the Clipper, or if Brown and Boland wish to deny what the Doctor told us—all can have the use of the COURIER columns to get at the public ear. That the filthy and foul mouthed "we" of the Clipper has been poking his nose into Auburn's business, as usual, is proved by what this same Hank Little recently told John Robbins in a conversation they had. He said he would as soon see John Robbins made postmaster as anyone, unless it might be Willis Brown, to whom he was under obligations, He added, he did not care who was made postmaster at Auburn, and that he did not have anything against Barns. Then he promised to write a letter to McNagny, asking that Robbins be given the place. It will be seen that some one is accountable for several lies. They can fix it up to suit themselves.

It might not be amiss to allude right here to an article in the Clipper of a week or so ago, that is now being copied into papers in surrounding towns, in which the Clipper stated that it was John Robbins' work, having Mrs. Dills made assistant. The facts are, that Mr. Robbins, like the editor of this paper, or any other self respecting man, refused to consent to any such arrangement, telling those who were making it a "condition" that he would forfeit his chances, rather than sell a position in advance, and at the bidding of two or three political bosses.

One other point and we drop the disgusting subject: He says he could have made us postmaster. He need make no excuses for the failure to do so. We have no desire to hold any position at the hands of any drunken dead beat, for every time he came into the office, we would fancy he was looking for a telegraph pole to assist him in his performance of an imperative duty, or a box of rough on rats wherewith he might do the community the only graceful thing he ever attempted. It has been a year or so since we have noticed the weekly batch of column on column of filthy lies from this disgraceful sheet and its doubly disgraced and frequently licked editor, and we do not propose to nauseate the people of Auburn and DeKalb county very often by an allusion to a subject so low and vile. But we feel it our duty to ourself and to the public, now and then to expose this foul mouthed and disgraceful idiot that insists continually on washing his dirty linen in the public view. Those who know the entire Clipper gang, will read this article with a great deal of pleasure. Those who don't know them, are informed that we have proof of all we say and much more. We have only said this much in order that other people besides the sixty readers of the Clipper in Auburn and the seventy or eighty in Garrett, should have some knowledge of the dirty work they are trying to do.

The Indiana Almanac.

A copy of the Indiana Almanac for 1893 has just been received by us. It is without question the most complete and best work of its kind that has yet been issued in the state. The main features of the work are deserving of extended notice. The World's Fair, which is to be held this year, will no doubt be visited by almost every citizen of Indiana. This important subject is fully outlined in twenty-eight pages of printed matter, showing cuts of the buildings and descriptions of all the interesting features and exhibits. Complete tables and Tariff Duties and increases are noticed. A reliable table of the Indiana postoffices with their salaries. This constitutes a reference volume for those interested in the new appointments expected after March 4th. The United States Government, with the names and salaries of every official therein, from President down are given. A full list of United States Senators and Representatives is also furnished. Tables of population of States cities, etc., and other matters of paramount importance are also set fully forth. A concise collection of general information on the recent political revolution is perhaps the most interesting feature of this work. The vote of Indi na by counties on both State and National tickets is scheduled, and separate tables are given on legislative districts. The great result by popular vote and electoral votes is also shown. For the benefit of handy reference the platforms of the four leading political parties in 1892 are appended.

Pleasant Reunion.

Reunions of old friends and neighbors are always very pleasant, and one of the most enjoyable of those that have come to our notice lately, is the one reported at James Coleman's east of town on Saturday last. It started as a reunion of the Mathews family, Mrs. Coleman and Mrs. W. A. Rose being members of that well known family. But the circle kept widening till at the reunion, there were guests from many different localities, some from Ohio, Michigan and Illinois, including Rev. Mr. Hootman and wife from Hicksville, as well as others from Toledo, Columbus and Ft. Wayne. There were about 150 present and the tables and seats were arranged under the trees. But the sudden rain drove them into the house, where the festivities were continued with as much enjoyment as if nothing had happened. A peculiarity of the meeting, was in the presence there of Mr. and Mrs. Sherman Dickinson, who are deaf mutes, and about thirty of the guests could talk with fingers and understand them. This added to the enjoyment of all, for Mr. Dickinson finding himself in congenial society, made himself highly agreeable to them, telling pleasant stories and cracking jokes in a way that all enjoyed greatly. It made people realize, what a great invention it was, to create this simple manual language, that enables these unfortunate people to communicate with their neighbors almost as well as those who are the fortunate possessors of all their faculties. And all present had a splendid time.

Its Business Attributes, Grand Manufacturing Opportunities and Prominent Enterprises.

[BY G. OLERKIRK.]

Auburn has as good a location in every way, for a growing city, as Ft. Wayne, and probably it would be equally as large if it had obtained as many manufacturing industries. It is unnecessary to say tqat the amount of manufacturing in a town or city marks its prosperity. Every school boy knows this. The location of Auburn upon three of the most important trunk lines of railways, each competing for business in the best manner possible, renders Auburn preeminent in its position to please manufacturers. The Wabash, the Baltimore & Ohio and the Lake Shore & Michigan Southern railways are three most advantageous lines in the country for freight to any portion of America. There are numerous cities which have 25,000 or more of population which do not possess nearly as good railway facilities as Auburn. For instance, Richmond, Ind, Muncie, Ind., Sandusky, O., Bay City, Mich., and many other places which might be mentioned.

Auburn has a population of 4,000 inhabitants. It has a good drainage for sewerage via Cedar Creek, rendering it in an excellent sanitary condition.

The Hoosier Fire Department here is too well known to require comment, always prompt to the rescue. The fact that Auburn is the county seat is an advantage to it, but only one fault we think of in this connection, that is, that the highways leading to Auburn are in need of more efficient labor and it would pay all concerned if stone roads were constructed by which people of the county could reach Auburn in a more facile manner.

At present, there are a number of busy and successful manufacturing concerns here, such as the Auburn Church Furniture Co., the extensive works of W. H. Kiblinger, the Zimmerman Wind Mill Works, the Eckhart Carriage Works, the Monitor Wind Mill Co., Auburn Stove Co., and foundries, woolen mills, flouring mills, lumber, sash, door and blind and cigar manufactories, and the industries and enterprises named below.

There are churches and schools, public institutions, lodges and societies to suit the most critical person in the world and good general society in Auburn. It is a most enjoyable residence locality and new comers are welcomed here.

RALPH L. THOMAS

Is the agreeable proprietor of the Model Restaurant and Bakery here. This establishment is neat and inviting to the most particular. Meals and lunches are served at all hours. Farmers should not fail to come here and get a good square meal when in town, as his prices are reasonable and dealing correct. He always has on display a fine line of fresh bread, pies, cakes, buns and everything in the bakery and confectionery line. He is a genial gentleman to patronize. Ice cream, lemonade, fruits, etc.

SHEFFER & CO.,

Wm. Sheffer and Charles Rainier are esteemed manufacturers and dealers in harness here. They have a first class store where complete assortments are found of light and heavy harness, single and double harness, whips, robes, trunks and valises, blankets, fly nets and general horse furnishing goods and buggy appurtenances, etc., can be found here to please all. They also have a good manufacturing department and make new harness to order and repair old perfectly. This is a straightforward and appreciated firm who are esteemed by all.

HUB AND SPOKE FACTORY.

Henry and B. J. Trentman conduct an industry here which is of material aid to the town and surrounding country. They have an extensive plant embracing all modern facilities. The hubs and spokes manufactured here find a ready market. They are well finished and are made from the best material and please their patrons. These commendatory and cultured business gentlemen have reliable modes of dealing.

FRANK A. HOFF

Is a genial and commendable general merchant here on Seventh street. He has extra fine assortments of all goods most adapted to the wants of the public, such as dry goods, groceries and provisions, canned goods, crystal ware, crockery, wooden ware, etc. He deals in butter, eggs, etc., also. This is a meritorious merchant who deals honorably by all.

O. T. SALYER

Is the obliging and experienced restaurant keeper next door to the postoffice. He has also a choice stock of candies and confectionery and temperance beverages, ice cream, etc. This is a good place to patronize. He is ever attentive and pleases his customers.

KESSLER & BRO.,

Manufacturers of the following popular brands of cigars: K. & B., Receipt, Young America, Bill Head and Little Salesman. This practical and energetic is composed of Theo. Kessler, Jr., and Wm. F. Kessler. They have a very good factory with all modern appurtenances for manufacturing cigars of the best merit. Their brands above named are luxurious and sell readily to the trade. These are progressive and laudable gentlemen in their transactions.

E. A. BENEDICT

Has a fine machine shop here for small work. He has all needful machinery and appurtenances for doing a general jobbing and manufacturing business. He manufactures drive well filters and repairs bicycles as a specialty and repairs all kinds of machinery from sewing machines to steam engines. This is an honorable and experienced gentleman who always does well by his many patrons. He has been established here for the past four years.

RICKEL & SPROTT.

Under the Farmers Bank, corner of Main and Seventh streets, Auburn, are superior dealers in real estate, whose advertisement appears in another column These accomplished business gentlemen conduct a genteel real estate business buying, dealing, selling, abstracting conveyancing, etc. They are offering unrivaled advantages to their patrons who wish to purchase anything in real estate farms, business and dwelling lots, etc., here and elsewhere. They can be relied on for accuracy and rectitude in all details. They also conduct the B. & O. ticket agency. Call and see this enterprising firm. They also represent the leading fire, life and accident insurance companies and negotiate good paper. They sell railroad and steamship tickets to any part of the world.

C. C. SHAFFER & CO.

Are prominent in the front ranks of leading dealers of this vicinity. They have an elegant furniture and undertaking emporium and has constantly on display superb invoices of parlor, dining room and library furniture, elaborate upholstery, merchandise, and models of beauties in fancy rockers, sofas, etc., to please the most fastidious. These gentlemen are professional funeral directors and enbalmers of well known ability and always gives satisfaction. The senior member of the firm also is senior partner with a son at Albion in the same business. Unrivaled bargains can be had at either store. C. C. Shaffer has been in the furniture and undertaking business in Auburn for thirty years.

PETER YOUNG

Is a merchant tailor who has excellent ways of doing business. He is very skillful in cutting and he manufactures to order the best fitting and stylish garments. Give this pleasing and satisfactory gentleman a call. He has a good stock to select from.

JOSEPH RAINIER

Is a popular meat dealer. You should at this market seek, six days out of every week, fresh or salt meats, cuts of ham, sausage, chops of mutton, lamb, fattest stock from field or yard, tenderest steak, fish or game. He sells to rich or poor the same. He always deals honorably and is a favorite.

G. W. GORDON.

Is the well appreciated citizen who is postmaster of Auburn. He has resided here for 23 years entering into the photographing business when he came here. He was postmaster during the administration of President Arthur and was reappointed under President Harrison. In the meantime the business of Auburn office has more than doubled. It is constantly increasing. The office is very accurately and commendably conducted, and shows in every way the management of an experienced and cultured postmaster. Mr. Gordon served for three years in the war of the great rebellion. He is a prominent member of the G. A. R. organization and the commander of DeLong Post No. 67.

SCHAAB & BRO.

C. A. and W. H. Schaab dealers in dry goods, dress fabrics, laces, ladies' and gent's furnishing goods, silks, linens, carpets, curtains, draperies, clothing, hats, caps, trunks, etc. Probably in the history of the representative houses no more worthy example can be found of what can be accomplished by energy, integrity and well directed efforts that is so strikingly exemplified as in the successful career of the above named. It is one of the leading houses of this section and is such it is entitled to favorable and more than ordinary mention. It occupies a leading position in this line of trade and during its existence has maintained a high repute for uprightness and commercial enterprise and as each year passes by it gains additional value making more prominent the honorable enlightened policy of which this house is so conspicuous. The proprietors are highly esteemed.

SCHAAB FURNITURE CO.

They are also proprietors of a first-class furniture and undertaking emporium. They have elegant invoices of fancy and substantial furniture, upholstery and merchandise in miscellaneous furniture to please all. They have G. S. McCord in their employ one of the best undertakers in this part of the state, and professional; finest car between Ft. Wayne and Jackson.

E. T. HULL.

Is a well appreciated harness manufacturer here. He has a store which is fitted up elegantly and supplied with the most attractive double and single harness of various designs, horse furnishing goods of all kinds and every thing in horse and buggy supplies from blankets or nets to whips, etc. This is a dealer who has a reputation far and wide for dealing in a satisfactory, liberal and honest manner. He has been here 23 years.

OLDS BROS.

W. J. and A. B. Olds are urbane and responsible dealers in everything from books and school supplies to fancy crockery and tin ware, etc. The novelty store is well named as novelties are always on hand in such goods as wall and window papers, picture mouldings, frames, hanging lamps and other decorations, mirrors, tea and dinner sets and other house furnishing goods, full line of working men's clothing, 5 and 10 cent goods, hosiery, bric-a-bric, jewelry, spectacles, optical goods, in fact something for everybody in useful, ornamental and liberal priced articles. They are excellent and honorable gentlemen to deal with. Read their "ad" in this issue.

C. E. VANAUKEN.

Is the county surveyor of DeKalb county. He was formerly in this capacity in Steuben county for a number of years. He was deputy county surveyor in this county also formerly, and is a gentleman of long and varied experience who is considered an accurate authority in all surveys in this region of the state. He is making, as usual an excellent course of it in this position. He has been a civil engineer 35 years and has done a great deal of railroad work.

A BOLD RAID.

Babe Hawkins and His Band Attack Shelbyville, Ind.

The other night Babe Hawkins, the desperado, with a gang of thirty men armed to the teeth, surprised Shelbyville, Ind., by appearing on the streets for the purpose of avenging the death of his brother, Charles Hawkins, who was lynched a year ago for shooting the City Marshal. He first met ex-Sheriff McGill and informed him of his mission and then started on a hunt for ex-Sheriff McDougall, whom he said he would kill on sight.

They met on the corner and each drew his pistol. McDougall seized the desperado and a desperate struggle ensued. McGill rushed to the scene and was felled by Hawkins, who blew a whistle which brought his thirty men to his rescue. A melee followed and in the rush McDougall's leg was broken and several knife wounds were inflicted on him. Citizens came out by hundreds and a general fight ensued. Ex-Sheriff Magill was stamped into unconsciousness and is in a critical condition. McDougall held on to Hawkins until he was disarmed and in the custody of the officers. Babe Hawkins' wife also waded into the fight with a knife. The officers hurried Hawkins off to the city court jail. Over 500 men gathered at the scene and a lynching was looked for. Justice Gray Craft held an examination and bound Hawkins over to June 30, under $4,000 bond. This he secured, and guarded by his gang, drove off.

Three Indiana Convicts Escape.

August Pries, who was sent from New Albany to serve a two-year term, Charles Edwards, convicted in Johnson County and sentenced to undergo three years, and Charles Smith, a two-year man from Wayne County, all up for petit larceny, escaped from the Indiana Prison South, by going through the roof of a room at the end of the chapel, in which is stored the clothing from convicts upon their arrival at the prison. The men first donned citizens' clothes and then walked along the roof to the trap over the guards' dining-room. Twisting off the hinges they reached the interior, passed down the stairway and walked out. Shortly afterward pursuit was made, but the trio disappeared. They managed to reach Louisville and are still at large.

Thomas Sexton Gives Up His Seat.

London special: Thomas Sexton, anti-Parnellite M. P. for North Kerry, has resigned his seat in Parliament. He was moved to take this step by the resolution passed by a meeting of the Irish Parliamentary party, to the effect that, in consequence of the dissensions as to the constitution of the directorate of the Freeman's Journal, the party take no further action relative to his newspaper affairs. Mr. Sexton regarded this resolution as a vote of censure and stated, as soon as it was passed, that he should retire from Parliament. His colleagues are trying to induce him to reconsider his resignation.

Caterpillar Plague at Jackson.

Mankato (Minn.) special: The caterpillars which infested this district two and three years ago seem to have migrated to the Des Moines River, and at Jackson sixty miles southwest of here, they are more numerous than they ever were in this section. They are there in myriads and have stripped the forest trees, whose leafless branches stand out as bare as in winter. They are everywhere present, covering sidewalks, entering houses and rendering everything unpleasant.

Hangman's Noose Stopped His Speech.

Harry Graham, colored, was hanged in the presence of several thousand people at Pittsburgh, Texas, for the murder of Constable Ledbetter last December. Graham grew so weak on the scaffold from fright that the officers had to hold him up to adjust the rope. He made a rambling speech for nearly half an hour and wanted still more time, but the sheriff gave the signal and the trap fell.

McCaully Escapes with a Fine.

After being out eight hours the jury in the case of State vs. Philip McCaully, indicted for an assault with intent to murder George Rudolph, the ex-priest, at Lafayette, Ind., returned a verdict finding him guilty of plain assault. His fine was fixed at $200, but this being unlawful the jury returned to their room and assessed McCaully $50. Judgment was pronounced on the verdict.

Sir John Hudson Killed.

Major General Sir John Hudson, commander of the British forces in Bombay, was thrown from his horse at Poona and killed.

Baron Fava Congratulated.

President Cleveland has congratulated the Italian Representative, Baron Fava, on his promotion to an ambassadorship.

Disastrous Blaze at Buffalo.

The Lehigh Valley coal trestle and coal storage house at Buffalo, N. Y., containing 60,000 tons of anthracite coal, were destroyed by fire. Loss, $500,000.

Referee Duffy Dead.

The referee in all the big prize fights at the Olympic Club of New Orleans, and recently of the New Crescent Club, is dead.

CRIME AND CASUALTY.

—The house of John Redding, a Kentucky farmer, was struck by lightning and three of its occupants instantly killed.

—In a wreck on the Chicago and Alton Railroad at Vandalia, Mo., Express Messenger Robert Wolf was badly injured. Three passenger coaches were badly demolished and the engine turned upside down. The wreck is a costly one and was caused by a cow being on the track.

—Edward Burt, of Longmeadow, Mass., was thrown from his bicycle two weeks ago, striking upon his head and dislocating backward the second vertebra. The injury did not seem to be serious, and only two days ago was an effort made to reduce the displacement of the vertebra. In cases of this kind, when death does not ensue, paralysis usually follows. None of his faculties were impaired, however. The organs of his throat, nevertheless, were so pushed out of place that he could swallow only with difficulty. The physicians attempted the heroic measure of suspending the young man by the neck. He was lifted from his feet until the pain was so great as to make further treatment dangerous. Burt shows improvement as a result of the surgical hanging.

—The Mobile and Ohio train was held up by six masked men at Forest Lawn, a suburb of East St. Louis, in Illinois, at about 9:30 o'clock Thursday night. The reports credit the robbers with making a clear haul of the contents of the express car after beating the messenger into insensibility. The engineer's cab and the express car were riddled with bullets. Forest Lawn is the identical spot where an attempt was made to rob a train about a week before.

—Tom Figures, a desperate Texarkana, Ark., negro, was arrested for assault. A posse organized and intended to lynch him Wednesday night, but the sheriff learned its intention and hurried him to Bowie County jail, ten miles away. The people are greatly excited and it is possible he may yet be lynched.

—Mrs. Mary B. Course was thrown from a carriage at Racine and fatally injured.

—Ed Young, a farmer living five or six miles west of Grinnell, Iowa, was buncoed out of $3,500 by a couple of sharpers. The plan used was the one which has been in use for years. A stranger wished to buy a farm. A confederate appears at the proper time. A game proposed, with the usual result.

—A terrific windstorm swept Rice County, Minn., doing fully $50,000 damage. The village of Dundas suffered the most severely.

—Henry Reers, an artist of Fort Wayne, Ind., committed suicide by drowning in the St. Joseph River. No motive can be assigned for the act.

—Lieut. Stillman Danforth, a police officer, was instantly killed by a Rock Island train at Chicago.

THE FIRE RECORD.

—Schelp Bros.' wagon and carriage works at St. Louis were destroyed by fire. Loss $100,000.

—A loss of $16,000 was inflicted by a blaze in the Syndicate Block at Minneapolis. The Bradstreet-Thurber Company was the heaviest sufferer.

—A disastrous conflagration occurred at San Francisco, Wednesday morning, which destroyed thirteen residences in the western addition near Golden Gate Park. Three firemen perished in the flames while in the discharge of their duty. Another was fatally injured, and a number were badly bruised and burned. The names of the killed are Richard Windrow, Edward Davis, and Charles Madison. The loss to property is estimated at $100,000.

—Fire in San Francisco destroyed about a dozen fine residences, most of which were of recent construction. Three firemen, named Richard Windrow, Edward Davis and Charles Madison, were instantly killed by the falling of a chimney, and another fireman named Henlit was badly burned. The loss is estimated at $200,000.

—The Bradstreet-Thurber Company's furniture store at Minneapolis was burned, causing a loss of $160,000.

PERSONAL MENTION.

—Obituary: At London, George Potter, the British labor agitator, aged 61. At Whitinsville, Mass., William H. Whiting. At Newark, N. J., Frederick Allen Osborne, aged 68. At Vienna, Paul Schiff, the Austrian banker.

—Edwin Booth, the eminent actor, finally succumbed in the struggle with death.

—William A. Allen, the well-known wool merchant of Chicago, died at Needham, Mass., Sunday. Mr. Allen was the head of the wool commission firm of W. A. Allen & Co., and was 54 years old. Formerly he was a member of the firm of Tillinghast & Allen. Mr. Allen had been a prominent factor in the wool trade in the West since 1868.

—Isaac Morton, ex-president of the Cleveland and Marietta Road, died at Columbus. He was 62 years old. For many years he was prominent in Ohio politics, and was best known by his sobriquet of "Governor Morton."

FROM WASHINGTON.

—The President made a large number of appointments Thursday, among them being twenty to the consular service. The principal appointments were: Murray Vandiver, of Maryland, internal revenue collector for the district of Maryland; Joseph G. Donnelly, of Wisconsin, Consul General at Nuevo Larado, Mexico; Van Leer Polk, of Tennessee, Consul General at Calcutta; Parshall Thatcher, of Michigan, Consul at Windsor, Ont.; Alex. B. Rosenthal, of New York, Consul at Leghorn, Italy; Wm. H. Jacks, of Indiana, Consul at London, Ont.; Pulaski F. Hyatt, of Pennsylvania, Consul at Santiago de Cuba; Jacob A. Child, of Missouri, Consul at Hankow, China; Louis B. Bettallata, of Maryland, Consul at Messina, Italy.

—The President has issued a proclamation officially promulgating the Russian extradition treaty. The proclamation is dated June 5.

—The President said on Monday, in reply to a direct question, that he intended to call an extra session of Congress not earlier than the 1st nor later than the 15th of September, unless unexpected contingencies should necessitate an earlier meeting. The President further said:

> While there has been no mystery or secrecy in regard to my intention in this matter I think it not amiss that our people should be informed authoritatively that the time is at hand when their representatives in Congress will be called upon to deal with a financial condition which is the only menace to the country's welfare and prosperity. It is well for the people to take up the subject for themselves, and arrive at their own conclusions as to the merits of a financial policy which obliges us to purchase idle silver bullion with gold taken from our reserve. One does not need the eye of a financier to see that this gold thus subtracted from the government's stock is eagerly seized by other nations for the purpose of strengthening their credit at our expense. It does not need the art of statesmanship to detect the danger that awaits upon the continuance of this operation. Already the timidity of capital is painfully apparent, and none of us can fail to see that fear and apprehension in monetary circles will ultimately bring suffering to every humble home in our land. I think that between now and the meeting of Congress much depends upon the action of those engaged in financial operations and business enterprises. Our vast national resources and credit are abundantly sufficient to justify them in the utmost faith and confidence. If instead of being frightened they are conservative, and if instead of gloomily anticipating immediate disaster they contribute their share of hope and steadiness, they will perform a patriotic duty and at the same time protect their own interest. The things just now needed are coolness and calmness in financial circles, and study and reflection among our people.

FOREIGN.

—Grand Duke Frederick of Baden, in addressing the military unions, strongly indorsed the army bill.

—Spanish consuls report that cholera is epidemic in France, and the Spanish Government has ordered the enforcement of quarantine regulations against that country.

—Cholera is spreading rapidly in Asiatic Turkey.

—A Libau milling firm has ordered 300,000 poods of wheat from German exporters at Konigsberg in consequence of the bad transport arrangements with the southern wheat districts. The firm calculates that it can save 1⅓ copecks per pood by buying German wheat for consumption in the Baltic provinces. This step may stimulate the Russian Minister of the Interior into building the long asked for light railway communication with the wheat districts, which would serve the double purpose of assisting trade and preventing famine in any particular district.

—The Pope has sent a message to the Catholic bishops of the United States upholding the opinion of the majority of the American episcopate on the school questions.

MISCELLANEOUS.

—Moody Merrill, a prominent Boston man, is mysteriously missing, and his friends and creditors are extremely anxious to know his whereabouts.

—The United States Circuit Court at Chicago has decided to grant the injunction closing the World's Fair gates Sunday. The question was discussed from its legal aspects alone, nothing of sentiment or religion being admitted in the proceedings. Attorney Edwin Walker, counsel for the directory, gave notice that an appeal would be taken and a supersedeas asked for. If the supersedeas be granted the Fair will remain open on Sundays until the Court of Appeals finally passes upon the case.

—A distressing occurrence Thursday afternoon marred to a great extent the success of the public demonstration at Columbus, Ohio, in honor of the Duke of Veragua and his party, who were the guests of the city. The children of the public and parochial schools were being reviewed by the party from a temporary stand in the Capitol square when the Marquis of Barbadoes, brother of the Duke, suddenly fell in a faint. Excitement prevailed for a few moments, as the spasm was violent and could be witnessed by the many thousands of people assembled. A big police officer held the Marquis down until an ambulance squad and a physician arrived. The Duke was much distressed, but explained that his brother is subject to such seizures, which, it is claimed, are due to neuralgia of the heart. In the excitement and pressure of the crowd several women fainted. It was more than a half hour before the Marquis could be removed.

—The latest move in the whisky trust war is the refusal of Samuel Woolner, at Peoria, to deliver goods from the warehouse on the orders of the trust.

—The Nebraskans at Jackson Park said that they were dedicating their State building Thursday morning, but the vast majority of the crowd wavered between the belief that they were dedicating Buffalo Bill and the idea that the Spanish Princess was going to honor the Nebraska building with her presence. Anyway, it was a howling success, and the petty so-called dedicating of other State buildings sank by comparison into utter insignificance.

—The clubs of the National League hold the positions shown below in the race for the pennant:

FINANCIAL AND INDUSTRIAL.

—The Canal Street Bank at New York has decided to go into voluntary liquidation, because of the refusal of the Shoe and Leather Bank to act as its clearing agent.

—The first miscarriage of the plans of the managers of the Kansas coal strike is likely to occur in the Osage district, where it had been arranged to close all of the mines. A delegate convention has been called to meet at Osage City to order the strike. At the miners' meetings in the several camps to elect delegates great contests are being had between the strike and anti-strike factions. From the most reliable reports the convention will be about evenly divided.

—The Long Island Traction Company has purchased 200 miles of street railways in Brooklyn, and will capitalize them at $30,000,000.

—Comptroller Eckels received from the Chemical National Bank people of Chicago a letter stating that his propositions had been submitted to the stockholders, and that so far as heard from they met with approval. They have every hope of being able to accept the terms and resume. Inclosed was a copy of the circular addressed to the stockholders urging them to agree to the terms on the ground that it was not only their duty to the public to enable the bank to resume, but that it would result in their individual pecuniary benefit. Comptroller Eckels said that Meadowcroft Bros., shortly after his installation, applied for permission to organize as a national bank. Mr. Eckels caused the usual investigation to be made, and pending it the bank failed.

—Peter Johnson, who claims to have discovered the lost art of hardening copper, filed a bill in the Circuit Court at Chicago. He says that the Excelsior Hardening Copper Company was organized, with a capital stock of $500,000, to manufacture hard copper by his methods. He was to have $200,000 worth of capital stock for his secret. The company was never completed and never manufactured any of the hardened copper. He asks to have the stock taken up and canceled and the company dissolved.

—D. B. Loveman, the heaviest retail dry goods dealer at Chattanooga, has filed a deed of trust to protect his creditors. His liabilities are placed at $150,000.

—Ex-Governor Chase, John W. Paris, and Lewis S. Walden have been indicted in connection with the failure of the Greentown (Ind.) Bank. The charges include embezzlement and false pretense.

BITS OF CHICAGO LIFE.

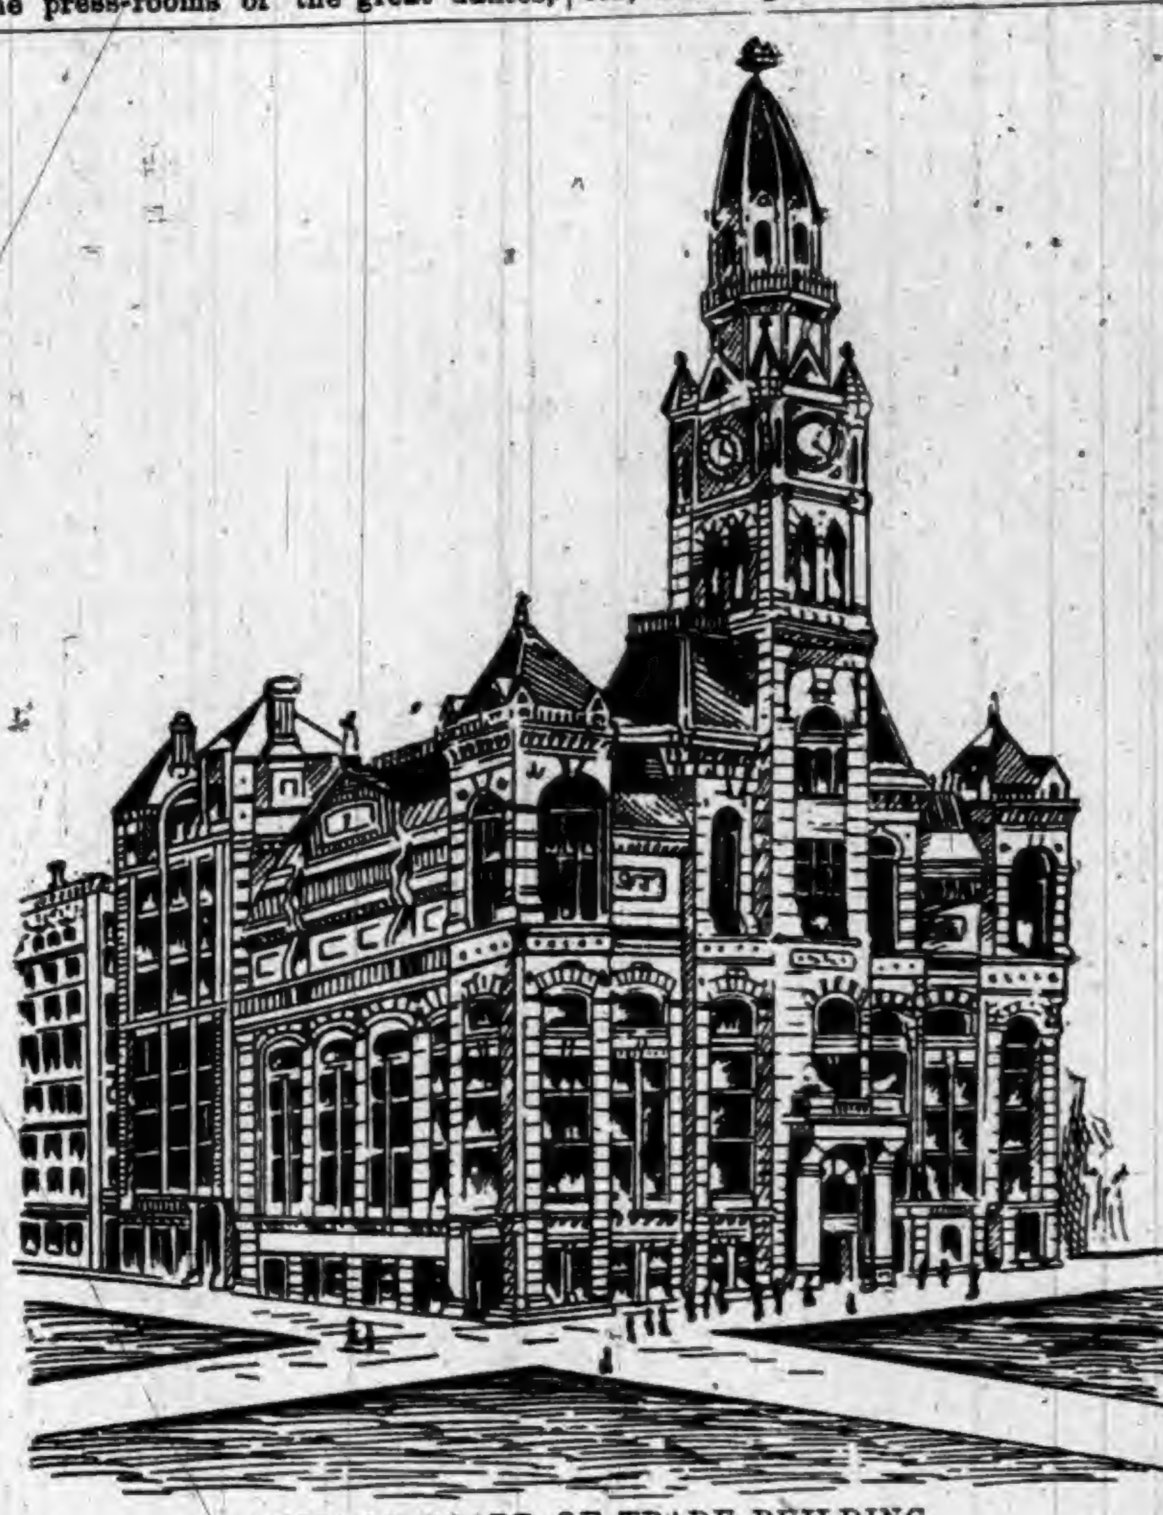
POINTS OF INTEREST TO THE WORLD'S FAIR VISITOR.

Strangers Can Spend Several Days Sightseeing in the Center of the City—The Board of Trade, Water System, Police and Fire Departments, Etc.

Few Historic Points.

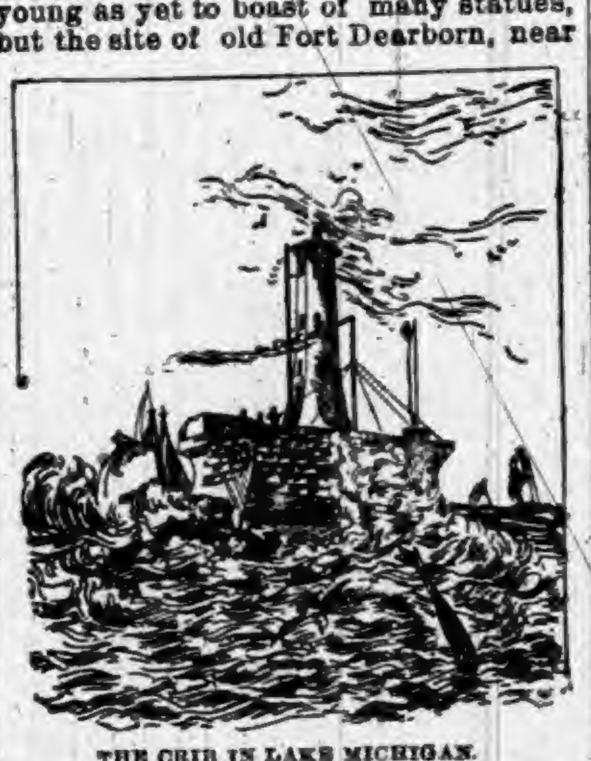
Chicago correspondence:

IF the visitor starts out "to see the town and all its sights," he will find in the immediate center of Chicago sufficient to occupy his time and interest for several days. The sky-scraping office structures, the retail stores of State street, the wholesale district, the produce quarter, the lumber market—all these may be taken in at a cursory glance; but the great grain elevators, the safety-deposit banks, the new Art Institute on the lake front, the lookout tower of the Masonic Temple, the press-rooms of the great dailies, turning out over 50,000 papers an hour, are novelty of more detailed attention.



CHICAGO BOARD OF TRADE BUILDING.

Of commemorative points there are comparatively few, Chicago being too young as yet to boast of many statues, but the site of old Fort Dearborn, near Rush street bridge, marked by a tablet, the bust of the railway postal service pioneer, Armstrong, at the postoffice, the Douglas monument at Kenwood, the Drake Columbian public drinking fountain at the City Hall, and the monument at Haymarket Square indicating the scene of the famous Anarchist massacre, are all associated with interesting reminiscences, and pave the way for comparison when the sojourner later inspects the statues in Lincoln Park.

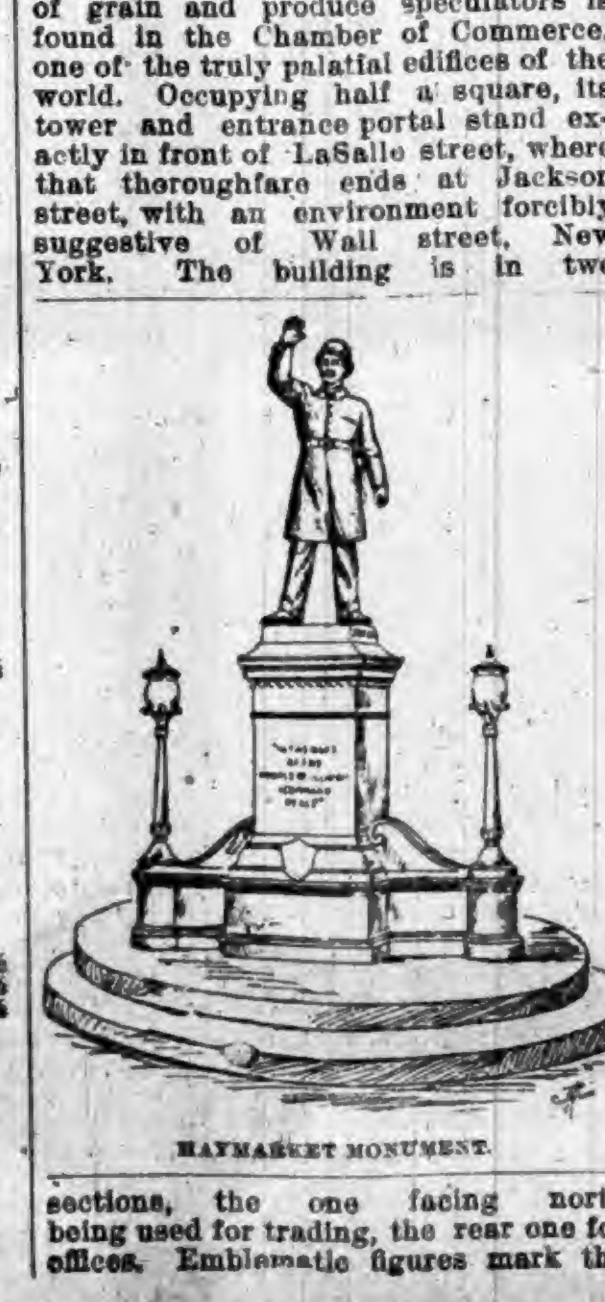


THE CRIB IN LAKE MICHIGAN.

The stranger seeking pleasure need only consult the amusement columns to find every kind and class of theater, a variety of museums and "magic maze" shows, cycloramas, panoramas and historical curiosities, such as Libby prison. If a day on the water is scheduled, there are steamers leaving many river docks for points across the lake, such as an excursion to Michigan City in eight hours, at only 50 cents for the round trip, while land journeys may be made swiftly and with profit to the wonderful industrial town of Pullman or to the military post at Fort Sheridan. Some of the best obtainable musical and dramatic talent will be found on the boards of the various theaters during the World's Fair.

The Board of Trade.

One great central point of interest is the Board of Trade; as famous as the Rialto or the Bourse of the old world. The headquarters of this aggregation of grain and produce speculators is found in the Chamber of Commerce, one of the truly palatial edifices of the world. Occupying half a square, its tower and entrance portal stand exactly in front of LaSalle street, where that thoroughfare ends at Jackson street, with an environment forcibly suggestive of Wall street, New York. The building is in two sections, the one facing north being used for trading, the rear one for offices. Emblematic figures mark the handsome doorways and projections, and the tower that caps the massive structure tapers in a pinnacle over 300 feet above the pavement. The main hall has two capacious galleries, and to these visitors are admitted at all times. The view from the same, when trading is going on below on the main floor, is something never to be forgotten by the inexperienced spectator, little suggesting to him that the uproar and bustle, the hoarse outcries and frantic gestures are an accompaniment of transactions during which millions of dollars change hands in a single day. The building cost nearly $2,000,000, and it requires often as high as $10,000 to secure the privilege of trading in the wheat or corn pit. The clearings of a year have aggregated over $104,000,000. Trading is permitted in not less than 1,000 bushels of grain or 250 barrels of pork—all on paper—and fortunes are made and lost every day in the year, often nearly every hour in the day.

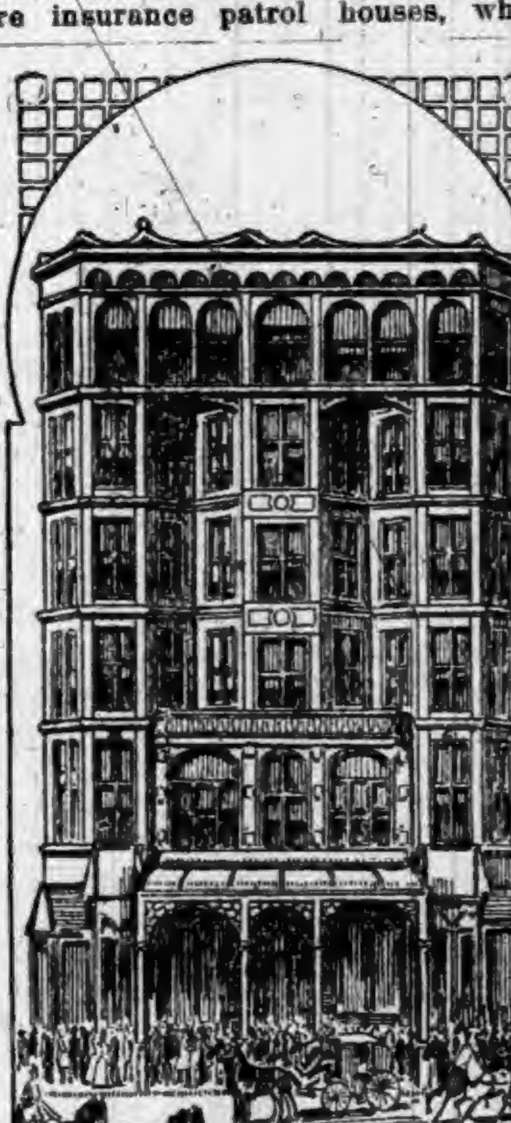


HAYMARKET MONUMENT.

City Waterworks.

A visit to the city waterworks is well worth a mile ride or walk over into the North Division. The system of which it is the foundation has grown to a remarkable magnitude. The main works are located at Chicago avenue and Pine street, and comprise a series of structures embracing a tower, free to visitors, affording a fine view of the city, and a castellated gothic stone building, from which a tunnel three miles long extends beneath the lake, ending in the great supply-well known as "the crib," which is visited daily by excursion boats. The new engine at the works has a capacity of 2,750 gallons at one stroke of the cylinders. The West Division of the city has also a water works at Ashland and Blue Island avenues, with a tunnel six miles long running to the supply crib. Its engines have a capacity of 70,000,000 gallons daily. The combined daily capacity of all the city plants is 250,000,000 gallons, distributed through nearly 1,500 miles of pipes and through 13,411 fire hydrants. The cost of the entire system was $17,000,000.

No person visiting Chicago for the first time should neglect at least a casual inspection of the fire and police departments. The former has now some thirteen battalions, embracing 930 men, 72 steam fire engines, 22 chemical engines, three fire tugs and general apparatus for reaching lofty buildings and rescuing people, such as life-saving guns and nets, ladders, and the like. Callers are generally welcome at any of the fire-engine stations scattered about the city, at the central alarm office at the city hall, and at the fire insurance patrol houses, where everything is done by electricity, from the sounding of the alarm to the starting of the horses. The police stations are also open for inspection, and the patrol-wagon system will generally be courteously explained by the officers in charge when not on active duty. Police courts are connected with many of the stations, and an hour spent in one of these will give the stranger a very fair idea of "the seamy side" of life in a great city.



M'VICKER'S THEATER.

He Must Have Died Young.

Christian Heinecker, of Lubeck, when only 10 months old, could repeat every word spoken to him; at 12 months of age he had memorized all the principal events mentioned in the Pentateuch. Before he had finished his second year he had learned all the historical parts of both the Old and New Testament. At the age of 3 he could reply correctly to all questions put to him regarding universal history and geography, and in the same year he learned to speak both Latin and French.

Oranges and Lemons for Cholera.

The orange and the lemon are both said to be fatal to the cholera bacillus. Placed in contact with the cut surface of the fruit, the bacteria survives but a few hours. Even on the uninjured rind they die within twenty-four hours at least, so says the imperial health office of Berlin.

A FEARFUL DISASTER.

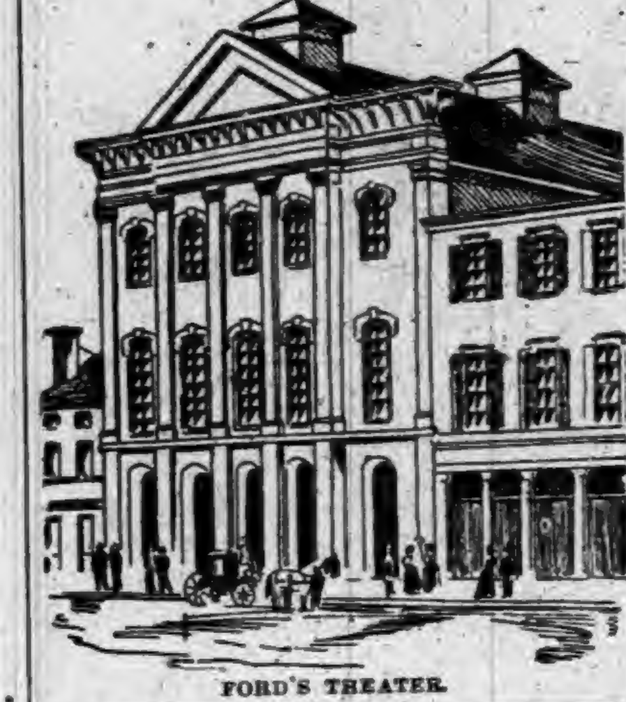
FORD'S THEATER THE SCENE OF A NEW HORROR.

Awful Catastrophe Attending the Collapse of the Building—Four Hundred United States Government Clerks Buried Under Heavy Timbers—Few Escaped Injury.

Scores Are Killed.

Death visited the national capital Friday in its most terrible form and reaped a mighty harvest. Ford's Theater, where a little over a quarter of a century ago a tragedy startled the nation, was the scene of the black angel's visit. Without a moment's warning the building collapsed, and 500 Government clerks and a cellar full of laborers were buried in the awful mass of wreckage which was piled in the cellar. The front half of all three floors fell, carrying everything to the bottom.

For a moment all was still. Then the air was split by the shrieks and groans of the frightened, wounded, and dying hundreds who, like a mass of worms, struggled, twisted, and fought to free themselves from one another and from heavy iron beams and timbers and furniture and government records which pinned them to their places. The people in the neighborhood were for the moment stunned. The horror of it all had robbed them of their senses. Then in a few moments, but what to the wretches pinioned in death's embrace seemed ages, the truth burst upon their befuddled brains, and they joined their cries with the unfortunates within the collapsed building. Then, dividing, some rushed for help, some ran to the sink-hole of death itself to lend their hands, while others, with selfish regard for their own safety and curiosity, stood where they were to look upon the scene.



FORD'S THEATER.

With the speed of the electric messenger the news seemed to fly from man to man throughout the city, and by the time the first ambulance reached the street that fronted the theater the thoroughfare was choked with people. It was like breaking into a mob to get through the crowd to the building, for many there had fathers, husbands, brothers, sons and sweethearts in the wreck, and they fought to retain the places they had gained and fought to get nearer. Meanwhile the cries of the wretches within the trap—for it was but little else—were becoming weaker. Many whose voices had blended with the rest at first had died a miserable death, others had fainted from fatigue. Some in their terror jumped from the third story windows and were crushed into a mass of lifeless pulp on the concrete below.

At the time this dispatch was sent out it was impossible to tell how many had been killed outright, but the number was conservatively placed at seventy-five. Many others will die.

Awful Tangle of Debris.

The tangle of stuff inside of the building that had to be cleared away in getting at bodies was terrible. Girders, bricks, beams, desks, furniture, all were inextricably piled together. Several hundred men were at work clearing away, heedless of the danger that menaced them from the possibility of falling walls. It was a difficult as well as dangerous task, but there was far less confusion than one would have expected. Men turned pale and sick at the horrible spectacle presented by the injured. General Schofield promptly ordered two troops of cavalry from Fort Meyer, just across the river, and two companies of infantry from the Arsenal to the scene of the disaster. The Secretary of the Navy also ordered out all the naval medical officers stationed there, and opened the naval hospital to receive the injured. The Commandant of the navy yard was ordered to render all assistance in his power, and every hospital in the city was called into requisition to care for the wounded.

Cause of the Accident.

An investigation of the cause of the accident discovered that it was apparently due to criminal carelessness. A number of laborers were at work beneath the first floor excavating for an electric plant. The building rested on underpinning and the earth, and as the earth was dug away the pressure of the building rested on the unsupported beams of the first floor. The weight proved too much, and the floors collapsed and fell into the excavation, burying the laborers and clerks beneath them.

The building was acquired by the Government some years ago because of its historical associations, and, although it had been condemned as unsafe and unsuitable for the purpose for which it was occupied, sentiment kept it unchanged. The floors were heavily loaded with the records of the pension division of the War Department. The clerks employed there were all men.

How the World Wags.

A PENSION revision board of twenty-three members has been appointed.

THE B. Goodman Company suspenders, failed at New York for $63,000.

THE debts of Barr Co., the New York coffee merchants who failed recently, are $1,000,000.

THE new coast-defense vessel Monterey has been ordered from San Francisco to Puget Sound.

SUSIE MCBETH, for twenty years a missionary among the Nez Perces Indians, died in Idaho.

FIFTY-SEVEN waiters in John Wanamaker's restaurant at Philadelphia are on a strike for better food.

THE Bradstreet-Thurber furniture store at Minneapolis was destroyed by fire, with a loss of $160,000.

CHOLERA is spreading among the Arabs of Turkey. Twenty deaths a day are reported at Bassorah.

OWING to the corn famine, 6,317,000 bushels of corn from the United States have been shipped into Mexico.

W. W. JOHNSON & CO., whose plant is one of the largest in Cincinnati, will withdraw from the Whisky Trust.

RUSSIA will raise its Washington mission to an embassy, and probably send some older diplomate as ambassador.

SHASTA.

The Romance of a Trail that Was Scented with Roses.

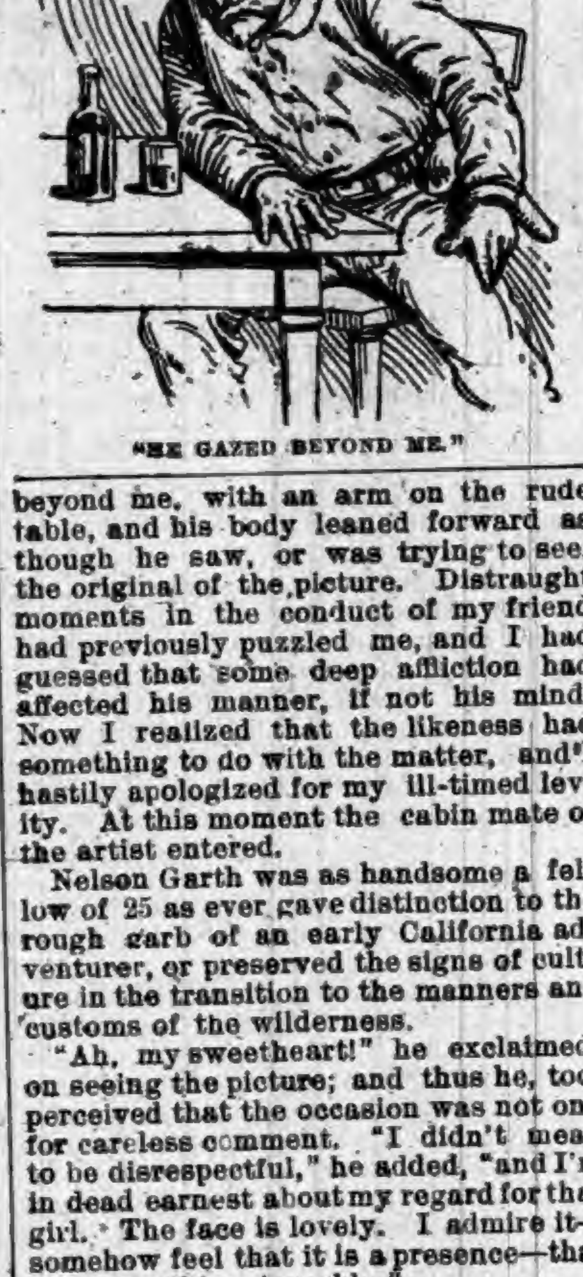
BY JOAQUIN MILLER.

CHAPTER I.

An artist in Yreka! The time and place were unreasonable, for it was 1856 in Northern California. Yet there he was—Arthur Bantry, a man whose forty years looked more like fifty, as reckoned by the record of sorrow which they had lined in his face. He had come to the Pacific coast with the multitude of gold hunters, and he had handled the pick and shovel more than the brush and palette since his desertion of art for ore. But in his cabin, one day, I found him at work, in the clear light of a northward window, on a portrait of a girl. The original sketch had been made long before, as the worn condition of its leathern case showed. There was a sweet and delicate face, about one-fourth the size of life, and Bantry was carefully touching it here and there with the veriest tip of a fine brush. I saw that he was deftly adding slightly to the apparent age of the subject, and I laughed at this.

"It can't be a portrait, Arthur," said I, "or you'd be taking off the maturity instead of putting it on."

Instead of answering me, he gazed beyond me, with an arm on the rude table, and his body leaned forward as though he saw, or was trying to see, the original of the picture. Distraught moments in the conduct of my friend had previously puzzled me, and I had guessed that some deep affliction had affected his manner, if not his mind. Now I realized that the likeness had something to do with the matter, and I hastily apologized for my ill-timed levity. At this moment the cabin mate of the artist entered.



"HE GAZED BEYOND ME."

Nelson Garth was as handsome a fellow of 25 as ever gave distinction to the rough garb of an early California adventurer, or preserved the signs of culture in the transition to the manners and customs of the wilderness.

"Ah, my sweetheart!" he exclaimed, on seeing the picture; and thus he, too, perceived that the occasion was not one for careless comment. "I didn't mean to be disrespectful," he added, "and I'm in dead earnest about my regard for that girl. The face is lovely. I admire it—somehow feel that it is a presence—that it is something tangible."

Arthur Bantry straightened up in his chair and said: "Boys, that is a portrait of my wife and daughter both." As we lifted our eyebrows in surprise and inquiry, he gravely continued: "I was a pioneer in these parts, as you know, long before the Forty-niners came. A roving disposition, and a desire to find wild and unused subjects for pictures brought me here. That was excusable. The bad thing that I did was to let my wife and child accompany me. The mother was as adventurous as I in pursuit of picturesque Nature, and together we ventured recklessly into the wilderness of Indians. Our child, Rose, was then only four years old. One day I was sketching at the edge of a forest, while the mother and child plucked wild flowers. I had outlined a landscape, and into it I meant to introduce the figure of the child. For that purpose I had separately sketched her face, and was giving it the final touches when, in sport, she scampered away. Her little hands were full of wild roses, and as she ran she scattered the leaves along her trail. 'Chase me, papa,' she cried, 'follow the rose leaves.' The mother pursued the runaway, and together they disappeared behind an immense tree at the border of the woods. Instantly I heard the exultant yells of Indians, and the affrighted shrieks of my wife and child. I rushed to their rescue, but it was too late, even had I been able single-handed to cope with a band of twenty. I only saw and heard the captives departing from me into the forest, and that was the last of them to me. This portrait is the one that I made that day. But from year to year I have added to the age of the child's face. That was my only way to keep her with me. In doing this I have been guided by the well-remembered face of my wife, whom the little girl resembled wonderfully at the time I last saw her, and who may have preserved the likeness until now, if she be alive. I have made every possible effort to find a trace of them, but with no success whatever. Whether they are alive in miserable captivity, or happily have been killed by their captors, I do not know."

That was the story told by the artist at Yreka, and it introduced the girl of the picture to us as vividly as a living creature. Upon Nelson Garth this singular acquaintance with Rose Bantry palpably had an impressive effect. He had already whimsically fallen in love with the picture, and now he became engrossed in thoughts of the original.

Let that stand for a prologue to the historical melodrama which I am to write. Half a year later there was an expedition against the early Modocs, through the gleaming snows and under the somber pines of majestic Mount Shasta. And why this expedition? Because the Indians rose up one night and massacred every white person, with the single exception of myself, in all the vast region now comprised in Modoc County. I was not in my own cabin at the time, but had taken a party of young Indians and gone a day's journey deeper into the mountainous wilderness on a grand annual elk hunt. Possibly my absence from home had something to do with the sparing of my life. But I think not. My insignificance both as a boy and holder of property saved me perhaps.

Our great elk hunt had been wonderfully successful. My excuse for killing thirteen huge cows with my own hand at that time is found in the fact that a friendly tribe of Indians down the mountains near my own house was literally starving. I at once sent back a runner to bear the good news and to bring the famishing tribe to devour the tons of meat where it lay. It was the return of this runner, with hundreds of hungry Indians creeping on after him up the mountain and through the dense woods, that brought me my first news of the terrible massacre. It seemed incredible; it seemed utterly impossible that I should now be the only living white person in a place that only the season before was teeming with happy and hopeful settlers. I took two fine and faithful young Indians, and descending almost with the rapidity of shot on our snow-shoes to the flumes and green grasses of the far-off valley, I found only dead bodies and burned ruins. Believing myself to be the first white man to learn of the massacre, I hastened on alone to the nearest white habitation. This was the now famous Soda Springs, the property of perhaps the wealthiest man in the world, Senator Stanford. I was a part owner of the Springs at this early date. We had a little mountain hotel, my two partners and myself, and took stock to winter at our ranch deeper in the mountains. And this was what I was doing at the time of the massacre away over the spurs of Mount Shasta to the East. I chose to take care of the stock and live with only Indians about me, simply because I liked solitude, and the silent dignity of the Indian was always more decent to me than the garrulous white man.

I hastily told the terrible news, and then threw myself into the saddle, arms in hand, and set out through the tortuous and tedious mountain trail for Yreka. This city of Yreka was at that time a sort of capital of Northern California; a populous and most prosperous mining town, with banks, miles of brick houses, hundreds of hotels. A great city was Yreka in the days of old. I had a ride before me of more than seventy miles. The narrow, snow-bound, steep and stony trail was simply terrible. But I was splendidly mounted. My horse had all the gathered strength of a winter's rest in his strong and supple legs, and he continually bounded along like a ball. I fell from my horse into the arms of friends at Yreka.

When Arthur Bantry heard the news, he cried: "Now for a campaign of extermination against the Modocs."

That was the general sentiment at Yreka. But Nelson Garth and I knew that Arthur Bantry hoped, forlornly yet ardently, to search once more for the lost trail of the rose leaves.

CHAPTER II.

The motley army which set out from Yreka contained no more eager men than Arthur Bantry, who sought to learn the fate of a wife and daughter, and Nelson Garth, who was actuated as really by love of an unacquainted sweetheart as though he had wooed her. And I had been able to impart a faint gleam of tidings from Rose. A year prior to this time some half hostile and wholly wild Indians had visited my camp with a white girl, whom they proposed to sell for two horses. The girl could not talk to me or understand a word. She had been a captive since a mere child, and as she did not want to come to me, and as I would have surely been misunderstood I did not buy her but waited, hoping some white men might come my way and help me with their presence and advice. And that was all; I had never seen her any more. But I had kept up constant inquiry for her and had sent word to Lieut. Crook, now Gen. Crook, and famous in many wars, who was then in charge of the nearest military post, of the fact about this poor white girl prisoner. Of course, when the massacre took place, the first question in my mind was as to the fate of the white girl who was a prisoner among that nomadic band of savages.

When I saw the portrait of Arthur Bantry's daughter, even though he had made her grow to womanhood in the picture so strangely, I recognized her as the captive. Desiring to learn more before exciting him, I had worked slow; but now I told him all. Beautiful she was as any dream of beauty. She was sad and silent, piteously sad. She had stood pulling at the tasseled tops of some tall grass at the side of the trail, as the Indians sat on their ponies bartering. That was all she did, and said nothing. She only looked at me once, out of her great, sad eyes that nearly all the time kept looking down. And she did not speak, in any tongue, when I spoke to her. And she would not come to me when I asked her to. Nor did she give me her hand when I offered her mine. And so she went away. But I thought, after she was gone that night, she did not dare show any concern or emotion. I thought, and I thought a thousand things, indeed. I offered my young Indians the two horses for her. Finally I offered to give two horses for even any information about her. Let the fact be at once and frankly confessed that it is doubtful if I should have gone down into the valley of death after the massacre but for the memory and the hope of this beautiful, sad and silent girl.

As the expedition camped for its first night under the somber pines and fir and cedar trees that dotted the mountain slope, it was as motley a set of men as ever grouped about any camp fire on this earth. Could Shakspeare have but seen that gang! Perhaps twenty-five of the men had lost brother, father, friend, fortune in the massacre. These were sober and quiet enough. Perhaps a like number had lost nothing, having nothing to lose, and were now merely adventurers—on their way out to plunder the dead, possibly. Perhaps a like number were of the lowest form of humanity, for the jails had been given a holiday.

As we stood at breakfast, a tin cup of coffee in the right hand and a sandwich of dough and burnt bacon in the other, two tall and comely Indian warriors stood over like silhouettes against the rising sun on the crest of the snowy mountain before us. Instantly I knew them for my two young friends who had gone down into the valley of death with me when we had first heard of the massacre. Take a map and trace the route of my travel since leaving my own camp, and you will see that in three days I had made almost the entire circuit of the grandest and sublimest snow peak in all the world. I was now not forty miles from my own camp, my own Indians, my own cattle and horses. These swift and splendid young fellows had kept promise, and were coming to tell me how things now stood. Their information, whatever it might be, was of the greatest importance. Did the compact with the Modocs still hold good? Was Pitt River and Modoc and Shasta still friendly, or had they quarreled over the plunder, after the fashion of white nations? All this was important to know.

But such a panic! Pistols in the air instantly! A dozen, forty, fifty shots! The two tall and shapely figures melted back and away as they had come. And that was all—all except a "stampede" of horses, cattle, mules, men! The cattle first took fright at this apparition—those two shapely and shadowy savages on the steep, deep snow under the pines that lifted before us—and they, like the men in the early morning, started for the world below! Then the mules, madly braying, followed the bellowing cattle. Then the horses. Then the men dashed bravely down the mountain after their horses. And they never came back—cattle, horses, mules or men!

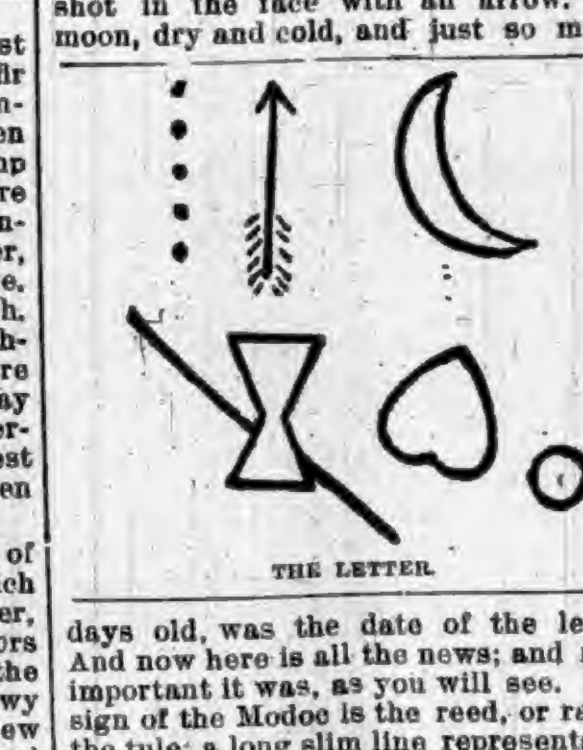
Ike Rodgers, the banker, whose father had fallen in the massacre, pulled the remnant of men together that afternoon, had what few cattle butchered that had lodged in the snow, and as night came on, and the crust of deep snow hardened, the little band set forward, silent, slowly, in single file, through the great solemn woods to cross the Sierras. Each man had a horse and drew a sled. The sled was often only the hide of a bullock with blankets, bread, bacon, arms, ammunition, anything indeed that fell to the lot of the man who drew the sledge in the general distribution of provisions. Here were stout, daring, audacious hearts now. Napoleon on the Alps, the hunchback Hannibal before him were simply luxurious robbers in comparison with this sobered and earnest little string of men on their tortuous way through the pines to recover a kingdom that had been lost to civilization. Cortez drawing his ships by piecemeal over the isthmus knew nothing half so terrible in that warm and luxurious land. For here with us on the very first night nearly every man had feet, face, or hands badly frozen. And the wolves? Before it was yet quite full dawn we were compelled to form a solid circle with our faces to the wolves; our sleds and horses in the center. And such beautiful teeth! We sat down on our sleds facing the wolves. The wolves promptly sat down right before us, their great red tongues lolling out of their hungry mouths, their beautiful white teeth glistening in perilous contrast. Two sleds of beef had already been captured and instantly devoured.

"Look here. I've cut myself somehow," whispered one of the men who had lost a sled. We only discovered that he was hurt by the blood that made the white snow red. This poor fellow was reputed to be a professional pickpocket when at home in the enjoyment of civilization and liberty. But he was a good soldier here, and did not even cry out when a wolf tore away a handful of flesh from his leg; but he merely laid it to some accidental awkwardness of his, had his leg bandaged as we all sat there, shivering and looking down into a thousand hungry throats, waiting, praying for sunrise. But had that poor pickpocket by sign or sound indicated that the wolves had begun to eat our men as well as our provisions, there would probably have been a two-second panic. Then some few white bones on the bloody snow—the red epitaph over the common grave of the "Army of Northern California."

When light came and the wolves went back a little from our faces we made roaring fires and broiled, or rather burned, our beef, so that it would be less heavy, and, finally, less attractive to the wolves in these terrible marches at night. While this was being done I posted on alone with Capt. Rodgers, whom I had come to know and greatly respect, if not to quite yet trust, to see, if possible, if there was any abatement in the tremendous depth of snow, for our sleds were now all worn and broken, our horses were weak and failing for want of food. After an hour or so we crossed a huge bear track, or rather what Rodgers called a bear track. It was simply the track of about twenty Modocs on the war-path! They were going toward my own camp. But I kept my own counsel. There was no turning back now. To tell the worn and half-hearted band of men that the Modoc was also with us would have insured a sort of paralysis. It was push on now or perish.

This "bear track" at this time and place could mean but one thing—and how you need a map of the whole thing here—and that was now between the three Indian tribes that hovered about the base of Mount Shasta. Either this or the Modocs were merely on their way to my camp for cattle. This broad bear track was pointing direct for either my cattle or the scalps of my Indians. In either case the only immediate danger to the little army was the danger of a panic. But this is the most fearful danger that any man has to meet in war.

Captain Rodgers sat down to rest and I went on alone to the top of a bold and tremendous mountain of snow, from which the grasses and flowers of the desolated valley could be seen. It was here that I had rested with my two young Indians both on going to and returning from the scene of massacre. We had left a letter here in Indian characters, and as these two Indians who had created the panic before mentioned had probably passed this way I hoped to find a new letter from them here. I was not disappointed. It took some patient search, some circuitous and tedious delay, which I have not time to set down, but a letter I found on the inner side of a scale of sugar-pine bark. Bear in mind that the sugar-pine tree is always used by the Shasta Indians. You might search the forests in vain for any sign on any other tree than the sugar-pine. It was written in sign language. In the first place an arrow, the arrow is my name. Five dots to the left were merely complimentary adjectives, as if to say: "My five times brave and upright and five time faithful brother." The arrow was given me as the sign of my name, because I had once been dangerously shot in the face with an arrow. A moon, dry and cold, and just so many days old, was the date of the letter. And now here is all the news; and most important it was, as you will see. The sign of the Modoc is the reed, or rather the tule; a long slim line represents the tule. This shows the early history of the Modoc and his "floating islands" among the reeds and tules of the lakes. An awkward figure, looking like a demoralized hour-glass, represents the Pitt River Indians. You see they come by time round from an immemorial custom by keeping a continual girdle of blind pits drawn around the edge of their vast and fertile valley. As these blind pits had sharpened elk and deer antlers at the bottom, to say nothing of deadly pointed spears set upward, you may well understand that they were terrible enough to give a name to any people. And in the latter the tule or reed, although badly broken, is thrust downwards entirely through the pit. So I easily read that the battle was a bloody one, and that many Modocs were killed, as well as many more of their enemies.



THE LETTER.

And what did an awkward and helpless and overturned heart mean? And what was the round and helpless little circle for? Ah, me! This postscript of the Indians' letter on a bit of sugar-pine bark, may be briefly translated thus: "As for the matter of the beautiful girl, we can only say that we have learned nothing at all; and all our search and inquiry has ended where we began, in this narrow little circle."

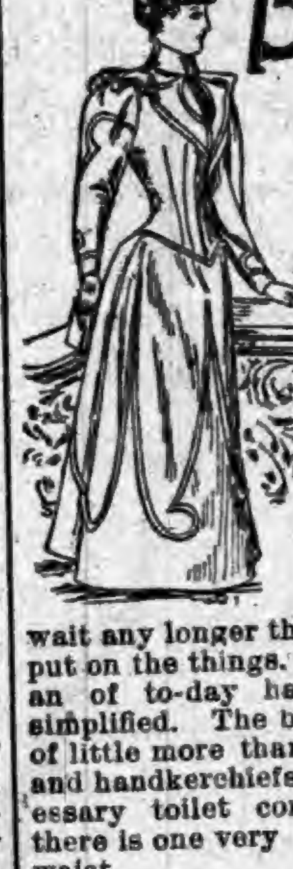
FITTED FOR TRAVEL.

WOMAN'S OUTFIT IS GREATLY SIMPLIFIED.

The Woman Traveler of To-day Carries an Outfit Almost as Comfortable and Sensible as That of a Man—Her Dress Almost a Uniform.

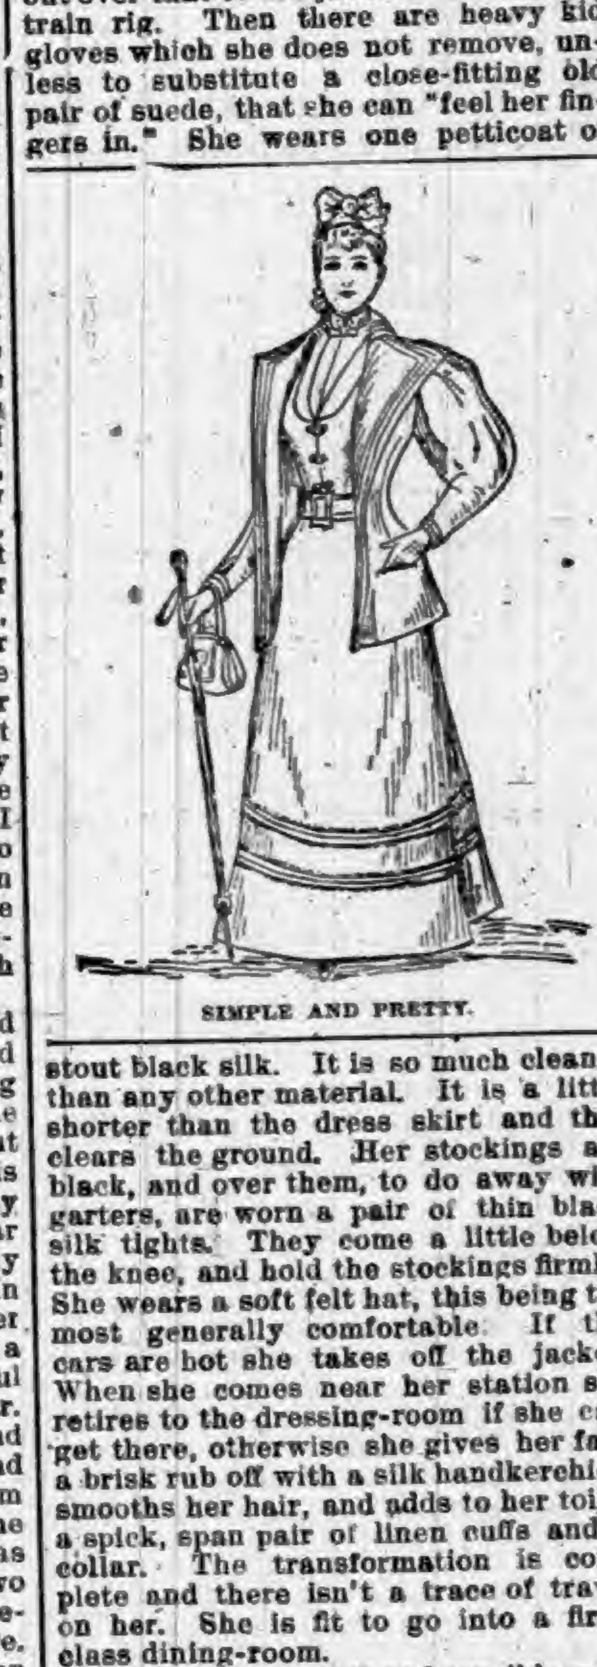
Several Nobby Suits.

New York correspondence:



BEFORE a great while a woman's outfit for traveling will be as simple, comfortable and sensible as man's. Never did women do so much traveling as now, nor were the conveniences and necessities of traveling dress ever so much of a study as they are now. The average traveling woman knows that in any city she finds herself she can at the chief store fit herself out in a brand-new rig, if need be, and not wait any longer than to pay her bill and put on the things. The traveling woman of to-day has her wardrobe much simplified. The bag she carries is full of little more than clean cuffs, collars and handkerchiefs, and absolutely necessary toilet conveniences. Possibly there is one very trig and pretty shirt waist.

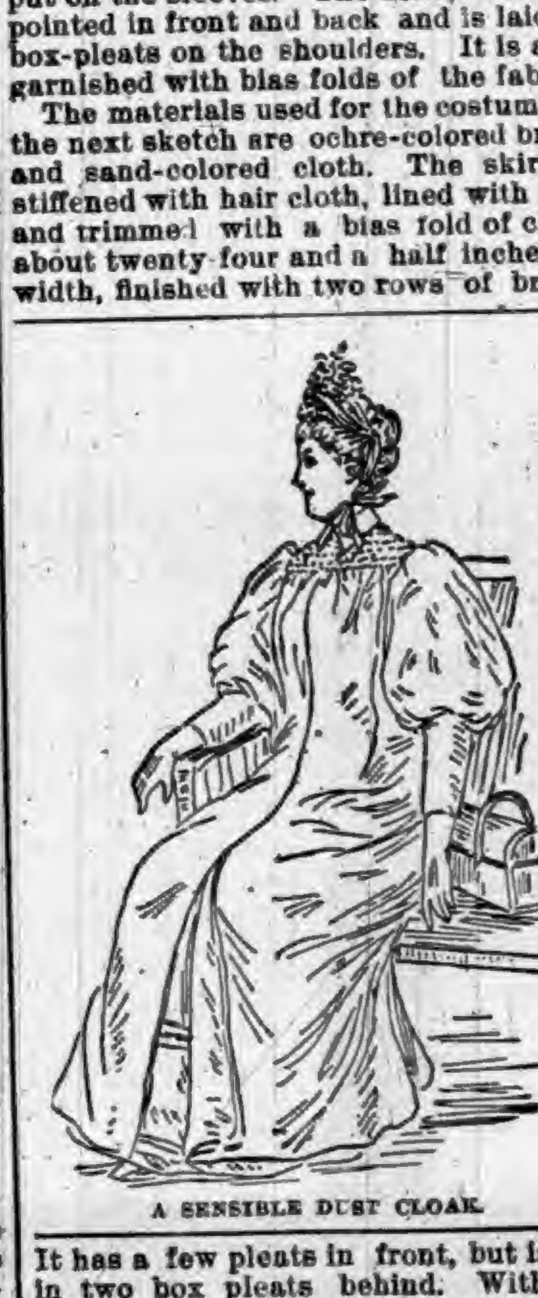
The travelling woman's dress is almost a uniform. The discomforts of the tailor-made are recognized and modifications obtain. Serge is the pet material. A wiry, tough serge like the goods made up for men. The skirt is snug about the hips, and free from the knees down. It is on a very wide belt which assures a trimly held waist. A shirt-waist and jacket complete the costume. She can ring so many changes on it that she will be fit for all occasions and yet carry only that absurd little bag. The usual shirt is dark wash silk. Its collar and cuffs turn out over that of the jacket. This is her train rig. Then there are heavy kid gloves which she does not remove, unless to substitute a close-fitting old pair of suede, that she can "feel her fingers in." She wears one petticoat of stout black silk. It is so much cleaner than any other material. It is a little shorter than the dress skirt and that clears the ground. Her stockings are black, and over them, to do away with garters, are worn a pair of thin black silk tights. They come a little below the knee, and hold the stockings firmly. She wears a soft felt hat, this being the most generally comfortable. If the cars are hot she takes off the jacket. When she comes near her station she retires to the dressing-room if she can get there, otherwise she gives her face a brisk rub off with a silk handkerchief, smooths her hair, and adds to her toilet a spick, span pair of linen cuffs and a collar. The transformation is complete and there isn't a trace of travel on her. She is fit to go into a first-class dining-room.



SIMPLE AND PRETTY.

Examples of stylish and sensible wear for traveling are shown in these pictures. In the initial picture there is seen a model in sand-colored diagonal. The skirt is perfectly plain save the odd trimming of bias fold of diagonal sewed on in the manner indicated. It is lined with silk and has a flounce of silk inside. The bodice is tight fitting and also garnished up the seams and darts with the bias folds which are also put on the sleeves. The derby collar is pointed in front and back and is laid in box-pleats on the shoulders. It is also garnished with bias folds of the fabric.

The materials used for the costume of the next sketch are ochre-colored braid and sand-colored cloth. The skirt is stiffened with hair cloth, lined with silk and trimmed with a bias fold of cloth about twenty-four and a half inches in width, finished with two rows of braid. It has a few pleats in front, but is laid in two box pleats behind. With the skirt is worn a vest with sleeves. The front of the vest is made of surah and the sleeves are also of surah. It is cut away like a man's vest and a chemisette and small black tie are worn with it. The jacket is open in front, but fits well in back. It has pockets on both sides and the fronts are faced with cloth, but the remainder is not lined. The full sleeves are trimmed with two rows of the braid. The belt is lined with silk to prevent it from stretching and fastens with a bronze buckle in front.

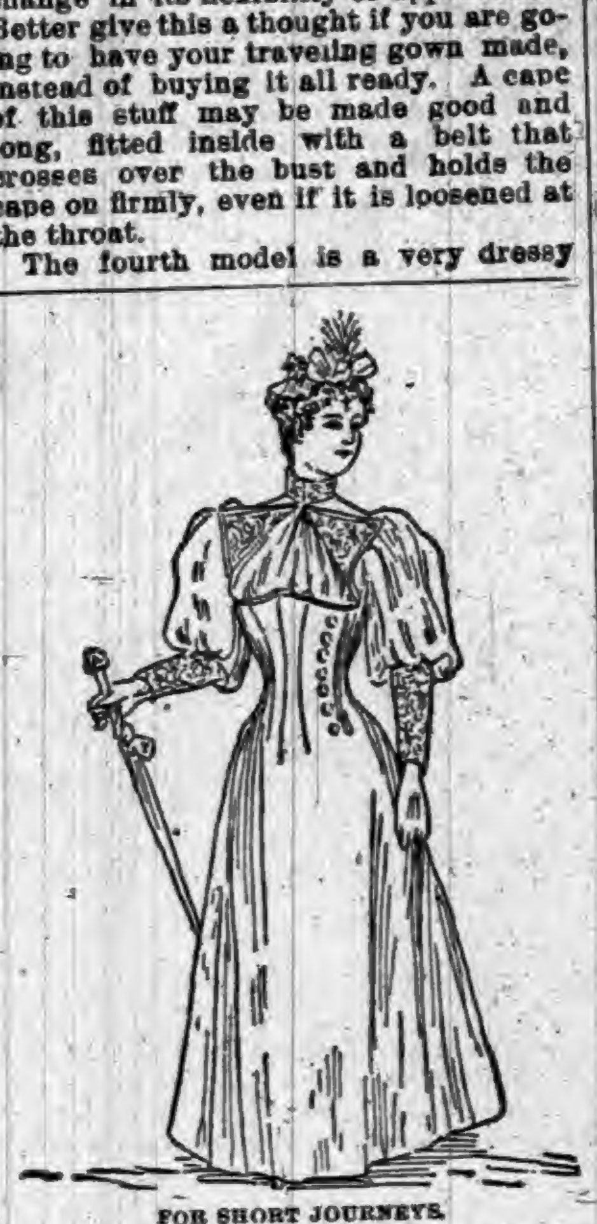


A SENSIBLE DUST CLOAK.

The traveling cloak of the third illustration is a very useful garment. It is made of brown and yellow changeable silk, shirred in yoke form at the neck; in back, at the waist line, the fullness is also shirred, but the front is loose. It hooks in front and has a turn-down collar and full, puffed sleeves with tight cuffs. No more useful garment could be devised for long journeys.

This year the Eton jacket effect is more worn than any other. One objection to the Eton is that it exposes so much of the shirt front. Of course this is pretty, but not always practicable. All sorts of heavy material in cotton are made up in just this same way. A white duck suit is not as wild as it seems. It is the cleanest thing in the world to look at, and wash-tub renovation makes it a practical thing, too. The light cloth dress is the one that is worse than foolish to select. For very hot days the substitution of a little hip cape for the jacket or Eton gives one another change. This little cape is made of cloth, trimmed around and around with satin ribbon, which is put on plain, for satin keeps fresh looking so. There is a process now by which cloth material is made waterproof, without any change in its flexibility or appearance. Better give this a thought if you are going to have your traveling gown made, instead of buying it all ready. A cape of this stuff may be made good and long, fitted inside with a belt that crosses over the bust and holds the cape on firmly, even if it is loosened at the throat.

The fourth model is a very dressy one, and for comparatively short trips will prove entirely serviceable. The fabric used is a pale-green woolen suiting. The dress is cut princess, the top being turned back in wide revers which necessitates a separate blouse, of green and pink changeable silk in this instance. The dress buttons on the left side. The revers, collar and cuffs are heavily embroidered with silk, but could well be made of plain silk or suiting.

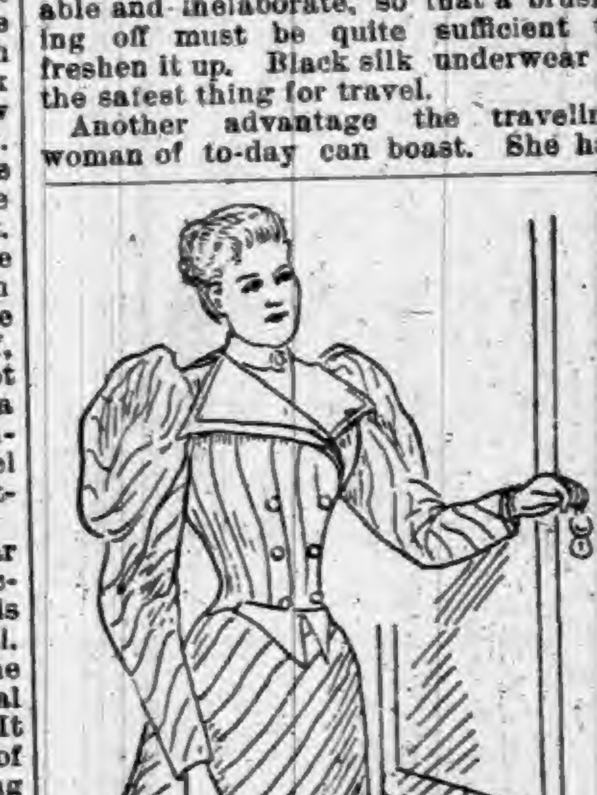


FOR SHORT JOURNEYS.

Rain cloaks and mackintoshes are not as popular as they were. We have found out that they are fearfully hot and bulky things, and that one is tempted to wear them all the time rather than bother to carry them extra. The only practicable rain cloak is a very light "gauze," one that does not pretend to be anything but a rain cloak, and is, therefore, ugly. These are like the old-fashioned ones which came all rolled up in a little oil silk bag. They are sold again now.

Sailor hats have their advantages. They are sold with wide rims and are almost always becoming, but they are stiff to wear on the train or for any great length of time, anyhow. On the other hand, they tie up a veil prettily, and a veil is a great help to tidiness. A soft visor cap is an ideal headgear. Only it is likely to look too jaunty, so of course it cannot be risked. Hats of light-weight cloth, dark and made stiff, yet not in "man-shape," are, perhaps, the best all-round thing. The hat is such an important part of traveling gear. It must be becoming, comfortable and inelaborate, so that a brushing off must be quite sufficient to freshen it up. Black silk underwear is the safest thing for travel.

Another advantage the traveling woman of to-day can boast. She has lots of pockets made in her dress. They are put in low down at about the knee, where the gown begins to spread, and where filling them will not interfere with the fit over the hips. She can actually have as many as she wants. The inside of her Eton, the outside of her jacket and the inside of her cloak all have pockets. Many are made with flaps that button down over and make them quite safe.



IN BLUE AND GREEN STRIPED CHEVIOT.

The last example is an elegant and simple costume, made of green and blue striped cheviot. The material is taken on the bias in the skirt, which is about three and a half yards wide and lined with silk. It is tight-fitting over the hips, and the fullness in back may be either gathered or laid in pleats. The waist is double-breasted and has two moderately long tabs behind. Great care must be taken to have the cheviot fit well on account of the stripes, which are apt to look awry if not put properly together. The two points seen in front are sewed to the bottom of the waist, and are of plain green cloth or silk. The latter also furnishes the material for the small pointed plastron and the high standing collar. The waist has two large revers and a shawl collar, faced with plain green silk. It closes in the center, the plastron fastens on the right shoulder, and the right front laps over and buttons with three large buttons. If the material is wide enough, the revers can be allowed in cutting; but if not, they must be made separately and carefully sewed to the fronts. The sleeves are very full and pleated into the arm-hole to make them more broad than high. The lining is silk. In making the skirt it will be best to put a tape along both sides of each seam, as the bias material is very apt to sag and spoil the hang of the whole costume.

His Life Saved By a Spider.

One day a Union soldier was fleeing for his life from Confederate sharpshooters. At last he saw a hollow log, and needing rest crept into it, feet foremost. His face was but a few feet from the open end. Shortly after he got into the log a large spider came and spun his web over the open log, as much as to say, "I will save you." In a short time along came the Confederates. They stopped close to the log where the poor soldier lay nearly frightened to death. He heard them say "there is no one in there," and then they passed on. The soldier stayed in his log until the next morning, when he made his escape back to his fellow-soldiers.

THAT unites Pigments and pure Linseed Oil, by a chemical process, to form Paints for Houses, Cars, Bridges, Roofs, Carriages, etc., that are perfectly

FIRE AND WATER-PROOF!

They will not separate or get hard in packages. Wood on which it is applied will not ignite when exposed to fire. They are manufactured in Paste and Liquid form in Twenty Popular Tints for general use.

Why use ordinary paints when Fire and Water-proof Paints cost no more. They give the same results and a protection from both fire and water. Superior to any other paint on the market for roofs.

Our BLACK LACQUERS exceed any paint for smoke-stack work; will not burn or wash off; prevents rust, thereby saving you expense and time.

THURSDAY............JUNE 15, 1893.

EX-PRESIDENT HARRISON is at the world's fair.

CHEMICAL bank at Chicago, is open for business again.

INDIANA'S building at the fair, is to be dedicated to-day.

MCKINLEY was re-nominated for governor of Ohio last week.

THE banks seem to be over their troubles and things look better.

BALANCE of foreign trade seems now to be coming our way, and gold may stop going abroad.

THE hard storm on Saturday evening did a great deal of damage up about Elkhart, and in its course through north Indiana generally.

THE MACLEANS, a Scotch clan, have a grand meeting in Chicago this week. They number several thousands and count their ancestry back to the year 1260.

THE BOY'S BRIGADE of Cincinnati, 1,500 strong will march to Chicago, sleeping in tents on the way. They expect to meet several thousand more near that city.

THE new fee and salary law has been declared unconstitutional by Judge Brown of the Marion county court. The case had been brought by a sheriff. It will likely be appealed.

THE U. S. district court at Chicago has decided against Sunday opening of the fair, but Chief Justice Fuller has allowed a stay of the injunction till the matter can be fully heard in the supreme court to which it is now appealed.

EX-GOV. CHASE was indicted last week by the Kokomo grand jury for his connection with the bursted bank at Greentown. He had acted as agent for Dwiggins. He had probably been used as a tool, and not knowing much about banking, was easily deceived by a slick man like Dwiggins. Chase is probably innocent of any wrong intent or knowledge.

FORD'S theater at Washington, D. C., tumbled down last Friday. It was occupied by several hundred clerks belonging to the pension department. Over 20 were killed and nearly fifty hurt more or less seriously. The building was a weak structure and was made weaker by workmen putting in an electric light plant in the cellar. It was in this building that J. Wilkes Booth shot Lincoln. And on the same day the building fell, Edwin Booth, brother of the assassin, was being laid to rest, he having died a few days before.

Commissioners' Court.

The session ended yesterday and has been a very busy one. The most important case that came up, was the incorporation of St. Joe. Many opposed this, especially some farmers who did not want their land taken in, as it would increase their taxes. Both sides made good points, and had good attorneys. J. E. Rose represented the B. & O. road, which runs through the town; Mr. Hartman was employed for those who wished to incorporate, and Judge McClellan for those who opposed it. The commissioners took till next day and then ordered the case dismissed. They might have favored it, had not so much farm land been taken in. We next week will give a report of all their work, not being able to do so this week.

WILLIAM P. HARTER.

William P. Harter is dead, is a sad sentence to say, but one that must be said. He died about eleven o'clock Sunday night. His sickness was not of long duration, but was violent from the time he was first confined to his room. He had not been feeling well for some time but nothing was thought of it, as he was a strong, vigorous man, and in the prime manhood. But when he was taken down his condition soon became serious. Mrs. Harter, who was at the world's fair was sent for and at once returned. His disease, which was at first supposed to indicate a severe form of fever, soon developed into brain fever of the worst type and he suffered greatly though part of the time unconscius. Finding the case so desperate, Dr. Buchtel, the attending physician, sent for Dr. Myers of Ft. Wayne, as counsel. He came Friday, and they held a consultation, in which Dr. Myers admitted that all was being done properly that could be done, but that the chances were against recovery. He gradually failed, however, dying as stated, Sunday night. The funeral was Tuesday at 2 p. m. at the M. E. church, being in charge of his pastor, Rev. A. S. Wooton. The interment was in Woodlawn. Mr. Harter was still a comparatively young man, his age being 37 years, 2 months and 27 days. His death was a sad shock to the whole community, for he was prominent in social and church affairs, and very popular every where. His death makes a gap in Auburn, that few if any can fill.

Court.

Work has not gone on regularly, though considerable has been done on several cases. Mrs. Sarah Thomas in Butler had a case to enjoin the town of Butler from collecting excessive taxes against her, or rather to prevent them from selling her property for what she claimed was excessive taxes. She lost her case and was adjudged to pay the defendant the costs incurred. But she appeals her case to the supreme court. In the case of young Randle at Waterloo against Farrington for damages; he was hurt while loading saw logs onto a wagon, and had received a judgment for damages. Now the defendant moves for a new trial. Court overruled this, and then the defendant moves for arrest of judgment. All parties are given 90 days in which to file bills of exceptions. Albert Robbins has been appointed administrator of the estate of the late W. P. Harter, and filed a bond of $50,000.

For further information, call upon or address any agent of the B. & O. road, or E. S. Allen, Ass't Gen'l Pass. Agent, Chicago, Ill.

Dr. A. A. Corkins.

After an absence of 15 years will again visit Waterloo every Saturday at Lock's Hotel, Waterloo.

His success in the treatment of piles can be amply attested by hundreds whom he cured during his former visits. I can cure any case of piles, no matter of how long standing, or how hopeless the case may be. The patient suffers no pain or inconvenience. In most cases one treatment is sufficient, which takes only a few minutes, and the time required for a cure is about two weeks, during which time the patient is not inconvenienced from business. 20tf

CORRESPONDENCE

WATERLOO.

Mrs. Dell Locke and children returned Monday to their home in Decatur.

Attorney Will Leas was over at Hicksville this week on some legal matters.

Mrs. Dr. Bevier and daughter Anna went to Kendallville one day last week.

Mrs. Juliette Dickinson is slowly recovering after several months of sickness.

Mrs. McBride and daughter Mattie, of Elkhart, are visiting Dr. Chamberlain and family.

Frank Kennedy has improved the appearance of his home this spring by a new coat of paint.

The railroads are commencing to cut down the fare to Chicago, and there is an increase in the number of visitors to the fair.

Cyrus Kelley and wife, from the west, are visiting his relatives here and also Mrs. Frank Beidler, who is a relative of Mrs. Kelley.

Mrs. Reed, who has been out of health for a long time, does not improve with the warm weather, and in some ways seems to be losing ground.

Last week while George Huber was out driving, his horse took fright and started to run, throwing him from the buggy and giving him a black eye. The colt was also considerably hurt.

Eugene Trout, wife and children, of Auburn, spent Sunday with Rev. and Mrs. Klotz, the occasion being the presence of Mrs. Dell Locke, of Decatur. Wm. Jackman, wife and son, from the country, were also present. Wilson Trout was not able to be present as he and his friends had anticipated.

Under Which King?

We are still waiting for an explanation from Congressman McNagny, as to which of the men here who claim to hold him in the hollow of their hand, is the real and simeon pure one. He cannot afford to ignore this matter. The Garrett Clipper has said distinctly that McNagny will obey that gang by the mere snapping of their fingers. Dr. Nusbaum and the others here have for some months been telling applicants for the postoffice, very pointedly that "whoever expects to be appointed must agree to take Mrs. Dills for assistant." McNagny cannot afford to rest in silence under such charges. If he expects to retain even the respect of the people of Auburn and of DeKalb county, he must deny that he is owned by any of these parties. The men who constitute the real democracy over here object to being controlled or sold, by a few office seekers either here or elsewhere. Under which king does our member prefer to be found, the people, or two or three bosses? The COURIER will publish for the people, any authentic information any of these parties may desire. If McNagny is going to turn "thumbs up" whenever these men say "wig-wag" we would like to know it And if he isn't the people would like to know it. And while he is about it we ask again why we cannot have the names of the parties McNagny consulted when here last. If he consulted the democrats of Auburn, why hesitate to name them?

The Fairfield Commencement.

The eighth annual commencement of the public schools of Fairfield township was held in the Lutheran church at Fairfield Center on the evening of June 2nd. The salutatory was given by J. H. Reinoehl. This was followed by the addresses of the graduates.

The class consisted of three ladies and three gentleman: Polly Sebert, May Urie, Manda Miller, Cyrus Gardner, Allen Martin and Reuben Childs. The graduates showed careful scholarship in both the preparation and delivery of their orations. The class address by Alma Husselman was given in a very creditable manner.

The very large attendance indicates the growing interest in these exercises and shows that the work of the public schools is being appreciated by all.

A BOYCOTT OF WESTERN INTERESTS!

Have you heard the latest—how the New York Goldbugs propose to boycott Western interests?

A leading New York paper comes boldly forth in a double-headed editorial and announces that at the next session of Congress the President will hurl into it a message devoted to one theme—the abolition of the Sherman law. So that

There shall not be another ounce of Silver bought or coined.

Will the hardy, intelligent citizen of the West feel the fangs of the goldbug octopus?

While awaiting an answer to this question, we desire to call your attention to what Silver will buy at the Boston Popular Outfitting Establishment. $10 buys a business suit worth $12 to $14, either single or double breasted, of good material, which lasts well and gives you a dressy appearance during business hours.

We don't know what it is to sell common clothing, and these suits have a genuine air of upper-ten-dom to them.

Examine carefully our bargain offerings. Criticise them accurately. Intelligent criticism is our best salesman.

The Top Shelf.

Dr. Marshall's Lung Syrup has reached the top shelf. There is nothing that equals this medicine for coughs, colds, asthma, bronchitis or any affection of the throat or lungs. It has been thoroughly tested for this class of diseases, and stands in the front rank at the head. This medicine is guaranteed to give satisfaction, who could ask for more. Give Dr. Marshall's Lung Syrup a trial; it has cured others and will cure you. Do not fail to use this in time. Price 25, 50 and $1. by all druggists.

She (with a sigh)—But we are in America you know.

King of Remedies.

The Great South American Nervine Tonic is absolute king of remedies in this country. It will cure every case of Nervous Dyspepsia and Indigestion in this nation. It will raise the invalid from a bed of Nervous Prostration of years duration to refreshing health in a few weeks. It quickly cures all cases of St. Vitus's Dance; prevents heart failure and failure of the mind. Warranted the greatest nerve cure ever known. It is pleasant to the taste as the sweetest nectar. Sold by Robbins & McCord, Auburn, Ind.

Excited Man—Look here! you gave me morphine instead of quinine this morning!

Druggist—Is that so? Then you owe me 25 cents.

Don't Travel Without It.

Dr. M J. Davis is a prominent physician of Lewis, Cass county, Iowa, and has been actively engaged in the practice of medicine at that place for the past thirty-five years. On the 26th of May, while in Des Moines en route for Chicago, he was suddenly taken with an attack of diarrhoea. Having sold Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy for the past seventeen years, and knowing its reliability, he procured a 25 cent bottle, two doses of which completely cured him. The excitement and change of water and diet incident to traveling often produce a diarrhoea. Everyone should procure a bottle of this Remedy before leaving home. For sale by Robbins & McCord.

Englishman—Have you brawss bedsteads?

Hotel Clerk—N-o, the bedsteads are made of soft wood, but you'll find the mattress nice and hard.

Brunker's

Carminative Balsam, the great stomach and bowel remedy, is still working wonders. For sale by all druggists.

Cures Dyspepsia.

Rebecca Wilkinson, of Brownsvalley, Ind., says: "I have been in a distressed condition for three years from nervousness, weakness of the stomach, dyspepsia and indigestion until my health was gone, I had been doctoring constantly with no relief. I bought one bottle of South American Nervine, which did me more good good any $50 worth of doctoring I ever did in my life. I would advise every weakly person to use this valuable and lovely remedy: a few bottles of it has cured me completely. I consider it the grandest medicine in the world." Warranted the most wonderful stomach and nerve cure ever known. Trial bottle 15 cents. Sold by Robbins & McCord.

There was a young lady named Bet,
Who indulged in a mild cigarette;
That's a month past to day,
But we're sorry to say,
She hasn't got over it yet.

A Sad Death.

Can you describe anything worse than a young person dying by inches with consumption, cut off in the bloom of youth, when bright prospects of happiness and prosperity are before them, a very sad death indeed. Is it not a fact that most cases of this kind are brought on by a cough, only slight at first, then more violent, followed by night sweats and a general breaking down of the entire system. These are cases in which people are to blame. Why not check this slight cough. Dr. Marshall's Lung Syrup is guaranteed to cure, it will prevent consumption. Use it before it is too late. By Druggists, 25, 50 and $1.

"My parrot is a patriotic bird."

"As to how?"

"On the Fourth of July she always says, 'Polly wants a firecracker.,"

Relieves Rheumatism.

Fifty cents is a small doctor bill, but that is all it will cost you to cure an ordinary case of rheumatism if you use Chamberlain's Pain Balm. Try it and you will be surprised at the prompt relief it affords. The first application will quiet the pain. 50 cent bottles for sale by Robbins & McCord.

"Who is boss here?" asked the new arrival in hades.

"Satan still rules the roast," replied the imp who kept the door.

Insure Against Sickness.

Are you insured? If not, now is the time to provide yourself and family with a bottle of Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy as an insurance against any serious results from an attack of bowel complaint during the summer months. It is almost certain to be needed and should be procured at once. No other remedy can take its place or do its work. 25 and 50 cent bottles for sale by Robbins & McCord.

Do mothers realize that the tables of mortality show that one-third of all the children born die before the age of five years. Of these fully one-half die of stomach and bowel troubles. These troubles prevail worse during hot weather, caused by unripe fruit, change of water or food, improper action of the digestive organs, etc. They are liable and frequent during the whole period of infancy, often very quick in fatality. Every mother should have the remedy, Brant's Extract of Blackberry, at hand for prompt use. Warranted reliable. Directions simple. 25 cents of F. E. Davenport 2

Are your nerves sound or shaky? More shaky than sound ones these days. If you are listless, run down, lacking ambition or nervous, excitable, irritable, either or all indicate that there is trouble with your nerves. Rev. G. W. Healy was here this week, being called here to attend the funeral of Mr. Harter. Of course he found many friends to greet him.

Henry Stroh has returned from taking in the sights at the big fair. He says expenses are not excessive, if one takes care to prevent it.

The Houlton show was well patronized Tuesday evening, the seats being full. They have some very good features in the way of amusements.

Home grown strawberries began coming into market early last week. They are a great improvement over those brought from a distance.

Mr. and Mrs. S. J. Zimmerman are back Tuesday from Chicago. They returned sooner than they expected, on account of Mr. Harter's funeral.

Vina Cool and her brother, Sydney have been here a few days visiting their young friends. They are well pleased with their new home at Logansport.

John McIntyre and wife are in town this week. Their home is in Memphis, Tenn., but they are here for a visit with the family, and will also take in the fair at Chicago.

George Swineford was up here Saturday. Working on the farm puts a good color on him. His father, A. Swineford, is about as he has been. He was in Auburn about a week ago.

The dozen or more new subscribers that sent in their names and cash for the COURIER within the last ten days have thanks. We will try to give them the best paper in the county.

T. F. Anthony, ex-postmaster of Promise City, Iowa, says: "I bought one bottle of Mystic Cure, and two doses of it did me more good than all the medicine I ever took." Sold by Robbins & McCord, Auburn, Ind.

Butler Record—The Lake Shore yards at this place have grown so extensive that the Company has established a new telegraph office about half a mile west of the depot and given it the name of West Butler on their new time card. Both day and night operators are stationed there. The Lake Shore now has three day and three night operators here.

L. W. Treesh and Mr. Bangs of Michigan were here Saturday. Mr. Bangs' father, who lives near Sedan, had a birthday party yesterday, he being 80 years old. Mr. Treesh had just returned from attending the General Meeting of the Lutheran church at Canton, Ohio, and while there met Joseph Conrad, well known in this county. Joe is keeping a hotel and doing well.

Charles Wagoner of Fairbury, Nebraska, called on the COURIER Monday. He was here in company with his old chum, Eli Walker. He goes back to Chicago and will stop at the fair for some time. His wife will visit Chicago and this county in October. His neighbor, John Rohrabaugh is doing well, and as both pay the COURIER in advance, of course they prosper.

John Gant, the traveling printer, editor and publisher sends us his latest edition of the "Typographical Tourist." It is a much larger and better number than he has issued heretofore, and has with all its i's faults much readable matter It is edited from about half the towns of Indiana and Michigan and has some personal notes of the printers and publishers of each. In his Auburn's items he says, "The COURIER is the leading paper, and to all purposes the democratic bibles."

South Bend Times: A curious craft has come into use for lumbering in Northern Ontario. When on the water it is a steam tug. When it is necessary to get overland from one lake or stream to another, it becomes a sledge. It is driven by steam power, using paddle wheels when in the water, and hauling itself overland by means of a long steel rope, one end of which is made fast to a tree, and the other to a windlass, on board. The engine drives the windlass, which winds up the rope, and the tug slides along after the fashion of what the farmers call a "stone boat." Six have been built and more are in the works.

G. H. McNabb of Butler, was in to see us Tuesday. He is the officer who went out to arrest Blackwell at the time the latter was killed. He regrets greatly the unfortunate outcome of the affair, but does not see how it could have been avoided. Blackwell, was a good sort of man when sober, but dangerous when in liquor. Mr. McNabb had tried every possible means to have him go peaceably along to town, but in each case, Blackwell refused, and threatened, and kept his gun ready to carry out his threat. It was a case of officers determined to discharge a sworn duty, as against a man who refused to obey the law. This is the matter in a nutshell. The COURIER regrets that such a thing should occur in our county but believes our laws should be enforced. It is simply an unfortunate matter all around. Mr. McNabb was here to see the county officers about some matters. His wife little son, are visiting her daughter in Huntington.

The M. E. church puts in electric lights this weeks. They will have twenty-five in the church and a number in the parsonage. They take of the Kiblinger plant.

Joe Pfefferl took a notion to harness up one of his pet calves a few days ago when it took a notion to run away. Joe was always able to handle the big fire teams, but that calf was too much for him.

T. H. Leasure, at Mt. Ayr, Iowa, sent in his subscription in advance this week. Tom understands that the summer season is the dull one for newspaper men and that they need all the subscriptions then.

Miss May Plumb, daughter of Guy Plumb of Easton, Md., reached here last Thursday, and is stopping with her relatives, the Brandons. She brings word of the good health of her people there.

The Houlton Show came into town Tuesday about one o'clock, making quite a fair show for a circus of that size, and had good music. We noticed one of the Murphy brothers playing a drum for them.

Price D. West, has been made administrator of the estate of the late Mrs. Anna Bremmerman. Mr. West is a careful and thorough attorney and is proving a valuable man in the matters of this kind.

Buy the Rock Island Hay Loader of Brown, Culbertson & Boland, Auburn; M. F. Long & Co., Butler, or E. Case & Co., St. Joe. It beats them all.

It is rumored that a man named James Carnahan living south of town has been indicted for cruelly beating his little boy who was helping him in the corn-field. We hope the report is not true, but if is, and he did so beat the child he should be made an example of.

David Heckathorn goes home this Friday and will at once start up his mill at his home south of Hudson, and make business hum there again. And as soon as he can get to it, he will add a regular lumber yard and keep a full stock of lumber, shingles, lath, lime, hair, hard and soft coal, etc. It will be a great convenience for the people thereabouts.

Butler Review—The Lake Shore has put on other new trains. One of them, No. 23, which leaves New York at 12 p. m. and reaches here at 8:15 a. m. and has a day coach attached for local passengers. It reaches Chicago at 1 p. m. and is called the World's fair special and is quite a handy train for Butler people to travel on. It is well patronized too.

Uncle Henry Shull writes his old friend, the COURIER, that his health is excellent and he is enjoying life at the home of his children, Joseph and Rebecca, at Phillipsburg, Montana. Health is good at that place generally. He and Rebecca reached there Tuesday all right after leaving Auburn on Monday of the week before. They had bad weather including rain and snow. He says he was out walking June 1 and wore his overcoat, and it was needed. The town and its mining camps are doing well. He sends his best wishes to all the old neighbors.

Laporte Argus: W. H. Caniff now general superintendent of the Lake Shore road, was at the commencement of his railroad career agent at Otis, in this country. He showed an aptitude for railroad work and was made trackmaster of the Kendallville division by Engineer Benj. Reece. From there he was promoted to Division Superintendent at Kalamazoo and in a few years found himself one of the trusted men in the general office at Cleveland and second in command to President Newell. His rise in the railroad world has been rapid, but he has had the ability to maintain a level head and is not only an efficient superintendent but he is popular with all who come in contact with him.

J. W. Douglas was badly hurt at the Zimmerman factory Monday morning. The had cleaned out the boiler of the engine, and Mr. Douglas was on the top of it putting on the manhead again and the wrench slipped off and he fell off, striking his head against some of the heavy iron parts of the machinery. He was found by some of the workmen so wedged in between these parts that they could hardly get him out. His head was badly bruised, the skull at the base of the back of his head was laid bare and he was bruised about the back. No one knows just how long he had lain there, for he was unconscious when found, and remained in that condition all day and that night, though at times he could be roused enough to notice things a little. At times he would have severe vomiting spells, and some blood ran out of his ear. His condition is considered serious.

David Bear of Fairfield, reports some bad fisherman coming up there to fish on the lake. One party got their supper at Mr. Hecht's and promised to get their breakfast there and then settle for both. But they did not appear in the morning. Such fellows ought to be made an example of.

There will be preaching service at the English Lutheran church next Saturday evening at 8 p. m. To this every member of the church is requested to be present, it being the preparatory service, preceding the communion service on Sabbath following. We invite all to communion service next Sabbath.

Steuben Republican—From the frequent mentions we have noted recently in our exchanges, of students who have started or are about to start for Angola to attend the Normal College, we conclude that among the young people of our neighboring counties, the college is an active and successful rival to the World's Fair.

Everyone should read our write-up of Auburn in this week's issue. It has always been our aim to vary the routine of our newspaper efforts in behalf of our pleasant and prosperous city by an occasional write-up of the town and its citizens. All these things help to keep us to the front. At all events it will help to offset the discouraging accounts the other papers are trying to pour into the public ear.

Lewis Bowers is still confined to his bed, by the injuries he received a week ago Sunday, by his horse stepping on him. He was holding the horse by the halter when something caused it to jump, jerking him down. The horse going over him struck a hind hoof on his side, injuring him internally perhaps and dislocating his collar bone. He suffers somewhat, not only from the pain, but the confinement of the bandages, but we hope to see him out again soon.

Mr. and Mrs. Harry Scott came down from Angola Saturday evening intending to take a Lake Shore train from Waterloo to Chicago. Missing that, they came over here the next morning, intending to make a short visit with Mrs. Scott's people here, and then get back in time for the forenoon train. Mr. Ralston took them back to Waterloo, arriving there just in time to see the train pull out. So they returned and waited for the evening train. They expect to spend some time at the fair.

South Bend Times—Noting the arrest and imprisonment of several individuals of Elkhart, Truth accompanies each item with the Italicized exclamation: "Establish a stone pile and stop free boarding at the expense of the taxpayers." It might be well for every paper to follow this example. It is a howling farce to give drunken vagabonds free board and comfortable quarters as "punishment" for their violations of the law and their annoyance of decent and orderly people. Public sentiment might possibly be thus aroused against this absurd treatment of notorious bums and reprobates.

There will be music by the choir, and the other usual exercises.

The Harter Store.

All are asking what course is to be taken in regard to this great business house, now that its able and responsible leader has been removed by death. We reply in brief: Albert Robbins has been appointed administrator to conduct and settle up affairs, giving a bond of $50-000. An invoice will be taken at once, and as soon as that is completed, which will be in a few days, the store will be opened for business again. The appointment of Mr. Robbins is a guarantee of good management, and will no doubt prove the most desirable that could have been made. We also understand that everything connected with the affairs of the firm is in excellent shape.

IN ordinary life the workman is known by his tools, but in politics it's his tools that make the boss.

WHEN an organ-grinder takes off his hat after playing a tune it's no sign of his reverence for good music.

AFTER friendship and love come benevolence and that compassion which unites the soul to the unfortunate.

LET the memory of those oversights by which we have suffered instruct us; for, though past moments cannot be recalled, past errors may be repeated.

AS WELL might a planet, revolving round a sun, expect to have perpetual daylight in both hemispheres as a man to expect in this life to enjoy happiness throughout unmixed with sorrow or pain.

AN Idaho man proposes to set up a bank on a steamboat and do business with several small lake towns which are not large enough to sustain banks of their own. He will carry a floating capital, of course.

MINISTER LINCOLN says that it cost him $70,000 more than his salary to live in London as the representative of this Government. But the United States is not responsible for his tribute paid to London society.

TWO MEXICANS fought with knives for the hand of beauty. They fought quite energetically. After the hand of beauty has strewn a few blossoms over a pair of graves it will doubtless be bestowed upon somebody who had sense enough to keep out of the row.

A GOOD deal of time and energy is expended in the public schools in teaching children to hold their pens and pencils in a position that is scientific, of course, but which, with the natural depravity of human kind, they are pretty sure to abandon as soon as they get outside the schools.

A GENIUS of Posey county, Ind., thus computes the expense of a day at the Chicago Fair grounds: Street-car fare, 10 cents; admission, 50 cents; milk at milk exhibit, free; fresh rolls at yeast exhibit, free; buttered crackers at butter exhibit, free; total, 60 cents. This is the ingenuity of economy.—N. Y. Press.

A SON of the Czar of Russia has fallen in love with a girl who has nothing to commend her but beauty of person and character. Her blood, far from having a royal taint, is not even blue. But for once the Czar is helpless, and the prospect of having a nice girl for a daughter-in-law appalls him more than a nihilist bomb.

OPPORTUNITIES for doing greatly seldom occur, for life is made up of infinitesimals. If you compute the happiness in any given day, you will find that it was composed of small attentions, kind looks which made the heart swell and stirred into health that rancid film of misanthropy which is apt to coagulate on the stream of our inward life.

IT seems pretty well settled that the much-talked of leather trust has actually been formed. One hundred firms are said to have pooled their issues in the scheme, and the capital of the organization is placed at $120,000,000, represented by stock, all of which, it is said, has been distributed. The trust has not such a complete monopoly of its field as have many, if not most, of the other trusts, and it will be interesting to see what will be its history.

THE recent defeat of the Arabs in the Congo region of Central Africa is good news, for it means another blow at the infamous slave trade, of which in modern times these degenerate Arabs have been the worst fomenters. This time it is to be hoped the blow is final. The present leader of the Arabs is a Belgian, 31 years old, who served several years in the Congo Free State forces. He joined the rebel cause last year, and took part in the battles last November and January. His defeat must convince him that he has sold himself very cheap—which, indeed, must always be the case when any man sells himself.

CLEVELAND LEADER: Georgia's Commissioner of Agriculture proposes to call a meeting of the agricultural commissioners of several Southern States to "devise plans to elevate the standard of farming in the South." They will have an immense field to work in. If there is one thing in the whole industrial world of America which needs reforming more than any other it is the tillage of the soil in some of the Southern States. There millions of acres of grain yield hardly enough for seed, year after year.

THE very strongest argument was made by the American representatives before the conference to decide the seal question in Behring Sea. The argument dismisses entirely any claim that Behring Sea is a closed sea to the vessels of other nations. They may rightfully pass through it in the course of trade. But the seals in Behring Sea are on a different basis. They belong to the United States, because they are bred on islands belonging to this country and purchased from Russia with the understanding that this control of their breeding places gave us prior claims on all seals bred on our territory.

FRIENDS of Cuba announce that the great uprising that is to turn the island upside down and shake off Spanish shackles has been set for June. Their thoughtfulness is equal to that of a burglar who would send word to the police that he intended at a certain hour to break into a bank. There is reason to fear that the filibuster of the period carries his weapon poorly concealed between his teeth.

FROM present indications the whisky trust will soon be a thing of the past. Somebody made a great deal of money out of the concern, but somebody lost a great deal, too. In their endeavors to defraud the government they have defrauded themselves. A few months ago it was generally believed that Congress would increase the whisky tax. The distilleries commenced to run double time, on the theory that all the spirits manufactured before the taking effect of the new law would be exempt from the increased duty, and the whisky trust would make the difference. But the duty was not raised and the trust is in the "soup."

FARM improvements often pay when the value of the land they reclaim is not worth the cost of putting in the improvement. We have in mind cases where wet sloughs in the center of an otherwise dry field were underdrained at a cost greater than the value of the land owned. But it enabled the owner of the land to get to work on it one or two weeks earlier than would otherwise be possible. In that way the whole field was made more productive and the improvement paid. In another case an open ditch that ran diagonally through a fine field was made into an underdrain. Then the whole field could be and was worked at greatly lessened expense.

THE foreign governments which took part in the naval review off Hampton Roads and in New York harbor lost, it is said, 300 seamen by desertion. It is the natural desire of residents of all European countries to become citizens of the United States, and it was certain from the first that if European governments sent ships here a considerable proportion of the men when they arrived in United States waters would improve the opportunity to desert. It is a loss which all foreign vessels expect when they visit the harbors of the United States, and as the deserters come in without paying any head tax, they have some advantages over those immigrating in the usual way.

AN accidental discovery and seizure of counterfeit money, recently made at Bridgeport, Conn., furnishes some startling information in regard to the extent of the "green goods" business. The seizure embraced the complete outfit, books, accounts and memoranda of a firm which has been carrying on its business in New York for several years. Among other things there were 240,000 circulars, three in each envelope, addressed to 80,000 persons, all over the country. The circulars were ready to be mailed, and gave fictitious addresses in New York for replies. Among the papers seized was a list containing the names of 110 "customers" since April 1, 1893, with the amounts obtained from them. The sums vary from $200 to $600, the total amount obtained from 110 victims being $40,185. The list as published contains names from nearly every Western and Southern State.

THE rapid depreciation of values in what are called the industrial stocks, which caused the monetary tightness, has worked no real harm to the country. All these stocks are controlled by trusts, and fortunately it is only the fictitious value put upon the property by the trust officials that has been wiped out. That is a positive good in more ways than one. Each individual corporation is now working away as vigorously as ever, paying its money over to the receiver, instead of to the President and Treasurer. What the country now needs is a more vigorous enforcement of the laws, both State and national, against trusts. In that event the public will save all that the useless trust must have charged as profit to itself. Hence the country looks on complacently, while the inflated values of the stock market are scaled down. All the property these stocks represent is intact. That is the main thing to be considered.

Original Method of Theft.

An ingenious method of theft is thus described as taking place on the coasts of South America. It is needless to say that the perpetrators are, of course, "professionals:"

"One sailor is sitting, half asleep, on his sea-chest. A gaucho quietly comes up and taps him on the back. 'Bueno, Johnny; bueno, Johnny.' 'If you are not off, I'll send a bullet into you,' says Jack. 'Bueno, Johnny; bueno; till to-morrow:' and off skulks the gaucho to his horse, which he mounts. With a sardonic smile he takes off his hat to Jack, bids him farewell, and digging his spurs into the flanks of his wiry little horse, leans over his neck, and is off at full gallop over the short grass of the sandy plains. At the first stride of the horse, to Jack's intense surprise, his box is wrenched violently from under him. He jumps up, rubs his eyes, and, before he can recover his senses, he sees his property rolling and bumping away over the sandhills, at the heels of the gaucho's steed; for this clever gentleman had managed to make one end of his lasso fast to the handle of Jack's box while engaged in conversation with him."

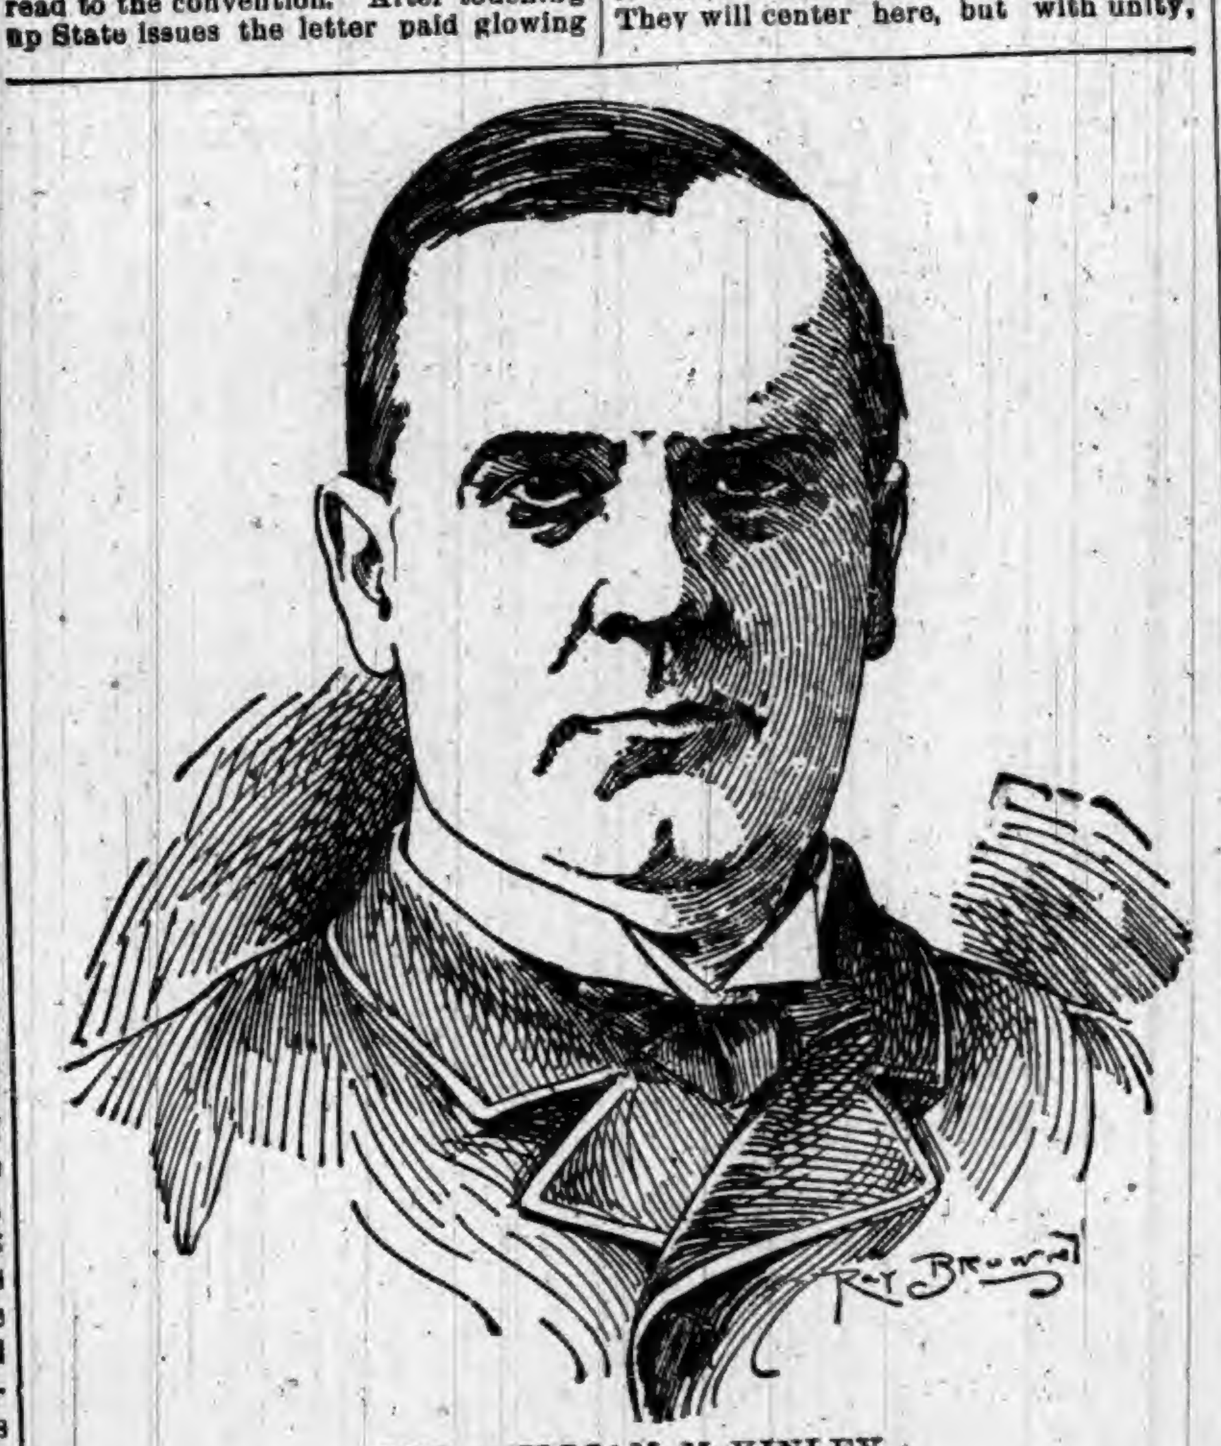
REPUBLICANS OF OHIO

MEET IN STATE CONVENTION AT COLUMBUS.

Govenor McKinley and the Present State Officers Renominated—McKinley Sounds the Keynote—Letter from Senator Sherman—Full Text of the Platform.

The Republican State Convention was called to order Wednesday, by State Chairman Pursell. The stage was draped with tri-colored bunting, but with this exception the interior of the Opera House was bare of decorations. Prayer was offered by Rev. Dr. David R. Moore of Logan, and General Charles H. Grosvenor of Athens, was introduced as temporary chairman. The speech of the chairman occupied half an hour in the delivery. He eulogized the Republican party, said the defeat of 1893 was due to misrepresentations which the people of the country will not stand by, recounted the glittering generalities of the protectionists, denounced Democracy, praised Mr. Harrison, ex-President Hayes, Senator Sherman, and ex-Secretary Foster, and closed by urging all to drink in the spirit of Lincoln, Grant, Garfield, and Blaine, and organize for an overwhelming victory in the future.

A long letter from Senator Sherman regretting his inability to attend was read to the convention. After touching up State issues the letter paid glowing encomiums upon the party for securing America for the Americans; its acts of legislation; urged renewed effort and predicted that "patriotic people of the country will rally to the party wherever a free ballot and fair count is permitted by the ruling powers of the Democratic party." The convention adjourned to meet at 10 o'clock a. m., Thursday.



GOV. WILLIAM McKINLEY.

A few moments after 10 o'clock Thursday, Gen. Grosvenor called the Republican State Convention to order and Rev. Dr. N. H. Holmes implored the Divine blessing on the proceedings. A hearty greeting was accorded Hon. H. M. Dougherty when he was introduced as permanent Chairman, and in recognition of the cordiality he limited his speech to three minutes.

After his speech the report of the Committee on Resolutions was next in order. It was read by Congressman G. W. Hulick of Clermont. Each plank was loudly applauded. It was as follows:

The Republicans of Ohio, by their delegates in State convention assembled, declare as follows:

1. We indorse and reaffirm the platform of principles adopted by the national Republican convention in June, 1892.

2. We indorse and commend the administration of Benjamin Harrison while President of the United States as eminently patriotic, wise, pure, and just.

3. The people of Ohio have a just pride in the administration of affairs of this State by Governor William McKinley, Jr. He brought to the discharge of his duties as governor ripe experience, great learning, ability, statesmanship, and an honest and patriotic purpose; and he has always shown himself capable, faithful, and wise. We heartily indorse his administration and assure him of our great esteem and confidence.

4. We indorse the action of the last general assembly in providing by law for the protection of railway employes, by compelling the use of the automatic couplers—for the arbitration of labor controversies—for the taxation of franchises and collateral inheritances, and other measures the effect of which will be to reduce the burdens of taxation on farms and other property.

5. We favor biennial sessions of the general assembly in obedience to the original purpose of the present constitution.

6. We favor the policy of full and adequate protection to American labor and industries. The best exemplification of the principle of protection and reciprocity, that has found expression in the statutes, is the McKinley act. We cordially declare our adhesion to the doctrines of that great measure, and favor such amendments thereto for protection as time and experience may show to be advisable.

7. We condemn the bill passed by the Democratic majority, in the House of Representatives of the last Congress, and the present avowed policy of the Democratic party, to place wool on the free list, as an unjust and ruinous attack on all the agricultural industries of the country. We insist on such full and adequate protection for the wool industry as will enable American farmers to supply the wool required for consumption in the United States.

8. We indorse the policy of the National grange "that all tariff laws shall protect the products of the farm as well as the products of the factory."

9. We believe in a free ballot and fair count, and we favor such legislation as will secure these results for every voter in the United States.

10. We demand the enactment of laws that will protect our people against the influx of the vicious and criminal classes and the importation of laborers under contract to compete with our citizens, and we demand the rigid enforcement of existing immigration laws by the National administration.

11. We adhere to the Republican policy of granting pensions to the wounded and disabled soldiers and sailors of the late war, and the widows and orphans of such as are deceased, and we condemn the unfriendly and unjust policy already made manifest by the present Democratic administration.

12. We favor honest money, composed of gold, silver, and paper, maintained at equal value and under National and not State regulation. The financial honor of the State must be maintained and its credit preserved unimpaired. The weak and vacillating course of the present National administration in dealing with the financial situation meets our condemnation.

12. We denounce the avowed purpose of the Democratic party to repeal "the prohibitory 10 per cent. tax on State Bank issues." Its purpose is to abandon the present currency system, established by the Republican party, the safest and best ever provided in any nation and to supply its place with a currency issued under the authority of each one of our forty-four States which can never be either safe or of uniform value.

When the platform had been read and adopted the decks were cleared for nominations. Governor McKinley's name was presented by Col. Bob Nevins of Dayton, and seconded by Senator J. W. Nichols of Belmont. There were no other nominations, and the Governor was declared the nominee amid a scene of wild enthusiasm. A committee was appointed to conduct him to the hall and a few moments later he made his appearance. He was greeted with cheers prolonged several moments. He commenced his address by accepting the nomination and expressing his gratitude and appreciation.

"Republicanism," he said, "will have a severe test in Ohio this year. This State is the coveted field of the opposition. They will center here, but with unity, harmony, and courage, our party will triumph over all. We do not wait for the enemy to form their line and challenge us to contest. We challenge them early upon every issue and upon every line of controversy, State or National, which divides us. One day we learn that the enemy want to give us battle upon State affairs; then upon National issues. We invite them before the bar of public judgment for discussion upon both, and shall permit them to run away from neither."

The Governor proceeded to review the administration of State affairs by the Republican party at extreme length. Then, coming down to National issues, he continued:

"The National administration has done nothing thus far except to create in the minds of business men a deep distrust. The financial situation, which, for the most part, has prevailed since the 4th of March, has not been improved, nor has the financial stringency been relieved by anything the National administration has said or done. It has announced no policy, suggested no relief, and given no sign of its disposition or ability to restore confidence, stop the outflow of gold to foreign countries and the contraction which has taken place at home. The $100,000,000 of gold reserve which Mr. Cleveland, in his first administration, set apart as a sacred fund to redeem the greenbacks and which sum he dedicated to that purpose, and none other, has been the first, singularly enough, to encroach upon it—the first to drop below the hundred million line which he himself had established as the only line of safety."

Continuing this line of thought at some length, Mr. McKinley said: "The Democratic victory of 1892 has not been able to bring the better times promised. It has not been able to maintain the good times which were enjoyed everywhere in the country on the day of the victory. Business failures have increased, banks have suspended, money is harder to borrow, and borrowers are compelled to pay higher interest for their loans than for many, many years. Feverish uncertainty prevails in every financial and business circles. Labor and capitol are in doubt about the future. This has been our condition for two months and no change for the better is at this moment apparent."

Governor McKinley continued at considerable length, speaking upon the tariff, pensions and other questions of the day.

The following nominations were made by acclamation:

Lieutenant Grovenor—A. L. Harris.
Treasurer—W. T. Cope.
Attorney General—John K. Richards.
Judge of the Supreme Court—Joseph P. Bradbury.
Member Board of Public Works—Frank J. McCulloch.
Dairy Commissioner—B. F. McNeal.

An eagle was adopted as the party emblem, and at 12:30 the convention adjourned sine die.

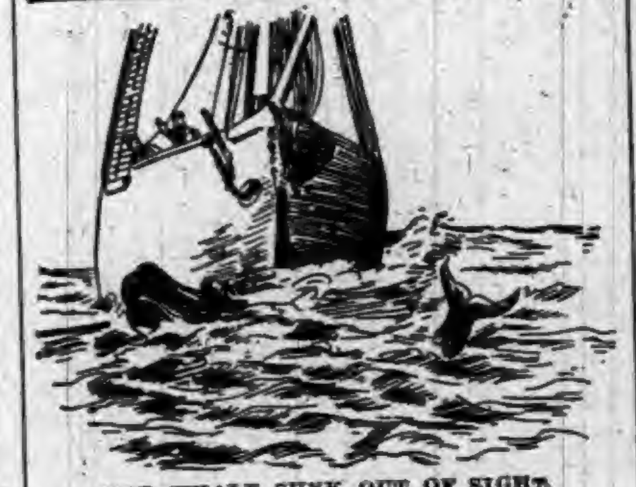
Pestiferous Squirrels.

In Arizona and California, and also in Western Texas and New Mexico, the farmers have annually to contend against the destructive habits of certain rodents, whose ravages have often devastated entire sections. The central and southern portions of California especially are overrun by innumerable squirrels, which increase with such rapidity that the means hitherto employed to destroy them have proved wholly inadequate. In Arizona, New Mexico and Western Texas several varieties of rabbits are equally destructive with the squirrels of California, and the huge field rats of Southern Arizona and the frontier. These destructive animals eat the tender shoots of the cereals as soon as they appear above ground; but, worse than all, they burrow in the earth to such an extent that in a few hours a vast field of thriving grain will present the appearance of a thoroughly-plowed plain. A systematic war of extermination has become necessary.

ATTACKED BY A WHALE.

A Sealing Schooner Meets with a Thrilling Experience.

One of the most remarkable adventures with whales ever recorded was experienced by a sealing schooner off the coast of Japan not long ago. This vessel, the Mermaid from Victoria, B. C., was sailing under light canvas one day, the weather being rough, when the man at lookout caught sight of an immense whale lying asleep in the path of the vessel. Not wishing to disturb the big fellow in his slumbers, the schooner was steered to one side; but his whaleship had been awakened and was mad at the interruption of his nap. He made for the vessel, which, however, managed to keep out of his way for some time. Finally he came for her head on and there was no avoiding the attack. The seamen were frightened nearly out of their wits when the monster landed a heavy blow with his tail against the stem, breaking it and carrying off all the forward rigging, the stem itself hanging by a few splinters. But the vessel was not the only sufferer. Mr. Whale acted as if he was pretty badly hurt himself, and at once retired from the scene by sinking below the surface. No more was seen of him by the crew. The schooner was sailed as rapidly as possible to a Japanese port, where she was repaired.



THE WHALE SUNK OUT OF SIGHT

LOOKS LIKE A HUMAN HAND.

The Singular Growth of a Tree Which Had Once Been Blighted.

Up on the east side of North Seventh street, about midway between Poplar street and Girard avenue, Philadelphia, stands a strikingly curious tree, which recently attracted the attention of an Inquirer man. It stands just in front of a stable yard, and the employes of the place say that dozens of people come to them every week and make remarks or ask questions about the strange growth. From the thickness of the growth at the base the tree is probably about 40 years old, but its branches and foliage are new and fresh, and look as though they were but the growth of a year or two. The trunk runs straight from the ground to a height of fifteen feet. Above this, for a short distance, is a thick, globular mass of foliage, the leaves appearing to grow directly out of the wood. Above this growth run up three thick stalks or stumps, six or eight feet high, also covered with a dense, close mass of foliage. When the tree is viewed from the north side it presents a startling resemblance to a giant human hand protruding from the earth. The three big stumps at the top represent the three middle fingers, and upon either side of these can easily be seen configurations of the surrounding foliage which correspond to the little finger and thumb. The explanation of the phenomenon is a curious one. The tree was once full-grown and vigorous, but was attacked by blight or some other disease, and the dead trunk was pruned down to its present proportions, whereupon the present new growth developed.

KILLED 21,000 SQUIRRELS.

Freeman Biggs, a Nimrod Who Bought a Farm with Proceeds of Their Pelts.

Freeman Biggs, of Hutton Township, eight miles from Charleston, Ill., carries the scalps of 21,000 squirrels at his belt, so to speak. As his reputation for truth and veracity is good his neighbors do not dispute his claim that he has slaughtered 500 deer, 300 wild turkeys, and more prairie chickens than he had time to count. This mighty Nimrod is 71 years old and his sight is just as good as ever, so good, in fact, that if the bullet from the rifle he has carried for many years fails to strike Mr. Squirrel between the eyes he will hardly throw the animal in his game-bag—and squirrels are worth from 12½ to 15 cents. For thirty-five years "Freem" Biggs has hunted "bush tails," and the proceeds of his accurate aim have bought a fine farm on which he reared a family of ten childen. For the last thirty-five years he has done business exclusively with the squirrels, and modestly estimates that on an average he has sold about 600 a year.

Simple Treatment for a Sprain.

For a recently sprained joint, first apply for five or ten minutes cold water in a stream if possible, then dry the part well, and apply a roll of bandage as snugly as possible, using cotton batting in little wads to fit every hollow, so that the bandage will exert an even compression all around. Change the bandage daily with a little gentle hand-rubbing or massage while it is off, using a little magnetic ointment, too, as a comforter.

READ.—SPEAR HEAD possesses more qualities of intrinsic value than any other plug tobacco produced. It is the sweetest, the toughest, the richest. SPEAR HEAD is absolutely, positively and distinctively different in flavor from any other plug tobacco. A trial will convince the most skeptical of this fact. It is the largest seller of any similar shape and style on earth, which proves that it has caught the popular taste and pleases the people. Try it, and participate in the contest for prizes. See that a TIN TAG is on every 10 cent piece of SPEAR HEAD you buy. Send in the tags, no matter how small the quantity.

Very sincerely,
THE P. J. SORG COMPANY, MIDDLETOWN, OHIO.

A list of the people obtaining these prizes in this county will be published in this paper immediately after February 1st, 1894.

Many Cooks.

A proud Welsh boy at school, hearing that an English duke employed six men cooks during the period that he kept open house, or rather open castle, in the north, sneered at the alleged magnificence.

"My father does better than that," said the youth. "At our very last party before I left home we had twenty-four men cooks, all employed in dressing the supper!"

The true state of the case was revealed later, when a companion announced to his school-fellows that, although the Welshman had spoken truly, the company at the supper to which he had alluded consisted of twenty-four of his near relatives, and every man toasted his own cheese.

The North Pole and Equator

Are not more widely distinct than the standard tonic, stimulant and alterative, Hostetter's Stomach Bitters, and the cheap and fiery local bitters which unscrupulous venders foist upon the unwary as medicated preparations with remedial properties. The latter are usually composed in the main of half rectified alcoholic excitants, with some wretched drug combined to disguise their real flavor, and are perfectly ruinous to the coats of the stomach. Hostetter's Stomach Bitters, on the contrary, has for its basis choice spirits of absolute purity, and this is modified and combined with medicinal extracts of rare excellence and botanic origin, which both invigorate and regulate the bowels, stomach and liver. They effect a radical change in the disordered physical economy, which is manifested by a speedy improvement in the general health.

Superstition.

In the church of an agricultural parish, within twenty miles of London, there stood, the other Sunday, at the dismissal of the congregation, a poor woman holding a plate. The object was to obtain thirty pence from as many unmarried men, to be exchanged for half-a-crown, also by an unmarried man; the half-a-crown thus obtained to be carried to a silversmith, and made into a ring, to be worn on one of her fingers, for the cure of epileptic fits, to which she had been long subject. This piece of incredible foolery was gone through with the knowledge and sanction of the clergyman!

KNOWLEDGE

Brings comfort and improvement and tends to personal enjoyment when rightly used. The many, who live better than others and enjoy life more, with less expenditure, by more promptly adapting the world's best products to the needs of physical being, will attest the value to health of the pure liquid laxative principles embraced in the remedy, Syrup of Figs.

Its excellence is due to its presenting in the form most acceptable and pleasant to the taste, the refreshing and truly beneficial properties of a perfect laxative; effectually cleansing the system, dispelling colds, headaches and fevers and permanently curing constipation. It has given satisfaction to millions and met with the approval of the medical profession, because it acts on the Kidneys, Liver and Bowels without weakening them and it is perfectly free from every objectionable substance.

Syrup of Figs is for sale by all druggists in 50c and $1 bottles, but it is manufactured by the California Fig Syrup Co. only, whose name is printed on every package, also the name, Syrup of Figs, and being well informed, you will not accept any substitute if offered.

Statements Made in the New York Sun Shown to Be False — Protecting the Cholera Industry—Tariff for Wage-Earners a Sham.

The Manufacturers and the Tariff.

Letters like the following appeal strongly to personal sympathy, but they have no part in political argument under the Democratic creed of 1892:

To the editor of the Sun:

SIR—The proposed tariff changes are ruining the manufacturers of articles where labor enters largely into the cost. Many of us do not dare make our losses known, as our credit would be impaired. I am the president of a company recently employing 500 hands, now 250, in an industry where labor is 80 per cent. of the cost of the goods.

A SUFFERING AMERICAN MANUFACTURER.

Any proposed change of importance in the tariff produces more or less distress in industrial circles.

The principle enunciated at Chicago, and approved and accepted by the people in the vote which elected Mr. Cleveland, is that the Federal Government has no power to shape its tariff legislation with regard to the prosperity or distress of American manufacturers, or of the American workmen whom they employ. The sole constitutional purpose of the tariff is to raise revenue, and the only constitutional tariff is the tariff into which the question of the prosperity or distress of American industries does not enter.

This is a broad, manly, definite and intelligible declaration of principle. This is the principle on which the new tariff is to be made, unless promises are broken. Somebody may suffer, but suffering is a condition of human existence. The principle on which the tariff is to be revised takes no more account of such sufferings than the east wind takes of the welfare of men and women with bronchial difficulties.

Although the question of consequences to American manufacturers and laborers is not pertinent, it is, nevertheless, urged in behalf of the strict application of this relentless principle of taxation that great general good will result from the experiment. Incidentally, some manufacturers may have to close their shops and seek a new business, and some branches of production may disappear. But these incidental losses, it is maintained, will be more than balanced by compensating gains in other directions, and the giant wheels of industry will continue to revolve as smoothly as ever, and more than ever for the greatest good of the greatest number. That is why the experiment is to be tried.—New York Sun.

The letter which gives the Sun another opportunity to stab the Democratic party in the back may be genuine or it may be a pure fake; in either case its statements are false. The census bulletins for 1890 thus far issued show no industry in which the cost of labor is 80 per cent. of the cost of the product. The only industries in which labor cost exceeds 70 per cent. of the product are mining and quarrying. In most industries the figures vary from 12 to 50. The average for all is probably less than 20 per cent. In 1860 it was 25; in 1800, 23; and in 1880, 22 per cent., thus showing that in spite of increasing tariffs the share of the wage-earner has been steadily diminishing. The Sun should be more careful and require greater accuracy on the part of its correspondents or editors responsible for such statements.

But supposing the letter were genuine, and the "suffering American manufacturer" had not lied! What then? Must a thousand other industries and 65,000,000 people continue to tax themselves to support this weak, trembling industry that has the life scared half out of it by the mere suggestion that its supply of pap will be reduced some time in the future? Hardly. It is time to cease to foster artificial industries, which will always be sickly here, and to lift the burden from the many sturdy, independent industries that ask no odds of any country. Take the brakes off these naturally healthy industries and they will soon show the world what kind of stuff Americans are made of. Five new mills will go up for every one abandoned and soon the recently discharged workingmen and the chronic unemployed will be at work at higher wages than ever before. Untax the people and prosperity will go forward by leaps and bounds.

Gov. Hogg on Bounties.

The State of Texas raises sugar on its convict farms. Under the law passed by the Fifty-first Congress it is entitled to draw from the United States Treasury a bounty of 2 cents a pound upon its crop. The Legislature of the State recently passed an act to enable the superintendents of penitentiaries to apply for and receive the bounty. Gov. Hogg has vetoed the bill, and given his reasons in a very vigorous document. He declares that the United States Government has no right to tax the people of the country in order to give the money to the State of Texas or to anybody else. He finds nowhere any authority by which Congress can properly give bounties to men for engaging in an unprofitable business. He declares that Texas makes sugar-growing pay, and that if it did not the remedy would be to quit raising sugar. He very plainly intimates that the same principle is applicable to individual sugar-growers. In brief, Gov. Hogg rejects for Texas the position of a dependent upon the national bounty, and contends that there is no constitutional warrant for Federal bounties in any case. Whether he is right or wrong in his interpretation of the Constitution, the sturdy Texan is certainly right upon grounds of morality and manhood. Bounties are wrong in principle and unjust in effect.—New York World.

Untax American Industries.

All genuine American industries will be promoted and encouraged by a prompt and thorough reduction of the tariff to a strictly revenue standard; and in my judgment they would be even more encouraged by a much more radical reform. The chief burden of the tariff always has been and always will be laid upon American industries. More than three-fourths of all the articles which are taxed by any tariff are indispensable materials for American manufactures or agriculture. It may be, unfortunately, necessary to tax them, but such taxes can never do any good to the vast majority of American manufacturers and workmen. No industry can possibly be benefited by loading it with taxes.—Thomas G. Shearman.

Wages, Prices, and Cost of Production.

American protectionists always point to free-trade England as showing the baneful influences of free trade upon the wages of workmen. Yet the contrary is true. English wages are much higher, and employment there is steadier than in any protectionist country upon the continent of Europe. And that English wages are not even higher than at present is not the fault of its free trade policy, but, strange as it may seem, the result of the protective tariffs of those countries, new as well as old, from which England receives its food and many of the raw or partly finished materials it needs in its industries.

If protectionists want to show the blessings of protective tariffs, let them point to the low wages of Germany, France, Italy, Austro-Hungary, or Russia, all of which pretend to protect their industries, and incidentally the wages of their workmen, by means of high tariffs.

Does it not appear strange that at the present time so many nations are still adhering to this so often exposed system of so-called protection? But it seems stranger yet that the great bulk of the working people, the ones who pay dearest for, and suffer heaviest under, the tariff taxes and all its consequences, are not more jealous of their hard-earned money. They first of all should not only oppose every attempt at fortifying a tariff-wall, but should not suffer any tariff at all to come between them and the products of other countries. That they, at best, are indifferent about it, shows that the people of all countries do not yet clearly perceive the principles underlying the production of commodities and the laws governing their distribution. The great prosperity of the United States of America under a so-called protective system deceives nearly all nations, old as well as new, into the belief that their countries will prosper also as soon as they either levy or increase high duties upon commodities imported from abroad. They do not perceive that the United States flourish because their people are among the most enterprising and industrious upon earth. They do not see that wages there are high because there is yet so great an abundance of free or untilled land, the owners of which are willing to part with it at a very small compensation or let it at a rent so low that nearly all of its product goes to the one who works it. This almost full return to the people working the land makes wages in all other occupations high.—Dingman Versteeg, in Tariff Reform.

Must Pay the Fiddler.

A number of well-meaning newspapers throughout the country are holding out hopes that the serious adverse balance of trade will be overcome when we begin to ship our crops. In four months the excess of imports over exports amounts to $86,000,000, and this serious condition of things, to some extent, explains the large shipment of gold we have been subjected to for some time; but do the facts warrant us in assuming that this adverse balance has any prospect of being wiped out through the shipment of our crops and the return of the precious metal? We think not.

On the contrary, the crops of Kansas have been considerably less than in former years, and this serves as a criterion for other corn regions, and points unmistakably to the conclusion that we shall have little more than our own needs demand, without any surplus for shipment. Added to this, owing to the splendid crops in many European countries—Italy, for instance, where the crop is estimated to be over 325,000,000 bushels—there is a doubt that our customers hitherto will rush so readily to our aid, even if we are in a position to supply them, when we so rigidly close all avenues of reciprocal trade with them. Until this senseless barrier of protection and restriction to trade is broken down we must of necessity be constantly in fear of panicky conditions and adverse balances. It would have shown itself much sooner if the abnormal crop in this country of 1891 and the corresponding failure of the crops in Europe had not come to our assistance and tided over the difficulties we ourselves created. But with the normal condition of things we can hope for little but disaster until McKinleyism and all its attending evils are forever annihilated.—American Industries.

Protecting the Cholera Industry.

What a blessing tariffs are anyhow! The health department of New York City has just imported from Chemnitz, Germany, a portable disinfecting machine which cost over $900. As this machine is intended to fight the cholera with, and as it will benefit the whole nation, as well as New York City, to have the cholera germs waylaid and completely knocked out as soon as they enter this country, it would naturally be supposed that Uncle Sam would not attempt to discourage the importation of these disease destroyers by insisting upon clapping a McKinley tax upon them; especially as there is no home competition in this industry, either present or prospective. But Uncle Sam informs us that he is working according to rule and that he can make no exceptions. Hence we will enjoy a duty which protects the infant industry of breeding cholera germs. McKinley tariff duties must be levied and collected though the heavens fall. Indeed, if the pearly gates and golden throne of the celestial city itself should be let down from the heavens they would not be permitted to touch land until they had paid duties at jewelry and pearl button rates. Consistency and protection are two costly jewels.

THE total expenditures for common school education in 1890 were $148,724,647.

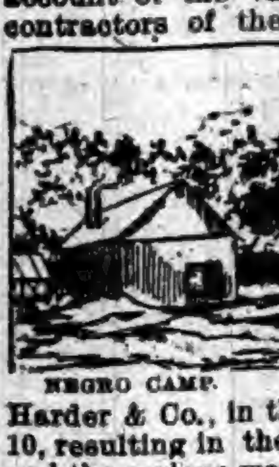
BATTLE ON THE CANAL.

NEW DRAINAGE DITCH FLOWS WITH BLOOD.

Illinois Strikers Precipitate a Riot, and a Sheriff's Posse Does Deadly Work with Winchesters — White Quarrymen March Against the Blacks.

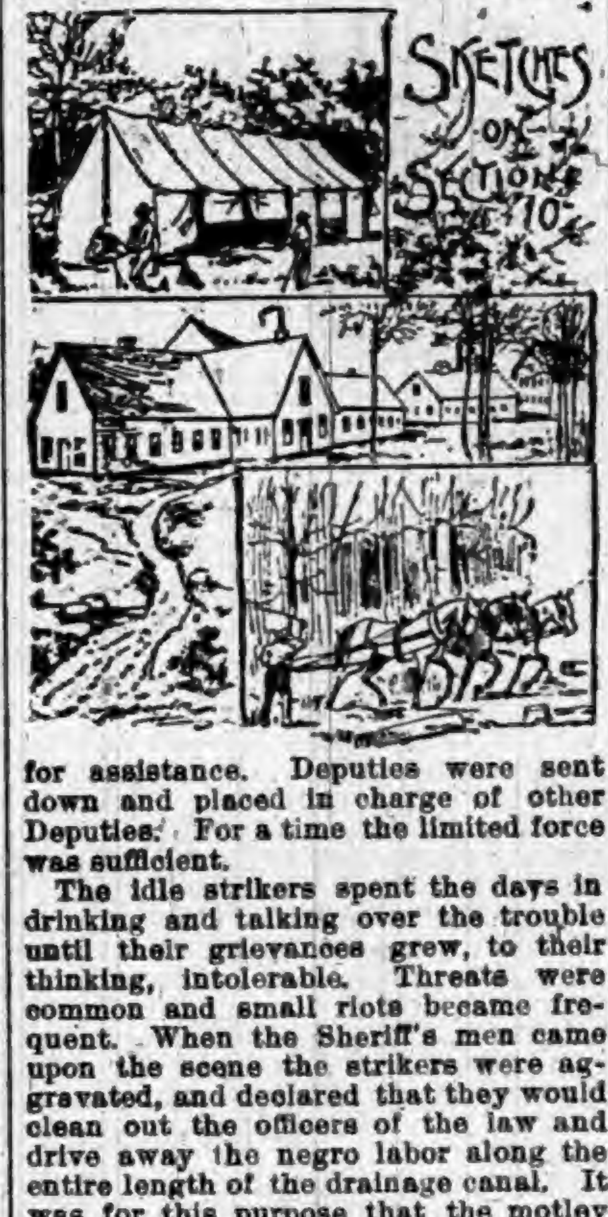
Troops Called Out.



NEGRO CAMP.

Blood was shed at Lemont, Ill., on account of the variance between the contractors of the drainage canal and the men who recently struck, demanding more wages and the discharge of negro laborers. The riot took place on Friday between the Will County Sheriff's posse and the strikers near the camps of Looker, Harder & Co., in the vicinity of section 10, resulting in the loss of seven lives, and the serious wounding of a score of others. The names of those killed, all of whom were Poles, are not known, and there are conflicting statements as to the number killed, it being reported that some of the strikers fell into the canal when shot.

With a hoarse shout 400 men marched out of Lemont in the morning at 11 o'clock down the new drainage canal toward Lockport. They were Polish strikers. All the morning the forces had been gathering at the saloons and groceries and every hour added to the number. There was no recognized leader and the straggling throng, armed with clubs, knives, and revolvers, moved in irregular lines, shouting, singing, and talking. The language used was Polish. The persons to be driven out by the organized men were the negroes employed by contractors on the rock work of the canal. The white men have long objected to the colored men who were brought to Chicago from the South. Protests availed little. Then the strike followed. For three weeks the men have held out, but the contractors have kept their colored help steadily employed. The whites made threats and the contractors declared they would stand by the black men from Alabama, even if Winchesters and Sheriff's posses were necessary. The first real trouble broke out the latter part of last week, and the Sheriff of Will County and the Sheriff of Cook County were called on for assistance. Deputies were sent down and placed in charge of other Deputies. For a time the limited force was sufficient.



The idle strikers spent the days in drinking and talking over the trouble until their grievances grew, to their thinking, intolerable. Threats were common and small riots became frequent. When the Sheriff's men came upon the scene the strikers were aggravated, and declared that they would clean out the officers of the law and drive away the negro labor along the entire length of the drainage canal. It was for this purpose that the motley crowd left Lemont, expecting to meet the Sheriff's posse at every point. On the way down the strikers received reenforcements, and in some instances they stopped and compelled workingmen to join them.

Fired on the Strikers.

The vanguard of the strikers saw the deputy sheriff and his posse through a gap in the rough wall of stone and dirt, and word went back. A few minutes later the strikers had taken a position behind the barrier and were ready for action. The deputies, fifty in number, were all armed with Winchesters, and a dozen of the sheriff's men were mounted. A puff of smoke from the bank that protected the strikers was followed by the report from a revolver, and a bullet whistled uneasily by the heads of the mounted men. Without waiting for the word of command the deputies returned the fire. At the time a dozen strikers were hurrying past the break in the wall. Three men pitched headlong into the dust. A shout greeted the volley, and a cloud of stones was hustled over the barricade into the squad of deputies. Several shots also answered the fire of the Winchesters.

The striking quarrymen fell back. Their retreat soon became headlong confusion, and they rushed madly up the canal, fearful of the death-dealing bullets.

The van of the flying strikers reached Lemont, and the news of the conflict spread like wildfire. Soon the whole town was out, and express wagons and all sorts of conveyances were taken down to gather up the wounded. All of them live in Lemont. During the conflict the deputy sheriffs succeeded in capturing thirty-two of the strikers. Two of them, who were mortally wounded, dragged themselves into the woods and died there. Several guns and revolvers were captured by the deputies.

The sheriffs of Cook and Will Counties, fearing further bloodshed, telegraphed Gov. Altgeld for troops to quell the disturbance, and in response the Governor issued an order for the Second and Third Regiments to proceed immediately to the scene of the trouble and remain there until order was restored.

Do You Wish the Finest Bread and Cake?

It is conceded that the Royal Baking Powder is the purest and strongest of all the baking powders.

The purest baking powder makes the finest, sweetest, most delicious food. The strongest baking powder makes the lightest food.

That baking powder which is both purest and strongest makes the most digestible and wholesome food.

Why should not every housekeeper avail herself of the baking powder which will give her the best food with the least trouble?

Avoid all baking powders sold with a gift or prize, or at a lower price than the Royal, as they invariably contain alum, lime or sulphuric acid, and render the food unwholesome.

Certain protection from alum baking powders can be had by declining to accept any substitute for the Royal, which is absolutely pure.

Not a Case of Forgetfulness.

"Did you stamp and mail that letter for me, Henry?" she asked.

"No, my dear," he replied.

"Forgot it, I suppose."

"No, my dear. My intentions were all right and my money was all right, but you know it was rather bulky."

"Yes, I expected that the postage would be 6 or 8 cents."

"And you wanted a special delivery stamp on it, too."

"Yes."

"Well, I sent the office boy for some stamps, and he got 1 cent Columbia stamps, and after I had put them and the special delivery stamp on the letter it looked like a theatrical advertising board, and—and—"

"And what?"

"There was no room for the address. I'll try again to-morrow with a larger envelope and 2 cent stamps."

A Lost Precept

Black Sammy is a noted boy in the Sunday-school (says the Boston Budget). His teacher one day was trying to make the class see the advantage of living a good life. These moral remarks were occasioned by a strong wad of chewed paper that happened to strike the benevolent Superintendent on the cheek. Sammy was evidently the culprit, although his black skin showed no sign. "Now, children, you must be better. Such actions as those tend to drag you downward, and if you do a bad deed once, the second time you do it more easily. It does not pay to be bad, for you can not go to Heaven." Then Miss Goode straightened her glasses and looked into Sammy's shining eyes. "Sammy, what kind of boys go to Heaven?" Sammy shuffled his feet. "Dead boys," he said.

Crestfallen.

Dumas, the great chemist, had a just opinion of his value to the world, and nothing annoyed him so much as being mistaken for the novelist. On one occasion, a lion-hunting English lady, after praising him in the most effusive language, and observing that she knew every line of his writings, from "Monte Cristo" to the "Mousquetaires," added:

"I hope you will allow me to send you a card for my next soiree."

"Madam, I am in no way connected with the writer you allude to," said the savant, with a cold disdain that no asinine, snub-proof coat-of-mail could resist.

"Oh, I thought you were the great Mr. Dumas!" exclaimed the bewildered lady.

Gilliam's Wit.

When Judge Bond, of the United States Circuit Court, was holding a term once at Raleigh, N. C., he was invited to meet several members of the bar at a dinner—among them the late Hon. Henry A. Gilliam, with whom the Judge was very sociable, but who was just then out of humor at some rulings his honor had made against him. In a sportive humor, the judge placed a hog's head, which happened to be in front of him, and of which Gilliam was known to be very fond, on a plate, and sent it to Gilliam with his compliments. Gilliam received it with great complacency, and, taking it by one ear, while he went to work on it with his knife, remarked, with a bow: "I am glad that I have at last got the ear of the court."

His Retort.

English speaking people of the thoughtless or autocratic order are inclined to underrate the intelligence of "foreigners" who cannot grasp the intricacies of our mother tongue. An English officer, failing to make a Maltese understand what he meant, called the poor man "a fool." Understanding this much, the man, who had traveled about a good deal, though he did not understand English, replied by asking: "Do you speak Maltese?" "No." "Do you speak Arabic?" "No." "Do you speak Greek?" "No." "Do you speak Italian?" "No." "Then if I be one fool, you be four fools."

Miss Larcom's Girlhood.

Miss Larcom was one of the oldest of our women writers, but time dealt very kindly with her. She says, in her story of her girlhood: "I was born while my mother-century was still in her youth, just rounding the first quarter of her 100 years. We used tallow candles then and oil lamps, and sat by open fireplaces. We had no matches at that time, but there was always a tinder box in some safe corner, and fire was kindled by striking flint and steel upon tinder. What magic it seemed to me when I was first allowed to strike that wonderful spark to light the kitchen fire. There was a 'settle' in the chimney corner, and I and my sisters used to sit there and talk or dream, as the logs burned on the and-irons—two continental soldiers in uniform stiffly marching, one after the other—and look up through the chimney at the square of blue sky, or sometimes catch a snowflake on our foreheads."

MRS. ELMIRA HATCH.

HEART DISEASE 20 YEARS.

Dr. Miles Medical Co., Elkhart, Ind.

DEAR SIRS: For 20 years I was troubled with heart disease. Would frequently have falling spells and smothering at night. Had to sit up or get out of bed to breathe. Had pain in my left side and back most of the time; at last I became dropsical. I was very nervous and nearly worn out. The least excitement would cause me to faint. I was also much troubled with fluttering. For the last fifteen years I could not sleep on my left side or back until I began taking your New Heart Cure. I had not taken it very long until I felt much better, and I can now sleep on either side or back without the least discomfort. I have no pain, [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] in 42 years. I [illegible] have that Dr. Miles' New Heart Cure saved my life and made me a well woman. I am now 62 years of age, and am able to do a good day's work.

The Haswell-Mathers Reunion.

The third annual reunion of the Haswell-Mathers families took place at the residence of James Coleman at Coleman's Corners, South Wilmington, on Saturday, June 3, 1893. The day proved very unfavorable, as had each preceding one preventing many of the older members of the families from attending, yet fully fifty of the descendants of the two families were present, as well as quite a number of invited guests The address of welcome was delivered by James Coleman and abounded in words of good will toward those who had gathered to celebrate the event with them. An address of a brief nature was given by Rev. Hootman, of Hicksville, O. The descendants of the two families, together with neighbors and invited guests, made the number present about one hundred A long table was spread beneath the green trees in the yard which the ladies decked with the good things brought from their homes and every arrangement was made for a delightful repast, but the muttering of a storm was heard in the distance and soon a violent downpour of rain drove all into the house where a hasty board was spread and what would have been a most enjoyable occasion became a jumble. An abundance of food was at hand and if any retired unsatisfied it must have been from their own lack of persistance. Dinner over, the festivities of the occasion were enlivened by song, rehearsal and speech, mainly by the children of those present. Great merriment followed the [illegible] recitation of [illegible] [illegible] Mrs. [illegible] [illegible], and illustrated by gesture, were something wonderful and to many were entirely new. Some very good music was also rendered Relatives were present from Columbus and Hicksville, Ohio, Ft Wayne, Huntington, Roanoke, Auburn, Artic, St. Joe, Alvarado and Huntertown, Ind., and Reading and Bankers, Mich. The next reunion will be at the residence of G. O. Haswell, of Ft. Wayne, Sept. 24, 1894.

Keep out the Rain.

Wood's Iron Storm Threshold will do it and never fail. No matter how much your doors are exposed, or how hard the wind blows, the rain can't get in and ruin your carpet or rot your floor. It is a single piece of iron, and therefore there is nothing to get out of order or be affected by the weather. It will last a lifetime, in fact the time of several lives, for it won't even wear out. It is cheaper than any other kind, for it will outlast a dozen wooden ones, and does not cost much more. It pays its expense every year. Just the thing for stores, banks, public buildings and dwellings of all kinds. Get one for each outside door. W. L. Meese of Auburn, keeps them and will be glad to sell you one or more.

H. E. Coe of the Auburn schools and H. H. Keep of the Waterloo schools, will unite in holding a normal school at Waterloo this year. The term will begin July 10 and last six weeks. Both are able teachers and well known all over the county. This makes good work absolutely certain. It will afford a grand opportunity for review and securing more thorough knowledge on branches already passed over, and will be valuable to teachers, graduates and all advanced pupils. They hope to have pupils from all parts of the county.

Sweet Commencement Season.

O, the sweet commencement season,
With its rhyme an' with its reason,
With its black an' golden tresses,
An' its creamy, dreamy dresses!

O, the sweet commencement season,
With its pretty girls an' pleasin'!
With its ribbons an' its laces,
An' its sweet expectant faces,

O, the sweet commencement season,
With its tenderness an' teasin'!
With its essays, framed completely
For the red lips readin' sweetly!

O, the sweet commencement season,
With its rhyme an' with its reason!
With its smiles, tears, kisses, laughter,
An' its bills for cash hereafter!

MARY'S LITTLE LAMB.

The Story of the Origin of the Tale Which is True as Gospel.

Most of our young readers will be surprised to hear that the well known nursery song of "Mary Had a Little Lamb" is a true story, and that "Mary" is still living. About seventy years ago she was a little girl, the daughter of a farmer in Worchester county, Mass. She was very fond of going with her father to the fields to see the sheep, and one day they found a baby lamb which was thought to be dead Kind hearted little Mary, however, lifted it up in her arms, and as it seemed to breathe, carried it home, made it a warm bed near the stove and nursed it tenderly. Great was her delight when, after weeks of careful feeding and watching, her little patient began to grow well and strong, and soon after it was able to run about.

It knew its young mistress perfectly, always came at her call, and was happy only when at her side. One day it followed her to the village school, and not knowing what else to do with it, [illegible] it stayed until Mary was called up to the teacher's desk to say her lesson, and then the lamb walked quietly after her and the other children burst out laughing. So the teacher had to shut the little girl's pet in the woodshed until school was out. Soon after this a young student, named John Rollstone, wrote a little poem about Mary and her lamb and presented it to her. The lamb grew to be a sheep, and lived for many years, and when at last it died, Mary grieved so much for it that her mother took some of its wool, which was "as white as snow," ank knitted a pair of stockings for her to wear in remembrance of her darling.

Some years after the lamb's death, Mrs. Sarah Hall, a celebrated woman who wrote books, composed some verses about Mary's lamb, and added them to those written by John Rollstone, making the complete poem as we know it. Mary took such good care of the stockings made of her lamb's fleece that when she was a grown up woman she gave one of them to a church fair in Boston. As soon as it became known that the stocking was made from the fleece of "Mary's little lamb," everyone wanted a piece of it. So the stocking was raveled out and yarn cut into small pieces. Each piece was tied to a card on which Mary wrote her full name, and these cards sold so well that they brought the large sum of $140 in the Old South Church.—American Agriculturist.

The Festive Firecracker.

Stop! here are firecrackers! How that pungent odor annihilates time. One really has a strong desire to take a pack, squat down somewhere, and "fire it off." It is strange that no one can make firecrackers like the Chinese; they seem to possess some exclusive knowledge or secret. Yet how simple they are. A strip of thick coarse paper is cut six inches long and an inch and a half wide. Across the middle of it the match paper, or stem, is laid, protruding a quarter of an inch from the bottom. A pinch of fine powder is laid upon it and the paper folded and pasted. Then it is deftly rolled into a hard cylinder. The bottom is plugged with a particle of soft, red clay, and the cracker is then laid in a mold and pressed until dry, the clay meantime being rammed in still more firmly. Finally a strip of thin, red paper is pasted for the envelope. This is one description of the manufacture. Colonel Field speaks of another method whereby the paper was rolled and pressed around a form, and when dry the fuse was inserted, the bottom plugged with clay, the powder put in, and the paper at the upper end punched down around the fuse, after which the red envelope was put on.—From "Jewels of Flame," in Demorest's Family Magazine of July.

The Indiana Almanac.

A copy of the Indiana Almanac for 1893 has just been received by us. It is without question the most complete and best work of its kind that has yet been issued in the state. The main features of the work are deserving of extended notice. The World's Fair, which is to be held this year, will no doubt be visited by almost every citizen of Indiana. This important subject is fully outlined in twenty-eight pages of printed matter, showing cuts of the buildings and descriptions of all the interesting features and exhibits. Complete tables and Tariff Duties and increases are noticed. A reliable table of the Indiana postoffices with their salaries. This constitutes a reference volume for those interested in the new appointments expected after March 4th. The United States Government, with the names and salaries of every official therein, from President down are given. A full list of United [illegible] and other matters of paramount importance are also set fully forth. A concise collection of general information on the recent political revolution is perhaps the most interesting feature of this work. The vote of Indiana by counties on both State and National tickets is scheduled, and separate tables are given on legislative districts. The great result by popular vote and electoral votes is also shown. For the benefit of handy reference the platforms of the four leading political parties in 1892 are appended.

The Only Place in the World.

The only Magnetic Mineral Mud Bath in the World is to be found at the Indiana Mineral Springs, Warren county, a new health and pleasure resort that is gaining a great reputation. The use of the Magnetic Mineral Mud and Water Baths are curing some of the worst cases of rheumatism, kidney and liver trouble, skin and blood diseases, that have ever been known to get well. They are truly nature's treatment. If you are a sufferer and have tried everything without relief, write to F. Chandler, Gen. Pass. Ag't., Wabash R. R., St. Louis, Mo., and he will send beautifully illustrated printed matter that will tell you all about them. 22-25

THE MINNEAPOLIS BINDER IN ACTUAL FIELD WORK

Is where SHE MAKES HER STAUNCH AND LIFE-LONG FRIENDS.

As the following written statement made by one of our most reliable and substantial farmers will show. A man whose word and experience for the past 70 years cannot be doubted for a moment. He being an honored and respected citizen of Jackson township.—

JOHN S. BOOTS, ESQ.

AUBURN, INDIANA, June 16, 1893.

ZEIGLER BROTHERS,
Auburn, Indiana.

SIRS:—I have seen and been acquainted with the Walter A. Wood Harvester and the work done by that Harvesting Machine, and especially a field of wheat on John Wyatt's farm in my neighborhood, cut with that machine that I DID NOT BELIEVE COULD BE REAPED WITH ANY REAPING MACHINE, because of its extra heavy growth, which was the heaviest piece of wheat I ever saw grow. It had the strongest growth and more shocks than I ever saw before, or have since in my life. And that machine cut that field well. In fact, as well as any field could be harvested. The wheat was badly lodged and, to me, it did not seem possible that any machine could pick it up; but that machine did and did it well.

JOHN S. BOOTS.

The above statement written in his own language is one of many thousand testimonials of good and reliable farmers.

CORNER MAIN & NINTH STREETS,
OPPOSITE SWINEFORD HOUSE.

Old Settlers,

The day began early with light showers and indications that more were to follow, and though it soon cleared up, many were kept away. Later in the day it became cloudy and towards night a steady rain set in. Still the day was not a bad one, and a good crowd was here to enjoy it. The grounds about the court house were lovely, and the shade very inviting. The scene at noon when so many family parties were having a picnic on the grass in the shade of the trees, was very fine. The forenoon was devoted to business, including reports and election of officers. The officers for next year are Freeman Kelley, president; J. E. Rose, vice president; D. Z. Hoffman, secretary; R. J. Daniels, treasurer; M. B. Willis is biographer again. The executive committee are, Butler township, Philip Noel; Jackson, Wm. Carr; Concord, J. D. Leighty; Newville, B. F. Blair; Stafford, Stewart Wartenbee; Wilmington, north, W. L. Blair, and south, W. C. Roberts; Union, G. W. Gordon; Grant, F. W. Willis; Richland, G. I. Patterson; Keyser, O. C. Clark; Fairfield, John Stonebreaker; Smithfield, E. R. Shoemaker; Franklin, Allen Shultz, Troy, W. R. Emerson.

Respect'y submitted,
MOSES B. WILLIS, Biographer.

Afternoon came the speeches. There was a good deal of disappointment over the failure of Judge Morris to be here, but Mr. Wooton made a good address, and was followed briefly by the venerable Noble county pioneer, Nelson Prentiss. Then came the break in time caused by the absence of Judge Morris. Something must be done to fill that gap, and so they hunted up Gen. Blair, and without a minute's notice he got on the stand and gave them one of the best addresses they have had for some time. It was right to the point for he had been a pioneer with the earliest, though younger in years than many present. What he said called up the old days vividly, and the old settlers and the younger generation as well, gave him the compliment of ceasing their visiting to listen and applaud. We believe it would be a good plan to give the General the main address next year, so he can have time to prepare for it, for he has a fund of early reminiscences to draw from. At the conclusion of the speaking M. B. Willis who was acting temporarly for president Daniels, whose voice had failed, announced that a little later there would be other exercises including a display of queer canine talent by Knoder's pacing dog, which was to be driven around the square in harness before the little wagon in which he has been training for some time. The rest of the day was spent by those who remained in a social way, greeting old friends, chatting, telling stories, sitting in the shade and having a good time generally. Sheets' Military band furnished good music, and there was excellent singing by Mrs. Yesbera, Lydia Teeters, Mr. Scott and Mr. Widney. Flora Hoffman was organist.

From A Keeley Graduate.

One Who Has Been Here and Been Cured, Tells the Courier Readers His Gratitude.

By the kindness of George Clark, we are permitted to publish the following letter from a "graduate" of the Keeley Institute at Auburn. The writer will be remembered by the friends of the Institute here, as a young attorney who came here in the spring in pretty bad shape, and went away cured, a "new man," in many regards. Here is what he says:

AKRON, OHIO, June 8, '93.

My dear friend George:—I ought to have kept my promise better and written you before this, but will now endeavor to repair past negligence, by giving you all the news from Akron. Since my return home, the weather has been all sunshine, but the face of nature, beautiful as it has been, has not been wreathed in the smiles of welcome for me that was pictured on the faces of my friends. All have expressed to me the sincerest happiness over the change that the past few weeks has made in my life; and if the manner in which I have been received especially by the members of the bar, be any criterion by which to judge of my future, my most sanguine expectations have been surpassed. In addition to these very encouraging prospects, my health is splendid and I was never in a more cheerful frame of mind in my life. Every day brings to me fresh evidence of how utterly wasted my life was, while I remained a slave to drink, and shows me in stronger light the inestimable boon which Dr. Keeley has conferred upon mankind, by giving to the world his bi-chloride of gold discovery. I have not changed my mind, as to the duty which all who have been cured of the awful disease of alcoholism, owe to their fellowmen; nor shall I ever cease my efforts to reclaim someone from that downward road so long as life lasts Even if my efforts should not prove commensurate with my expectations, I shall never feel discouraged for there is no one on earth who has sunk so low, or become so degraded under the sun, a human heart does not beat in sympathy with such an one's suffering and feel pangs of remorse and shame at his or her disgrace. And herein lies the crowning glory of Dr. Keeley's life work and phenomenal discovery. Without upbraiding the unfortunate for their shortcomings and failings; without causing additional tears of sorrow and shame to flow from eyes already blinded by excess of weeping over the wretched life of some loved one; he holds out to all, the positive assurance of an earthly salvation as great as that which christians claim Christ's death on the cross of Calvary holds out to all who pass through the portals of this earthly life. Only think of what he has accomplished, and then if you can, with reverent awe and veneration pronounce his name. One hundred and forty thousand helpless victims of the fell disease have been rescued from its grasp. In one hundred and forty thousand homes where the highest and the holiest aims of life were trampled in the dust; where the ashes of a burned out love were smouldering on the sacrifice altar of a degrading and all powerful appetite that could never know satiation; at one hundred and forty thousand hearths where the demon of discord rather than the angel of peace held sway; once more are holy aims and aspirations; once more the fires of love have been kindled; and peace with snowy pinions gently nestles at each hearth.

The noblest benefactor of humankind is he who confers the greatest amount of happiness to all members of the human family and inflicts the least amount of pain. Tried by this standard, Dr. Keeley stands peerless among the great names of the ages, for he is the most merciful of the merciful and is truly one of God's poor.

I shall send a couple of fellows to your town Saturday night; and if I can possibly make arrangements to get away for a day or two I will accompany them.

All the boys are doing splendidly and all feel certain that the cure in their case has been effectual and permanent. On the 17th of this month, I think, the Keeley club of Akron which has a membership of more than one hundred, will give a basket picnic at Silver Lake, eight miles northeast of town, the proceeds will be placed in a permanent fund that the members of the club are raising, to be devoted to the exclusive purpose of sending people to institutes who have not the money to go themselves; and very few have, though they have a far different story to tell in a few months after they return.

Give my kindest regards to Mr. Henry and Harry as well as all the boys. Tell them that if I cannot get to Auburn before the Fourth of July, I will be there by that time sure. Write me when you can, if it will not be too much trouble to you and let me know what is going on because I should like very much to know, and believe me

Yours Very Truly,
EDWARD CLAFFEY.

CAUGHT FROM THE WIRE

TERRIBLE TRAGEDY AT EDGERTON, INDIANA.

Shot by a Burglar—Epidemic of Typhoid Fever—Senator Stanford Will Resign—A Wealthy Indiana Farmer and His Daughter Killed.

SHOT DOWN.

Terrible Tragedy at Edgerton, Ind.

A battle to the death was fought on the principal street at Edgerton, Ind., twenty miles west of Fort Wayne on the Nickel Plate road the other night. Louis Boyer conducted the only saloon at Edgerton for several years, and had a roaring trade, the town being full of saw mills and stave factories, employing large forces of men from the floating population, among whom are to be found a good many who patronize the saloons. Boyer had the monopoly of the trade and was growing rich at a rapid pace. About two weeks ago Hugh Cry set up a rival saloon right beside the successful money-making groggery of Boyer. A bitter rivalry sprang up between the two men that ripened into hate as Cry began to draw trade from Boyer. The drinking characters who loafed daily in these places took sides and fanned the flame of animosity by telling the rivals what they said about each other when their backs were turned.

Bitterer and bitterer grew the hatred of Boyer and Cry as the days rolled by, and they fairly glared at each other when they happened to meet. The other night the trouble culminated in a row. The two men met and that was enough. They went at it in earnest, commencing by fighting with their tongues at first. Mrs. Boyer, seeing that her husband was engaged in a bitter altercation, ran out and pleaded in vain for him come away and go home with her. The men were too fierce just then to notice the presence of a woman and when they commenced shooting Mrs. Boyer was shot through the arm. It was an awful scene for the bystanders to see two men, both highly enraged, standing on the street and blazing away at each other. The crowd retreated in order to be without the range of the bullets and some sharp shooting was heard. Cry was killed outright and Boyer was fatally wounded. He died later in the night.

Shot by a Burglar.

Joseph Barnreider, one of the leading citizens of New Haven, Allen County, Ind., was shot in the right breast with a 38-calibre revolver in the hands of a burglar. Mr. Barnreider was awakened from his slumbers by the voices of two men just beneath his bed room window. Peering out he saw the forms of two persons in the act of raising his cellar door. Mr. Barnreider quickly raised the window and jumped out. The two thieves took to their heels closely pursued by the occupant of the house. A race followed for some blocks but Mr. Barnreider overtook one of the men and had him firmly in his clutches when the thief pulled a revolver and fired two shots. The first went wide of its mark but the second took effect in Mr. Barnreider's right breast just over the nipple.

Scare in a Kansas Town.

Five Indians, three heavily armed with Winchesters and revolvers rode into Coney, Kan., recently. The citizens were on the alert and soon the bank was closed and everybody was ready to give the visitors a hot reception. The three armed men were cornered in Truskett's barn, and when officers went to them they said that they were peddlers from the Osage country, that one of them had killed a man, and that they were running from the officers. They had had a battle with United States deputies a few days before and one of their horses had been shot through the nose.

Bank Failure.

The Citizen's bank of Converse, Ind., made an assignment in favor of its creditors, and Roscoe Kimple was appointed receiver. The exact amount of liabilities is unknown, but will exceed the reputed assets of $35,000. The bank was interested in factories making sugar barrels at Geneva and Converse, and had a large country business.

Senator Stanford Will Resign.

San Francisco special: There is good authority for the statement that Senator Stanford who has been in bad health since his return from Washington will resign his seat in the Senate unless the complexion of that body makes his vote necessary to the Republicans.

German Election.

Berlin special: The returns have almost ceased coming in, although reports from thirty districts are still lacking. The army bill parties and groups had eighty-three seats; the opposition parties eighty-five. All depends upon the second ballots.

Epidemic of Typhoid Fever.

The present epidemic of typhoid fever at Ironwood, Mich., is the worst ever known in the State. There are nearly 400 cases and the deaths are from six to ten daily.

A Wealthy Indiana Farmer and His Daughter Killed.

William Hipes, a wealthy farmer and his 18-year-old daughter Rena, were killed by a construction train on the Vandalia road near Danville, Ind.

Died from Overwork.

John Hilt, President of the Lake Ice Company of Laporte, one of the wealthiest men of Northern Indiana, died of brain trouble and overwork.

Students Stand Firm.

Terre Haute (Ind.) special: The State Normal school students refused to withdraw their resolution not to recite before any professor but Tompkins, deposed. There was much excitement among them. They had been given until noon Monday by President Parsons to withdraw it. President Parsons did not appear, and Vice President Sandison dealt with the matter. The students explained that they did not mean to defy the school authorities, still they refused to withdraw the resolution. Mr. Sandison accepted the explanation. If there had been any expulsions practically the whole school, numbering nearly one thousand students, would have withdrawn.

TRADE IS GOOD.

The Weekly Review of the Financial Situation as Observed by R. G. Dun & Co.

R. G. Dun & Co.'s Weekly Review of Trade says:

Concerted action by the banks of New York has changed the situation materially. More failures and a tremendous drain of money to the West had such effect that the banks were unanimous in deciding upon the issue of clearing house certificates, but as a precautionary measure to prevent trouble rather than because the urgency of the trouble made it necessary. Increased accommodations for the business community are expected to result, and doubtless will, unless speculation is stimulated to absorb all the increase in available resources through undue preference for marketable securities over other assets. The excitement at Chicago and Milwaukee has abated, but the weakness of banks at many Western points continues and the character of the failures reported indicate that widespread stringency is having a serious effect upon merchants and manufacturers, who are in no way connected with speculative operations.

A very sharp fall in foreign exchange removes the chance of gold export at present, but is due to foreign purchases of securities rather than to a change in trade balances. Exports in two weeks of June, it is true, are but $2,700,000, or 15 per cent. below last year, and imports show a small decrease in place of the enormous increase reported for months, but balances are still adverse and likely to be for some time. The decline in prices has led to some increase in the foreign demand for products, but has been followed during the past week by an advance of more than a cent in wheat, with sales of 27,000,000 bushels; 2⅛c in corn and 2-16 in cotton. Pork has fallen 5c, oats ¼c coffee ⅛c and oil 1c, but any material increase in exports at this season must come from marketing the surplus of cotton and wheat carried over, and this the advance in prices tends to prevent. Wheat receipts are still large and accounts of the growing crops decidedly more favorable from the northwest, but conflicting as to cotton.

WILL KICK HARD.

The German K. P. Lodges Propose to Run Things in Their Own Way.

Indianapolis special: The meeting of the German Knights was enthusiastic and harmonious, and every part of the question of the ritual was discussed. A series of resolutions were adopted by a standing vote. It was decided to request the Supreme Chancellor to call a session of the Supreme Lodge within ninety days and repeal the law regarding the English ritual. If he does not do so, then the ritual will be translated and copied, each lodge pledging itself to use only that ritual. Should the Supreme Chancellor attempt to revoke the charter of any of the lodges, an injunction suit will be brought and the question tested in the courts, the lodges paying an assessment to bear the expenses. The executive committee will visit the lodges and keep them informed. A permanent organization was effected with headquarters at Chicago.

Six people Are Blown Up.

Six persons were injured, one fatally, three houses were wrecked and several stores and dwellings damaged in West Hoboken, N. J., by an explosion of dynamite. The injured are:

Conlin, Mrs., injured by falling ceiling.

Froesch, Mrs., cut by flying debris.

Garcillo Nicolo, watchman, skull fractured and otherwise torn by dynamite; will die.

Nestler, Mrs., cut by glass.

Schiele, August, badly cut on the head.

A careless watchman employed by a contractor exploded the dynamite in a tool-box. Had the accident occurred ten minutes earlier many more would have been hurt.

Strike of Canal Laborers Ended.

Joliet (Ill.) special: The Third Regiment, Illinois National Guard, Col. Bennett commanding, has received orders to break camp and return home at once, an agreement having been effected between the employes and employers that as soon as business brightened up and the end of the hard times came the contractors would pay $1.75 per day. All of the strikers arrested and confined in jail here have been released under $400 bond each, except one man, who is unable to get bail. Feeling is somewhat divided as to the responsibility for the shooting and death of the men. The strikers are already generally returning to work.

Lost His Life.

Paulding (Ohio) special: A terrible thunder storm passed through this vicinity, and while not much property damage resulted, one life paid the penalty, and another man was badly injured. J. Gary and M. Crawford, both old and highly respected residents of this county, were standing in the livery barn belonging to Mr. Crawford's son while the storm was raging, when a bolt of lightning entered and Mr. Gray dropped to the floor dead, and Mr. Crawford was badly injured. The affair has caused considerable excitement in this city, where the gentlemen were so well known and respected.

Our Silver Bullion.

Secretary Morton, according to a Washington correspondent, since his return from the West has urged upon Secretary Carlisle the expediency of selling a lot of our store of pig silver for what he can get for it, and turning the proceeds into the treasury. Mr. Carlisle responds that there is no law under which he could make such sales. It has been suggested, therefore, that he treat the stuff as other worthless and cumbersome truck is treated in the departments—appoint a board to inspect and condemn it as no longer of use to the Government and then call in the auctioneer.

German Elections.

Berlin special: Returns have been received from 220 out of 397 electoral districts. In ninety-eight candidates have been elected; in 122 second ballots will be necessary. The national liberals, conservatives and clericals are holding their own. The Richter radicals remain very far behind. Of the ninety-eight deputies already elected, forty-two are counted for the bill and fifty-six against. Since the reports were sent out, the dispatches have shown that the government has gained two more new seats and has lost one more old one.

Ship Run Down.

The Cunard line steamship Servia, which sailed from New York May 24, for Liverpool, has arrived at Queenstown. She reports that on June 7 she ran down the ship A. P. McCullum, from London, April 28, for New York. The McCullum was so badly damaged that she filled and sank a short time after the accident. The Servia stood by and rescued twenty-four of those on board of the sailing vessel. One man was drowned.

Runaway Cars.

Five men were injured, one fatally, and twenty cars were smashed in a wreck on the Nickel Plate at Hamburg, N. Y. A freight of thirty cars, down grade, broke in two. The engineer did not stop until he reached the foot of the hill. Ten runaway cars came dashing down the grade fifty miles an hour, and struck the forward section. The cars were telescoped and piled up twenty-five feet high.

Murderer Elliott Badly Injured in the Penitentiary.

Columbus (Ohio) special: W. J. Elliott, who was proprietor and editor of the Sunday Capital, and who murdered Al Osborne, editor of the Sunday World, several years ago, was seriously injured at the penitentiary. W. W. Varney, a Cincinnati thief, threw a quantity of vitrol in Elliott's face, which will very likely cause the loss of one eye and perhaps both. Varney is a cutter in the State tailor shop and claims that Elliott falsely reported that he had sold a coat to one of the guards, whereby he was removed.

The Chinch Bugs Doing Destructive Work.

Wichita (Kas.) special: Some of the best informed wheat growers of this section, who have been over this and neighboring counties making a close inspection of large fields of wheat already cut and in process of harvesting, state that the reports of good yields were quite unreliable and that field after field would not run over three bushels to the acre. The crop, they say, was prematurely ripened by the ravages of chinch bugs. Since the wheat cutting commenced the bugs have gone to the corn, and they promise to play havoc with that crop, too.

A Small Riot.

Thirty Hungarian laborers who struck at Henry Clay furnace, Reading, Pa., took possession of the stack and stationed themselves on top of the platform. The officials sent a sergeant with a force of men and a desperate battle ensued in which two foreigners received crushed skulls and are likely to die. The rioting lasted nearly an hour. Fourteen Hungarians were sent to jail and warrants are out for eight more, supposed to be hiding in the hills. Several patrolmen were considerably bruised by flying stones.

Italian Bank Wreckers Punished.

Rome special: The prosecution instituted by the Government against Cucinello, the manager in Rome of the Bank of Naples, who was charged with the embezzlement of 2,000,000 lire of the bank's funds, resulted in the conviction of the accused and his sentence to ten years' imprisonment. Alesandro, the cashier of the Bank of Naples, who was indicted for complicity in the frauds perpetrated on the bank, was also found guilty and sentenced to imprisonment for six years and eight mouths.

A Modern Nero.

Valparaiso special: Frightful atrocities are being practiced by the Catilhas in Rio Grande. Gov. Castilho ordered a man's throat cut because he was suspected of aiding the revolutionists. This murder was committed in the presence of the wife of the victim. The barbarous punishments are inflicted on mere suspicion. The revolutionists are daily receiving new recruits. Many officers of the National Guard have deserted the Government and gone over to the rebels.

Collapsed.

A three-story business building at Ninth and Main streets, Keokuk, Iowa, fell. It was occupied by J. W. Burrows, grocers; Shepherd & Real, saloon, and Andrew Wiley, flour dealer. The family escaped. Several men are in the debris. The injured are: John Real, crushed about the hips; Harry Young, internal injuries; Ben Stebbinger, hurt about the head; Sam Wolf, missing. Four children sitting on the back porch have not been seen since.

Murderer Killed.

Grant Olds, a young man of Brazil, Ind., was killed near the Putnam County line while jumping from a fast moving train on the Vandalia. He was being pursued by officers and jumped to elude them. Olds was wanted at Anderson for murdering a fellow-workman in an iron mill. The warrant was sent to Brazil and served but he escaped from the officers after being shot at several times.

Peary Party Ready to Sail.

The steamer Falcon has sailed for Philadelphia to take the Peary expedition to Greenland. She is fully equipped and newly fitted especially for this voyage and carries coal and provisions for the whole party for eighteen months.

Capt. Henry Bartlett commands and Capt. Edward Tracy is the chief officer. The crew numbers seventeen hands altogether.

Typos Elect Officers.

The International Typographical Union in session at Chicago, elected the following officers: President, W. B. Prescott, Toronto, Canada; Vice President, J. W. Hopkins, Pittsburgh; Second Vice President, H. C. MacFarland, Washington, D. C.; Third Vice President, W. B. Lewis, Chicago; Secretary and Treasurer, A. G. Wines, St. Louis.

Brothers Maimed for Life.

At Valparaiso, Ind., George Kloss undertook to board a Monon train. He fell beneath the wheels, which cut off both his legs. His brother Frank, the day before, fell off a train and lost both his arms.

Yellow Fever on the Isthmus.

Foreign consuls stationed at Port Limon, Costa Rica, state that yellow fever is prevalent at that port. Steamship companies have consequently ordered their vessels not to call at Port Limon.

FLOWERS AT THE FAIR.

WOODED ISLAND NOW IN FULL BLOOM.

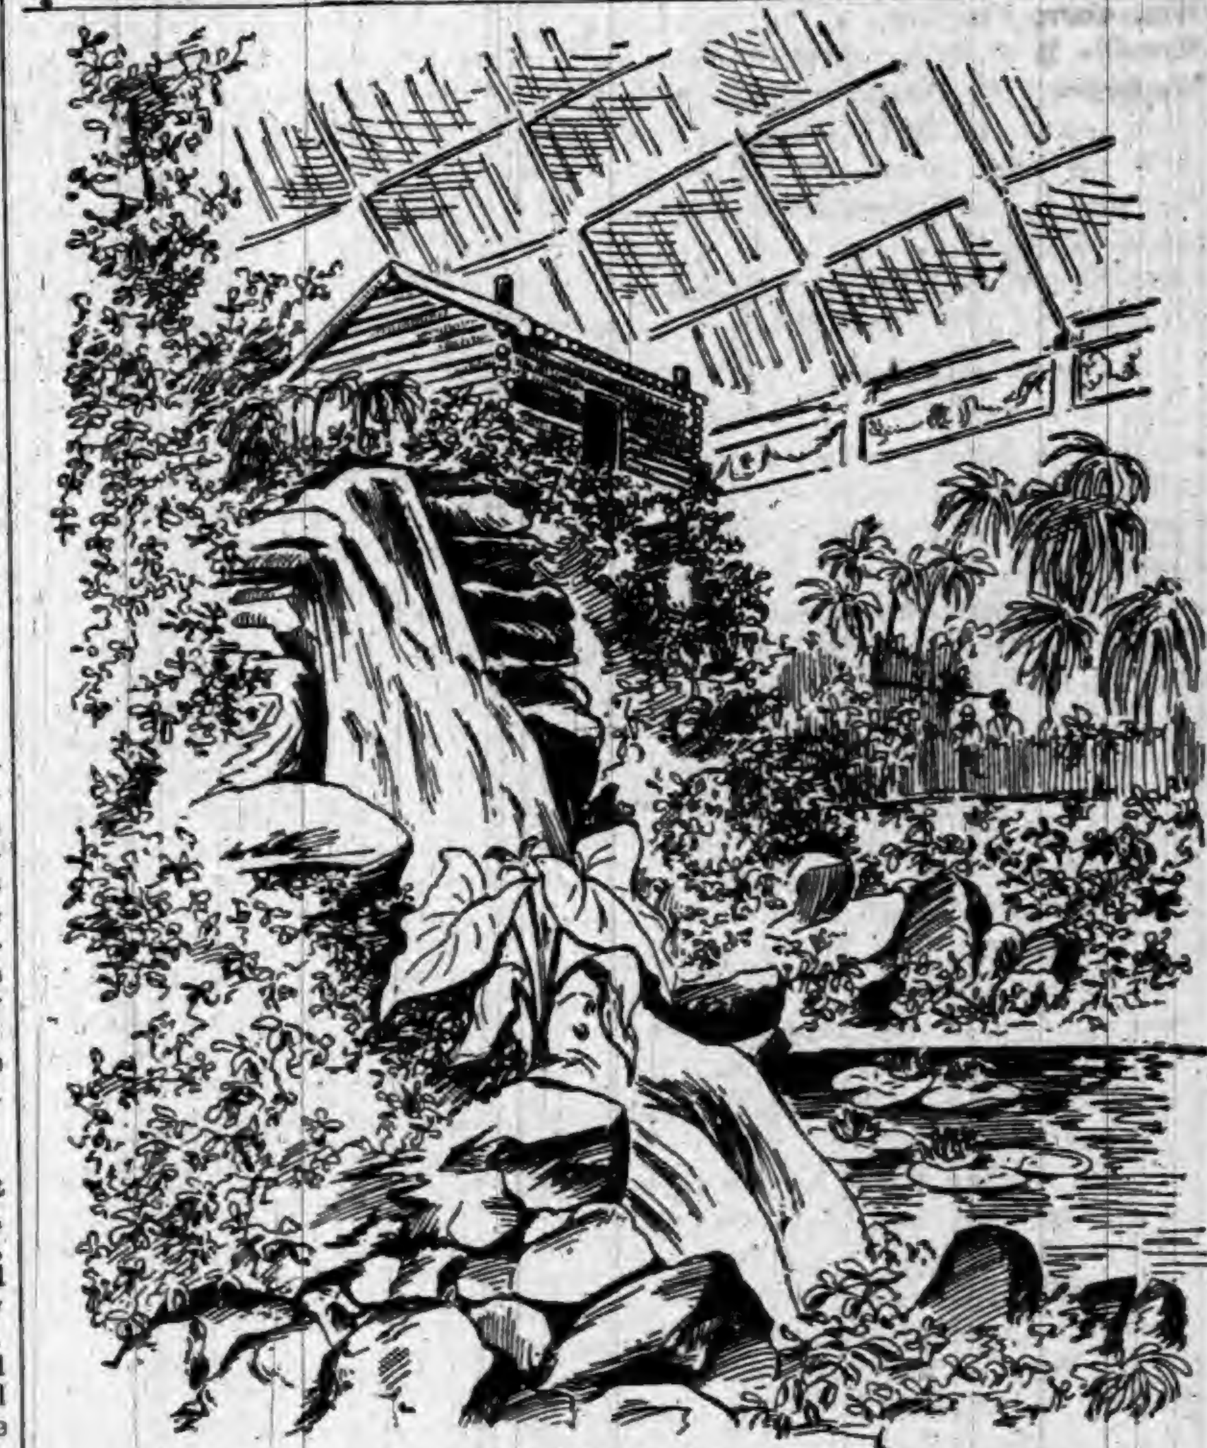
Roses, Sunflowers, Pansies, and Other Flowers Form a Collection of Beauty and Variety Never Before Equaled in the World—Notes of the Fair.

Acres of Blossoms.

World's Fair correspondence:

THE wooded island at the Columbian Exposition is now in full bloom. Acres and acres of blossoms throw their fragrant perfume in the face of the tired visitor who seeks in this shady nook what little seclusion there is to be found in this rushing, roaring city of celestial brilliancy. Flowers are blossoming everywhere. Sunflowers, big, jolly faced fellows, shake their yellow heads in rogueish welcome to eyes that have been dazzled by the splendor of the surrounding whiteness. There are little ones and big ones, and the flowers are open-faced, exactly what they profess to be, hardy and persistent, and, besides, are always productive of good nature and smiles. They are like the shamrock in Ireland, or the thistle in Scotland, or the fleur-de-lis in France, in that they are not confined to any section and do not need greenhouse propagation. The prairies are filled with them, the fence corners are incomplete without them, and there is not a farm yard from Maine to Texas but is adorned with them. At any rate, they occupy the highest spot in the island garden, and form a mass of yellow that vies with the administration dome in prominence. The seed was selected with care, in order that all previous big sunflowers may be considered hereafter as dwarfed specimens.

Then there is the rose bed, which is the most bewildering mess of blossoms that any eye ever saw. The lists show more than 60,000 separate bushes in a patch of an acre and a quarter. They have come from every country on the globe, until experts claim the collection is positively complete as far as the knowledge of man goes. The borders of each bed are sweet-scented honeysuckles twisted to form an endless cord. The chains of the fence are festooned from the corner posts to the center of each side, the irons being used simply as supports for trailing vines, while poplar trees hide the posts, so that the fence appears to have grown where it stands.

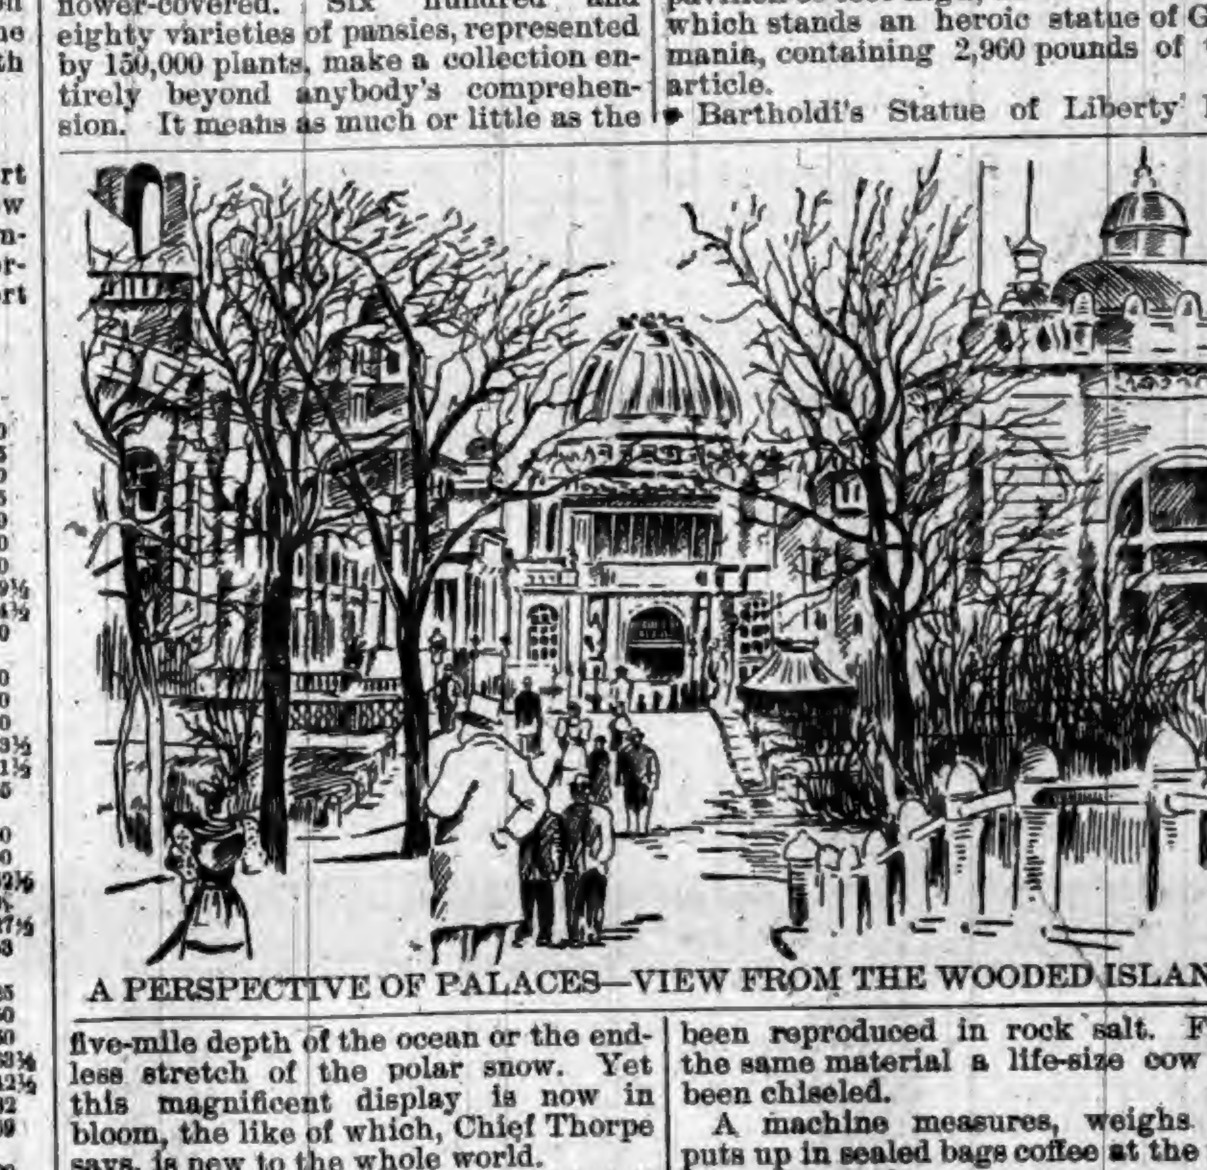


THE DONLAN CASCADE.

Flowers from Everywhere.

While this will be the piece de resistance in roses, there are scores of other beds containing from 10,000 to 20,000 plants, made by foreign exhibitors in foreign sections on the island. In the center is a classic pagoda, also flower-covered. Six hundred and eighty varieties of pansies, represented by 150,000 plants, make a collection entirely beyond anybody's comprehension. It means as much or little as the five-mile depth of the ocean or the endless stretch of the polar snow. Yet this magnificent display is now in bloom, the like of which, Chief Thorpe says, is new to the whole world.

The Japanese end of the island is full of surprises, since the whole plat about the Ho-o-den palace has been given to this remarkable empire of the Orient. Shrubs whose names are seldom met outside the dictionaries are planted in most lavish profusion, diminutive bushes whose flowers have made their debut in the western world on this great occasion. Holland and Belgium have many hundred rhododendrons. These two countries make these flowers specialties, together with azaleas and the others in this class. They occupy ground near the big red rose bed, with a numberless lot of buds almost ready to burst. Austria is just beyond, with a display of lilies occupying a tremendous stretch. England adjoins this, with costly holly trees and churchyard yews, while near at hand sixty sorts of green peas will burden the air with perfume, and Japanese creeping roses make the ground a carpet of delicate colors.



A PERSPECTIVE OF PALACES—VIEW FROM THE WOODED ISLAND.

Old folks admire a section devoted entirely to their grandfathers' flowers. There are larkspurs and sweet rockets and columbines and Canterbury bells and all the old-fashioned things that ever grew. Just beyond this is a spot where the freaks of nature are shown. There are lilacs with yellow leaves, box elders with chrome foliage and willows whose boughs look strange purple shades. Here are all the striking freaks which cultivation has been able to make in the garb of trees. The edge of the island has been planted thickly with water plants, which are now trying to grow under the tread of the pelicans with valise jaws, the graceful swans and the other monarchs of the isle. Song birds have taken possession of the wildernesses of bushes. The gulls have flocked in droves from the lakes and quarrel with the ducks for the sunny spots.

Beauties of the Donlan Cascade.

The Donlan cascade, which shatters and sparkles like a mountain brook, is the most charming feature in the Horticulture Building. The water bursts from a rock in the side of the palm-covered hill and, leaping from crag to crag, finally plunges into a lake at the bottom. Thence it flows under a bridge made of logs and mossy stones out to form a pool in front of the entrance to the crystal cave. Orchids grow from the side of the cliffs, great blossoms that have taken on deeper hues because they mistake the surroundings for their own native jungles. Ferns have grown rank and lank, and meet above the winding path that leads to a log cabin, up toward the beams of the great roof. Long-stemmed water plants come up from the bottoms of the pools, and water lilies blossom and toads sit about on the big leaves. Marsh grasses trail over the banks to dip their tips in the water, and hanging vines creep about the steps. Gold fish and trout dart about the cracks and crevices half hidden in the ponds, or sport under the spray which comes from the falls.

This fairy bower is New York's contribution to Chief Thorpe's triumph. It is a dainty conception, which took Mr. Dolan nearly two months to execute. The design was a water jungle such as might be found under a red-hot sky. Plants which suggest the pictures in the old geographies of the days when the earth was being made have been used and the effect is most realisti—a miniature nook where nature has had its own way in a climate where the winds are tempered to the blossoms and the silver side of the sky is always out. The scenery of mountain side and valley is represented so perfectly that one instinctively looks for chattering monkeys in the palms or nightingales nesting in the flowering branches of the trees.

FEATURES OF THE FAIR.

Miscellaneous Notes Picked Up at the World's Greatest Show.

The Queen of Corea has sent a solid gold hair-pin studded with pearls and weighing half a pound.

Thirty thousand pounds of brown chocolate have been fashioned into a pavilion 38 feet high, in the center of which stands an heroic statue of Germania, containing 2,960 pounds of the article.

Bartholdi's Statue of Liberty has been reproduced in rock salt. From the same material a life-size cow has been chiseled.

A machine measures, weighs and puts up in sealed bags coffee at the rate of five tons a day.

In a single collection there is 150 tons of rare minerals, including a meteor of 230 pounds which fell in Arizona.

Japan, at a cost of $100,000, has erected the Hooden palace, a collection of buildings of the type of architecture in Japan when America was discovered. One of the buildings is a reproduction of a monastery of the Zen sect built in 1397.

The man who has the exclusive right to sell peanuts at the Fair pays $120,000 for it.

The restaurant company made a contract for 800,000 pounds of coffee with which to begin catering.

In Choral Hall is a stage for 2,500 singers and an auditorium for 6,500 listeners.

In the German display a note-book bound in turtle-shell and set with diamonds is valued at $3,000.

BRIEF COMPILATION OF INDIANA NEWS.

What Our Neighbors Are Doing—Matters of General and Local Interest—Marriages and Deaths—Accidents and Crimes—Personal Pointers.

The Week in Hoosierdom.

The American Wheel Company plant at Crawfordsville has been shut down for an indefinite period.

William Rader, an aged citizen of Elwood, was perhaps fatally hurt by being run over by a hand car.

A six thousand dollar Catholic Church is being erected at Elwood under the direction of Father P. Berry.

Levy Roger's barn near Pendleton was struck by lightning. Three horses were made totally deaf by the shock.

Henry S. Byers was killed and Albert B. Lagrange was probably fatally injured during an electrical storm at Martinsville.

Emil Such, conductor, in the employ of the Pennsylvania Company in Fort Wayne, was caught between the cars and instantly killed. He leaves a family.

Ross Cohoon, a prominent business man of Crawfordsville, attempted to jump out of a buggy to which a runaway horse was attached, and struck his head against the wheel, causing concussion of the brain.

E. H. Staley has sold his half-interest in the Elwood Free Press to Frank Snively for $1,750. Snively has been employed as local man on the paper for some time. The firm will now be known as Van Arsdal and Snively.

Charles Westlake's mantel factory, in Muncie, was damaged $2,000 by fire, with $1,500 insurance, equally divided in the Lancashire, Western and Traders' Insurance Companies, and Mrs. Martin's barn was destroyed. Loss, $1,000.

By a terrible boiler explosion at the basket factory at Peru, Louis Pratt, the engineer, and his son, a lad of 9 years, were instantly killed. The boiler room was completely demolished. The cause of the explosion has not been determined.

John Ayers, engaged in construction work for the Western Union Telegraph Company at Anderson, was caught by a falling pole, some three weeks ago, and partially paralyzed. He has now commenced suit against the company for $10,000 damages.

A sensational suicide occurred in Anderson. John Moriarity, a prisoner in the county jail, who was held for killing Carl Streets in cool blood on the afternoon of April 10 on the public square, did not have the strength to face his trial, and hanged himself.

George Raber, aged 29, was found dead in an alley near his home at Paragon. He had been on a protracted spree for several weeks, and took poisonous drugs in overdoses. He was a practicing dentist and well thought of, being a son of Philip Raber.

Peter Weidman, a stockman, en route to Chicago from Louisville with a carload of horses, was killed at Greencastle. He had left the train to get a lunch, and in climbing the ladder on his return was struck by the crane of the water tank as the train pulled out. His home was at Peoria, Ill.

Polo Wheeler of Hazelton, north of Evansville, lost his life by jumping from the cannon-ball train of the Evansville and Terre Haute road. He had been to Vincennes and was anxious to reach home. That train does not stop at Hazelton, and he attempted to get off. His skull was fractured. Wheeler was one of the leading merchants of Hazelton.

While plowing in a cornfield south of Plainfield, a few days ago, Claude Stone, aged 14, turned up an old Spanish coin bearing the date of 1311. It bears on one side the coat of arms of Spain and on the reverse side the bust of the reigning soveriegn of that day. The coin is well preserved except that it is cracked and corroded by the action of the elements.

William Hutchings, a farmer, living northwest of Crawfordsville, was found dead. He had gone to Darlington with a load of wheat, and after he had sold the wheat he drank some whisky, and started home after dark. In crossing a bridge over a small stream he drove off the bridge. In falling he was thrown head first into the shallow stream of mud and water, and the wagonbed fell on top of him.

The Elwood electric fire-alarm system, the best equipped in that part of the State, was totally destroyed by the wires becoming crossed with the electric street-railway trolly wires. The boxes and electrical apparatus were destroyed, and will have to be replaced by new. The loss will reach $2,500, and the street railway company, of which a gentleman named Stout of Cincinnati, is President, will be called on to make good the loss to the city. The night man at the station was badly shocked and narrowly escaped death. The city is now without a fire alarm other than the station whistle, which will be used until the system can be repaired.

Executive Director Fortune, of the G. A. R. Indianapolis Encampment Committee, is receiving many replies to a circular sent out asking for the number of veterans that will probably attend the encampment. The number being reported is rolling up at the rate of from 500 to 5,000 a day. He has received from the assistant adjutant-generals of the departments estimates on the number attending the encampment at Washington and the probable number that will be there. It was claimed that 300,000 people went to the Washington encampment, but this was exaggerated. The number was probably in the neighborhood of 87,000, but the reports from these officials would indicate that fully 40 per cent. more old soldiers and their friends will be at Indianapolis in September. The attendance from the Eastern States will be about 25 per cent. less, but the increase from the Western States will be very large. It is estimated from reliable returns that Illinois will send 20,000; Ohio, 25,000; Michigan, 8,000, and Kentucky, 6,500.

The wife of Dr. J. W. Botkin died suddenly at her home at Unionport, Randolph County. She was found sitting in her chair, dead. Dr. Botkin is known throughout Indiana and Illinois.

Hon. A. V. Pendleton, at one time a member of the Indiana Legislature, while at the dinner table at Franklin, was stricken with paralysis, and died before he could be removed from his chair. Mr. Pendleton was one of the most successful farmers and fruit raisers in Johnson County. In the attempted reorganization of the State Board of Agriculture in 1891 Mr. Pendleton was appointed a member.

The Eureka Land Company at Muncie was incorporated with a capital stock of $200,000, and purchased one thousand acres at Selma, six miles east of Muncie, for a boom.

While on her way to visit friends Mrs. Margarette Flynn, living about seven miles southeast of Bedford, met a stranger who assaulted her. Her screams promptly brought assistance and the fellow who claims his name is Raymond Cream, was taken to Bedford. After a preliminary trial he was placed in jail to await the term of court, provided the woman's friends do not interfere. Cream claims to be an ex-convict, having served various terms, but refuses to disclose any further identification.

SHASTA.

The Romance of a Trail that Was Scented with Roses.

BY JOAQUIN MILLER.

CHAPTER III.

From my journal, kept regularly all this time, but mostly in the Indian sign, as that was briefer, I read that "on the first new moon of the third month we were camped on snow seventeen feet deep, with flowers only four miles distant." I read further that "on the third day of the new moon we had four fights over my election as captain," Capt. Rodgers being deposed by the popular vote of the roughs "because he wore, or rather had worn, a white shirt." How that I, a boy, sensitive, shy, frail and slender as a girl, was in full command of this miserable squad of humanity, with pickpockets and jailbirds in the majority—and, indeed, to these I owed my election. I set to work at once to descend through the fast melting snow and open an aggressive war even before the arrival of re-enforcements from the south.

A warm south wind had been soughing through the towering pines almost from the moment we set out from the camp of wolves. This singular bit of good fortune saved us, or at least many of us, from being literally eaten alive. For the warm winds and the melting snows drove the wolves back toward their haunts in the high Sierras, or at least kept them from crowding us too closely. And now we were beset by a singular bird, the garrulous magpie. This gaudy bird of gray and black and white and particolored plumage had been increasing in numbers from the day we first began this march through the Sierras. And now with the warm weather they were in clouds. From the first this noisy and insolent bird had sat on the backs of pack animals where their backs were sore and literally eaten them alive. And now they had grown so audacious that they would perch on even the best of our animals and peck at their eyes. We had to blanket and blindfold our saddle horses to keep them from being devoured alive by these magpies. I have mentioned the fact that the winter had been one of incredible severity, and this may account in some sort for this plague of birds, as well as wolves. It took us many days to "pull ourselves together" on the summit of that high, bald mountain, with the green sea of grass rolling in billows at its base.

But how glorious was this glad face of Nature, after the long and continued and most miserable and inglorious contact with the face of man! Never shall I forget those for any flowers, the perfume of them that came up to us in the snow from their frank and open hearts. There was a fringe of yellow on the outer line of the great green valley. Buttercups! Millions and myriads of millions of golden buttercups! And the California poppy! Away out in the heart of the valley where the two rivers, surging full from the melting snows, gathered their waters from the lakes that almost environed the valley, lay miles and miles of snow-white hyacinths. This wild hyacinth is odorless here, but it is perfect in its beauty. In the heart of this wild white sea of sudden-born blossoms slowly rose the smoke of many wigwams. The Indians had gathered their forces and taken up their defense on one of the many islands. This was to be our battlefield. The plan of campaign formed itself almost instantly in my mind, and that feature of the work before me was dismissed. I did not like to think of that. I had had enough of strife, of hard and horrible enmity with man. I wanted the flowers now. I wanted peace, rest. But above all, wanted to once more see the sad, sweet face of that silent captive who had been brought to me in my own camp only the year before. If I could only find her, only see her face, it seemed to me that the hard campaign with these coarse and brutal men could be forever remembered as a gold day.

It was indeed full-blown spring when we set foot among the flowers at the base of the terrible spurs of Mount Shasta. The men shouted with wild and tumultuous delight. The horses, relieved of their loads, rolled on the knee-deep grass; they threw their weary heels in the air on the third day, and, like the men, began to grow impatient of peace. Four fights I find recorded for the third day. Indians began to hover about us. They were tightening their lines and drawing their numbers in increased strength to a solid circle, as did the wolves back in their fearful heights of snow. The singular good fortune of the little army in escaping all peril thus far had made it insolent. It was ambitious to do battle before the arrival of re-enforcements. That night the mob held another election, and there was a new captain. This time the toughs chose one of their own number, the best of their number, it is true. But that is not high praise of the new captain.

We had fired a good many shots, and we had also gathered up many arrows that had been sent us in return. But what the new captain most desired was not a dead but a live Indian, and who could tell him how near re-enforcements were, and also tell the strength and condition of hostile camps. And with the capture of a live Indian in view, the new captain, not at all a commander, signalled his election to office by taking off his shoes and taking after and attempting to run down and capture an Indian with his own hand. After that discipline was utterly out of the question. Besides we were now on quarter rations. A secure camp was selected and fortified, and we sat down to wait for re-enforcements.

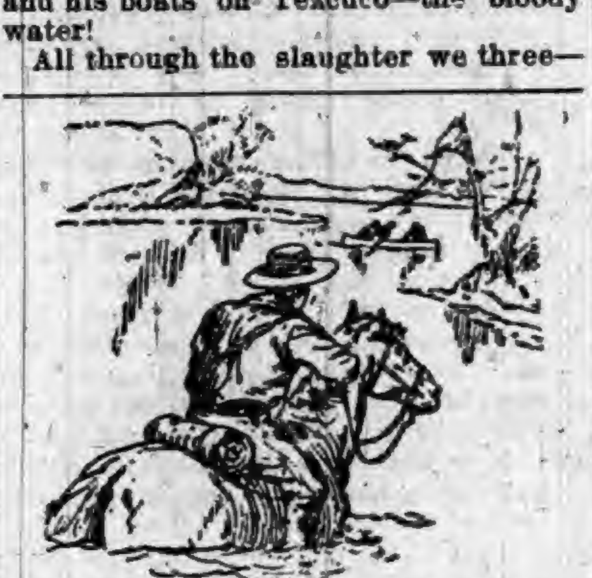
After a ten days' siege, starvation, fights—both in camp among ourselves and outside with savages that hovered unpleasantly close about—the long expected re-enforcements came from the south. And then we feasted. And then we fought a little among ourselves, testing the metal of the new men, as it were, then another election; then bloody work began! For the new company had captured a small camp of Indians.

From them we learned that there was a white woman prisoner on one of the islands in the great valley. The hearts of Bantry, Garth and myself were in our throats. Was it really she? What cared we for the desolated valley and the dead! Only time and the god of battle could tell.

Let us pass hastily over the three first battles by land, or rather massacres. Their bloody details would sicken you. At length we detected the hiding-place of one vast gathering of women and children (hiding, perhaps, where they had hidden for generations while the men went to war) by the smell of burning yew wood. The Indian stronghold was more than twenty miles above us on the river. One night as we sat by our guns waiting for dawn the pleasant smell of burning yew wood, the sandalwood of old, perhaps, drifted down the deep waters of the river from the camp-fires of the Indians. This scent was followed up the Indians found and butchered. But we could find no trail of rose leaves.

The melting snow had made the Indians on the islands more than secure up to this time, for we had no boats; but now the waters had flowed on, and the low and fast subsiding condition of the spring freshet was making the place accessible to horses. On the last days of April we surrounded and "stormed" the island on horseback. In most places the water was too deep, and the men only lost their arms and their temper while floundering in the water. But two places were found where horses could keep their footing. A second charge was ordered, the mounted men taking only a single pistol this time in hand or on head so as to be secure from water, and at the same time many men firing at long range out of the tall grass. This second charge was repulsed also, and not at all by the continued storm of arrows, but because our horses suddenly came upon spears and elkhorns and sharp sticks that pointed outward from the island. The water was made bloody and ruddy from their wounds, and they refused to go forward. At the third and final onslaught the men stripped to the waist, and waded to their necks, advancing from every side and firing their pistols only, while the men in the grass still kept firing at long range with larger artillery.

As for myself, I sat on a horse a little distance back directing the fight. Suddenly I saw a great commotion. Then boats shot out from every side. It was a cunning and a most carefully planned scheme, and brilliantly conducted on the part of the Indians. It was at once seen that they had lost all hope of defense, and had raised the old cry, "Save who can!" At first our men in the water fell back. Then they rallied and fought desperately hand to hand, often up to their necks in the water. Let it be confessed after forty years that it was a great satisfaction to see so many canoes filled with women and children and old men dart through that band of naked besiegers, and escape to the wider waters, the willows, the grass. But for all that the water was red. It was like reading over again the bloody page of Prescott, the Aztec, Cortez and his boats on Texcuco—the bloody water!



STORMED THE ISLAND ON HORSEBACK.

All through the slaughter we three—Arthur Bantry, Nelson Garth, and I—kept close together. We took no part in the massacre. Our anxiety was to see some possible sign of the captives. After a while we saw a boat which filled us with concern. It consisted merely of two bales of dry weeds lashed together. It held a female figure, which from our distance could only be distinguished as slight and supple. We hurried our horses along the shore and through the edges of the water in eager pursuit.

"It is Rose—it is Rose!" Bantry shouted. "Or is it my wife?"

The child had grown to young womanhood in the semblance of her mother, as the artist had fancied in his singular portrait, and, in spite of her Indian costume, we all recognized her. There was only one other person in the boat, a bent old Indian. Guided by the girl's strong, sure hand, the strange craft got through the besieging party and came to land a few hundred yards from where we were, the girl landing first, stooping low, running forward leading the decrepit man, almost dragging him in her swift run through the long, green grass. We plunged forward. Our hores sank to their bellies in the marsh. Then we took to our feet. The old man was badly shot and made the water in which the rank grass stood bloody as they ran. He fell on his back as a fierce pursuer came up, and kicked at him, trying to keep him back for the girl to escape.

"Spare her," Bantry yelled.

His outcry seemed only to alarm her afresh, and, realizing that she could do no more for her dying companions, she fled. We saw her standing irresolute for a moment, evidently making up her mind which way to likeliest escape from her father, her lover, and me, whom she mistook for enemies. Before we could regain our horses, and on their backs renew the pursuit, she was out of sight, and we were dismayed by the probability that we might never see her again. But we rode furiously through the woods, clear away from our comrades of the expedition, but without overtaking the object of our chase.

"I SAT ON MY HORSE A LITTLE DISTANCE BACK."

Suddenly Arthur Bantry made a joyful outcry.

"See that!" he said, pulling up his horse and pointing to the ground.

A roseleaf lay in the grass and fluttered gently in the breeze. The man was distracted by this sign of that scented trail which, years before, had led his wife and daughter away from him. Garth and I were not less agitated.

"Look yonder!" Garth exclaimed; "there's another leaf."

"With more beyond," I said, seeing that, indeed, a roseleaf trail was before us.

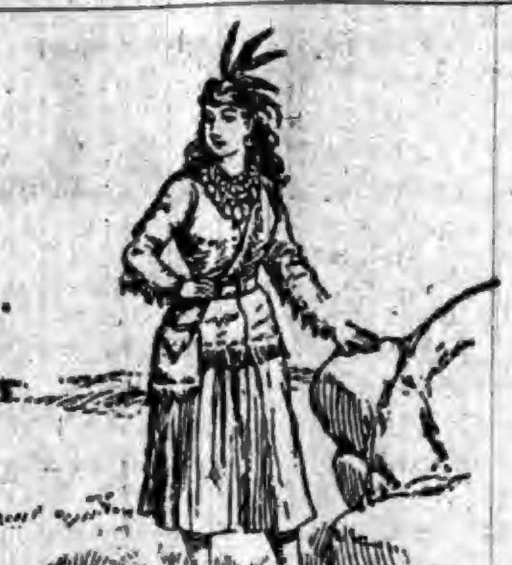
We followed it as swiftly as our horses could be guided in and out among the trees and bushes, and soon we came upon the poor frightened girl.

"Rose, Rose," her father cried, dismounting and clasping her in his arms; "don't you know me?"

She understood the name, but no more, for she was ignorant of English. A subtle something in the parent's embrace partially reassured her, however, and she submitted quietly to the detention.

"We are friends," I said, in the Indian tongue. "We will save you from all danger."

In an hour we knew from Rose Bantry that she remembered, very vaguely, her capture by the Indians, but it seemed to have been followed immediately by the death of her mother, and so the girl knew, only in a shadowy way, that she was somehow different from the Indians with whom she grew up. The old man, whom she defended in the boat, had defended her against all harm.



STANDING IRRESOLUTE FOR A MOMENT.

"And why did you scatter rose leaves along your trail?" I asked.

"Because it is nearly all I remember of my mother," was the pensive reply, "that she told me to strew rose leaves in my path whenever peril pursued me. 'I will follow you in spirit,' she said, 'and who knows but the Great Spirit might waft the scent of them to your father.'"

"And so it has come true," Bantry exclaimed.

His words, and much more, were translated to her by me. Slowly, yet surely, she comprehended.

Out from the great rich valley of grasses and flowers the army of California rode on the first day of May, leaving not one living Indian behind. Some of their horses were hung with scalps, as if they had been fringed in black for a funeral. The army of Northern California as it rode through the glorious pines was literally loaded down with scalps. But there were three happier men who brought out from the shadow of Shasta a daughter for Arthur Bantry, and a surely prospective bride for Nelson Garth.

[THE END.]

Childish Simplicity.

When Rauch, the German sculptor, was a child, he was conscientious to an amusing degree. One rainy day, when walking with his father, he took pains to step exactly into his elder's footprints, and as his legs were but short, and he was obliged to spring from one to another, his father's stockings were soon splashed with mud.

"What nonsense is this, youngster?" called Herr Rauch.

"Father," was the grave reply, "the teacher says children must walk in the footsteps of their elders!"

The boy by no means intended a joke; his act was merely the literal fulfillment of a duty.

Another true incident illustrates his simple and lovely belief in all things beautiful. Every spring an old linen weaver came to the house, set up his loom there, and made cloth for the family use. He slept in the same room with the boy, who found him an interesting companion, and had no hesitation in telling him his thoughts.

As the story of the death of Jesus was read in school at that time, the lad became so absorbed in it that he thought the scenes of the crucifixion to be actually taking place at Jerusalem. He believed in the resurrection, and, thinking it must spread over the whole earth, waited anxiously for Easter morning.

"It is going on now," he called out suddenly, raising himself in bed.

"What is going on now?" asked the weaver, waking also.

"The resurrection of our Lord!"

Then the gentle old weaver taught him how to modify his belief, and the child was content, though disappointed.

An Accomplished Southern Girl.

A Southern paper publishes the following advertisement: "Wanted—By a young lady, aged 19, of pleasing countenance, good figure, agreeable manners, general information and varied accomplishments, who has studied everything from the creation to crochet, a situation in the family of a gentleman. She will take the head of his table, manage his household, scold his servants, 'muse his babies, check his tradesmen's bills, accompany him to the theater, cut the leaves of his new book, sew on his buttons, warm his slippers, and generally make his life happy. Apply in the first place to Miss ——, Hickory Grove, Ga., and afterward to papa, on the premises."

The Proper Course.

Most people are aware, says Life, that it is the custom of turf gentlemen to settle their accounts every Monday at Tattersall's It was on one of these occasions that a backer, by an oversight, paid his bookmaker a betting debt which he had settled already. This put the "bookie" in a mental fix as to what would be the best course for him to take. "Shall I rob my wife and family," he argued with himself, "and return the money; or shall I keep it and go about with a seared conscience?" Unable to decide the point himself, he sought the advice of a brother professional of greater experience. "Paid you twice over, did he?" said the latter. "Ask him for it again!"

He Was a Citizen.

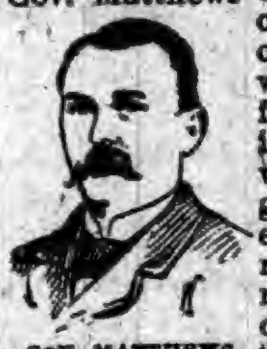
A certain Desaugiers, at the time of a popular uprising in Paris, when the people took possession of the Tuileries, hastened to the palace at midnight to see what was going on. At the gate he was stopped by two revolutionists of ominous appearance "Why do you not wear a cockade, citizen? Where is your cockade?" they asked. A mob gathered about him and demanded, fiercely: "Citizen, where is your cockade?" Desaugiers took off his hat, turned it around and around, looked at it on all sides, and then said, in a tone of mild surprise: "Citizens, it is strange, very strange! I must have left it on my nightcap."

HOME FOR HOOSIERS.

INDIANA STATE BUILDING DEDICATED.

Our World's Fair Edifice Opened with Appropriate Exercises—Description of the Building, Which Is Large and Homelike, and Does Credit to the State.

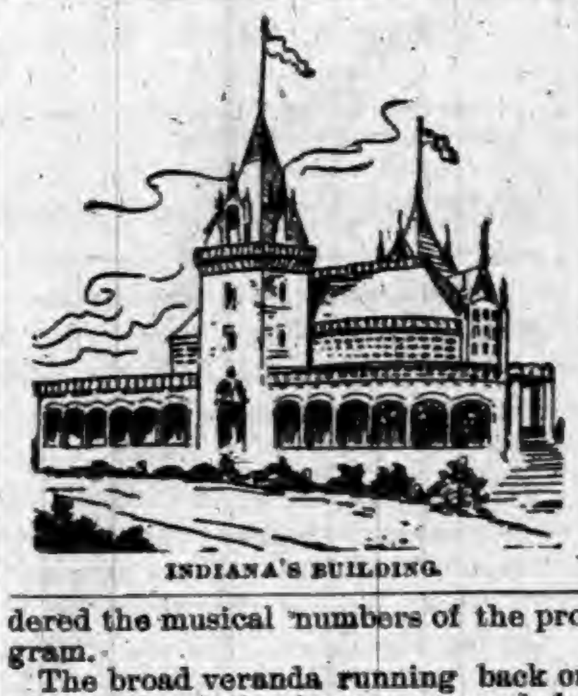
Great Crowd Present.



GOV. MATTHEWS.

Indiana's magnificent World's Fair building was dedicated Thursday by Gov. Matthews and several thousand other Indianians more or less famous. There were so many folks from the Hoosier State in the Fair grounds when the exercises began that nobody made even a half-way accurate estimate of the number. There were certainly 15,000 of them, and some estimates ran up as high as 35,000. If there were not actually 35,000 in numbers there was enthusiasm enough for double that number.

Half an hour before the exercises began the Fair grounds resembled a monster Indiana picnic more than anything else, and the stamp of enjoyment that the people of our State take in everything was met with on every hand until 11 o'clock, when the visitors turned their footsteps toward the building of their State to hear the speechmaking. There were half a dozen or more excursions from various parts of the State, and trains loaded down to the guards began to roll into the new terminal station, which was opened for the first time as early as 7 o'clock. Indianapolis sent nearly one thousand of her citizens; Evansville half as many; Terre Haute five hundred or so; Kendallville nearly that number, and Wabash and La Porte and other towns sent nearly twenty carloads. Several hundred went in regular trains from every place within the State that a railroad touches, and lots of them took lunches to make up for any shortness in the visible supply of eatables. When the exercises began, at the south front of the building there were nearly a quarter of a mile of Indiana people crowded in the plaza between the art gallery, the Illinois building and that of the Californians. The speechmaking took place from the elevated Indiana porch, about which were draped American flags, the coat of arms of the United States and of Indiana. In the broad reception-room in the second story was stationed the La Porte City Band, which rendered the musical numbers of the program.



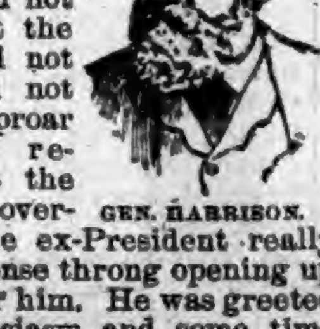
INDIANA'S BUILDING.

The broad veranda running back on either side of the house, reserved for distinguished guests, presented a scene of fairy loveliness. Great banks of palms waved largely in the warm summer wind, in front of them being tastefully arranged magnificent floral decorations, great branches of fragrant apple and sweet-pea blossoms hung from the pillars supporting the veranda, above which were draped bunting and American flags in profusion.

Contrary to the plans first laid out, the dedicatory exercises were held in the open air, the speakers' stand being placed on the porch before the rain-door on the south side of the building, the triangular grass plot being utilized as an auditorium. Here the audience was seated, many being forced to stand in the roadway, while inside the house was a larger crowd struggling to see and hear from the windows.

Shortly before 11 o'clock the La Porte City Band discoursed several selections, after which the Rev. Dr. H. A. Gobin, of the DePauw University, invoked the divine blessing. B. F. Havens, the executive commissioner, then arose and made a short speech, delivering the keys of the building to the president of the board of managers, Clement Studebaker, who stepped forward, receiving the keys in acceptance of the building and in turn delivering a speech and consigning the building to Gov. Claude Matthews.

Gov. Matthews' acceptance and response was wildly cheered by the audience. His speech was by turns forceful, eloquent and witty, and appealed not only to the State pride of his hearers, but to their patriotism and love of hospitality as well. He spoke of the lesson of peaceful patriotism to be learned by the youth of his State from the glories of the Fair, and rehearsing briefly the early history of the State pointed to the scenes where that patriotism was born. He praised the endurance and enterprise of the early settlers, which had become merged in the industry and thrift of the citizens of to-day. He grew enthusiastic over the women of the State and congratulated his hearers that they were going to listen to one of them.



GEN. HARRISON.

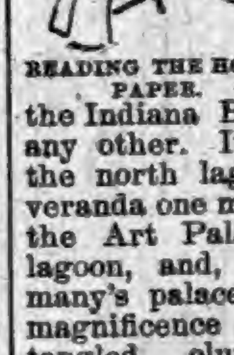
All during the first speeches there had been constantly increasing cries for ex-President Harrison, and once or twice it was necessary to explain that the ex-President had not yet arrived, but the people either did not hear or would not heed, and the uproar was speedily renewed. Just at the close of the Governor's speech the ex-President really appeared, the dense throng opening up a willing way for him. He was greeted with wild enthusiasm, and some time elapsed before the vast concourse of people could be stilled sufficiently for him to be heard. Ex-President Harrison was looking a trifle pale and worn, but when he spoke his ringing, eloquent words carried farther than any of those before. He spoke of his pride as a native of Indiana, and as a citizen of the United States, in being present and participating at this impresive and magnificent ceremony. He said that from the earliest inception of the idea of a World's Columbian Exposition he had followed the progress of the work with the deepest and most heartfelt interest. The fair was, he said, gloriously typical of the power, and arts, and taste of our great republic, and he had no patience with those who raised their voices to carp, and criticise, and in other ways hinder and obstruct the work of the commissioners and the management of the fair. To-day, he said, they wanted to deal with something else, and forgetting all past differences, open their hearts for the wonders and beauties of the fair. Mr. Harrison urged every man, woman and child among his listeners to go home and urge everybody to visit the fair and aid to make it the magnificent success that it deserved to be, as well as to witness a spectacle which in all human probability would not be duplicated again within a generation. The ex-President was applauded to the echo.

The next speaker introduced to the audience, who fairly sweltered in the sun, was Mrs. Virginia C. Meredith, a member of the Board of Lady Managers. Her address was short but quite appropriate. She in turn calling on Prof. J. L. Campbell, a member of the Indiana Board of World's Fair managers, who delivered a somewhat lengthy address upon Indiana and her work. A presentation of a flag for the building from the public schools of Kendallville, Ind., was then made by Perry D. Creager, the Governor receiving the same and thanking the schools for their gift.

At the close of the exercises, which consumed the best part of three hours, the Indianians went out to do the Fair after passing through the big reception room on the second floor of the Indiana building and shaking hands with the Governor and ex-President.

The Indiana Building.

Indiana's building stands north of the Illinois State Building, which can be located from any part of the grounds by its swollen and overgrown dome. The nearest entrance gate is at 59th street, although 57th street and 60th street are within easy walking distance. In many respects the site of the Indiana Building is favored above any other. It is at the west head of the north lagoon. From the second veranda one may get a striking view of the Art Palace, the green-bordered lagoon, and, away to the east, Germany's palace rising in all its gaudy magnificence from a thick and tangled clump of green trees.



READING THE HOME PAPER.

You can take your own lunch and eat in comfort in the snugly fitted room in our own State building. Then there is the postoffice on the first floor, where you can send and receive mail, get postage stamps, etc. Money orders will also be paid and issued here. If you wish to see the latest copy of your home paper you will find the reading-room in the south wing of the second floor. Here, as in all parts of the building, chairs are plentiful, and there are a number of tables upon which may be found all of the well-regulated newspapers of the State, which, of course, includes the one now before you. The reception room for women is on the first floor at the left main entrance. It is handsomely finished; and has an elegant piano, which gets very little rest.

THE LUNCH ROOM.

All the Indiana people who have visited the building are pleased with the home-like arrangements for their comfort. They find big reception-rooms, free toilet-rooms and verandas larger than back lots. The commissioners have followed a policy of making the building a pleasant loafing-place for Hoosiers. In doing this they were opposed by many people, who wished to stock the room with hand-painted china, prize pumpkins, canned fruit and crazy quilts.

When a regiment of fatigued folks from Indiana arrives at the building they would much rather find comfortable seats than sheaves of grain and fruit jars full of grass-seed. The Indiana building is truly a home for Hoosiers.

Brief State Items.

ROCKVILLE has a building boom.

THE alleged tax dodgers, who were tried at Columbus, were acquitted.

THE foundation for the largest flint glass factory in the world has been commenced at Albany.

THE Valley Mill Flouring Company has been organized at Crawfordsville, with a capital of $5,000.

AUGUST ROEMER, aged 10, son of Sheriff Roemer, was drowned in Whitewater River at Brookville.

THE boiler in Moore & Decker's saw mill at Shelbyville exploded, causing a loss of $1,000. No one was hurt.

DURING a storm at Pendleton, lightning struck Levy Rogers' barn. Three horses were made totally deaf by the shock.

PHILIP MCCAULEY, one of the Lafayette rioters, was fined $50 for participating in the riot. He was found guilty only of assault.

THE largest bond ever filed in Grant County was placed on record at Marion by County Treasurer-elect William E. Heal. It calls for $500,000.

RICHARD HAMILTON, a fireman of Evansville, met his wife on the street in company with another man and shot her dead. He also shot her companion, but not fatally.

TRUSTEES of the State Normal School at Terre Haute say they will discipline the rebellious students who are creating a disturbance over the removal of Prof. Tompkins.

A JURY at Salem gave Mrs. Emma Holmes $1,600 damages in the $10,000 damage suit against her mother-in-law, Maria L. Holmes, for alienating her husband's affections.

LEW THOMAS, of Pendleton, started for the World's Fair. He broke his arm boarding the train, and was unconscious of the injury until a physician on the train examined it.

ELIAS FLEMING was found dead a short distance from his residence, in the northern part of Richland Township, Grant County. He was 76 years old and had been a resident of Grant County for half a century.

THE case of Albert G. Owen, of Wabash County, in which $10,000 damages was asked from Miami County because he contracted a disease while imprisoned in the jail at Peru, was dismissed from court, no case being found against the county.

MACE ROBINSON, a farmer living near Fountaintown, met with a serious accident. He was driving out of town, when his horse took fright at a traction engine and kicked out the front of the buggy, breaking his leg and injuring him severely. He was taken into a farm house near by and medical attention given, after which he was removed to his home, nearly thirteen miles away.

ONE of the most daring of the many recent attempts to escape from the Prison South was made by Theodore Poweska, a Pole, who was sent from Martinsville to serve a term for larceny. Hiding under a wagon which was making its way out of the big double gates of the prison he escaped detection by the guards until he had gone some distance from the prison. He then made a break for the Ohio with the guards in pursuit. Reaching the banks of the river he hesitated a minute and then plunged in. He swam but a short distance when the swift waters of the falls carried him rapidly down stream toward the big eddy where so many persons have lost their lives. Seeing that there was no chance to cross the river, and that he would either be shot by the guards from the shore or carried into the whirlpool, he swam back to shore and was captured.

The Bang's Reunion.

In accordance with previous arrangements made and perfected by L. W. Treesh and Mrs. Jennie Bangs, the friends and old neighbors to the number of about one hundred and fifty met at the residence of Heman Bangs, June 14th, this being the eightieth anniversary of his birth. Mr. Bangs was attending the County Sunday School Convention at Garrett at the time, and on his return home, the first to meet his view was a long line of carriages hitched in front of his residence, and on a nearer approach he found that his house and yard were filled with his friends and neighbors all wearing smiles of greeting. After a short time spent in conversation the older people were led to the tables, which were spread with the luxuries and substantials of the season. After doing ample justice to the same they were seated near the organ in the yard, and the younger people engaged in singing and Rev. James Barton offered prayer, after which Frank W. Willis made an able and appropriate speech, presenting Father Bangs a beautiful base rocker. Father Bangs in replying to the speech admonished all present who were not christians to give their hearts to God. He also heartily thanked all the good people for the token of rest and comfort they had given him, and asked them all to meet him in heaven.

F. L. BRITTON.

Commencement in Troy.

The graduation exercises of Troy Tp. came off with a rush last Friday evening; that is the people made a rush to get there. At an early hour the house was crowded and standing room was at a premium. Nothing of the kind ever having been held in this "neck of the woods" before, of course everyone wanted to see and hear. The participants did their work well, and the verdict of many was "good wasn't it." The literary part of the program was of the best material of this section, and they acquitted themselves in a grand way. That Miss Cornelius and Miss Wise were the graduates is guaranty enough that their work was well done. They are among the best of our young people of this section; high socially and educutionally. Supt. Merica gave an address which was greatly appreciated by all. Much praise is due to all who aided in any way to make this a success, for the program was so well arranged and instructions so well followed that there was not a hitch or jar in the whole proceedings. The conspicuous display of the American flag was a noticeable feature of the occasion.

Still Giving Them Away.

Garrett's Bogie Man; who claims to make congressmen dance when he snaps his fingers, is still giving the crowd and himself away. He denies now, what he asserted before, that he had anything to do in picking out Auburn's postmaster, and then he goes on and says he did it all. At one point he says "Barns was out of the race. However he was the third prominent candidate." Which of these shall we believe? He denies that he favored Willis Brown, and then goes on to say "We did tell him (McNagny) that we favored Brown, because he was a moral man, a temperance man, an attractive man. But the clique has impressed upon the gentleman that the county clerk's office is waiting for him with open arms." In his haste to commit somebody he forgets that Auburn will not ask for this office next year, and that no chums of the Clipper office need apply. Then he turns on John Robbins and says that John came to Garrett and wanted Jack to go to Columbia City and snap his fingers at McNagny for him, adding that "he felt certain the Clipper folks could get what they asked," and promising in case the plan succeeded to "make it right" with the Clipper gang. (Was this to be another case of $14 50 cash?) But he says they refused to "snap" their fingers for Robbins because he had never "patronized" them. At the conclusion of this slushy article, the fool adds "Mike Bolan knows us, Willis Brown is in the same boat, Dr. Nusbaum never deserted us and Congressman McNagny is not likely to shake our democracy." And this it appears is the combination that claim the right to run the democracy of Auburn and of DeKalb county without consulting anyone else. Who gave them this right? The columns of the COURIER are open to those who can answer.

THE AUBURN COURIER

OFFICIAL PAPER OF DeKALB COUNTY.

JAMES A. BARNS, Editor.

Registered at the Auburn, Indiana, post-office as second-class matter.

THURSDAY............JUNE 22, 1893

THE Sherman law compelling the purchase and hoarding up of silver, will no doubt be repealed. It has worked so badly that even its author, John Sherman is said to favor its repeal.

QUEER accident at the fair last week They have a toboggan slide, the ice of which is furnished by an ice machine The sleds jumped the track throwing out the passengers. One was killed and several severely hurt

From Garrett.

MR. BARNS: Since the controversy between the COURIER and the Garrett Clipper in regard to the favorites who handle the levers of the motive power employed in grinding out new postmasters for this (McNagny's) congressional district, is waxing exceedingly warm, it might possibly be somewhat interesting to the many true, straight-working democrats of Garrett and Keyser township to get a glimpse into the mysteries surrounding the selection of their postmas who is as yet a very doubtful quantity among them in the work of true democracy. The "Clipper" the pretending fearless expounder of truth, etc., while giving so much attention to Auburn's postmastership, has not a word to say in regard to the power wielded in the selection for Garrett, only this: that "the railroad men had a right to be consulted." Does he mean to convey the idea that their right is exclusive over the rights of farmers or all people of other vocations? Again he says, to his knowledge there is no dissatfaction about the proposed apppointment among the democrats here." It may look that way to him, since it seems to be the order of the present day and age to disregard true merit, but favor political nonentities and their mugwump friends. The good democrats, with a passing remark regarding the "future," accept the situation gracefully, and there is no howling in Zion. But will this "ever truthful (?) Clipper" in behalf of Mr. McNagny, undertake to name the democratic patrons of the Garrett postoffice who have been consulted in regard to this selection? or will he or Mr. McNagny deny the fact that no effort has been made to ascertain or consider the wishes or preferences of the reliable working democracy of the town or townships, but that Mr. McNagny evidently has not considered it worth while to waste time in visiting or consulting the democrats of what we could proudly call the "Banner" democratic townships of this congressional district at last year's election, but permitted himself to be misrepresented and misinformed by an official of his county, who, under the pretense of favoring railroad men sought to boom his brother's county-treasury possibilities, and other pretenders, who, being traitors in the ranks, made it possible for republicans to defeat the entire county ticket only a few years ago, and now are largely responsible for, and jubilant over the fact that the entire Garrett City government root and branch of this once democratic stronghold has been at the late election turned over to the republicans. Are not the "Clipper" and Mr. McNagny aware of these facts? Or will they ignore or deny them? Perhaps the Clipper "snapped his finger" in the selection of Garrett's post master. There is room and cause for explanation.

After an absence of 15 years will again visit Waterloo every Saturday at Lock's Hotel, Waterloo.

His success in the treatment of piles can be amply attested by hundreds whom he cured during his former visits. I can cure any case of piles, no matter of how long standing, or how hopeless the case may be. The patient suffers no pain or inconvenience. In most cases one treatment is sufficient, which takes only a few minutes, and the time required for a cure is about two weeks, during which time the patient is not inconvenienced from business. 20tf

THE ARGUMENTS FOR

BRANT'S BALSAM

Large bottles, small doses, quick effect

County Expenses.

In view of the enormous increase in the county debt, in face of the fact that taxes are high, it is in order for the taxpayer to look carefully over the several items of expense and see if any item can be saved or even reduced. We think the commissioners are getting closer down to business all the time, but can still save a good deal more. The same may be said of the trustees and the county officers; but none of them seem to have reached that point of economy which they would practice if they were paying out money of their own for their own private use. Take for example, the stationery bill of Burford of Indianapolis for the last three months. This is for blanks and blank books, pencils etc. furnished to county officers It does not seem reasonable, that the county officers have really needed in this three months an amount worth $610.69. Would they have used this much, had they been paying out their own money? Again, could they not have got much of this material cheaper of home printers? We know there could be a good sum saved at this point. Why is not such work, such at least, as can be done here, given to home firms? We find the home printers of the county, of all politics, get a total in three months of $40.75, Burford $610.05. Why could not this work be put into control of home men one year on trial at least? Why do these county officers keep giving out to foreign parties, work which they know perfectly well can be done here? This error and act of gross injustice has been going on for years, and over the earnest protest we have personally made all this time.

Again, we are now by bringing to the public knowledge the several items of expense, getting people to understand and to help save the public money. For this the commissioners should have hearty thanks and our co-operation. Let us take advantage of the knowledge thus given us of our county's business. For instance we find under the head of "poor," $12 allowed W. A. Barnes of Franklin for house rent. By what right does he charge this over to the county? Here is a leak that has been running for years. There was at last term a bill brought in from Garrett for $10 for a coffin furnished a lady over there; but which she afterwards paid for herself. This term there are several bills for groceries some of which are evidently bills the dealer feared he could not collect from the parties and so got turned against the county. What right have men to do this? As well might the COURIER try to get some of its bad accounts paid by the county. We have had bills against several parties who died, leaving their bills unpaid, but we did not turn them against the county. What right had other men to do this, any more than the COURIER had to ask the county to pay what was due it on subscription, job work, etc? No right whatever, and the scrutiny drawn to these matters by the full publishing now ordered, will help to stop this leak. We have mentioned but too or three of these bills, as examples of scores of others we might name. But this especial practice must be stopped. The trustees have no right to o. k. a bill that develops only a desire to collect off the county, what should really come either from the party getting the things, or else be lost with other bad debts that every dealer has.

Again there are bills to the "poor" on account of goods furnished to "Mrs. John" somebody, or "Mrs. William" someone else. Now, let us ask, where was "John" and where was "William" all this time? If "John" or "William" were above ground, what were they doing? Why did they not pay these bills? Were they as we know has happened, spending their time and earnings in nonsense, and allowing bills for needed supplies for "Mrs. John" to be paid for by the taxpayers? Again, we find several bills for medical aid to the poor, though for three months, we have had the work let out on contract to other doctors. Why were these bills not brought in at the March term? Again, we see among the bills the commissioners refused to pay, one of over $122 for doctoring a sick woman. We believe that the deserving poor should have every needed comfort and we will gladly pay our share towards it. But what need is there for four visits a day for an entire month? It must have been a desperate case of a person with wonderful vitality, to hold out for a month under the combined attack of a doctor and a disease and yet be alive to-day. Here is a specimen of the bill as it runs every day for about a month.

March 10,	4 visits	$6 00
" 11,	4 "	6.00
" 12,	4 "	6.00
" 13,	3 "	4.50
" 14,	4 "	6.00
" 15,	4 "	6 00
" 16,	3 "	4.50

and so on. No wonder our county has gone into debt, with all these things going on for years. No wonder that public officers are glad to seek through the papers for that defense they so greatly need. (The above bill was dismissed.)

Looking over the auditor's annual report that we publish this week, will perhaps give a better idea as to where the larger items of expense come in. We find there, that during the year, there was paid out for roads and bridges a total of $21,490.21. Of this great sum, the most of it went for bridges. Of course, we realize that the heavy rains of last year, washed away or injured many bridges; and we must also admit, that we have one of the very worst counties in the state to keep up bridges, as we have many bad streams with sandy or easily washed banks. But this bridge expense is too much. While it is not likely ever to reach this great figure again, and we hope it never will, yet the enormous outlay, equaling as it does almost the total increase in the debt, only emphasizes what the COURIER has been urging, that we must quit building these expensive iron and stone structures except at the few places where absolutely needed All the other places should have substantial, but cheaper wooden ones. While the money put into expensive bridges is by no means wasted, yet it accounts for a great part of the increase in our debt. And of the people who will grumble at this increase, very many of them are the very persons, who insisted on having the commissioners build of stone and iron. Something of the same sort may be said of the $13,910.63 put into ditches. Some of the very men who insisted on making this expense, will be the loudest in complaining. The salaries are fixed by law, and we do not know as anybody here is to blame for that great expense. The court cost over $6,000 and we have no doubt but many litigants who had cases in court, some of which were of little or no account, will also be among those who complain. The poor expense is enormous, but the commissioners and trustees, are doing all they can, and very successfully to reduce this The items for public building, we suppose must include the walk along the court house square, the new heaters, and the repairs which nearly every officer has made in his room. The "miscellaneous" we do not understand. These items as named above embrace the leading ones that go to make up our heavy expenses.

Now, how can we improve this bad condition of things? Not by grumbling at the commissioners and trustees, but by each individual, whether an officer or a private citizen putting his shoulder to this great wheel of expense, and helping to stop it—or at least to slow its motion down to actual needs. We are spending too much money. Everybody should help to stop it. The ditch viewer, who could do his work in two days, must not fool along and work in three days on the county. The doctor must not go to see a poor patient four times a day, but confine his services to what is absolutely needed. The officer should not make any expense for anything merely because it would be pleasant to have such a change made or such an article to use. And he should not get the most expensive article he can find. The commissioners should not let out a job till they know it is imperatively needed, and then they should see to it that they get a fair bargain. A bridge contractor should not put poor timber into a bridge or poor iron, nor should he leave the bolts and girders loose, merely because he is working for the county, for let it not be forgotten that the county is good pay. For our own part, we have not complained of high taxes, nor of the outlay of great sums of money for improvements. We believe in improvements and are willing to help pay for them.

But the people complain, and justly, though as we have shown, many of those who complain most are themselves greatly to blame. But we have set forth this article to call the attention of all, to a state of things that to say the least is very undesirable, and to point out in part the causes that brought it about. We also indicate in a friendly way some of the remedies. We believe the next year will show a vast improvement. It surely will if all the points we have noted are properly considered by all, and the hints we have thrown out accepted and acted on.

Son of a Revolutionary Soldier

The venerable Nelson Prenties was at our old settlers' meeting last Thursday. He is now about 80, but walked up from the Junction, as he said "the bus was full and I thought I would let the old people ride." He also walked back four hours later to take the afternoon train home. He had intended going to Chicago Friday, to attend the meeting of the "Sons of the Revolution," he being the son of one of those patriots. But he had about given this up, as his sister who had expected to go with him was sick. They are probably the only brother and sister in the world whose father fought in the Revolution.

Coffenberry is plaintiff and Wesley [illegible] Work and Perry Fitch are defendants, requiring me to make the sum of five hundred [illegible] dollars and forty-three cents, with interest on said judgment and costs, I will expose at Public Sale, to the highest bidder, on between the hours of 10 o'clock a. m., and 4 o'clock p. m., of said day, at the door of the court house of DeKalb County, Indiana, the rents and profits for a term not exceeding seven years, of the following real estate, to-wit:

Saturday, July 8th, 1893,

The north half (½) of the northeast quarter (¼) of section thirteen (13) in township thirty-four (34) north of range thirteen (13) east, situated in DeKalb county, State of Indiana.

If such rents and profits will not sell for a sufficient sum to satisfy said judgment, interest and cost, I will at the same time and place, expose at public sale the fee simple of said real estate, or so much thereof as may be sufficient to discharge said judgment, interest and costs.

Said sale will be made without any relief from valuation and appraisement laws.

James Campbell has returned to his home at Nappanee, after a week or so here where he took Tom Patterson's place in charge of the electric light plant while Tom went to Chicago. He likes his new home.

Mary Comesky, daughter of Charles Comesky, goes to Valparaiso this week to attend the summer term of school. She is a teacher and takes this commendable course to keep in the front rank in her profession.

Mrs. F. K. Blake, of Wichita, Kansas, was here last week. She was visiting her people at Andrews, in Huntington Co., and came up here to attend the funeral of Mary Kelley. Monday she returned to Andrews, and later she and Mr. Blake will visit in this county.

As pretty a job of fixing up electric lights as one would wish to see is that at the M. E. church. Alta Moody is the man who engineered the job, and a pretty difficult job it was, one would think. But so neatly has he made them take the place of the old lights on the branching chandeliers, that a stranger would think they had been put in when he church was built.

Three of our old friends called in Saturday to talk over old times. They were Benton Beard, now a resident of Steuben county, Albert Beard, his brother, who still lives in DeKalb and James Ervin, brother-in-law, who resides in the southwest part of the county. We learned from them that Jason, who was hurt in the cyclone in Kansas, at the time that Oliver was killed, has fully recovered, and only an ugly scar left to tell of that dreadful experience.

The fine poem we publish this week was written by George T. Weeks, at one time foreman in this office, a young man of marked literary tastes. It was intended to have this read at the meeting of the old settlers, but it was thought, and correctly too, that many times more of old settlers and all others, would read it and enjoy it at their leisure in the COURIER. For this reason we send out a few extras to old friends, who not happening to take the COURIER would like to read this effusion of a DeKalb boy.

We have often showed how valuable an advertising medium the COURIER is. Here is another case in point. On Thursday last Dr. Greenwald attended Old Settlers' meeting and his valuable dog strayed away. Friday he stopped the Editor of the COURIER and had a notice written up to publish this week. Just as the notice was finished and we were talking about it, there came hurriedly up, a lady, who told the Doctor where his dog was. So that even the act of putting one's self in communication, with the advertising columns of the COURIER, produced the usual favorable results. No wonder everybody wants space in the old reliable family newspaper.

Editor Fretz and wife spent Sunday at the old home town of Auburn, taking the opportunity to call on many old friends. They are located in their own home, in fact went to their already furnished home the evening of their marriage, June 14, They went back to Syracuse Monday. Mr. Fretz has been appointed a justice of the peace to fill an unexpired term. Thus again the honors drop like ripe fruit into the hands of a DeKalb man. Being now both a minister and a justice, 'Squire Fretz will be apt to get all the marriages, both the godly and the ungodly. Being a publisher, he can publish their divorce notices, marriage notices, births, etc. In fact we believe he will have a pretty extensive grip on his little community. After all it is but a step from the editorial tripod to the pulpit or the court of justice.

Prohibition Meeting.

There will be a grand prohibition rally at Auburn, Ind., July 4. Col. Luther Benson, of Indianapolis, who has no superior as a speaker, will make the principal address. Address promptly at 2 o'clock. There will be other speakers present, There will also be first-class singing by the Arion Quartet. This will be one of the largest prohibition meetings ever held in DeKalb county. Everybody is invited. Come and spend the day and we will do you good.

We could not improve the quality if paid double the price. DeWitt's Witch Hazel Salve is the best salve that experience can produce or money can buy.

All the talk in the world will not convince you so quickly as one trial of DeWitt's Witch Hazel Salve for scalds, burns, bruises, skin affections and piles.

The Lake Shore will during the season sell individual tickets to Ray and return for $1 25 for round trip. Good for 15 days. This is the station for Clear Lake.

Don't forget the grand Demorest Medal entertainment at Corunna Saturday eve, June 24. Tickets for sale at Milo Thomas' hardware store. Medal on display at the postoffice.

Ignorance of the merits of DeWitt's Little Early Risers is a misfortune. These little pills regulate the liver, cure headache, dyspepsia, bad breath, constipation and biliousness.

W. A. Hamilton, who will be engaged in the Normal School at Butler, begining July 3, was here Monday. He is evidently a thoroughly trained teacher, and has his heart in the work.

As soon as the unusual crowd of reading has slacked up a little we expect to go on with our "Auburn and Vicinity," and "Early Marriages," bringing both up to a date as late as we think will be of interest to the mass of our readers.

The C. L. S. C. will meet Saturday at the home of Mrs. Hebel. Program, roll call, Farewell quotatsons; Classic Greek course in English, Mrs. West; Manuel of Christian evidences, Mrs. McClellan; The making of paper, Mrs. Dills.

Obituary.

Mary Kelley was born in Smithfield township, DeKalb county, Nov. 11, 1872 and died at the home of her mother in Auburn, June 14, 1893, her age being 20 years, 6 months and 19 days. Miss Kelley was a daughter of the late James D. Kelley, and a most estimable and promising young lady. A year or so ago the dread disease, consumption, was developed, the same that had had carried her sister Nettie, to an early grave, and she found no relief till death came. The funeral was at the Presbyterian church in Waterloo, June 16, at 10:30 a. m. A large number of the friends in Auburn gathered early at the residence of Dr. Adams, her stepfather, and accompanied her to her last resting place. At Waterloo the church was crowded. The sermon by Rev. G. W. Healy, late pastor of the Presbyterian church at Auburn, was very impressive, and the Waterloo choir furnished exquisite music. And then all that was earthly, of this amiable young lady, was laid to its final rest beside her sister and father in the lovely cemetery. Many friends from abroad, as well as those from Auburn and Waterloo testified their regard and their sorrow by their presence at the last sad hours of her earthly career.

Dr. J. E. Hendricks.

Dr. Joel E. Hendricks at one time a well known resident of DeKalb county, died June 8, at his home in Des Moines, Iowa. By the kindness of J. W. McKay of this place, we have a copy of the Des Moines Daily News of that date, from which we clip the following:

"Dr. J. E. Hendricks, residing at 1400 East Court avenue, died at 9 a. m., today. Dr. Hendricks had been ailing for some time but was not considered dangerously ill until this morning about 3 o'clock.

Dr. Hendricks was a native of Pennsylvania, has resided in Des Moines since 1856, and has been identified with city and county politics, but has obtained the greatest prominence as one of the foremost mathematicians of the age, and as a writer on this subject whose productions commanded world-wide repect. He passed away surrounded by his family, which consists of Mrs. Hendricks, Miss Clara Hendricks; Mrs. J. S. Randall of Georgetown, Col., Mrs. G. G. Brewer and Mrs. Scott Goodrell of Des Moines. His other daughters, Mrs. J. R Gorrell of Newton and Mrs. John Dean of Winterset, were the only ones absent at the time of his death.

Butted a Gaspipe.

Dan Yingling thinks it don't pay to be polite. Last week he saw a parcel fall out of a wagon, that was going out of town. He ran and picked it up, overtook the team and put the parcel back into the wagon. But in doing this, in his hurry, he ran his head against a piece of gas pipe that was sticking out towards him, and which he did not see, cutting a severe gash across the bridge of his nose and into his cheek, in fact the bridge of his nose was broken. Dr. Nusbaum dressed the wound and plastered him up, and no doubt he will have no serious trouble with it, but it will somewhat disfigure him. Dan insists that the man did not even thank him. And so he says the next man who drops a package, may pick it up himself, and run his own face against his own gas pipe.

Card of Thanks.

Dr. and Mrs. James Adams wish to thank all the friends and neighbors for their untiring kindness and sympathy, as shown during the long sickness, and on the occasion of the death and burial of their daughter, Mary E. Kelley. Their good deeds and works will never be forgotten.

Try BLACK-DRAUGHT tea for Dyspepsia.

THE PIONEERS.

"OLD SETTLERS' DAY," (JUNE 15, 1893)
at Auburn, Indiana.

Friends, I like these meetings of the pioneers!
Though the early settlers' hardships draw our tears,
As our thoughts take the direction
Of related retrospection,
While they bring to resurrection
Memories of the olden years.

These, the remnant of the daring, honored band
That relinquished childhood's home in eastern land,
Parted with old friends in sadness,
And, with courage verging madness,
Paved our way for homes of gladness,
Honor us to grasp our hand.

Self denial they have known and practiced well;
Hardships, dire and manifold, to them befell.
How with sickness they contended,
By physician unattended,
E'en when life itself depended,
Painful it would be to tell.

What a source of satisfaction to the few
That yet are spared, who settled here when all was new,
Now to meet and greet each other
As a sister or a brother,
Ties bind them to one another,
E'en as kinship, strong and true.

Such association meetings, year by year,
Give reunion to old neighbors gathered here.
Members lay aside their sorrow.
And, with friendship's pointed arrow,
Jokelets lend and pleasure borrow;
Wounded feelings?—never fear!

With privation which abounded at the start,
Isolated, and remote from traffic's mart,
They discovered much of pleasure
To employ their hours of leisure;
Modest, though served, in a measure,
To make joy and lighten heart.

Naturally fraternal feelings grew most strong,
Freely giving neighbors aid to help along;
Others' needs at once they heeded,
And the kindest efforts speeded
In supplying what was needed,
Ofttimes toiling well and long.

History records in early date,
Much they did to help mature a youthful state:
With their comrades widely scattered,
Forest walls to earth they battered,
And within the barrier shattered,
Founded all that wealth create.

Pioneers,—right noble has been your career!
May you be accorded, while sojourning here,
Health, long life, and every blessing,
Interspersed with naught distressing;
All will join me in expressing
Wishes for your future cheer.

These assemblages, comprising young and old,
Always dote the most upon the stories told
By old settlers, in relation
To their modes of occupation
When at toil or recreation,
Ere frontiers had past them rolled.

So—indulgence of my further measured toast—
'Twere not meet to seek and may be get a "roast;"
But, I trust, without intrusion,
Ere arriving at conclusion,
I may make some brief allusion
To what grieves us, now, the most.

Scanning well the many faces in this throng,
That, in conflict, Time, with years, has battered long,
Note we those whose friendly greeting,
At a day that's surely fleeting,
We'll miss at Old Settlers' Meeting;
Would, indeed, that we were wrong!

This, with thoughts of those who now have gone before;
Those whose welcome presence here we'll find no more;
Brings a sorrow-laden feeling
To the heart, where gently stealing,
None will chide us for revealing,
Though we wake their bosom's core.

Let us not forget, however, while we're here;
While in memory, those departed, we revere;
While, in thought, to them we're turning,
For their presence longing, yearning,
They of deepest joys are learning,
With a Savior Pioneer.

Swineford House.

Is a popular hotel here. It has every advantage in location and is headquarters for commercial men, implement agents and the general traveling public when in this vicinity. The tables are replete with excellent food and all the delicacies of the season. The hospitable and courteous proprietor Mr. S. C. Swineford is a gentleman of varied business experience and guests are always made to feel at home while stopping here. There are good sample rooms and every convenience for the traveling public. C. W. Ilger is the hospitable, experienced and efficient manager.

The Glorious Fourth.

Auburn will have an old-fashioned celebration this year, and everybody will be here to enjoy it. There will be the picnic in our lovely public square, there will be races at the fair ground, races between the pacing dogs of Knoder and Myers, bicycle races, wheelbarrow races, tub races on the creek, big fire works at night. All get ready for a good time.

Butler Normal School.

This desirable school for teachers and advanced pupils will open July 3, and hold a session of seven weeks. There are many valuable features in the proposed work, including a course of lectures on different lines of school work, use of maps and apparatus, etc., etc., by Prof. C. E. Kriebel. There will be organized a teachers' training class, in addition to the usual classes in the regular branches. Then there will be the use of an extensive school library. Advanced students and teachers, and those preparing to teach will find especial advantages here. All interested are requested to call on or address,

It is some consolation to read that Ruskin intends to stick to prose. His laureateship will be endurable after all.

The temperature of Norway varies little, and statistics show that the average duration of life there is greater than in any other part of the world.

Those two dime-novel-nurtured Brooklyn boys who sallied forth to hunt Indians made a mistake in choosing so quiet a frontier as Philadelphia.

The wranglings at the World's Fair have not astonished the Infanta Eulalia. She attended a bull-fight at Havana before sailing for the United States.

European armies cost $814,000,000 last year, but when it is necessary to send food to a famishing European people the United States must be the philanthropist.

The president of the St. Paul Cordage Company suicided by jumping into the river. Those who put their trust in combines and monopolies come to horrible endings occasionally.

Some papers complain that Boston does not take kindly to Eugene Field's poetry. Well, what of that? There are persons outside of Boston who do not take kindly to it. A man is not to be estimated by his ability to like Eugene Field's poetry.

A Wilkesbarre girl, whose recreant lover failed to show up for the wedding ceremony, has sued him for the cost of her trosseau and wedding breakfast. As Wilkesbarre sentiment goes, the young man will probably get an injunction preventing the girl's use or disposition of the chattels pending trial.

The park commissioners of Baltimore, we believe that is the place, have forbidden love making in the city parks. They define love making as indulging in billing and cooing. The case of a woman laying her head on a man's shoulder is also cause for action. That's hard on some poor people who have no gas to turn out.

To marry recklessly and without reasonable means is to marry miserably; but to marry on an income that with care and self-denial and prudence will suffice to provide all that is essentially necessary for comfort is to call into play the best affections of man's nature. It tends to make youth happy, middle age contented, old age calm and peaceful.

Alexander the Great, the conqueror of the world, died when he was 32 years old. Maurice of Saxony, the greatest captain and statesman of his time, died at the same age. The Duke of Weimar, one of Adolphus' generals, died at the age of 36, while Gustavus Adolphus died when he was 38. Pascal, the great French writer, and Raphael, the great Italian artist, both died at 37.

Rivers wear away from the earth and carry down to the sea an immense quantity of matter, and all rivers contain some suspended material in process of transport, the amount varying at different times and in different places. Prof. Geikie has estimated the amount of sediment carried to the sea by the Thames in a year at 1,865,903 cubic feet; while it is estimated that the Mississippi deposits in the sea in a year solid matter weighing 812,500,000,000 pounds.

The Australian banks fell into the custom of superseding the merchants, who are naturally their customers, as commercial factors. They became traders, exported on their own account, accepted risks in operations which they attempted to conduct in part, and sometimes took goods in repayment instead of money. The disastrous failures which finally resulted are only added warnings that banking should always be kept within its legitimate function of serving the business classes rather than of superseding them.

Exploration is improving the popular knowledge of the Sahara. Instead of being largely below the sea, the greater part of it is from 6,000 to 8,000 feet above that level; instead of being rainless, showers make it bloom and cover it with green grass for a few weeks every year; large flocks and herds are maintained upon its borders; the oases are depressed where water can be collected and stored, and are villainously unhealthy in hot weather because of this stagnant water and the filthy habits of the inhabitants.

The Pennsylvania Legislature has passed a law providing for compulsory arbitration in labor disputes. Each party to a dispute may appoint three arbitrators, and three others are to be appointed by the court; if either party declines to appoint, then the Court may designate six instead of three. The board is empowered to compel the attendance of witnesses and the production of papers. The fatal defect of the law is that it does not make the findings of the board obligatory upon the parties to the dispute. It may serve a good end in providing a method of obtaining authoritative statements of the causes and results of labor controversies, but beyond that it will have no real value. The fact is that compulsory arbitration, desirable as it may be, is impossible under our system, and only those persons who entertain utterly grotesque conceptions of the functions and power of legislation will ever attempt to apply the principle literally by statutory enactment.

We reprint the following from an English paper as a curio in sporting literature: "We learn with great pleasure that Lady Hilda McNeill, young Lord Stradbroke's sister, who, since her marriage to a nephew of Sir John McNeill, has been living at Rothley Grange, near Loughborough, is rapidly recovering from the nasty fall she lately experienced in the hunting-field. Lady Hilda is an accomplished horsewoman, and her spill throws no discredit upon her as a cross-country rider. The accident was the result of a cannon, another horse colliding with hers as she negotiated a stiff fence."

A story is told by the New York Times of a certain young New York woman, who was recently abroad, and while walking out in Dresden one day the stolidity of the soldier sentinels, pacing back and forth like automata, attracted her notice. A sudden impulse seized her to test this cast-iron rigidity, and, waiting till one had passed, she slipped into his little sentry-box. When he reached it on his return, marching with measured precision, she suddenly jumped out before him, crying "Boo!" in his very face. The soldier was completely upset at this most unexpected performance and actually dropped his musket and ran away, while the young woman, having thus routed a portion of the German army, walked on and demurely rejoined her friends. The incident, it is said, came to the ears of the Emperor himself, who expressed a wish to meet this extraordinary young woman, but Miss —— admitted that her desire did not equal his, as she was not sure in quite what light her jesting impulse would be officially regarded.

The authorities of some of the Southern States seem to be taking up the subject of immigration with earnestness and intelligence of purpose. Realizing that an influx of industrious, thrifty settlers is necessary to the development of the neglected resources of their section, they are contemplating the establishment of permanent agencies abroad, and meanwhile propose to avail themselves of the kindly offices of those consular officials in Europe who have been appointed from the South, and who are especially familiar with the public needs, especially as to the class of immigrants most desired. Immigrant agents in the Northwest are also offering to send foreign settlers to the Southern States, but it is doubtful if any considerable part of the immigration controlled by them can be diverted in that direction. The Southern States must depend mainly upon their own efforts in foreign fields, and if they will address themselves with energy and intelligence, they will probably find no difficulty in alluring to their section all the settlers needed.

One of the incidental arguments for enlisting Indians in the army was that they could thereby take on more rapidly the ways of white men; but we must expect some bad as well as good habits to be acquired. Trumpeter Bear, of Troop L, Third Cavalry, was recently convicted by court martial of attempts at forgery on the Western Bank and Trust Company, of Sturgis, in South Dakota. The penmanship of the aborigines is, for the most part, so limited that they have not hitherto been expected to compete in forgery, of all things, with the rascalities of their white brethren. It is a relief, however, to learn from the remarks of the reviewing officer that this misguided trumpeter did not go astray without the persuasive influences of white men. In view of his being "young and easily subject to bad influences," and that the Judge Advocate and all the members of the court, save one, asked clemency for him, Gen. Merritt mitigated Trumpeter Bear's sentence of four years in the penitentiary and dishonorable discharge to three months in confinement at Fort Meade. Here and there we find an Indian soldier picking out for imitation the vices and crimes of civilized life rather than its good features; but this fact will not determine the final verdict on the present experiment at Indian enlistments.

He Was Grateful.

M. Colombies, a merchant of Paris, had his revenge on a former sweetheart, a lady of Rouen, when he left her by his will a legacy of $6,000 for having, some twenty years before, refused to marry him, "through which," states the will, "I was enabled to live independently and happily as a bachelor."

'Twas a Pity.

A friend was visiting Mr. Oscar Wilde one day recently, and found him hard at work "cutting" superfluous dialogue from his new play. "Isn't it infamous?" he asked, looking up after a moment or two; "what right have I to do this thing? Who am I, that I should tamper with a classic?"

An Apt Retort.

Judge Hoar and Gen. Butler were opponents in a case of a new trial. Gen. Butler quoted: "Eye for eye, skin for skin, tooth for tooth, yea, all that a man hath will he give for his life." To which Judge Hoar replied: "Yes, the devil quoted that once before in a motion for a new trial."

INCOME TAXATION.

IT IS LESS BURDENSOME THAN THE TARIFF.

Its Evils Would Be Confined to the Rich Instead of the Poor—An Expose of Custom House Corruption—The Mexican Corn Famine.

Tariff Versus Income Tax.

Representative John DeWitt Warner thinks that the people would "suffer" an income tax sooner than a tax on tea and coffee. They would "suffer" in either event. Let the present tariff alone and the people will not "suffer" at all.—New York Press.

Does the Press know of a tax that does not make the people "suffer?" Undoubtedly such a tax is possible, though it has never been put into operation. It is, however, at the opposite pole from the indirect, insidious and accursed protective tariff tax which stealthily robs the poor consumer of from one-tenth to one-fifth of his food and clothing; which cripples the great bulk of legitimate and independent industries to pamper up a few favorites; and which injures a nation by turning its producers from profitable to unprofitable occupations, making it unable to compete in any but its own "protected" markets. An income tax is a burden, but, to the extent to which it can be worked, it is less of a burden than any direct tax—even though it be a tariff for revenue only. An income tax is necessarily inquisitorial and will lead to wholesale perjury and fraud on the part of those fortunate enough to be overtaken by it. Under it the dishonest will largely escape and the honest "suffer." But, even though it extends to incomes as low as $2,000, it will not cause great hardship. It will never enter the houses of the poor to shorten their stay on this earth by compelling them to wear shoddy instead of wool; to eat unwholesome and insufficient food; to suffer with cold and, perhaps, to freeze for lack of food, cheap coal and blankets; and to put up with uncomfortable and cheap ware, furniture and tools. It will enter only the homes of the few rich, or comparatively rich, and compel them to contribute somewhat in proportion to their means to the expense of the Government which protects them. It will not ask the 6,000 or 8,000 millionaires who have grown up under protection and special privileges to return any of the wealth which they have sequestered into their coffers to the consumers from whom it was taken, but it will ask the millionaires to turn over to the Government a little of the interest which they are obtaining on their ill-gotten gains.

The depredations and the evils of an income tax will be confined chiefly to the rich, who will by cunning and perjury seek to evade the tax and to shirk their duties as citizens. This tax will not cause one-thousandth of the suffering that is caused by taxes on consumption and production. If there is a particularly warm corner in the nether regions of the next world it should be reserved for those responsible for the protective tariff system of taxation—a system that has caused more misery on earth than has any disease or famine.—Byron W. Holt.

The Mexican Corn Famine.

Gen. Warren T. Sutton, Consul General of the United States for Northern Mexico, has just sent in his official report on the subject of the exportation of grain from this country to Mexico during 1892. As there was a corn famine in Mexico in 1892, an unusual amount was demanded from the United States. Gen Sutton says: "Had it not been for our nearness and unlimited supply, thousands of the very poor of Mexico must have died for lack of food. As it was, there was much suffering, and the effects will be felt for years."

About 6,000,000 bushels of corn were imported to Mexico in 1892—enough to fill a solid train nearly seventy-seven miles long. Early in 1892 the Mexican government, not being certain that "the foreigner pays the tax," as McKinley says, abolished the duty on imported corn. This is another open acknowledgment that protection is a burden to the masses. The burden is not so great or so evident in a big country like the United States, which produces nearly all kinds of crops and which never has a famine in all parts of the country at once; but in the countries like Mexico or Canada, dependent, especially in times of famine, upon imports of foreign commodities, the burden is unmistakable. Even in ordinary years the Mexican Government maintains a "free zone" near the United States border to mitigate the worst effects of protection. This the government is compelled to do as a measure of protection. Its subjects near the border simply refuse to be compelled to pay high prices for articles that they see selling across the line in Uncle Sam's domain at reasonable figures.

In great or small countries "protection" by tariff duties is simply a curse. Its evils may be mitigated by "free zones," by temporary abolition of duties, or, perhaps, by "reciprocity"—when two or more countries, by reciprocal agreement, let down the bars to imports; but the evil will not cease until commerce, industry and men are forever freed from the bondage of protective duties and protection superstition.

Dead Against the Poor.

The working of Republican "protection to American labor" is gradually becoming very clear to the people.

In the first place, a law is passed giving to privileged classes of manufacturers the power to impose exorbitant prices without danger of foreign competition. Then, ostensibly to preserve home competition, an anti-trust law is passed. But it is not enforced. Perhaps it cannot be. At least, producers combine to limit production and maintain high prices, and the officials charged with the duty of preventing this do nothing about it.

In order to give color to the pretext that high duties are in the interest of American workmen a law is passed forbidding the importation of European pauper labor under contract. But this law also is systematically and successfully evaded. No officer attempts to use the law to prevent the wrong. The Senate investigation now in progress here shows that the "combines" which are organized in defiance of law constantly import cheap laborers without hindrance.

But the taxes which the consumer has to pay are enforced relentlessly.

The whole system, from beginning to end, and in all its parts, operates to favor the rich and to oppress the poor.—New York World.

Custom House Corruption.

The commission to investigate the custom house, though it has only begun its work, has already uncovered great heaps of rottenness. Undervaluations, favoritism, bribery, perjury—these are the sins that have their headquarters in the custom house and that flourish in every department. It is impossible to tell from the conflicting testimony thus far taken in the Appraiser's department who the perjurers are and who are most guilty. It is only certain that the department that appraises three-fourths of the $400,000,000 worth of dutiable goods that enter our ports annually is a den of corruption. It is also quite certain that the importers of New York City are terrorized by the custom house officers, who can, by favoritism, make or break an importing merchant. As past investigations of this kind have been a farce, in that they did not lead to the discharge of officials who were proven guilty of favoritism in the valuation of goods or who maliciously detained goods at the custom house until they had lost much of their value, the merchants now believe that the present investigation will lead to nothing except to call down upon their heads the wrath of the officials against whom the merchants testify. Hence the importers, who have goods passing through the custom house nearly every week, hesitate to incur the displeasure of the appraisers by submitting testimony against them.

As an evidence of the kind of discriminations made by the appraisers, we quote some of the appraisments of silk handkerchiefs, alleged to have been of identical quality, imported by rival firms:

Handkerchiefs.	Simon.	Rosenthal.	Fan. Co.	Isaacs.
2-ounce	$0 96	$1 10	$1 06	....
4-ounce	1 44	1 69	1 79	$2 08
4½-ounce	1 00	1 90	1 79	2 11
5-ounce	1 75	2 20	....	2 24
5½-ounce	1 92	2 15	2 44	2 50
7-ounce	2 49	2 77	....	3 12
7½-ounce	2 62	3 19	....	....
8¾-ounce	3 04	3 48	3 64	3 64
12-ounce	4 04	4 85	....	....

Of couse, with an average discrimination of about 25 per cent. in favor of J. R. Simon & Co., it is only a question of time when their competitors will be driven out of the business. So great are some of these discriminations that importers can sometimes purchase cheaper of their rivals than they can abroad.

The temptation is so great, and human nature so weak, that it is likely that custom house fraud can be stopped only with the abolition of custom houses themselves.

McKinley's Renomination.

The platform on which Governor McKinley has been renominated shows no abatement of Ohio McKinleyism. Thus it—

1. Indorses the calamity platform of June, 1892.
2. Praises the wise, pure and patriotic B. Harrison.
3. Ditto the ditto W. McKinley, Jr.
4. Favors the McKinley protection act, with "amendments thereto for protection."
5. Stands by the Ohio ram raisers.
6. Throws a sop to the farmers inclined to populism.
7. Declares for restricted immigration.
8. Declares for free pensions.
9. Views with alarm the administration of G. C.
10. Straddles the money question.

And Governor McKinley in his speech of acceptance is the same old Napoleon. He finds the Cleveland administration responsible for the financial evils precipitated by the Sherman law; is still the apostle of protection and indignant at the proposal to purge the pension rolls. Such is McKinley and McKinleyism.

A Public Reservoir.

I saw an interesting sight while in Venice. Entering a little square shut in by high houses, and, like most Venetian squares, dominated by the unfinished facade of a time-stained church, I noticed a singular activity among the people. They were scurrying in from every alley and hastening from every house door, with odd-shaped copper buckets on hook-ended wooden bows, and with little coils of rope. Old men and women, boys and girls, all gathered closely about a covered well curb in the middle of the square; and still they hurried on, until they stood a dozen deep around it. Presently the church tower slowly struck eight, and a little old man forced his way through the crowd, passed his ponderous iron key through the lid, and unlocked the well.

There immediately ensued a scene of great activity. The kettles went jangling into it and came slopping out again at an amazing rate, and the people trudged off home, each with a pair of them swung from the shoulder. The wells are deep cisterns, which are filled during the night, and it is out of amiable consideration for those who love their morning nap that they are given as good chances as their neighbors of getting an unsoiled supply. I found, on closer inspection, that the water was of excellent quality.

Poetic Justice.

They have had income taxes in old England for several decades. The Leeds Daily News, in commenting on the proposition to make up the prospective deficiency of revenue in the United States by an income tax with a high exemption limit, says:

"This last is an excellent proposal, and we hope it will be carried into effect. It would then be the millionaire manufacturers, who have made their "piles" by protection, who would have to provide the bulk of the immediate loss to the revenue caused by the lowering of the tariff. That would be poetic justice, indeed."

Successful Farmer—Son George got some sense durin' that foreign tour anyhow. Wife—I hain't seen it. "I have. You know he spent a good while in Lunnon, as he calls it." "Yes, an' I'd like to know what good it did." "Use y'r eyes, Miranda. He learned to turn up his pants w'en it rains."—New York Weekly.

"You say in the mean time. To what period do you refer?" "To house-cleaning."—Detroit Tribune.

FISH IN BOILING WATER.

A Species Discovered That Thrive in That Element.

One of the most remarkable discoveries in the shape of a peculiar species of fish ever made on this continent was that made at Carson City, Nev., in 1876. At that time both the Hale & Norcross and the Savage mines were down to what is known as the "2,200-foot level." When at that depth a subterranean lake of boiling water was tapped. The accident flooded both mines to the depth of 400 feet. After the water had all been pumped out except that which had gathered in basins and in the inaccessible portions of the works, and when the water still had a temperature of 128 degrees—nearly scalding hot—many queer-looking little blood-red fish were taken out. In appearance they resembled gold-fish.

They seemed lively and sportive enough when they were in their native element—boiling water—notwithstanding the fact that they did not even have rudimentary eyes. When the fish were taken out of the hot water and put into buckets of cold water for the purpose of being transported to the surface, they died as quickly as a perch or bass would if plunged into a kettle of water that was scalding hot; not only this, but the skin peeled off exactly as if they had been boiled.

Eyeless fish are common enough in all subterranean lakes and rivers, but this is the only case on record of living fish being found in boiling water.

Half-Tone Engraving.

For years it was the dream of engravers to produce an engraving direct from a photograph or wash-drawing without the aid of tools, reproducing in ink the effect of the original. Many were the schemes tried, but while some beautiful effects were produced, yet none were practical for rapid printing till the half-tone was perfected.

If the reader will take a magnifying glass and examine a half-tone cut carefully, he will see a network of dots and lines running diagonally from one corner of the picture to the other—dots in the white and lines in the dark portion. This effect is produced by means of a tint, or screen, ruled with a diamond on plate glass. The cut made by the diamond is filled with an opaque pigment, making alternate black and white spots crossing at right angles.

This screen is placed between a sensitive plate and the subject to be reproduced. A powerful electric lamp furnishes the light, which the opaque lines interrupt, but which the transparent lines allow to act on the sensitive film. The original effect is thus reyroduced.

It would be impossible to explain, in other than technical language, the various processes of developing and finishing, but when finished we have a negative compound of dense black, and clear, transparent dots and lines. From this negative a print is made on copper or zinc plate, the plate having first been prepared with a sensitive coat, which on exposure to the sun or electric light becomes insoluble and acid proof.

The light acts through the transparent portion of the negative, making the corresponding part of the metal plate insoluble and acid proof, the remainder being etched when placed in acid. The plate is allowed to remain in acid until the required depth is obtained, when it is mounted on a block and is ready for the printer.

One would hardly believe that the slight variation of a dot or line so fine would produce the result obtained by this process; but it is this slight variation in size that enables the operator to reproduce on the metal plate all the fine detail of a flower or the wild grandeur of a mountain.

Royal Life Saved by a Spider.

On the ceiling of one of the rooms in Sans Souci, the world-renowned palace of Frederick the Great, is painted a great spider with its web. The origin of this strange decoration is said to be as follows: This apartment was the great King's breakfast-room and adjoining his bed-chamber. Every morning when his Majesty entered the room he was accustomed to find a cup of chocolate, but on one occasion, just as he was about to drink, he bethought himself of something he had forgotten and returned to his bed-room. When his Majesty again entered the breakfast-room he discovered that a great spider had in the meantime dropped from the ceiling into the cup, and he naturally cried out for fresh chocolate to be prepared. The next moment the King was startled by the report of a pistol. No sooner had the cook received the order than he blew out his brains. Not because the King refused the chocolate did he do this, but because he had poisoned the cup and thought himself discovered. It was in remembrance of this narrow escape that his Majesty ordered the spider with its web to be painted on the ceiling.—The Million.

A Cool Thief.

A man entered a New York house one day, says the Sun, while the woman of the house was out taking some dinner to her husband. He appropriated all the valuables in the place, cut open a feather-bed, put the booty into the mattress, and carried it off. On the way down-stairs, the thief met the woman on her way back. "Does Mrs. Smith live here?" he asked her. "No," she replied. "Well," said the thief, "I've carried this mattress up and down the steps of nearly every house on the block, and I'm getting tired of it. I didn't know there were so few Smiths in New York." The woman laughed, and ten minutes later found that the man had run away with all of the portable articles of any value in the flat.

A remarkable phenomenon was recently reported from the Lick Observatory. Fog filled the valley, and upon its level surface the mountain peaks were mirrored as if from a placid lake. A similar spectacle was seen in England from Leyburn, overlooking Wensleydale, last September. This lovely Yorkshire valley was half filled with fog, which looked like a mighty flood or lake. Upon it the opposite slopes, lit up by the bright sunshine, was reflected with extraordinary clearness.

To the ONE HUNDRED PARTIES sending us the next greatest number of SPEAR HEAD TAGS, we will give to each 1 LARGE PICTURE IN ELEVEN COLORS .... 100 PICTURES.

Total Number of Prizes for this County, 226.

CAUTION.—No Tags will be received before January 1st, 1894, nor after February 1st, 1894. Each package containing tags must be marked plainly with Name of Sender, Town, County, State, and Number of Tags in each package. All charges on packages must be prepaid.

READ.—SPEAR HEAD possesses more qualities of intrinsic value than any other plug tobacco produced. It is the sweetest, the toughest, the richest. SPEAR HEAD is absolutely, positively and distinctively different in flavor from any other plug tobacco. A trial will convince the most skeptical of this fact. It is the largest seller of any similar shape and style on earth, which proves that it has caught the popular taste and pleases the people. Try it, and participate in the contest for prizes. See that a TIN TAG is on every 10 cent piece of SPEAR HEAD you buy. Send in the tags, no matter how small the quantity.

Very sincerely,
THE P. J. SORG COMPANY, Middletown, Ohio.

A list of the people obtaining these prizes in this county will be published in this paper immediately after February 1st, 1894.

Ignorance of Mexicans as to Common Matters.

There are some peculiar qualities of the Mexican mind which will, for a while, stand in the way of quick progress. Thus, very few of them will buy their railroad tickets until the train is in full view of the station; and, until a short time ago, preferred paying their cash to the conductor. They have an incomprehensible itching to defer any enterprise, or even trivial work, until the morrow. When these defects of their disposition and training are understood, and patience and management are exercised, a fair service can be got out of them. As exemplifying how little Mexicans know of the rights of common carriers, the other day, when Gen. Diaz stopped here, the company, as a courtesy, tendered the municipality the use of their cars for the General's party. Thereupon the city authorities undertook to let everybody have a free ride, and, until the matter was legally explained to them, threatened trouble to the railway people. These mistakes of the Mexicans, in their dealing with our people, spring not so much from a desire to annoy as from ignorance.—Monterey Cor. New York Sun.

The Tinto.

There is in Spain a river called Tinto, which has very extraordinary qualities; its waters, which are as yellow as a topaz, harden the sand and petrify it in a most surprising manner. If a stone falls into the river and rests upon another they both become perfectly united and conglutinated in a year. It withers all the plants on its banks, as well as the roots of trees, which it dyes of the same hue as its waters. No fish live in its stream.

That Terrible Scourge,

Fever and ague, and its congener, bilious remittent, besides affections of the stomach, liver and bowels, produced by miasmatic air and water, are both eradicated and prevented by the use of Hostetter's Stomach Bitters, a purely vegetable elixir, indorsed by physicians, and more extensively used as a remedy for the above class of disorders, as well as for many others, than any medicine of the age. A languid circulation, a torpid state of the liver, a want of vital stamina, are conditions peculiarly favorable to malarial diseases. They are, however, surely remedied by the great preventive, which, by invigorating the system and endowing it with regularity as well as vigor, provides it with a resisting power which enables it to withstand disorders, not only of a malarial type, but a host of others to which feeble and ill-regulated systems are subject. The Bitters are a safe as well as searching eradicant, and have widely superseded that dangerous drug, quinine, which palliates but does not eradicate malaria.

A Rememberer.

Mrs. Glanders (after the guests have departed)—Hopkins, why on earth did you announce Mr. and Mrs. Monk as "Mr. Monk and Mrs. Nun?"

The New Butler (proudly)—I hopes, mum, as I'avent forgotten what I learned in school about masculine and feminine nouns, mum.—Judge.

Deafness Can't Be Cured

By local applications, as they cannot reach the diseased portion of the ear. There is only one way to cure Deafness, and that is by constitutional remedies. Deafness is caused by an inflamed condition of the mucous lining of the Eustachian Tube. When this tube gets inflamed you have a rumbling sound or imperfect hearing, and when it is entirely closed Deafness is the result, and unless the inflammation can be taken out and this tube restored to its normal condition, hearing will be destroyed forever; nine cases out of ten are caused by catarrh, which is nothing but an inflamed condition of the mucous surfaces.

We will give One Hundred Dollars for any case of Deafness (caused by Catarrh) that we cannot cure by taking Hall's Catarrh Cure. Send for circulars, free.

DANGEROUS OUTLAWS.

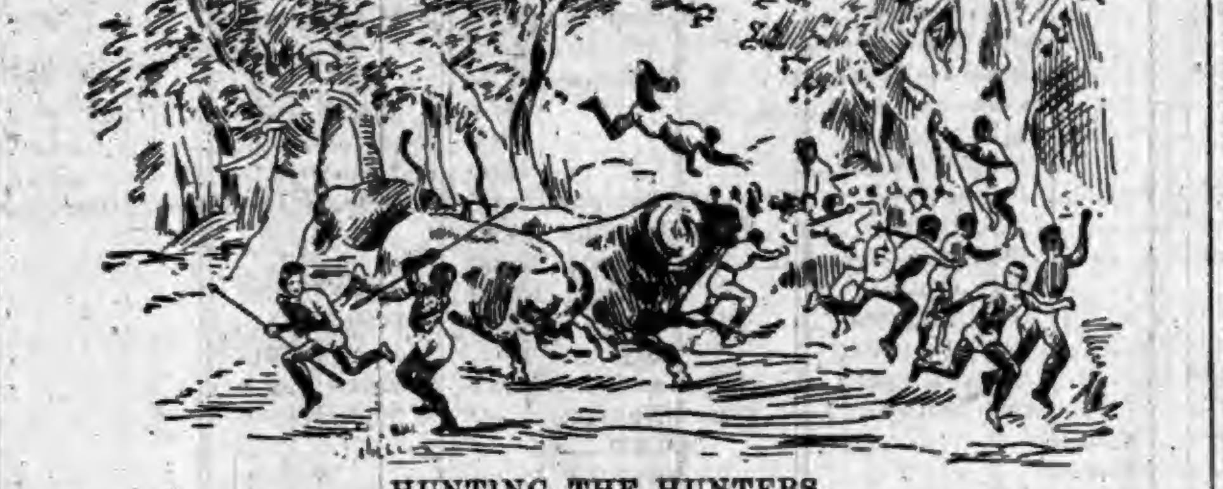
WILD ANIMALS THAT SELL THEIR LIVES DEARLY.

The Desperate Cave Bears of Ceylon—An Adventure with Buffaloes on the Zambesi—The Terrible Bengal Tigers—Panthers and Leopards.

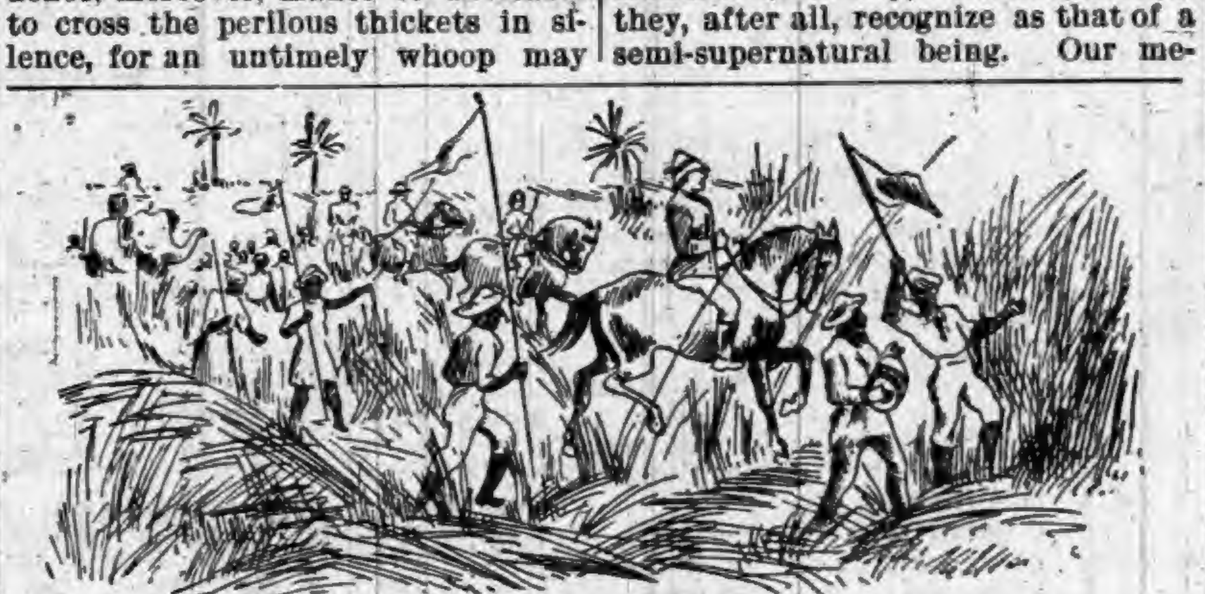
Some Ferocious Beasts.

The age of archery was preceded by a long period of rough-and-tumble combats that must often have made it doubtful if the claws and teeth of carnivorous beasts would not ultimately prevail against the rude weapons of our forefathers. The invention of bows and arrows decided the supremacy of man, and many of his fellow-creatures thought it wisest to purchase the privilege of survival by entering the service of the terrible tool-maker.

But there are animals that refuse that compromise, says a writer in the Globe-Democrat. Like the Bedouin bandits who answer the challenge of surrender with a rifle shot, thousands of four-footed outlaws still maintain the desperate struggle for independence; and under circumstances precluding the hope of victory, conduct their campaign on the principle of selling their lives as dearly as possible. Many species of carnivora clearly prefer revenge to flight. In the interior of Ceylon there are mountain forests where the cave bear (ursus labiatus) finds a safe retreat from the pursuit of the native hunters, but, if wounded, that small relative of our grizzly will invariably turn upon his aggressors, and decline to be satisfied with the triumph of routing them at the first charge. With leaps that would do credit to a kangaroo, he hunts the would-be hunters, and is thus sometimes drawn into an ambush where a reserve force of native sportsmen discharge their spears and then scatter in wild flight, well aware that the bear would make an example of the first prostrate foe. He would tear off his face like a mask, flay his ribs and chew his hands to pieces. Cingalese travelers, who have to cross the haunts of the cave bear, provide themselves with written charms, setting forth the meritorious purpose of their journey, and the harmlessness of their personal disposition, and Sir Emerson Tennent speaks of a messenger who took the precaution to make a Buddhist priest sign a document of that sort. Prudence, moreover, makes it advisable to cross the perilous thickets in silence, for an untimely whoop may provoke the bear to the degree of flaying the tresspasser, with brutal indifference to the indorsements of his certificates.



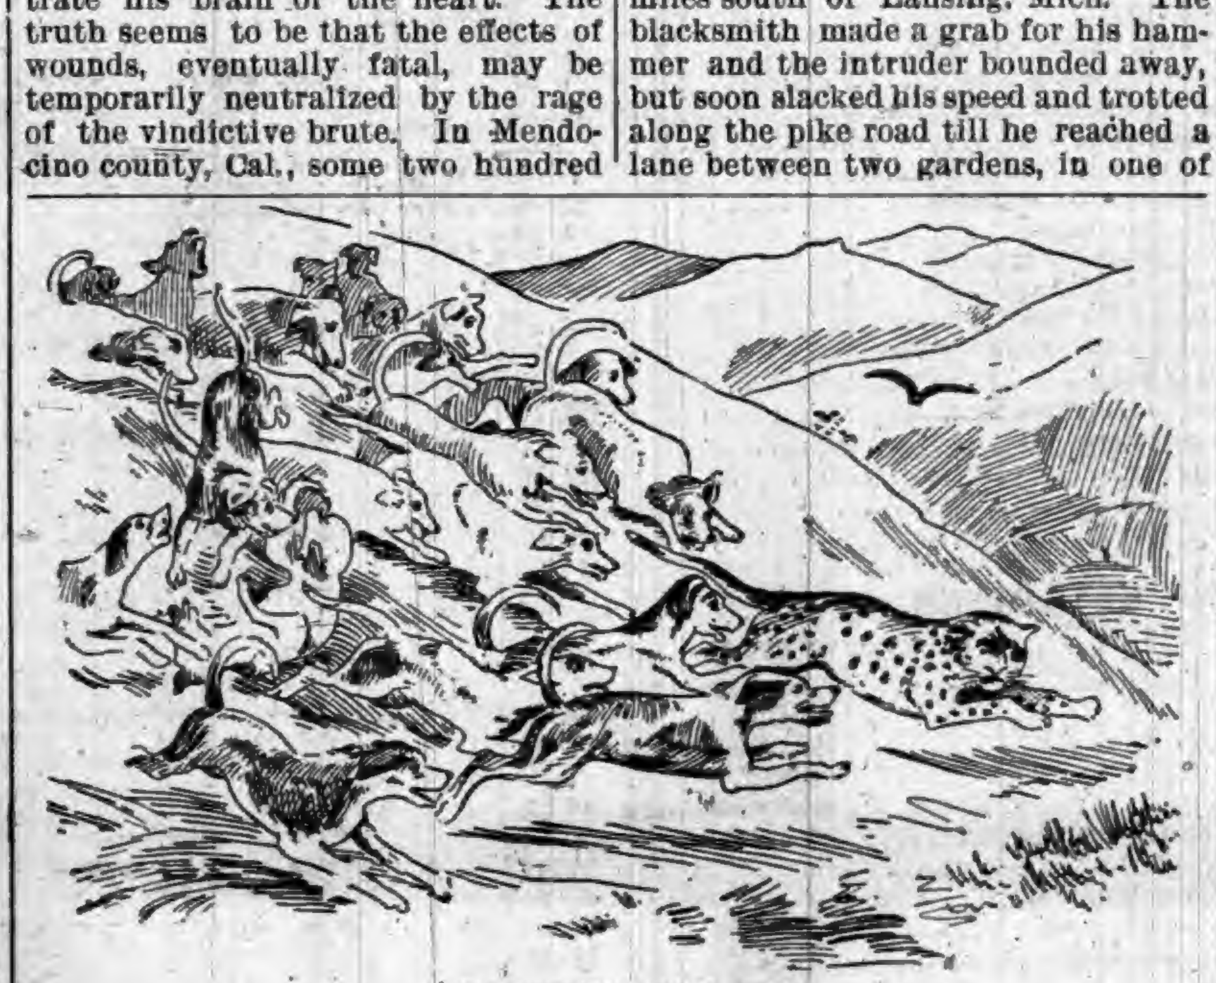
HUNTING THE HUNTERS.



VANGUARD OF A TIGER EXPEDITION.

Wounds Unfelt.

Mental excitement will operate like an anæsthetic, and wounded soldiers have often attested the curious fact that saber cuts and pistol bullets may not only be disregarded, but actually remain unfelt, in the heat of a hand-to-hand combat, and announce themselves only by their incidental effects—the stiffening of a wounded arm or the faintness following a great loss of blood. On a similar theory we may account for the often-repeated assertion that grizzly bears can not be hurt, a bullet failing to penetrate his brain or the heart. The truth seems to be that the effects of wounds, eventually fatal, may be temporarily neutralized by the rage of the vindictive brute. In Mendocino county, Cal., some two hundred miles north of San Francisco, there are jungles absolutely impenetrable to modern hunters, and where bears would be as safe as their Arctic cousins among the glaciers of the North Pole; but grizzlies, at the very edge of those tanglewoods, have been known to forfeit a first-class chance of escape rather than forego the pleasure of revenge.



A PERILOUS PURSUIT.

His is that frenzy of vindictiveness strictly limited to carnivorous animals. Capt. Charles Baldwin, in the chronicle of his South African travels, describes a trip to the head waters of the Zambesi River, where the road led through a park-like forest; evergreen leaf-trees scattered in groves over a grassy plateau. Herds of wild buffalo grazed along the bank of a ravine, and the Kaffir guides cast shy glances in that direction, but had almost passed the last dangerous points when one of the Boer teamsters discharged his rifle at a fat yearling. In a moment the old bulls faced about, snorting and stamping, a second after they made a headlong charge. They had caught sight of the caravan. A volley at sixty yards, another at close range, thinned the ranks of the infuriated beasts, but they kept right on, and the stampede of the frightened Kaffirs resembled the flight of a mob charged by heavy cavalry. There were some fifteen good marksmen in the party and most of them managed to dodge behind trees in time to receive the troop with a murderous fusillade, but the tramping down of horses and the zig-zag rushes after flying Kaffirs continued till the last bull lay rolling in his blood, for those who had only been stunned would struggle to their legs again and rout the natives who approached to dispatch them with their long lances. One of the Captain's companions declared that he had never had so much fun in his life, but after figuring up the expense of the adventure the majority agreed with the guide that it would have been by far the wisest plan to let the herd graze in peace.

Expensive Sport.

In Southern Hindostan, where damage suits are rare, the loss of a human life is often not thought worth mentioning, but the price of an elephant varies from $300 to $500, and good saddle horses are so rare that a tiger hunt now and then ceases to be a one-sided kind of sport. At a circle hunt in the jungles of Ramgeer, in the province of Hyderabad, the result of one tiger killed, one cub killed, and one captured, was offset by three dead and one wounded coolies, two dead horses, and two mangled elephants, besides the loss of a lot of baggage and camping outfit, carried by a stampeded elephant in the rear ranks of the expedition, and the hunters had, after all, to retreat without accomplishing their object of killing an inveterate man-eater.

As a rule, however, dogs pay the main share of the penalties incident to the failure of such enterprises. Carnivorous beasts hate man's truest friend, not only as a formidable aggressor but as a renegade who has betrayed the cause of beasthood by his alliance with the common foe, and their resentment often takes the form of a revenge altogether different from his opposition to the encroachments of an enemy, whose superiority they, after all, recognize as that of a semi-supernatural being. Our mediæval ancestor could not hope to get even with the arch-fiend, but showed no mercy to his allies, the ruinous witches, and a dog overpowered by a pack of wolves is literally torn to shreds, each participant of the vendetta trying to secure the fragment and rip it as if in the exultation of an opportunity for gratifying a personal spite. The antagonism of dogs and cats, too, may be something more than the jealousy of rival pets.

Panther and Dog.

A few years ago a panther managed to escape from the live stock car of a traveling menagerie, and, prowling about in quest of lunch, suddenly made his appearance in the open door of a blacksmith's shop a few miles south of Lansing, Mich. The blacksmith made a grab for his hammer and the intruder bounded away, but soon slacked his speed and trotted along the pike road till he reached a lane between two gardens, in one of which a big fat Newfoundlander announced his intention to champion the cause of law and order. The panther mended his gait, but the Newfoundlander leaped the fence in a way to intercept the outlaw, and, to use the words of an eyewitness, any liberal man would have given $5 to know what that dog thought of himself the next moment. The hash venders of the next railway restaurant could have served the remains without a change of programme.

The owners of fighting dogs might stick to the opinion that the intervention of a second Newfoundlander would have changed the issue of the combat, but the sportsmen of the Transvaal Republic would probably incline to a different theory. The antelope hounds of that hunter's paradise occasionally come across a leopard, the next relative of the North American panther, and in such cases the hunter will not hesitate to shoot the first dog who should follow the trail in defiance of his master's protest—to prevent the baying of the leader from luring the whole pack to certain destruction. A leopard, bolting through the bushes in the van of a dog brigade, will regret the interference of their master, and look back as if he would greatly prefer to have another five minutes' fun all to himself. Without checking his speed, and even without warning his pursuers by any preparatory movement, he will strike back, left and right, as soon as a dog comes fairly in range of his paws, and every hit is sure to do the business for that particular cur. A lucky shot might turn the tables in favor of the pursuers, but in the absence of the hunters a pack of twenty hounds would be successively disabled in less than twenty minutes.
